Wisconsin Plans

Secretary George D. Bartlett will send out the programs for the Wisconsin convention early next week. The dates are July 24th and 25th at Milwaukee. The program will be largely agricultural and educational in its character and speeches will be limited to thirty minutes. There will be no "address of welcome" and no "response," partly through a desire to be strictly up-to-date, and partly for the reason that Wisconsin bankers have been welcomed to Milwaukee on so many occasions that hereafter when the convention meets in the Cream City the welcome will be taken for granted. A further forward-step has been taken by the Wisconsin secretary in that the reports of the secretary and of the treasurer will be printed and placed in the seats and not read in the convention, neither will Mr. Bartlett make an extended address of any kind.

On the evening prior to the convention there will be an informal social gathering of the "veterans" of the Wisconsin association. The list will include all bankers or ex-bankers who attended any of the first four conventions held by the association, and all of those who have held the office of president at any time. There will be many other social features included in the list of entertainments furnished by the clearing house banks of Milwaukee. The program shows ten addresses, six of which will be made by home talent. One of the interesting talks of the occasion will be by Prof. John Munroe of Cokato, Minn., on agricultural high schools. Prof. Munroe was one of the revelations of the Chapman conference last year in Minneapolis. He is one of the most interesting of the speakers developed by the new movement toward agricultural improvement by agricultural education. Another outside speaker will be William J. Burns of New York, who will talk on protection of banks against criminals. This always is an interesting number to bankers, and Mr. Burns has a most attractive personality in addition to being a fine public speaker. Henry Israel, editor of "Rural Manhood," New York, will speak on keeping a boy on the farm, and George L. McIntosh of Cleveland will talk on one-cent-letter postage. An interesting home number will cover the subject of insuring home deposits, and will be delivered by H. A. Moehlenpah of Clinton, Wis. L. A. Baker of New Richmond will report for the committee on agriculture, and Prof. K. L. Hatch of Madison will speak on the laws governing agricultural education in Wisconsin high schools. W. A. Hotchkiss and F. Craneheld, both of Madison, will speak on better roads and better fruit culture respectively. John T. Joyce is president of the association and will deliver the annual address to the members. Secretary Bartlett, from advance information, predicts a very large attendance at this year's convention.

CHICAGO BANKS SHIP OUT LARGE AMOUNT OF CASH

During June Chicago banks shipped to various points in the country $15,579,840; $7,821,185 were received from various sources, making an excess of $7,758,655. The total shipped during the past six months is $77,441,955, which is $23,911,070 more than was received.

James M. Hurst

James M. Hurst, assistant cashier of the National Bank of the Republic, has returned from Belle Fourche, S. D., where he has been attending the convention of the South Dakota bankers held at that place. He reports the sessions as very well attended. No matters of unusual importance were taken up. After the convention a number of the delegates and visitors visited the government fisheries at Spearfish Falls; others visited Hot Springs, Leeds and other places. So far as the eastern half of the state is concerned, the crop outlook is very good. In the western half, however, it is not quite so favorable. During the month of June there was less rainfall in the state than at any time previous, there being but 55-100 of an inch. The excessive heat has affected the smaller grains to a considerable extent. Other Chicago bankers who attended the convention are James G. Wakefield, assistant cashier of the Corn Exchange National; W. D. Dickey, assistant cashier of the National City; R. F. Newhall, assistant cashier of the First National, and George Jackson, chief clerk of the Continental and Commercial National.

ERNEST A. HAMILL ON BUSINESS AND FINANCIAL SITUATION

Ernest A. Hamill, president of the Corn Exchange National, in commenting on the business and financial situation, says that money is a little firmer than it has been recently. Thirty days ago the rate for commercial paper was from 3½ to 4 per cent; now some paper can be had at 4 and 4½ per cent, although there are very few sales at that figure. He believes that there is a very good prospect for a better demand, however. Crop conditions are very encouraging and money ought to be well employed during the fall months at favorable rates. The general financial condition is good. A few merchants in some of the districts are complaining of slow collections, but the general volume of business is quite large. All of the steel and iron industries are quite busy. So far as business is concerned, less attention is being paid this year to the political situation than ever before.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

GROUP 2, Illinois, indorsed John D. Phillips (now vice-president) for president of the Illinois Bankers Association. Group 1 indorsed George Woodruff for chairman of the council and Group 4 has indorsed W. T. Fenton for membership on the A. B. A. council. These are the three strongest groups in the state while the indorsees are among the best known bankers in the state.

SOME have in times past classed Phillips as a "reactionary" (see Chicago and Baltimore convention proceedings for interpretation), but those who ought to know, say he is a progressive.

THEN we've had several requests for the private address of Ralph C. Wilson, a "receptive" candidate for secretary of the Illinois association. Sure sign that something is doing.

MR. WILSON is at 804 Association Building, 119 So. La Salle Street. He and another young man are in the bond and investment business. Neither Mr. Wilson nor Mr. Joyner has started a campaign as yet, and there is talk of a "dark horse" if developments do not come soon. We understand the bars are down and the pasture good.

"F. O. WATTS, care Third National, St. Louis," from now on will reach him this week and after.

LAATEST thing in the agricultural development line is to use the vacuum cleaner to remove fleas from the house-dog. Wish they could fix up one to jerk out most of the capitals and nearly all the commas from the convention manuscript.

KANSAS has tired of her constitutional provision admitting reserve center banks out of the state to associate membership in the state organization. That provision was eliminated at the Topeka meeting and for it was substituted the provision admitting only Kansas City and St. Joseph banks to full membership.

THE Kansas organization never intended this privilege to be other than a complimentary one to outside banks, yet there always has been the suspicion of a feeling on the part of the reserve center banks that something was expected of them in the way of a contributing fee, which was not pleasant.

HEREAFTER out-of-state bankers will be quite as welcome at the meetings of the Kansas Bankers Association as they have been before, but they will not be required nor expected to pay anything for the privilege. They will come purely as the guests of the association.

PENNSYLVANIA is said narrowly to have escaped endorsing a privately-owner paper in that state as its official organ. But for the prompt action of a shrewd member of the association the thing would have gone through.

OTHER banking and financial papers within the state, and many of those outside of the state, would have lost all interest in the affairs of the Pennsylvania Bankers Association if a rival publication could have gone before the public as its official organ.

PAPERS which seek such recognition and such endorsement rarely are leaders in their own fields, and often have very little influence. Many state organizations maintain their own house organs, but in no case up to date does any private publication boast of being the official organ of any state association.

"GREATER SACRAMENTO" is the title of a very handsome booklet sent out to bankers by Louis Sloss & Company, of San Francisco. It is handsomely illustrated, very carefully written, and much in advance of the general run of such publications. It is a booster volume for the state capital.

NEW YORK BANKERS ASSOCIATION decided at Buffalo not to encourage the efforts of the Pujo Commission. The bankers of Detroit, when canvassed on the subject, showed about an equal division between those who favor the answering of the proposed questions and those who are opposed.

IRVING-MERCANTILE NATIONAL of New York, under the consolidation which has been voted upon by the stockholders, will have a capital of four millions and a surplus of three millions.

THERE still is a matter to be settled by the stockholders, and that is the final name of the enlarged institution. They will vote on July 18th on the proposition to change the name to the "Irving National Bank, New York." President Pierson is said to favor this change.

THE third-termers wants a third party also, and about four-thirds of the republicans would like to be rid of them both.

B. F. HARRIS had the place of honor on the Ohio program. No other speaker filled so many dates this year as he; spreading the gospel of good farming and good roads is his hobby, to which in Illinois he adds bank supervision.

SUPERINTENDENT BAXTER gave bank supervision and inspection a boost at Cedar Point in telling what advances Ohio has made in one year under her new law. He dealt the much touted loose leaf ledger a hard blow by telling how easily it can be manipulated so as to deceive the examiner—or the boss.

THE program showed that many national bankers in Ohio believe they should be permitted to loan on real estate.

ILLINOIS in times past has taken a position favoring this privilege, not as an association, but as individuals.

DAILY papers (and some political leaders) make a mistake in lauding their favorites and supporters clear to the blue, and at the same time denouncing equally good men as "robbers," "train bandits," "receivers of stolen goods," etc., simply because they are of the opposition.

PUBLIC men are neither so good as to be superhuman, nor so bad as to be classed as criminals. Lack of influence quickly follows a paper, however powerful, when so prostituted either for political or financial gain.

THE Record-Herald gained greatly in public esteem by its course in handling the two big conventions. It gave fair, unprejudiced reports, and for the past couple of years has been doing the same in its financial columns.

THE publicity man of one of our largest banks has polled 2,000 banks surrounding Chicago and puts the R.-H. easily first, if not twice as strong as its nearest rival among the dailies.

OUR word for it, you will enjoy reading the Cedar Point address of W. S. Hayden on investment banking. Both good and original, (Continued on page 31)

President W. P. Sharer to the Ohio Bankers

Our association is accomplishing a great work, and while I shall not go into details concerning the many matters which have come before us during the past year, there is much more, however, that can and will be accomplished if each and every member will put his shoulder to the wheel and make himself an important factor in the work of this organization. Now and then some well meaning, but ill-informed person makes the charge that the association is ruled by a ring; because the same men appear prominently from time to time in its work. If there is anyone within the hearing of my voice who harbors such an erroneous idea, I can assure him that nothing is farther from the truth, and I trust he will immediately dispel the thought from his mind. This association needs more workers, and any member who is willing to sacrifice his time and talent for its good can be given all the work he desires, and those who have helped to carry the load these many years will gladly shift the burden. Ambitious and able men both young and old are needed in this work and there is room for all. Another fact which I wish to impress upon you gentlemen of this convention is, that it takes money to administer the affairs of your organization, and that our present dues do not afford sufficient income to carry on the work as it should be done.

Your executive council will recommend a slight increase in your annual dues, and I sincerely hope their recommendation will meet with your hearty approval and co-operation.

Our funds are expended carefully and prudently, and every expenditure made is passed upon and approved by your council of administration. Every dollar paid by you to this association in dues, comes back to you tenfold, as the association has brought about an evolution in the banking business of Ohio whose value cannot be estimated.

I do not contend, gentlemen, that our treasurer will mail you a check in this proportion each time he receives your belated dues, but I do contend that these men who have been most active in attendance upon and in the work of our conventions are among our most progressive and most prosperous bankers. It is impossible for one to come here from year to year exchanging contemporaneous ideas and listening to the instructive addresses, without being materially benefited, to say nothing of the recreation and pleasure he has had mingling with his fellow-bankers.

This association cannot solve all your problems, particularly your local ones. It cannot discipline the ambitious building and loan associations that seek to do a banking business in your town, nor can it regulate the rate of interest your competitor is willing to pay for deposits; but it can and will make a more capable, competent banker of you, and fit you to better meet these perplexing problems as they present themselves. It has been my observation that those who attend our conventions usually get from them about what they seek. If a delegate comes here for education and instruction, he usually goes away satisfied; but if he merely comes here for a high old time he cannot expect to take away with him

Says those who arise to prominence in the association are the workers, and that more are needed. High praise for A. I. B. Indorses National Monetary Commission plan and urges strict observation of banking law much else than a headache. Endeavor to see how much you individually can give to your association, and I pledge you my word you will not be casting your bread upon the waters in vain.

A work which should receive more attention and encouragement from our association is that of the American Institute of Banking. The work which these young men are doing deserves our unqualified support, and I hope to see its influence spread to every nook and corner of Ohio. Give the young men in your employ an opportunity to improve and advance themselves—I frequently hear some bank official express regret that he has no understudy—no one to whom authority could be safely delegated in case of emergency. I fear in many, if not most of such cases, the fault lies with the official, and not with the clerk. Help these young fellows along and encourage them in everything that tends to make of them good citizens and good bankers, and should an occasion arise whereby they are suddenly called to positions of responsibility, they will discharge their duties to your entire satisfaction.

W. P. SHARER
Zanesville

President Ohio Bankers Association

I presume you expect that I shall, or wonder how I can refrain from saying something on those subjects which of late come before almost every gathering of bankers, viz., the National Monetary Reserve Association, the conservation of our national resources and wealth, and the high cost of living. The proposed plan for a National Monetary Reserve Association meets with my approval. I believe in conservation and regret the high cost of living; but I do not wish to discuss any of these subjects this morning. These and similar problems confront us from time to time, and it appears are not only solved, but wisely solved as well.

It is not within my province nor is it my purpose to say anything that may be in any manner construed as political in its nature, yet it must be patent to every student of current events that our future is not so promising as we should like to see it. The "bread line" is the only line of argument which will appeal to a certain class of voters, and no real prosperity can again come, in my opinion, until both labor and capital again get into a humbler mood and are ready to advance slowly, and recognize the inevitable, fundamental law of action and reaction. In plain English, this law simply means that we cannot eat our eggs and hatch them also.

While I am firm in the belief that this nation possesses sufficient brains and patriotism to successfully combat and surmount any danger or difficulty with which it may be confronted, we may pass through some trying times before these questions are permanently settled, and it behooves us as wise and prudent bankers to have our affairs well in hand and to counsel our clients and customers that economy and conservatism should be the policy of the immediate future. These thoughts bring to mind the watchful care which the modern bank official has at all times for the welfare of his customer. All honor to the minister, the doctor, and the lawyer; but I can say without fear of successful contradiction that it is the banker who in the last analysis is found more loyal to his client than is any other business or professional man.

Always on the alert to bring about that which will benefit or to ward off that which may be harmful, he guards the affairs and interests of his customer with all the care and solicitude of a mother for her child. Too often his fidelity to the welfare of his customer and the interest of his stockholder finds him in his declining years with but little of this world's goods. His life has been spent so completely for others that he has had little or no time to give to his own affairs, and when the day comes that he must lay aside his duties he has little to leave but a record of long and honorable service to his community. After all, what better heritage shall a father leave to his son than the reputation of twenty-five or forty or fifty years of an honorable banking career? Far more of a testimonial to his fidelity than any great shaft or marble that ever pointed to the heavens: far more a testimonial to his worth and work for the community than any tall edifice of steel and stone that he might have erected, and far more to his honor than the aggregation of a great fortune.

Do not infer that I have aught to say against the man who accumulates great wealth, for as a rule he is a man not only of ability, but integrity as well, who has given some of our benefit to the public in return for its dollars; but the aged banker, who has given his life to the welfare of the community and has asked in return little else than the respect and gratitude of his neighbors has builded for himself a greater monument than he who has built with dollars alone.

So gentlemen, let your first thought and motto be fidelity to your duty, and your first duty is to your depositor. We are all in business for gain and your shareholders will rightfully expect and demand reasonable dividends on their capital, but if at any time in your experience a condition confronts you where some interest must be sacrificed for the preservation of another, let your decision be in favor of the protection of your depositor.

Fidelity to your trust—to those who have given their savings and capital into your keeping—should always be your first consideration. Obey both the spirit and letter of our banking laws, for each year of your experience teaches you they have been wisely made. Remember that your first duty is absolute safety and that most frightful of all modern financial tragedies, a bank failure, will never be laid at your door.

GROUP 9, OHIO

Group 9, Ohio Bankers Association, held its annual meeting at the Euclid Club, Cleveland, on Wednesday, June 26th. The meeting was called to order at 3 p. m. by Chairman Judd. The address of welcome was made by H. H. Johnson, president of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce. Professor Mattoon M. Curtis spoke on the general condition of the country; Thomas E. Monks, assistant secretary of the Guardian Savings and Trust Company, on the classification of property for taxation, while J. A. Ward, assistant secretary of the Cleveland National Bank, had for his topic the "Numerical System." After the speeches there was a business session for the election of a new executive committee, one member being elected from each county in the group, and the election of a chairman for three years and a secretary for one year. Dinner was served at the Euclid Club at 6 p. m. At 7:30 the bankers took special cars for Luna Park, where there was a special program of motorcycle races. The group meeting was unusually successful.

J. Van Rhee and other citizens have bought the controlling interest in the Milaca State Bank, Minn., from the Hall family of Foley. W. E. Hall is president, W. J. West is vice-president and C. H. Dahlstorm cashier. Existing officers the officers will remain. The bank's capital is $30,000.

WILLIAM THOMPSON AT IDAHO CONVENTION

One of the very interesting addresses delivered at the Coeur d'Alene meeting of the Idaho bankers was that given by William Thompson, cashier of the Lewiston National, on currency reform from the country banker's standpoint. He very cleverly reviewed the possible effects that the new legislation would have upon banking interests, and took issue with those who believe that the monetary bill would favor the larger banks in the larger towns over the small institutions in the country towns. In concluding his remarks Mr. Thompson said:

"The chief danger which now menaces the small bank which honestly and faithfully serves its constituents is the locking up of its reserves in unmarketable securities. Its chief business is the receipt of deposits payable on demand and the loaning of money usually on personal security. Its borrowers are the local merchants and farmers who are not known outside of their home community, and whose paper consequently is unmarketable except at the local bank. The quality of this paper, all things considered, is usually high. The small banker's relationship to his constituents is necessarily more of a personal nature than that of his city cousin. The business man expects his local bank to care for his loans and the banker practically is compelled to assume this obligation. His cash resources, however, do not necessarily bear any relationship to the demands on him, and if it were not for the fact that most of his borrowers receive their advances in the way of credit balances to check against he would not be able to do much business. The National Reserve Association will provide an easy normal and always available method of adjusting cash resources to needs, and that, too, without in any way curtailing his activities. In case he be threatened with a shortage of cash he will select those notes from his pouch which mature in the near future, and turn them over to the nearest branch of the National Reserve Association for rediscount. This privilege of rediscount not only will relieve the small banker of his chief anxiety and chief danger, but will enlarge his capacity to serve his constituents, and will enable him to place at the disposal of his customers foreign capital to a degree which now is impossible. He will not have to reject a good loan because he is 'loaned up.' He can always turn it to the association, providing it is used for strictly commercial purposes. This limitation will prevent him from lending assistance to such of his customers as are interested in overexpansion and inflation, but will in no way interfere with aiding them in the prosecution of legitimate commerce. The fear has been expressed that the National Reserve Association will make it so easy for the small banker to get capital for his customers that they will be encouraged to embark in all kinds of inflation schemes. This fear is based on a misconception of the nature of the commercial paper to which it is proposed to limit the association. The term 'commercial paper' commonly is used to mean paper sold by brokers, and is looked on with disfavor by a great many of the small banks, although a good many invest heavily in it. With the reserve association the term will mean something very much different. It will be paper representing movement of goods from the producer to the consumer, the transformation of raw materials into the finished products, of lean into fat cattle, etc., forms of loans presented to the banker more frequently than any other. The emphasis which the reserve association will be forced to place on commercial paper and the fact that it will supply for the first time in this country an open market for such paper, will tend to influence in a wholesome fashion the business habits of small banks and their constituents. Few of these now observe in their practice, and perhaps many of them are unconscious of, the distinction which has just been drawn between commercial and investment loans. In consequence they contribute, without doubt unconsciously in most cases, to the inflation of credit which characterizes every period of prosperity. In order that the officers of the local association may be in a position to pass intelligently upon the quality of the paper submitted to them for re-discount, they must carefully study the business methods of the bankers with whom they deal, and this study will not be spasmodic but continuous. Their fund of knowledge constantly will increase and become the common property for the entire banking community. Every bank will have a pecuniary interest in keeping its fellows up to a high grade of soundness and will be obliged to conduct its own affairs in the open. The knowledge of this fact and the consciousness of this scrutiny will be the most efficient check on bad banking yet devised in this country. It will do for small banks everywhere what clearing house inspection in some of our larger cities has done for banks thus associated."

AUSTIN STATE BANK "MELON"

Announcement is made that the Austin State Bank has again doubled its capital out of earnings, the stock now outstanding being $100,000. The bank was organized in June, 1891, with a paid-in capital of $25,000. In July, 1906, a stock dividend of 100 per cent was declared to the old shareholders, increasing the capital to $50,000. On July 1st, of this year, the capital was again doubled. A stock dividend of 80 per cent was declared to the old shareholders and 20 per cent has been allotted to new stockholders at $200 per share. The capital is now $100,000 and surplus $55,000, of which $45,000 has been paid in cash. The remainder, $110,000, has been derived from the earnings of the bank in addition to paying an average dividend on the original stock of more than 10 per cent. Charles S. Castle, also president of the Standard Trust, is president of the bank.

OUT-OF-TOWN VISITORS

Among the out-of-town celebrities who called on Chicago banking acquaintances during the past week are: John Burianek, Jr., cashier of the Peoples Savings Bank, Cedar Rapids; Harry E. Pollard, representing the Mechanics and Metals National, New York, and W. B. Hilliard, assistant cashier of the Houston Exchange National.

West Virginia

Official invitations are out for the West Virginia convention to be held next week, July 11th and 12th, at White Sulphur Springs. West Virginia bankers have a great weakness for this beautiful resort, and outside bankers are very fond of attending the West Virginia conventions on account of the beautiful surroundings and the excellence of the White Sulphur Springs Hotel, which always is the headquarters. A strong point is made in the invitation sent out by President Wylie Beall about the attendance of ladies. Special entertainments have been provided for them, and every banker in the state is urged to bring his better half. Secretary J. S. Hill of Charleston has organized a very strong program. Chief among the speakers is Robert E. James of Easton, Pa., regarded as one of the strong men of the American Bankers Association and a former president of the Pennsylvania organization. He also has secured the services of Fred W. Ellsworth of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, for his famous talk on bank advertising. Other speakers are Congressman R. A. Heflin of Alabama; Charles P. Light of Washington, D. C., on good reads, and E. D. Sanderson of the University of West Virginia on an agricultural subject. At the annual banquet the toastmaster will be W. A. McCorkle, a former governor of West Virginia. An elaborate program of entertainment has been provided, with a competent committee in charge. Every effort will be made to make the occasion an enjoyable one.

BANK VIEW OF BUSINESS OUTLOOK

It is becoming increasingly evident also that the presidential elections as a factor in the business outlook have been largely discounted. One reason for this is the unusual agitations which preceded the nominating conventions and the extraordinary arrangements which were made last year in the effort to avoid possible complications that might arise when the preliminary canvass was actually under way. It may be said that these arrangements have been unusually complete and that as things stand to-day, there is no likelihood that the general business of the country will be seriously hampered by the developments of the next four or five months. In addition, it must be recognized that the country has passed through a period of drastic liquidation, and that there is very little speculation to speak of in any department of industry. For months past—in fact for more than eighteen months—business has been conducted upon a hand to mouth basis, and both merchants and manufacturers have been buying sparingly in the effort to provide only for the consumptive demand. In that way the country's business is upon a very much more secure footing to-day than it has been at any time since the panic of 1907. Besides all this, there has been immense benefit resulting from the more sensible scale of living that the people have adopted. Very little is heard these days about the "automobile craze," the "land craze," or any other of the "crazes" which figured so prominently in the financial outlook two or three years ago. The banking position is excellent, and everywhere the tendency among bankers has been to see that the money which they have loaned has been well expended for the real benefit of those who secured the accommodation.—National City (Chicago) Financial Letter.

Where Does the Investment Banker Belong?

A few weeks ago a group of investment bankers had occasion to define their business, and they produced something about like this: "Investment banking is the buying and selling of investment securities on one's own account and the holding out to the public that one engages in such transactions as a business." Probably these men could describe their own business, but some people think they have given it the wrong name. Is investment banking properly banking at all? One prominent banker says that in the public mind banking necessarily includes the acceptance of deposits and that investment houses, not banks of deposit, are deceiving people when they style themselves bankers. He and others have an uneasy feeling that banking will be discredited if investment concerns are known as bankers because always some such concerns are unscrupulous and sometimes bring heavy losses upon innocent people. They want no one to "steal the garb of heaven to serve the devil in." On the other hand, the practice described by our opening definition, like the activities of a bank of deposit, is within that definition of banking which makes it the business of buying and selling credits for one's own account. Even if that is a proper, though broad, definition of banking, it is, of course, mere pedantry to insist upon it if the practical result is to promote fraud. In respect to this, it is pointed out that the business of investment houses has been styled banking for generations in Europe and our seaboard cities, and that this usage is well understood in the larger cities throughout the United States. It is thought absurd to collect the definition of banking from the ideas of small communities, some of which think of a bank as a railed-off country store. To thus restrict the banking would be something like

W. S. Hayden, of Cleveland, at the Ohio convention reads an illuminating paper on the subject, and pays his respects to the Big Council for turning down the proposed new section denying the name physician to a consulting specialist because he does not drive about the country in a gig. The substantial object of the investment bankers seems to be to distinguish their business from that of brokers. It is not that they think ill of brokers, but that it promotes their market influence to have it known that they own what they offer, and that they thus take the first risk in what they recommend to their customers. Brokers, of course, do not do this, for by definition a broker is an agent and buys and sells for the account and risk of others. All honest people will agree that the name under which any set of men do business should not be misleading, or should mislead as few as possible. Probably no one would be injured if investment bankers always used the word investment in their designation, or used the word "banker" in connection with subject-matter which discloses the real nature of the business.

If we are to be particular about names and require every one to call his business by some name which will inform every one else just what he really does, we cannot stop with the investment bankers. We think of national banks as commercial banks, but many national banks really are savings institutions. The name savings bank appears self-interpreting, but some banks of that name with other than savings departments and without segregation of funds do not look like savings banks to any one who knows them otherwise than by the rules printed in the pass book. The trust companies afford the fairest illustration of all. Probably no definition will include all the cases unless it were as broad as this—"a trust company is a corporation which has bank furniture in its office." There comes to mind a man who cannot tell to what church he belongs unless he knows in what town he is assumed to be. He finds people of his way of thinking in the Presbyterian church in one place and in the Unitarian church in another. His state of mind is constant but his religious denomination varies. In a sense, his religion is a matter of geography. With the trust company the ease is otherwise—the name is constant but the practice varies. In one place the trust company is a savings bank, in another a commercial bank, in another a place of safe deposit, in another a perpetual syndicate, in another a bond house, in another a division of the orphan's court, in another a real estate agency, in another a place where furs are kept in summer. Often some, or all, of these activities are carried on by one company. There is no present quarrel with these conditions. In general, the world finds good ways to get its work done. The presumption is that ways that are not secret are good if they are profitable. Ways that are not good are after a while found unprofitable. We merely point out that if we are to be purists in christening our financial agencies, we have a good deal to do besides showing the investment man his place and putting him in it.

Last May the executive council and certain committees of the American Bankers Association met at Briarcliff. A committee of investment bankers was present by invitation to consider with the amendments committee of the association the policy of forming an investment banking section. The amendments committee of the executive council recommended that the new section be formed, but the council itself decided otherwise, and the project has gone to the graveyard of lost causes. The Briarcliff incident is spoken of only to show the occasion for two observations, which were rather effective at the time and disclose interesting attitudes of mind toward the investment business. One banker said substantially this: "These bond houses are not banks. We do business with them, to be sure, but to us their wares are merely merchandise we need, and our relations to these houses are like those between us and the men who sell adding machines and loose leaf ledgers." When one comes to think about it, his illustration does not help his case for the very obvious reason that adding machines and loose leaf ledgers are charged to running expenses and written off when the books are closed, while bonds are bought with money the bank has to loan, are deemed assets, and are not charged off, or, at least, are not bought with that expectation. The other observation was this: "An investment banking section! We shall next be asked to form a stenographers' section and a janitors' section." This is a vivid and really penetrating comment. The services of stenographers and janitors are evidently without identity with the banking business, and if the same is true of the investment business, there certainly is no kinship or community of interest between investment and deposit banking. The truth is that these two businesses are very intimately akin, and the binding relationships between them may be inferred from certain identities of nature and personnel.

Banking is sometimes called a profession. In strictness it is not. Any one who can figure percentage and get the confidence of a few people may practice banking after a fashion. To be a first rate banker, however, one needs a broad culture in finance, and a thorough training in banking methods. The banker who believes this has a professional attitude toward his calling, and by virtue of his fitness may rank with the best men in the callings which are professions by their nature. Bankers need no stimulus to learn all they can about improving their routine, for that so plainly makes the day's work easier and better in result. There is not quite the same stimulus, however, to seek a broader culture, for the man without it is not of necessity out of the competition. This culture in finance involves more knowledge of the primary economic functions of production and distribution; the auxiliary personal functions of the professions; the auxiliary impersonal functions of transportation and finance, and an idea of how these things make a unit. Beyond this it involves understanding of the dovetailing of the services which constitute the general financing mechanism. The aim is to reach clear vision of the relation of one's own work to that of others near at hand and far away. This is within the purposes of the association and its groups. It all makes for better banking, for better public feeling toward banking, less losses, more profits, and closer, happier and more useful relations among financial men.

CAPITAL ONE MILLION DOLLARS

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

Deposits of state banks of Illinois have increased $7,938,922 in the period from April 19th to June 15th; the total deposits are $690,547,173.

Clearing House Association for Aurora

The six banking institutions of Aurora have formed a clearing house association. Before the existence of this association each bank maintained a messenger whose duty it was to go to the other banks in Aurora and to present for payment the checks which his institution held against the others. Under the new arrangement this has been obviated. Now all the collectors gather in the office of the manager, who is elected once every three months, and there the checks of the association are exchanged. The officers of the association are elected annually and now are: William George, president, Old Second National Bank; B. F. Smith, vice-president, Aurora Trust and Savings Bank; H. J. Cooper, treasurer, Old Second National; C. E. Powell, secretary, Aurora National. W. W. Armstrong of the Aurora Trust is manager.

Aurora Banks in Flourishing Condition

Merchants National Bank of Aurora shows deposits of $1,014,558.45. This bank was organized in 1888, and for a long time was under the direction and management of N. C. Simmons, who recently resigned from the presidency, much of its present financial standing and success being attributable to his efficient management. The present officers are: W. C. Estee, president; H. L. McWethy, vice-president; W. W. Armstrong, cashier; W. V. Slaker and R. N. Stolp, assistant cashiers.

Old Second National of Aurora also boasts of deposits over a million. The bank was founded by Alonzo George, father of the present president, William George, who is president of the Kane County Bankers federation, an ex-president of the Illinois Bankers Association and a member from Illinois on the executive council of the American Bankers Association.

Granite City National on Roll of Honor

Granite City National has been placed on the roll of honor, which is a distinction accorded to banks whose resources are over one million dollars. There are 7,500 national banks in the United States, 1,366 of which have attained this position. In Illinois there are sixty-three banks whose resources are over the million mark. The Granite City National is but ten years old, a fact which renders the accomplishment especially noteworthy, as there are several institutions in the country which have been in business for a longer period and which never have attained this honor.

Penny Savings Banks a Success in Bloomington.

The report recently made by Mrs. Amelia Hall of Bloomington, showing what has been accomplished by the penny savings bank of the Bloomington public schools, indicates that the school children of that city realize the value of saving and accumulating money. On September 12, 1911, the balance on hand was $2,002.56; there was deposited during the school year just ended $1,776.23, making a total of $3,778.79. Of this amount $1,488.80 was withdrawn, leaving a balance on June 25th of $2,289.99. There were 6,657 deposits and 675 withdrawals during the year. There are 107 children having money on deposit, ranging from $5 to $150 each.

Illinois Banking Notes

Jacksonville National, at a meeting of its board of directors, declared its regular semi-annual dividend of 3 per cent, payable July 1st.

Cashier A. H. Purdie of the German-American National of Pekin, his wife and Miss Martha Riefenstahl, left this week for New York, from which point they will sail for Glasgow, and spend the summer in the country made famous by the Poet Burns.

Bank clearings of Springfield banks for June show a decided increase. In July, 1911, they amounted to $4,299,540.45. For the month just ended they totaled $4,942,842.72, showing an increase of $643,302.27.

Mechanics and Merchants Bank of Moline has declared a dividend of 3 per cent, which is the second since the organization of the bank two years ago. Total deposits now are close to $900,000.

Union National Bank of Streator has opened a savings department in connection with its other business. Amounts of $1 and upwards will be received, on which 3 per cent interest will be paid. The bank shortly expects to occupy its new building.

Litchfield National during the past year has increased its surplus from $6,500 to $10,000, besides declaring its regular 5 per cent dividend. This bank is one of the rapidly growing institutions of Litchfield, its progress being due to the efficient management of the men who are at the head of it.

Mrs. C. J. Fletcher Farrell

J. Fletcher Farrell, vice-president of the Fort Dearborn National of Chicago, recently has returned from Baltimore, where he attended some of the sessions of the democratic national convention, and helped to whoop things up for Champ Clark, who hails from Mr. Farrell's home state. On Thursday of this week Mr. Farrell left for a month's vacation, which he will spend in Missouri, visiting Paris, his home town, and Columbia and Jefferson City. Mr. Farrell formerly was assistant state treasurer of Missouri. He reports as having enjoyed his stay in Baltimore, and as having seen a large number of bankers in attendance at the convention.

George M. These two distinguished bankers participated in a fat man's race, Mr. Reynolds finishing fourth, and Mr. Van Vechten sixth.

Mercantile Trust and Savings Bank opened for business on July 1st at the northwest corner of Clinton Street and Jackson Boulevard, in the quarters formerly occupied by the Mercantile Bank. The bank subsequently will be removed to the new C. B. & Q. building across the street, where handsome and spacious quarters will be provided for its use. Frederick H. Rawson is president of the new institution; Harry N. Grut, late of the Continental and Commercial National, is the cashier.

COMING TOO THICK FOR EDENS

The Chicago Association of Commerce and the Harvey Civic Club, both having good roads meetings for Tuesday, July 2d, invited William G. Mr. Edens, however, was obliged to go to Ohio to attend the sessions of the convention of the bankers of that state at Cedar Point, where the cooling breezes blow from Lake Erie.

NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER

WISCONSIN

Secretary George D. Bartlett of the Wisconsin Bankers Association expects to have the programs for the annual state convention ready to issue early next week. The two days of the state meeting, July 24th-25th, will be marked by a number of novel entertainment features, in addition to addresses and discussions by well-known speakers. One of the chief speakers will be Detective William J. Burns, head of the detective department of the American Bankers Association.

First National May Increase Capital

To discuss the advisability of increasing the capital of the First National Bank from two and one-half million to three million dollars, the bank's stockholders will meet on Wednesday, July 24th, notifications of the meeting having been issued this week. The proposed move, if ratified by the stockholders, will place the institution an even million ahead, as regards capitalization, of its nearest Milwaukee competitor, the Wisconsin National.

Frederick Kasten

Frederick Kasten, vice-president of the Wisconsin National, is improving so rapidly, following a serious operation undergone at Milwaukee Hospital recently, that he expects to leave the institution within a week.

German-American Increases Dividend

The annual dividend of the German-American Bank was increased from 7 to 8 per cent at its annual meeting this week, supporting the statement of the bank's officials that the last six months have been the most successful in the history of the institution. All the officers and directors were re-elected.

New Milwaukee Bank

Another bank was added to Milwaukee's fast growing list of financial institutions on Tuesday, when the incorporation of the Union Bank of Milwaukee was authorized by State Banking Commissioner A. E. Kuolt. The capital is $50,000 with W. B. Rubin, prominent Milwaukee attorney, Judge John C. Karel, mentioned as the next democratic candidate for governor, and Peter C. Wolf as the incorporators.

Says Wisconsin is Retrograding

That much of the legislation of recent years has resulted in giving Wisconsin an inferior position in manufactures and general improvements among neighboring states is the statement made by President Edmund Pennington of the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie Railroad, when on Monday he voiced the decision of directors of the road to discontinue all extension in the state under the existing laws. "Conditions in Wisconsin are such as to discourage capital seeking investment and eventually wealth and population losses will show in the state statistics that the attacks of politicians on business have brought about retrogression instead of progress," said Mr. Pennington. He characterized the state railway commission as being earnest and competent, but charged that professional politicians have sown seeds of discontent among the people for their own ends, resulting in unwise laws that hamper the growth and welfare of the state.

Reopening of Sheboygan Bank

A remarkable instance of public confidence attended the reopening of the German Bank of Sheboygan last week when, with the rumor of losses aggregating $90,000 as a handicap, the deposits received during the first day exceeded the disbursements twenty times. According to President W. J. Rietow, who succeeded former President Frederick Karste following the latter's sudden death, only one person appeared during the day to withdraw a time deposit and finally decided to reconsider this action, and went away without taking the money.

Increased Grain Shipments

That the recent decision of the interstate commerce commission ordering a change in rate on rough grains between western points and Milwaukee over the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, will result in increased grain shipments to Milwaukee, is the opinion of George A. Schroeder, traffic manager of the chamber of commerce. "I think the decision will mean an advantage to Milwaukee and Duluth to the detriment of the Minneapolis market," said Mr. Schroeder. "As far as the Milwaukee market is concerned it will be placed

Predict Big Wheat Crop

Grain men say that it is doubtful if the spring wheat crop outlook has ever been so favorable as this year. Plenty of moisture and cool weather with the warmer temperatures now prevailing as the needed stimulus for the top growth give promise of the highest degree of possible yield. Reports of a probable record fruit yield come from the Bayfield county fruit growing district, despite the fact that only a half crop of fruit is reported from other sections of the Northwest. In Bayfield county strawberries lead, with cherries, gooseberries, and other small fruit in abundance.

Banking Notes

William Webb Harmon has been elected cashier of the Lumbermens National of Menominee, Mich., succeeding the late M. S. Harmon. David G. Wilson, who has been teller of the bank for many years, has been appointed assistant cashier, succeeding W. W. Harmon.

The Gladstone State Savings Bank of Gladstone, Mich., organized this week with a capital of $50,000.

Articles of incorporation of the Farmers State Bank of Hillsboro were approved by State Bank Commissioner A. E. Kuolt this week. The bank has a capital of $20,000. The incorporators are W. J. Jewel, Charles Staley, and W. E. Lind.

The Farmers State Bank of Beaver Dam has added sixty new steel deposit boxes to its savings department.

Wisconsin ranks fifth in the value of her lumber products according to a census report on the lumber industry issued from Washington this week. The value of the state's product is $57,969,170, annually.

The First National Bank of Appleton has purchased the property at present occupied by the old opera house building, on which it will erect a new structure to cost $125,000, and predicted to be the most elaborate bank building in the state outside of Milwaukee.

Commissioner of Banking A. E. Kuolt has issued charters to the Onalaska State Bank, and the State Bank of Wales. The Onalaska institution opens with a capital of $10,000. Abel N. Morr is president, and John C. Aiken, cashier. The State Bank of Wales lists capital at $15,000 with W. H. Elias, J. H. Williams, and J. T. Hughes as incorporators.

W. H. Elias, Wales, was elected president of the new State Bank of Wales at a recent meeting of the directors. John S. Williams, Delaware, is vice-president. The bank is capitalized at $15,000 with a surplus of $6,000.

The report emanates from Marinette, the lumbering center of the state, that the present year is the most promising for the lumber trade since 1907, with a good demand and firm prices.

A large increase in the acreage planted with alfalfa is the immediate result of a new association of Wisconsin farmers organized in support of the alfalfa growing industry. According to a report of the Wisconsin Agricultural Experiment Association, 500 Wisconsin farmers have planted 2,000 acres of alfalfa this spring, using about eighteen tons of seed. Since the advent of alfalfa in the state only a few years ago the acreage devoted to the crop has grown to 18,000, as compared with 750,000 acres of timothy.

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, July 3.—A gradual stiffening in rates marked the St. Louis money market during the last week. This satisfactory condition of affairs, from the banker's standpoint, is due to a picking up of the country demand, also the placing of increased lines of commercial paper by local business concerns. Now the current range is between $4\frac{1}{2}$ and 6 per cent. Rates on prime paper display a decided hardening tendency. The banks are making preparations for financing the crop movement, and hence are not such ready purchasers of bills, especially of lengthy maturity. Several of the larger banks are more completely loaned up right now than at any times for months; however, these institutions will have heavy maturing loans between now and September 1st. Call money has also become slightly more costly, due in a measure to the interest and dividend disbursements. On the whole, though, the half-year payments here have amounted to simply a shifting of credits, and cut no material figure in the situation. On the whole prospects are more roseate than for many weeks, and bankers are hoping soon again to come into their own. General business has shown signs of improvement, despite political deadlocks and sulphur. This is so especially in the Southwest, where it seems that the population is occupying itself more with crops and industry than political issues and log-rolling. Threshing is in full blast in the more important states along the lower tier of the winter wheat belt, and returns thus far indicate yields far in excess of estimates, and the quality is causing considerable surprise to certain professionally pessimistic persons, who a few weeks ago had the winter crop ruined beyond redemption. Rains in the Northwest have also helped along the feeling of optimism, and for another two or three weeks the business world need not be depressed with groans of the "crop killers" in that region. Clearings here continue to show up in excellent shape, the total for June indicating a wholesome gain over the corresponding month a year ago. Deposits are not piling up very rapidly, but such a happy turn was not anticipated for this time, and an increase would rather denote stagnant business. Local securities continue dead dull, but generally strong.

Missouri State Balance Large

The statement of State Treasurer Cowgill, just filed, shows transactions and conditions of the treasury for the month of June as follows: Balance on hand May 31st, $4,505,120; receipts for June, $502,204; disbursements for June, $4,471,056; balance June 29th, $4,471,056. The result would thus: Cash in treasurer's vault, $19,116; Exchange Bank, Jefferson City, $220,050; First National, Jefferson City, $220,930; National Bank of Commerce, Kansas City, $221,268; German-American Bank, St. Louis, $317,816, and Mississippi Valley Trust, St. Louis, $3,471,874.

Wrecking Commonwealth Building

The work of wrecking the Commonwealth Trust Building, at Broadway and Olive Street, has commenced in good earnest, and will be pushed so that things will be ready for work on the new skyscraper, which is to supplant it, by September 1st. This building which is being demolished is the highest structure in St. Louis ever consigned to wreckers. Plans for the new structure are still in the hands of Eames & Young, the architects.

Nixon Sees Big Crops

W. C. Nixon, vice-president of the Frisco, who has just returned from an extensive business and inspection trip in Texas, reports excellent crop prospects in that state. He says that the corn crop is practically made, and that the entire unirrigated agricultural districts have received abundant rains. The moisture during the middle of June did material good to the cotton crop, which is now in a flourishing condition. The total corn yield will show up favorably with former years, and if the present promise for cotton is fulfilled, there will be a bumper crop. Mr. Nixon says there is apparently plenty of money in Texas, and that people are paying more attention down there to making more money and raising crops than to politics.

Postoffice Makes Gain

In spite of the general business depression throughout the past twelve months, the St. Louis postoffice made a goodly gain. Bank clearings and postoffice receipts are considered the best barometers of the business of any community, and the returns are a matter of satisfaction to local business and financial interests. According to the report of Postmaster Akins, business of his office increased $104,224 for the fiscal year ending June 30th. The total receipts for the twelve months were $4,720,000, as against $4,615,775 for the year ending June 30, 1911, or an increase of 2 per cent. In the mailing division 333,147,546 pieces of mail were handled, an increase of about 35,000,000. In the delivery department more than 4,000,000 pounds of letters were handled. In the same department papers handled amounted to 9,136,875. In 1911 about $2,000,000 was turned back to the United States treasury above the expense of operating, and an even greater amount will be remitted this year.

Additional Interest Suits

Three more suits have been filed in the circuit court against the National Bank of Commerce growing out of a $200,000 loan to J. T. Long of Kansas City. The amounts claimed in the latest actions aggregate $285,769. Long asks $325,450 in a previous suit, and the suits are based on alleged illegal charges in connection with the loan.

Watts Arrives July 10th

Frank O. Watts, the new vice-president of the Third National, will be on the job about July 10th, according to officials of that institution. Mr. Watts was president of the First of Nashville, Tenn. In connection with his retirement from that institution, it is announced that the First and Fourth Nationals of Nashville are to consolidate. The combined institutions are to be known as the Fourth and First National and handsome new quarters are to be provided for it. President W. C. Dibrell of the Fourth National will head the merged banks. The capital will be in excess of $1,000,000.

New Bank for West End

Plans for the new Parkview Bank of St. Louis have been completed, and it is expected that the institution will be opened for business about August 1st. It is to be located at Westgate Avenue and Delmar Boulevard, and will serve the Parkview district. Officers and directors have about been decided upon, and their names will be announced next week. The bank will have an initial capital of $25,000, all paid in.

Broadway National Change

A change in management of the Broadway National was effected on Monday, by which Edward Biesbarth becomes vice-president, succeeding D. A. Siegfried, who had held the position of cashier and vice-president. Mr. Siegfried will continue as cashier until Oc-

According to the last tax return the Bankers Trust owned 400 shares of the Broadway National stock. As to whether it has since acquired control or not is not disclosed. It is stated that no other changes will be made at present. F. Ernest Cramer continues as president, and Henry C. Menne, as assistant cashier. Biesbarth resigned as secretary and treasurer of the Farmers and Merchants Trust Company to go to the Broadway National, and he has been succeeded by H. R. Rehme.

J. H. PETERS AT VIRGINIA CONVENTION

J. H. Peters, Gate City, Va., in speaking before the Virginia bankers at their recent convention on co-operation in banking, pointed out the necessity of having the right kind of men engaged in the profession—men who will inspire the confidence of the public, and who are fitted adequately to discharge their duties to the public. He also said:

"This demand for the right kind of bankers—men trained in efficiency and to a sense of their great responsibility, will go far to correct an evil that has been threatening of recent years—an evil pointed out most forcibly by Comptroller L. O. Murray—the unlimited organization of banks. He says: 'To say that the comptroller, bank supervisor, or any other power to issue bank charters must give to one and all who apply, irrespective of conditions, is preposterous. We might as well stop all attempt at bank organization, for incompetents, thieves and rascals will organize banks and wreck them faster than any comptroller or other supervising power can see to it that they are well and safely managed.' Banks have been multiplied in the rapidly growing sections of the West to the extent that in some places it is claimed that there are one or more to a population of two hundred. The same condition is apt to foist itself upon the rapidly growing South if we do not forestall it by means of education demanding efficiency and high character in bankers. And to effect this we must be closely united."

In commenting on the desirability of obtaining men who are trained in banking matters, and the urgent necessity of education along these lines, the speaker said:

"To meet this need the first step in training seems to have been taken in the formation of the American Institute of Banking. To call the Institute the first step in training for co-operation is only another way of saying that the first step in anything always is in some way educational. The Institute is intended not only to increase the efficiency of the bank men, but to educate them to a sense of their responsibilities in all the intricate trade relations with which banking is concerned."

Mr. Peters believes that co-operation among banks has a good effect upon public confidence, pointing out that of old banks often were looked upon with suspicion owing to the number of wild-cat institutions in which people lost their hard-earned savings. He believes there can be no better remedy for this than co-operation, meaning a responsibility not divided or isolated, but equally imposed, each bank bearing, shoulder to shoulder, its part of the responsibility. In urging the need of co-operation he pointed out that the banker occupies a very prominent position in the world—that he is a sort of leader, saying: raculous feat—that of occupying two places at the same time, the van and the rear. In other words, banks and bankers, to fill their place properly as the leading instrument of industry, commerce and material development, in these modern times, must stand for progress with a big 'P.' They must not only be in the van but must lead the van. At the same time, to be true to the trust imposed in them, as guardians of so much of the world's wealth, they must exercise the extremest care, forethought and reluctance before they risk anything in any venture, or adopt any new measures, methods or systems. In short, they must be at the same time conservative and progressive; they must press forward in the race, and they must not lag behind, if they would satisfy all the demands made upon them, come up to the expectations of their friends, and at the same time disarm their enemies. How are we to fill such a bill? There seems indeed to be no other way than that we are attempting to follow, to reach around the entire business circle, to cover all intervening space and let the extremes meet. This is our universality—our universal importance. I am myself so impressed with the importance of our place in the business world that I can think of nothing which so fully expresses it, especially in times of crises, as the following little story: A little girl in a Pennsylvania town, in saying her prayers the other night, was told to pray for her father and mother, who were both ill, and for one of the servants, who had lost her husband. She faithfully did as she was told, and then, impressed with the dreary condition of things, added on her own account; 'And now, O God, take good care of yourself, for if anything should happen to you, we should all go to pieces. Amen!'"

Editorial Comment

THE NOMINATING COMMITTEE

The nominating committee of the American Bankers Association will have as one of its members this year Mrs. C. E. Batcheller of Pingal, N. D. This is the first time that a lady ever has sat as a member of an important committee of the association. The duties of the nominating committee as defined by the constitution are to select from the membership suitable names to be balloted upon for the positions of president and vice-president. No fairer or more conservative system of selection could be devised. Each member of the committee is chosen months in advance of the meeting of the national convention by the members of the A. B. A. resident in the several states. It has been the custom for several years for the nominating committee to promote those having given suitable service to the next succeeding position in importance. The chairman of the executive council usually has been advanced to the vice-presidency and the vice-president has been made the president. In no recent instance has any other nomination been offered before the convention than those proposed by the nominating committee. This is not because there are any restrictions on the subject in the constitution or by-laws, for there are none. At the last convention held in New Orleans a resolution was considered, preventing rotation in office. It provided that an officer of the association could not again hold office for one year after the expiration of his term. There was a great deal of discussion and some feeling developed upon the subject, which latter went to the committee on amendments to the constitution for further consideration. At the Briarcliff meeting of the council the amendment was passed upon favorably and will be submitted at the Detroit convention for adoption as a part of the constitution of the organization. Members of the association will do well to consider the matter carefully before casting a final ballot on this difficult subject. A number of the states have tried the plan and quickly abandoned it, the objection being that it practically prevents the selection of an experienced and informed man on association matters to become the president of the organization. In instances where it has been tried the election of a man as presiding officer who knew nothing about the past work of the organization, nor of its policies, operated so much for delay that by the time his term was up he only had begun to understand the duties of his office. It is the history of all well-conducted organizations that men well and carefully trained, first in the ranks, then on the council or executive committee, then in the minor official positions and finally the presidency, are the best equipped for the position and the safest to entrust with the highest administrative office.

The present plan of operation men of high standing practically are certain of promotion. There is nothing in the constitution to prevent any member from making additional nominations from the floor; neither is there anything to prevent the nominating committee from naming more than one person for each office. In bankers' organizations, both state and national, this has not been customary for the very best of reasons. There are no remunerations or benefits to be derived from these positions except a social reward for duty well done. All members of the association practically are of equal rank, all of the same high character, and nearly all of them well adapted to the executive work which comes to an officer. For these reasons it has been customary, as has been said, to promote the deserving ones and thus always to have experienced, well-qualified men in charge of the material affairs of the organization.

LOYALTY VS. SELFISHNESS

Rumor has had it ever since the Chicago convention that the Taft managers, to test out Col. Roosevelt's progressivism and his devotion to the "tainted delegate" issue, made him a direct offer of compromise. They proposed to seat the Roosevelt delegates from Washington and Texas if Roosevelt would consent to the nomination of Governor Hadley or some other third man. Governor Hadley passed through Iowa the other day on his way to fill Chautauqua engagements, and was asked about the truth of the story.

"That proposition was made to me and I understood that it also was made to Colonel Roosevelt," Governor Hadley said. "I refused to consider or discuss it unless it first had the approval of Colonel Roosevelt, as I was for him for the nomination and no one else. I was told afterwards that Colonel Roosevelt had refused his consent."

Probably even this will not convince the credulous third-termers that their idol has only feet of clay. That he did not stand for a progressive candidate or a progressive platform, but only for Roosevelt, is believed by the unprejudiced. La Follette has told his followers the truth and Hadley has confirmed it. The only Oyster Bay program was Roosevelt or a bolt.

THE COLONEL'S THIRD PARTY

Those who possess the most skill in matters pertaining to politics do not take seriously Mr. Roosevelt's intention to organize a third party. It is not believed that such an undertaking has even the remotest chance of success. The people of this country have become accustomed to the two big parties, and are loath to bestow any serious consideration upon a third party. A new party, in order to be a successful venture, would have to come as a remedy for some emergency vitally affecting the interests of the country. It hardly need be said that no such condition of affairs exists at the present time. Theodore Roosevelt's primary object in severing his relations with the party under whose name he has held every office he ever has occupied is purely personal. Realizing that the republican party at last has been aroused from its lethargy and determined to rid itself of his arrogant and insolent despotism, he has come to the conclusion that the best way to further his personal ends is to organize a new party with himself as its leader. His desire for personal advancement even has led him to make overtures to some of the democrats who in his estimation embody some of those progressive principles for which he claims to stand. He believes in allowing the people to rule, but also is laboring under the delusion that he is the people. Another difficulty with which the Colonel will have to contend is the financing of such an enterprise. Now that some of the political bosses who contributed so liberally to his recent campaign have deserted his standard, he will find it tough sledding to obtain sufficient money to organize and operate successfully his new endeavor. It is not likely that such an idea will receive either the support or encouragement of any of the political leaders of the various states of the Union. This is evidenced by the refusal of those men, who themselves are candidates for office in their respective states, to join the Colonel. They do not care to endanger their own chances by espousing a revolutionary cause, the leader of which already has been in public life long enough to satisfy any reasonable man. The country does not want a third party; there is no urgent necessity for it; if formed it will be a one-man party, a thing which the liberty-loving American people do not look upon favorably. One can become tired of even something that is good, by coming in contact with it too much. When, however, its value is a question of grave doubt, its frequent recurrence often is annoying, if not irritating. Scat!

THE CANDIDATES

Nothing need be said to bankers about the candidacy of Mr. Taft. He was the first choice of most of them and the only man who could place Mr. Roosevelt away on the upper shelf, without Mr. Roosevelt's own consent. A stronger man than either might have been named at Chicago had Roosevelt been willing to sink his own personality that a progressive might be nominated. This he was not willing to do, hence Taft was the best and only possibility.

The Baltimore convention has gone on record as progressive and named the best possible exponent of that advanced doctrine for the presidency. Of Woodrow Wilson, the progressive republican Chicago Tribune says editorially the day after the nomination:

Gov. Wilson represents intelligent progressivism within his party, a progressivism which found successful expression at Baltimore, though it failed at Chicago. He is a man of high personal character, of distinguished intellectual attainments, and brief but brilliant political record.

The democratic party is to be congratulated upon the choice of Gov. Wilson. It also owes a debt of thanks to Mr. Bryan, whose successful fight in the convention against reactionary plutocracy will go down to posterity as one of the most dramatic exhibitions of the moral influence of a great leader of the people our political history has shown.

The independent republican Chicago Record-Herald says of Mr. Wilson:

Governor Wilson is a moderate and sane radical, a constructive radical, a student of history, political science and economics. He is a serious thinker and a capable administrator. His record as executive of New Jersey is in every way creditable and promising. He has been a firm and an independent governor. He has risen above party levels and has co-operated with clean and public-spirited republicans. He has been vigorous and vigilant, but at the same time careful and prudent. He has vetoed popular legislation when he knew that it was crude, unfair and half-baked. He has protected legitimate interests. He has promised nothing that he could not fulfill; there is nothing wild or demagogical about his style of oratory.

Thus it would seem that there is no call in reason for Col. Roosevelt to project himself as a third party on the people. The destinies and institutions of the country will be preserved under either Wilson or Taft and "the people will rule" quite as much under either as they did under Theodore, and with less ruction and turmoil in the White House.

DENMARK AND WISCONSIN

Denmark is known as the world's agricultural experiment station. It is ruled by peasant farmers. The ministry is composed of peasants. The state is run for agriculture. Education is adjusted to this end. There are high schools university extensions, classes in dairying in every village. Democracy has eliminated illiteracy. There is scarcely any poverty. Denmark has done this through the rule of the peasant, through co-operation in buying and selling. There are few millionaires in Denmark, and very few poor people. England is fed by Denmark.

A large percentage of the population of Wisconsin is Scandinavian, and Wisconsin has adopted the Danish idea of using education to improve agriculture. Farming is a lucrative profession in that state, largely through the inspiration of the state university, which has increased the value of dairy products until they exceed the total value of the gold and silver produced in California, Alaska, and Colorado. Wisconsin has been converted into the Holstein, Jersey or Guernsey of America by practicing scientific breeding. The state is breeding horses in the same way. It is an experiment station in farm eugenics. The university breeds pure seeds, by which it has increased the yield of corn, of barley and of oats. It is claimed that the state university, through its scientific experiments and university extension, has increased the value of farm products by twenty million dollars a year. It pays for the total cost of the university a dozen times over each year. Frederic C. Howe, in his recent book on "Wisconsin: An Experiment in Democracy," describes how an American state, using its university as a laboratory of politics, has sent its farmers to school and saved the state from agricultural decay owing to the exhaustion of the soil.

William R. Dawes

William R. Dawes, vice-president and cashier of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, and Mrs. Dawes are on a trip to the Pacific Coast country. The strenuous business life Mr. Dawes led from last October until late this spring, when the various bank consolidations in which the Central Trust has been interested were consummated, caused him to want a change of scene, and hence the trip West.

A FLING AT SECRETARY MACVEAGH

Washington, D. C., July 3.—Assistant Secretary of the Treasury A. Piatt Andrew has resigned from the treasury department in a letter addressed to the president. In a lengthy document he assails Secretary MacVeagh for a hundred alleged shortcomings. It is not likely that much attention will be paid to him, as he has long been regarded as both tiresome and inefficient. MacVeagh found it necessary to curtail Piatt's range of operations and occasionally close his office door for privacy, all of which worked on Piatt's imagination and brought his resignation.

Progress Under Ohio's New Banking Law

Like all other good legislation, the present banking law did not meet with favor in the eyes of some bankers who believed that freedom could have no restrictions. This feeling in some places was so deep-seated as to make it necessary for the newly created banking department to adopt stringent measures, and in view of the results obtained I do not apprehend that any of these gentlemen now have any doubt in their minds that the department has the courage of its convictions. I only mention this in order to demonstrate that the work of banking supervision is not always the most pleasant, and like all other avocations has its disagreeable features.

This department has felt all along that its mission in Ohio was not to interfere, hinder or destroy the proper conduct of banks, but was to assist in building up wherever an element of weakness was found. It has been the policy to close a bank only as a last resort, in preserving assets for the benefit of the depositors and stockholders. We have had conditions which appeared, at first glance, to be hopeless, but in our search for a remedy we have often found a way to rehabilitate; and I want to assure you that the officers of the department receive no recompense so great as the consciousness of having assisted in saving a bank. The law makes it obligatory upon the department of banks to require an impairment of capital to be made good. It also requires us to see that proper methods are employed in the conduct of a bank. It has happened in several instances that we have found no definite impairment of capital, but did find such methods employed as to make it altogether probable, and in fact absolutely certain, that an impairment would be created sooner or later, and a loss to depositors made manifest at any moment. You can imagine how difficult a situation like that might be, and what a strong resistance would meet our efforts to correct the methods employed.

It has been our unpleasant duty to close a total of fourteen banks; six of these institutions were rehabilitated, and returned to the control of the stockholders, and in this accomplishment the department claims a pardonable degree of pride. In each instance it was necessary to close the bank to preserve the assets for the benefit of depositors and stockholders. The banks had met with difficulties which the officers and directors were powerless to overcome. A short cessation of business in each instance enabled the department to protect the assets of the bank from imminent sacrifice, and gave the stockholders an opportunity to recover their equilibrium by making good serious losses. These banks remained in our hands for periods varying from one week to sixty days, and when returned to the control of the stock-

Supt. F. E. Baxter at the Cedar Point convention tells how its restrictions are ridding the state of the unscrupulous banker and the professional bank promotor. Opposition met and overcome. Fourteen banks closed to preserve assets. Ninety-five new banks started. Loose-leaf ledgers condemned as easy of manipulation holders they had been thoroughly cleansed of every defect. Each of these banks has recovered the confidence of the people of the community, they are reasonably prosperous, and have become agencies of good to the community.

It was a source of much gratification in the first examinations made to find so large a number of banks above criticism. Such banks as were good, safe, strong institutions before the new law was enacted continue so to-day, and will no doubt remain bulwarks of safety as long as their present management is in control. These banks have furnished an inspiration to the officers of the department, and I cheerfully bespeak for them your most profound approbation. It might be interesting for you to know that we have on file in our office a list of the banks showing the best earning power, and that the names on this list are identical with a list of banks which we regard as being above criticism. This in itself is conclusive proof that the safe and conservative methods are most remunerative.

The department now has a total of 503 banks and trust companies under its supervision. These banks and trust companies have aggregate resources of over 520 millions, an increase of more than 105 millions since the department was created. It will therefore be seen that the average resources per bank are over one million dollars.

The department has persistently urged the curtailment of overdrafts to such small temporary ones as are absolutely necessary to the accommodation of the bank's patrons, and it is gratifying to know that this appeal has met with universal approval among the bankers, and that as a consequence the aggregate amount has been reduced from $1,108,393.33 upon August 18, 1908, the date of the first reports rendered to the department, to $382,931.84 upon April 18, 1912.

There have been ninety-five new banks granted certificates of authority to begin business since the department was created. The law granting authority to the superintendent of banks to refuse a certificate to begin business has had a salutary effect upon the situation in so far as new banks are concerned. We hold to the idea that there must be a crying need for an institution of that kind, and that the initiative in organizing banks should be taken by local people. It is our observation that where a bank is needed in the community the people therein will themselves be able to furnish the facilities.

Manipulations of the unscrupulous bank promotor are at an end in Ohio, and it is impossible for such a person to receive any consideration at the hands of this department. A new bank must start clean or it cannot begin business at all. Its officers and directors must come with their application for a charter clean-handed, with demonstrated responsibility, at least some experience, and a reasonable prospect for success. During the period since the passage of the new banking law in 1908 there have been thirty-seven voluntary liquidations and consolidations. Six banks made assignments before the passage of the present liquidating act in 1910. Two of our state banks have been nationalized, and there are eight institutions now in process of liquidation by this department—or a total of fifty-three charters surrendered, leaving a net gain of forty-two banks in number. Of the eight institutions now in the hands of the department for liquidation only one, the Commerce and Deposit Bank of Cincinnati, has reached a point wherein the depositors and other creditors have been paid in full.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

"So intimately are all our interests in this locality dependent upon agriculture," said J. R. Dominick, president of the Traders National of Kansas City, to the representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER, "that we are simply waiting the outcome of the harvests. Business is not as lively as usual and that may be accounted for on the same ground. Merchants delay ordering stocks until they have a sound basis for estimating the demand. At present there is a steady flow of money into the farming districts to handle crops but the industrial requirements are easily met. Never before in my recollection have the banks and bankers taken such a solicitous interest in the prosperity of the farms. From the beginning of the season the banks have advised and helped farmers in planting their crops. Bankers have distributed literature instructing the farmers in testing seeds and in scientific soil preparation. Naturally, the bankers are now overjoyed at the big results of the present season. I have reports from all parts of the Central West, and it appears that the crop conditions are uniformly satisfactory."

Conditions Excellent in Central West

The past week has been one of brightening prospects in the Central West. Crops have progressed well and the wheat harvest is now in full swing. While estimates of the wheat crop range high it is believed by careful bankers that such estimates are entirely justifiable, based on the wheat already gathered. It was feared that continued wet weather would interfere with field work, but a week of sunshine has made harvesting conditions satisfactory. The corn fields are developing a splendid crop and, while it is still some time before corn will be entirely safe, no better growing weather could be asked for than that of the past week. With a good crop outlook and high prices for farm products, the Central West expects a season of more prosperity for the farmers than has been known for three years.

Released from Leavenworth

Oscar F. Cochran, a nephew of Whitelaw Reid, and a member of the famous "Bankers' Colony" at the Leavenworth Federal Prison, has been released on parole. Cochran was received at the prison in November, 1909, to serve five years for embezzling funds from the American National Bank of Indianapolis. He disappeared from Indianapolis in 1907, when it was found that he was short in accounts. He was arrested in New York two years later.

TO IMPROVE FARMING COUNTRY

A Colorado banker has devised a plan for the betterment of the agricultural country he serves, which may well be emulated in other states of the Union where the same condition prevails. The idea is to encourage well-to-do men in each community to relieve conditions of lack where most flagrant, and place the farmer on a prosperous basis, as follows:

That the destitute farmers of eastern Colorado may be supplied with seed and feed without further loss of time, it is proposed that the responsible men in each community where the need is most apparent shall take the notes of the farmer for seed and feed, and then have the banks of Denver and Colorado Springs carry the notes for seven months at 8 per cent. The local men of each community will thus be able to secure money which shall be invested in seed and feed to be retailed to the farmer on the strength of the note at a profit of 25 per cent. If there are no losses on the notes the 25 per cent profit is to be returned to the farmer, but should there be partial losses all shall participate in them equally. The 25 per cent profit will offset to a large degree any possible resulting losses.

Philadelphia

Heavy decreases in deposits and cash reserves in the face of a moderate expansion in loans by Philadelphia national banks have brought about a firmer condition in the local money market, noticeable chiefly in commercial paper. Complete figures of the bank returns on June 14th to the comptroller of the currency explain this stiffening, as they show decreases of $8,103,507 in deposits and $6,346,682 in cash and reserves, compared with April 18th. The deposits on June 14th were $353,970,859 and the reserves $81,879,690. The reserve ratio dropped below the legal minimum, standing at 24.73 per cent, against 25.64 on April 18th and 26.50 per cent on February 20th. The loss of deposits was altogether in bank funds, individual deposits increasing slightly despite this withdrawal of funds. There was expansion in loans and discounts from $1,056,978 to $228,803,212 and an increase in bond investments from $648,947 to $40,357,310.

CITIZENS LEAGUE FOR EDMONTON

Edmonton, Alberta.—Citizens League of Edmonton, recently organized by representative business and professional men, has established offices in the Tegler building and will co-operate with the Board of Trade and the industrial commissioner, to be appointed by the municipality, in acquainting the world with what the city and the tributary country offer to investors, manufacturers, settlers and tourists. The general plan is to encourage the influx of capital for legitimate purposes and attract earnest and ambitious people to assist in working out a better and more homogeneous development and settlement of the farming communities, with a view to adding to the population and wealth-production of the Edmonton district.

The organization committee, which has charge of affairs for the first year, is composed of M. R. Jennings, editor and managing director of the Journal, chairman; George W. Swisland, manager of the Molson's Bank, treasurer; M. S. Booth, manager of the Hudson's Bay Company; J. E. Brown, manager of Revillon Brothers; William MacAdams, editor of the Capital; John Blue, provincial librarian; John Howey, editor of the Bulletin; T. W. Lines, capitalist; William A. Sugarman, merchant; F. C. Jamison, barrister. August Wolf, formerly of the Spokane Chamber of Commerce, is secretary.

The organization has nothing to sell and has no special or private interests to serve. The men who organized and are supporting the movement are public-spirited, and the league, though independent in its scope and operation, has the moral support and full co-operation of the municipality, the board of trade and allied organizations, and the financial, industrial and commercial interests of the city.

Twenty-one domestic companies, with an aggregate capitalization of $1,500,000 and head offices in Edmonton, were incorporated in the province of Alberta in May. The total in the province during the month was 52 corporations with a total capital of $6,300,000, the largest in the history of Alberta. Eleven foreign companies with a total capital of $5, 805,000 were registered in the same month. The most notable of these is the Credit General du Canada of Antwerp, Belgium, capitalized for $2,000,000. The corporation will make investments in the Edmonton district, and throughout Alberta.

Paul Hull, for many years a leading Chicago journalist, and recently head of the second-class mail division of the Chicago postoffice, died on Wednesday at Brimfield, Ill., at the home of his wife's parents. Mr. Hull was genial, talented and popular and for years a leader in Press Club affairs.

NEW TRUST COMPANY FOR TEXAS

Waco, Texas.—Announcement is made of the formation of the Continental Trust Company of Waco, with a capitalization of $1,000,000. Business will be accepted by the new company within the next four months. Judge Sam R. Scott and other prominent Wacoans are behind the new venture.

Indianapolis

Indianapolis.—So many persons visited the Indiana National Bank and the new Fletcher Savings and Trust Company Monday (July 1) that it was difficult to handle the business. The Indiana National, one of the oldest banks in Indiana, opened under new conditions, the Capital National Bank having become a part of a consolidated organization. The Fletcher Savings and Trust Company, successor to the German American and Marion Trust companies, also had its first day on Monday. At the Indiana National many flowers were received. These came from every other financial concern in the city as well as leading banks at various points in the state. The incoming mail brought dozens of letters of congratulation and telegrams were received from banking houses in New York, Chicago, St. Louis and Western cities. The desks of Chairman Malott of the board and President Frank D. Stalnaker were covered with flowers and every counter and desk in the new bank was adorned with bouquets of enormous size.

The opening of the Fletcher Savings and Trust Company was a somewhat dual affair, two branches being maintained, the German American and Marion companies retaining old quarters until a new building is provided. President Woollen and Vice-Presidents Albert E. Metzger and Hugh Dougherty received personal calls from practically every member of the banking profession in the city as well as many flowers. Communications also were received from local and out-of-town bankers wishing the new institution a successful career.

The Marion county board of finance, which distributes the public funds in the several banks and trust companies of the county, has recognized the merger of the Capital National Bank with the Indiana National Bank, and the consolidation of the Marion Trust Company and the German-American Trust Company, and has authorized the county treasurer to distribute the funds in these banks according to the law.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

That the reciprocity matter is only sleeping is the opinion of F. A. Chamberlain, president of the Security National, returning from a trip through the West. Western Canada, he is sure, wants it. Meanwhile, Canada has a big crop that is coming along well, and if the crop comes through, the country is going to do a big business with Minneapolis, he says. "Cement is the biggest visible factor of trade influence that one sees at this time in western Canada," Mr. Chamberlain said. "The Canadian government has reduced the import duty, temporarily, that cement enough for building construction may be obtained, and this has led some of the influential west Canadian newspapers to argue for the full and permanent discontinuation of the import tax. Reciprocity is still a live issue out there."

Large Grain Crop

"Ten years ago I was in Saskatoon, which had 200 population. Commercial interests now claim 20,000. The John Deere, International Harvester, Rumley people and others are doing a big agricultural implement and machinery business and traction and gasoline engines are seen everywhere. Building construction is going on at a great rate. Everybody seems very confident that, notwithstanding some need of rain in a portion of the western grain area, principally that part just north of the boundary, the country is going to have a big grain crop."

W. H. Dunwoody on Fishing Cruise

Wm. H. Dunwoody, chairman of the board of the Northwestern National, director in the Great Northern road, is guest of James J. Hill aboard his yacht which is on the annual fishing cruise off the coast of Labrador, a trip to last another week yet. First reports from the cruise were in a telegram from Mr. Dunwoody reading: "St. John's river, via Quebec—One hundred and twenty salmon taken so far. Total weight 100 tons." Mathematically speaking, 100 tons is 20,000 pounds, or 17 pounds for each salmon. On a 100 reel and rod, the Great Northern and banking magnates are suspected of having great fun.

A. L. Herring, former cashier of the Havre National, Mont., has been indicted on the charge of making false reports.

Big Volume of Trade

"I came back convinced that there is opportunity for a record volume of trade between Minneapolis and western Canada. Automobiles are so numerous in the West that one marvels at them, and most of the cars that I saw moving about were American made. One man in Saskatoon, who is a flax farmer on a large scale and who had a fine crop last year that is said to have brought him $75,000, has the latest and finest machine in that city, and he is but a type."

May Have to Borrow

With $1,000,000 on hand Minnesota may have to borrow money to run itself, because an old law prevents overdraft of more than $600,000 on the current revenue fund and July 1st this was already $569,710. Unless the counties come forward at once with June collections Treasurer Walter J. Smith may seek his "uncle." The cash balance in all funds June 29th was $1,351,873, which the state treasurer can't use. A year ago the state had a cash balance of $2,228,257, but this was reduced by disbursements resulting from legislative appropriation.

Paving Bonds

St. Paul has arranged the form for its bonds and certificates to be sold for financing paving on Fourth and Fifth streets. It is believed there will be no trouble to find a market for the certificates. They may bear as high as 6 per cent. The tax levy certificates, which bear only 4 per cent, have been oversubscribed locally. These latter certificates, to anticipate tax receipts, are to take place of those which expired June 15th, and were ready for delivery July 1st.

Minneapolis Has Fine Showing

With its largest half-year business and the greatest July 1st dividend payments, Minneapolis closed banking business June 30th. Cash disbursements and savings bank interest exceeded $1,000,000. The bank clearings at $487,759,790 exceeded the half year of 1911 by $17,110,032, which the bankers say are unusual for a presidential year. For the banks that pay dividends July 1st the record is:

Name	Rate	Total
N. W. National Bank.....	2½	$75,000
Minn. Loan & Trust Co.....	1½	15,000
First National Bank.....	2½	50,000
Security National Bank.....	4	40,000
St. Anthony Falls Bank.....	3	6,000
German-American Bank.....	4	8,000
East Side State Bank.....	3	3,000
Union State Bank.....	4	4,000
Merchants and Manufacturers....	3	3,000
Central State Bank.....	5	1,250
Minneapolis Steel and Mach. Company Preferred stock.....	3	17,500
No Am. Tlg. Co.....	3	30,000

These payments aggregating $252,000 represent some quarterly and some semiannual disbursements. Savings banks with $26,500,000 on deposit are paying on quarterly interest at the annual rate of 3½ per cent, $198,750. Much of the Twin City Rapid Transit 1½ per cent on common and 1¾ on preferred, a total of $385,000, will be distributed in the Twin Cities.

Minneapolis clearings for the first six months of 1912 total $487,759,790.69, an increase of $17,110,031.62 over the corresponding period of 1911. "The business outlook is all right," said E. W. Decker, president of the Northwestern National. "We have more business than we had for the first six months of 1911, and reports show that crop prospects are very good all over the Northwest."

E. H. Bailey on Northwest Conditions

Northwestern prosperity is outlined by bankers in brief as follows: E. H. Bailey, president St. Paul First National: "On the whole the outlook presents a hopeful aspect, and we have reasons to believe the promise will be fulfilled. The present condition of crops offers most excellent promise of good trade conditions throughout the Northwest. With the promise of good crops, strong trade conditions are always reflected in all lines of commerce. St. Paul Banks Prosperous Bank clearing gains in St. Paul are indicated in the table of clearings by months for the semiannual period of 1912 and 1911.

January	$43,587,752	$41,987,103
February	44,087,933	36,552,849

June	44,864,088	42,683,160

Totals $272,573,753 $254,646,794

"The banks have been fairly prosperous," said W. A. Miller, vice-president of the First National Bank. "They have made satisfactory earnings and the outlook is splendid for summer and fall."

Banking Notes of Interest

Creditors of the First State of Bowlus, Minn., will get a second dividend of 20 per cent, making a total of 53 per cent. Another dividend of 22 to 27 per cent is possible. C. Rosenmeier is said to have realized well on the assets of the bank.

E. C. Cooke, president of the Minneapolis Trust Company, has been elected director of the First National Bank, succeeding W. D. Douglas, who went down in the Titanic. He became trust officer and director on the Trust company in 1895 and president in 1898.

Clearings in the St. Paul banks for the week ending June 27th maintained the high record of increase for other weeks. The total was $587,000 more than the similar week for 1911. The total for the month was $42,911,914, as against $39,353,603 for June, 1911. George C. Power, president of the Second National, said: "We are looking toward the fields. The thing that interests us most is getting a big harvest."

CLEVELAND CHAPTER WINS DEBATE

Sandusky, Ohio, July 3.—Cincinnati and Cleveland Chapters of the American Institute of Banking at the Ohio Bankers Association at Cedar Point late this afternoon debated the question: "Resolved, That national banks be permitted to loan on real estate mortgages." Cleveland won, securing three-fourths of the required points on argument, to Cincinnati's one-fourth for delivery. The Cincinnati team had the negative side of the question debated. The judges were William F. Schroth, Tiffin; P. J. Moody, Lima, and John Winger, Springfield.

MADE MEMBER MISSOURI BANKERS ASSOCIATION

At the recent convention of the Missouri Bankers Association the Missouri chapters of the American Institute of Banking were formally made members of the association, each chapter to have a representative same as any bank. Frank C. Ball, safe deposit officer of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company and president of the St. Louis Chapter, was a special representative at the convention, presenting the proposition of his institution, which was acted upon favorably. Mr. Ball is serving his second term as president of St. Louis Chapter, and is a hard worker in the organization which is such a valuable adjunct to banking institutions in the way of imparting knowledge to the employees and making a great ground work for financial progress in them.

SACRAMENTO CHAPTER INSTITUTED

Sacramento Chapter, American Institute of Banking, has been instituted in Sacramento with about seventy-five members. The Sacramento Clearing House Association has offered to finance the new chapter, which is the fourth chapter in California. The other three are located in San Francisco, Oakland and Los Angeles. Delegates representing San Francisco and Oakland chapters attended the instituting of the new chapter.

TO TEACH PUBLIC THRIFT

The savings bank section will shortly take up the educational campaign proposed at Briarcliff that the public may learn of the advantages of a savings account. E. G. McWilliam, the secretary, will be glad of suggestions made by experienced bankers. Send in your ideas in a brief letter.

INDIANA BANK WRECKER CAPTURED

Howard B. Harter, who wrecked the Citizens Bank (a private institution) of Akron, Ind., last November, through unlucky speculations on wheat, was arrested Thursday, charged with embezzlement of $24,500 of the bank's funds. The bank was founded by Harter's father in 1902. The younger man was cashier at the time the doors closed, due to the discovery of his peculations.

Harter was arrested at the Hannah & Hogg Hotel, 214 South Clark Street, where he had been living for some time.

H. A. PEARSONS RETIRES

H. A. Pearsons, who for forty-seven years has been at the head of the Pearsons-Taft Land Credit Company, has retired. He has sold his interests to H. L. Taft and O. E. Taft, and to various employees and clients of the company. The withdrawal of Mr. Pearsons from the business will cause no change in either the management or the policy of the company. As a result of this change the Taft family and the employees of the company will own about 75 per cent of the $200,000 capital stock of the corporation.

The late D. K. Pearsons established the company in 1865. Later the company became known as Pearsons & Taft. In 1878 D. K. Pearsons retired. The present corporation was formed under the banking laws of Illinois in 1887. The officers are: Oren B. Taft, president; H. A. Pearsons, vice-president; Oren E. Taft, second vice-president, and Harry Lee Taft, secretary and treasurer. Under the change H. A. Pearsons drops out as vice-president.

The directors consist of the three officers remaining and L. K. Boisen and L. G. Cullen. The two latter succeed H. P. Pearsons and H. A. Pearsons, leaving one vacancy on the board.

Seattle, Wash., July 2.—Seattle banks held $79,070,356 in deposits at the call of June 14th, a decrease of $862,683 between the last two calls. Loans were increased $1,042,241, amounting on June 14th to $47,173,476. At the June call of last year deposits amounted to $75,586,300, and loans were $46,238,653. The total deposits for the last call were the next highest in the history of Seattle banks; the only time the present record having been exceeded was at the April call of this year.

J. W. Spangler

J. W. Spangler, vice-president of the Seattle National, and secretary of the Seattle Clearing House Association, addressed the national convention of the American Society of Civil Engineers which convened for a four-days' session on June 25th, in the ball room of the Hotel Washington. Other speakers were Governor M. E. Hay of the state of Washington, and George F. Cotterill, mayor of Seattle.

In speaking upon the relations between the banker and the civil engineer in their respective professions, Mr. Spangler stated that the co-operation of both are necessary, that the undertakings of the civil engineer may eventuate. He further said that there is no professional opinion to which the banker attaches more importance than that of a first-class civil engineer. "When we come to the point," he said, "of deciding whether or not we shall risk upon a given proposition, the money entrusted to us, no last word is more valuable than your own. So high is the standing of your profession that I can say no less than to express the hope that our own may never fall below your standards. The hand and wisdom of your profession has found, and will, in the future, find large opportunity in this far western country, upon which a kind Providence has bestowed so many blessings, in the form of natural resources, the development of which we cannot hope to accomplish without your aid."

Bill Before Legislature

State Examiner Mohundro, of Washington, is advocating action by the next legislature of the state, which will make it impossible for promoters to organize fake corporations and sell the stock to uninformed people. He has been working on this measure for some time, and now he believes he has completed a bill which will, when passed, have the desired effect, and unless the company can show that it has assets which impart some value to the stock certificates, the promoters will be subject to a penalty. He has devised a plan similar to the one now in force in Kansas. He is also working on a plan to compel all private banks to be under the supervision of the state banking department to prevent failures similar to the recent one at Kettle Falls and Republic.

CALIFORNIA BANK DEPOSITS

Sacramento, Cal.—There is on deposit in the banks of California $8,675,840 of state funds, according to a statement issued recently from the state comptroller's office. The money is in 195 banks in all parts of the state. The largest single deposit is $700,000 in the Bank of California, San Francisco; the lowest is $2,500, with the First National Bank of Concord.

BUYS CONTROL OF VALLEJO BANK

Vallejo, Cal.—W. K. Cole of San Francisco has purchased from Geo. W. Wilson a controlling interest in the Vallejo Commercial Bank, and has been elected president of the bank. Wilson retains an interest in the institution and the office of vice-president. Mr. Cole, the new president, has been a resident of San Francisco for fifteen years. For several years he was cashier of the Mint, and was one of the founders of the Anglo-California Trust Company. He has recently sold his interest in this bank. He is also interested in several other banks in Contra Costa county. Mr. Cole will make his home in Vallejo.

WILL TOUR WESTERN CANADA

Thirty representative business and professional men, including the heads of several banks, will visit Edmonton, Alta., on July 16th on a tour of western Canada under the auspices of the Chicago Association of Commerce. The party will travel in a special train, leaving Chicago early the morning of July 10th and returning home on July 20th, after making stops at Winnipeg, Regina, Banff, Calgary, Edmonton, Saskatoon, Moose Jaw and St. Paul and Minneapolis. H. F. Miller, business manager of the Chicago Association of Commerce, said in Edmonton on June 22d when he was entertained by H. Milton Martin, president of the Edmonton Board of Trade and, and Mr. Jennings, chairman of the Citizens League, that the purpose of the tour is to acquaint Chicago business men with the opportunities in Alberta and the neighboring provinces for the investment of capital and the establishment of industries, also to show them the possibilities of diversified agriculture in the Edmonton country.

"Edmonton is one of the most active and wide-awake cities it has been my good fortune to visit on my western trip," Mr. Miller said, "and it appears to be conscious of its great future. Its progress in construction work, amounting to more than $5,000,000 in actual building the first five months of 1912, is not only remarkable but bears out the estimate of $12,000,000 for the year. The establishment of small factories in the city of Edmonton is another thing that appealed to me strongly, and continued activity along that line and railroad construction will do wonders for the city. I noted, too, there is more than ordinary activity in the development and settlement of the tributary country, where the newcomers, many of them from the central and Pacific and inter-mountain states and others from Europe, are introducing mixed farming, including dairying and poultry raising. The people seem to be generally agreed that exclusive wheat farming in Alberta as elsewhere is a speculation, while diversified agriculture is a business."

The party will spend an entire day in Edmonton, visiting the financial, industrial and commercial districts in the morning. The board of trade will entertain at a noonday luncheon, after which the visitors will view from automobiles the residential portions of the city, the provincial parliament buildings and the grounds of the University of Alberta. Lieutenant-Governor Bulyea will welcome the Chicagoans on behalf of the province of Alberta, the address for the people of Edmonton being given by Mayor George S. Armstrong. President Martin will speak for the business interests of the city.

Washington Solving Her Agricultural Problems

In another half decade agriculture will be taught as generally in the public schools of Washington as arithmetic or history. In another decade it will be taught not only as generally as arithmetic or history, but it will be taught as well. The trend of education is irresistibly toward the practical. Industrial, physical and moral efficiency is the aim of the modern school. The twentieth century graduate must not only be good, he must be good for something.

The new education fits the boy and girl for definite work. This is the explanation for the addition of such courses as household arts, manual arts, agriculture, animal husbandry, and many other courses in applied science. The contents and method of education are undergoing a revolution. This does not mean that education is to be merely a bread and butter affair, and that every school is to be a trade school. It means rather that the youth of the land are to be taught to use their hands and their eyes as well as their heads. It means that manual labor will be dignified. It means that we are attaining a new conception of culture. We have come to realize that there is as much genuine culture in solving the problems of old mother earth as there is in solving the problems of the heavens. Culture consists in the recognition of a problem, the ascertaining of all the known factors regarding it and the possession of brains and grit enough to solve it. The man who can discover a method of eradicating the dandelion, or of eliminating smut in wheat is no whit less a cultured man than the man who can merely read a page of Latin or solve a problem in geometry. Let me emphasize the statement that the modern school is not and will not be merely a trade school. More than ever before the children of the land are being given an education for enjoyment, and an education for citizenship. Music, drawing, art, literature, personal hygiene, play for its own sake, receive more attention than ever before in the history of education. Further, greater stress is being placed upon education for citizenship than at any previous time. History, sociology, current public questions are given each succeeding year greater attention. This trinity—education for efficiency, education for enjoyment, education for citizenship—are the ideals of the modern school. It has been possible to provide this broader education for efficiency, for enjoyment and for citizenship without increasing the time devoted to school work, very largely by the elimination of waste material. In arithmetic, in physiology, in grammar, and in fact in every subject, the purely theoretical and the abstruse have been eliminated. The modern arithmetic, for instance, is a book not more than half as large as the book in use a quarter of a century ago, and will grow smaller instead of larger with succeeding years. By the elimination of waste material, by better arrangement of subject-matter, it has been found possible to make ample provision for the practical work now forming so large a part of the curriculum of the public schools. Manual arts and household arts are taught in most of the public schools in this state. Agriculture, horticulture, animal husbandry will soon follow. The problem of industrial training in this state is fairly well solved. I wish to discuss the status of the rural school with special reference to agriculture to show, first, what has been accomplished; and second, what remains to be done.

There has been almost a complete change in

Henry B. Dewy, Superintendent of Public Instruction, predicts that in five years it will be taught as well in the schools as arithmetic and history now are taught. Bankers doing a great work for the state public sentiment with reference to the teaching of agriculture. Only a few years ago farmers scoffed at the idea of teaching agriculture in a school. They felt that they were themselves quite able to give instruction needed. There was a general opinion that farming was a matter of brawn and not brains. Teachers opposed the introduction of this subject on the ground that it would lower the dignity of the profession. All in all there was practically no public sentiment in favor of teaching agriculture in the schools. To-day as the results of the object lessons of the state college, of the work of the department of agriculture at Washington, and of the agitation by progressive educators, there is a definite irresistible demand on the part of the general public for agricultural education. This demand is not confined to rural communities. We find city school boards besieged by parents to offer work along this line. The public are convinced. What they want now are results.

Consolidation of rural schools has now become a nation-wide movement. Probably as much has been accomplished in this state as in any state in the Union with the possible exception of Indiana and Massachusetts, and yet we are far from having solved the problem of the small rural school. There are still in this state two thousand one-room schools out of a total of approximately twenty-seven hundred districts. We have sixteen hundred districts with an average daily attendance of fewer than twenty pupils. In the small school it has been found practically impossible to get the best results. The older pupils do not remain long enough to secure the training that makes for efficiency. Consolidation and transportation of pupils to a central school has in many instances proved satisfactory. At the present time we have nearly two hundred consolidated districts representing four or five hundred of the original small districts. The children attending these districts have the advantage of a graded school with the possibility in many cases of high school training.

Demonstration farms should be maintained generally throughout the state under the supervision of the state college, and the men in charge of them should be available for the assistance of public school teachers. In the current number of the World's Work is a tabulation of results showing the difference in the various states between the output of farms managed under demonstration methods of the Federal Bureau of Agriculture, and adjacent farms not so managed. These statistics show that corn under demonstration methods averaged in twelve states more than twice the number of bushels per acre secured under the ordinary methods of cultivation. The average person whether child or adult learns to do by doing. It is vastly more important to see what some one has done than to hear about what he has done. Actual demonstration will do more towards solving the problem of increased production than any amount of additional talk.

The greatest difficulty to-day in having agriculture properly taught in the schools is the fact that teachers are not prepared to do the work. There is scarcely a teacher in the public schools to-day who had any training in agriculture during his high school course, and very few had even a limited training in the normal schools or the university. The subject is new in the curriculum. They do not understand it. Before agriculture will be as well taught as arithmetic or geography, we must have teachers whose preparation has been ample. They must know the problems of the farm, and be able to assist in their solution. A beginning along this line was made by the state board of education in 1907 by a requirement that the normal schools of this state give instruction for at least three semesters in the subject of agriculture. Last year there were 360 prospective teachers who took agriculture in the normal schools of Washington. Despite this seemingly satisfactory showing, I do not think that even yet the normal schools are doing as much as might be done to prepare teachers to handle this subject satisfactorily.

A determined effort is being made at the present time to assist teachers already in the corps to make some preparation for doing this work by offering instruction at the summer schools now so generally maintained in this state. About two years ago the state college began offering courses for teachers wishing to make some preparation for the work of teaching agriculture. The attendance and interest proved exceedingly gratifying to the instructors.

May I say in conclusion that I wish to express the appreciation of the teachers of the state for the active interest which the bankers association is taking in this matter? While I have never thought it was incumbent upon the bankers to raise the fund which you have undertaken to raise to further the efforts now being made for industrial training, I am sure that it cannot be other than helpful. It will hasten the day when definite results will be secured. It seems to me that the members of the association, not primarily as bankers but as citizens should co-operate in securing the passage by congress of the Smith-Lever bill, and the Page bill; of securing the establishment of many demonstration farms throughout the state under the supervision of the state college; in securing such a modification of the entrance requirements of the state institution that full recognition will be given for all work done in agriculture or manual arts; in assisting the state department in securing one or two supervisors in rural school education; in making provision for additional special training at all state institutions for teachers of agriculture and in opposing the establishment of separate agriculture schools.

Finally, I wish to repeat the sentence which I used at the opening to the effect that in another half decade agriculture will be taught as generally in the public schools of Washington as arithmetic or history, and in another decade it will be taught not only as generally as arithmetic or history, but it will be taught as well.

Des Moines, July 3.—National bank deposits in Iowa will show up splendidly in the cities of Iowa, but there will not be such a good showing, relatively, from the country. This is the opinion of Des Moines bankers since the last call was issued by the comptroller. The demand for money seems to be streaked throughout the state. This is partially due to the comparatively poor crop in some sections of the state last year, and to the constant increase in demand for Iowa land. Iowa land is soaring, and there is no end in sight despite the tremendous outpouring of Iowans to the Northwest the past few years. The demand in this state continues to be remarkable, and $200 per acre is no longer considered an extraordinary sale price. The outlook for the Iowa crop this year is splendid. The rains have been right and sufficient. Small grain is pronounced to be first class in every respect and corn, while not so large as often at this time, is sturdy and in excellent condition. The latter crop is somewhat slow because of the cool summer, but experts assert that there is no reason to doubt any serious delay in maturing. And the stand is declared to be first-class. There is no reason to expect other than bumper crops this year, and Iowa is facing continued prosperity, politics, third parties, fall elections, etc., to the contrary notwithstanding.

Calls Attention to Warnings

Secretary Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association calls attention to carelessness on the part of bankers relative to the warnings which the department has been sending out in the past against forgers and bogus check "shovers." In fact, Secretary Hall has decided to issue no more warnings unless the case be extraordinarily bold. "These warnings cost money," said Secretary Hall, "and apparently little attention is paid to them. It is a positive fact that I have sent out warnings and descriptions of forgers only to have a bank report a visit from one of the fellows I have described within two weeks after my warning was received—and that without knowing that we were after him." The secretary says that bankers should carefully read all communications from him, and especially the warnings which are to be issued as hereafter the cases will be only of the larger swindles.

New Bank for Keokuk

Announcement is made that a new $100,000 bank is to be organized at Keokuk with E. A. French of Waterloo at the helm. Mr. French has resigned as assistant cashier of the Black Hawk National at Waterloo, and has gone to Keokuk to begin active work on the project. Some years ago, Mr. French was connected with the Central State Savings at Keokuk. Later he was cashier of the Bank of Collins, at Collins. He has been at Waterloo for three years, and has made good. Keokuk has taken on a wonderful industrial boom since the completion of the dam across the river, and Mr.

French regards it as one of the cities in Iowa in which another bank will be a splendid institution.

S. T. Shade in Des Moines

President S. T. Shade of Rock Rapids was a visitor in Des Moines, Monday. President Shade came to confer with Secretary Hall relative to plans for the continued growth and prosperity of the Iowa Bankers Association this year. The ever-present time-lock question was up for discussion. Plans for systematic boosting of agricultural activities in Iowa were gone over and arrangements were made for boosting various features of the association work which it is believed will do much to augment the prestige of the organization. Detailed announcements will be made later.

Forgers Busy

Louisville, Kentucky, seems to be a favorite location for the forgers who travel in Iowa, as four out of every five forged checks that are passed upon Iowa banks are drawn upon institutions at Louisville. The latest was reported from Burlington, where a chap giving the name of W. T. Lane produced three checks drawn upon a Louisville institution for $100, $150 and $200 each. He was clever enough not to try to cash the checks, but he left them as security with a well known Burlington bank, and secured a small advance. He then disappeared and the bank discovered the checks were bogus.

Collateral Inheritance Tax

Once again the famous collateral inheritance tax case of one Almiron Culver is in the Iowa courts. Several years ago Culver died in Kansas leaving $10,640 on deposit in an Iowa bank. State Treasurer Murrow determined to collect the collateral inheritance tax on this sum, but this was opposed and the case was taken into the courts. The attorney-general is working on the case because there are parallel cases arising in Iowa, and a judicial ruling on every possible point is desired. The latest round was fought at Council Bluffs on demurrer, but the ruling has not yet been handed down.

Tax on Earnings

Revenue collectors have been making the rounds in Iowa informing the national bankers that the custom of paying the taxes on stock held by stockholders and deducting the amount from the net earnings does not "go" with Uncle Sam any more. National banks are required to pay a federal tax of 1 per cent on their net earnings above $5,000. The custom has been in vogue in Iowa of paying the taxes and deducting the amount from the net earnings, but as this reduces the earnings, the tax is correspondingly reduced and Uncle Sam thinks he is losing money.

16 Per Cent Dividends

The Scott County Savings at Davenport has placed the capital stock of the institution on a new basis, and will hereafter pay dividends of 16 per cent. Heretofore they have been 14 per cent. Every four months, a dividend of 4 per cent will be paid. The first was due the first of July. The bank is capitalized at $250,000. Davenport is one of the most prosperous cities in Iowa for the banker as this item bears witness. The German Savings of Davenport also pays a 4 per cent quarterly dividend.

Death of G. H. Reinicker

George Herr Reinicker, one of the wealthy citizens of central Iowa, died at Webster City last week, leaving an estate worth $1,500,000. Much of the property is in Iowa and Minnesota real estate. Reinicker was unmarried, and had always been considered somewhat eccentric in the methods by which he accumulated and handled his fortune.

Iowa Farmers Purchase Automobiles

If owning automobiles is an indication of prosperity, score another for Iowa. Secretary Ralph Bolton has it figured that there is now one automobile for every sixty residents of the Hawkeye state. Registration figures at the state house show that there are more than 37,000 machines in the state, and that this summer they have increased at the rate of 200 per day. The proportion is heavier outside the cities for in Des Moines there is one machine to every 100 people. The figures show that it is the Iowa farmer who is the heaviest purchaser.

Banking Notes

Gustav Diedrick, Sr., of Avoca died last week at Frankfort-on-the-Main, Prussia, of heart failure. He was on a pleasure trip to the old country, when the summons came. Mr. Diedrick was vice-president of the Avoca State Bank, and for thirty years had been prominent in the business and political field in that vicinity. He served in the legislature for a time. He has five children surviving, all of whom reside in Avoca.

Frank P. Flynn has been the busiest banker in Des Moines the past few days. He has been handing out the cigars during the day-times, and walking the floor with a handsome son—the first—at his home during the nights. Mr. Flynn is vice-president of the Peoples Savings, and his many friends are extending congratulations over his first son.

Henning Scoulberg has succeeded George C. Hyland, resigned, as cashier of the First National at Akron.

The building for the Northwest Davenport Savings has been delayed by the failure of the contractors to secure the stone and the steel beams. It was expected to open the institution in its new home July 1st, but it is now announced as September 1st.

Arthur R. McConnell, president of the First National at Garden City, S. D., was married recently to Miss Harriet McGregor at the home of the latter's parents in Grand Junction. It was a happy affair.

Emil M. Hugg, assistant cashier of the Crawford County State at Denison, was married recently to Miss Amanda Schnoor at the latter's home in that city.

Charles McDonald of the Bayard Savings has bought a controlling interest in the Coon Rapids National according to reports which have reached Des Moines.

The German Savings has been organized and duly launched at Gilbertville with a capital stock of $15,000. The institution was organized at a public meeting, which was attended by representative business men and farmers. J. B. Dietrick, cashier of the Security Savings at Waterloo, called the meeting to order and presided. The officers might be termed a case of Joseph and Jacob for Joseph Reuter is president, Joseph Mangrich is vice-president and Jacob Shares is cashier. Gilbertville has never had a bank although many towns of its size in Iowa have two.

The new State Savings at Lynnvile, which C. A. Williams has been prominent in organizing, has applied for a charter.

The First National at Newell has been granted a charter, and will commence business with a capital stock of $25,000. J. M. Brooks is president; L. F. Parker, cashier.

The Bank of Rockwell has now reorganized, and will be known hereafter as the First National of Rockwell. The capital stock has been increased to $25,000. G. H. Felthouse is president; F. C. Siegfried, cashier, and W. B. Bruce, M. Dexter, and W. A. Grummond, directors.

The Farmers State at Rockwell has renewed its capital stock to June 1, 1832. The capital stock is $25,000. G. H. Fuller is president, Mathias Johnson, vice-president, and James E. Treston, cashier.

The Melbourne Savings at Melbourne has filed articles increasing its capital stock from $11,000 to $16,500. George DeButts is president and J. H. Bagley cashier.

The Farmers Savings at Dolliver has filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. The capital stock, $10,000. E. M. Evans is president; J. A. Hyer is vice-president; B. L. Clark is cashier.

Recently one of the city banks at Clarinda was surprised to find that a deposit of $300 which has been there for twenty-nine years had apparently been overlooked. The amount has grown to $1,100.

The Farmers Savings at Center Point has filed articles with the secretary of state giving a capital stock of $15,000. S. W. Snyder is president, W. B. Fee is vice-president, and H. L. Bilsborough, cashier.

The Ida Grove Exchange has completed contracts for a new building, which it will construct to be used as a postoffice.

Sioux City

By JOHN J. BIDDISON.

"Great corn weather," the farmers and the grain dealers are telling Sioux City bankers and their correspondents in the country. Crop conditions generally are well nigh ideal at this hour, although there are scattered sections in South Dakota that show signs that a rain would be welcome. Small grain that got an early start is now practically made and promises a bumper crop. With this encouraging outlook, the presidential turmoil is a matter of only secondary consideration, even though it does furnish the principal topic of conversation, and the banking business continues to "saw wood." Conditions are normal and healthy. There is a fair demand and money is easy. Bank clearings are holding up well, considering the weather, since the actual arrival of summer has stimulated the retail trade, that had a slow start. Last week's clearings were $3,002,158.04; for the month, they were $12,471,090.89.

Cashier of Shelton, Nebraska, Bank Gives Himself Up

After J. H. Spicer, father of Cashier E. H. Spicer, absconding officer of the Shelton (Neb.) National, had turned over to the bank $25,000 in cash, representing most of the savings of a lifetime, for the sake of clearing his name of stigma, the young man returned from hiding and gave himself up to the officers of the state. He was formally charged with forging checks to the amount of $25,000, pleaded not guilty, and was released under $5,000 bonds. The pleas of his wife and children are said to be responsible for his return after he had fled ten days ago, going to St. Louis, Indianapolis and Chicago. The father had to place a mortgage on his real estate holdings in order to put up the cash. Young Spicer is 27 years old. After graduation from high school in his home town, he entered the drug business with his father, but, disliking it, left it to take a place in a bank at Hastings, where he was phenomenally successful. He had bought four automobiles in the last few years.

H. H. Stedman and H. C. Hanson, of Shelton, and V. L. Johnson, of Heartwell, Neb., have purchased a controlling interest in the bank and will continue the business.

Banking Notes of Interest

A. B. Calahan, cashier of the First National Bank of Miller, S. D., was married last week to Miss Alice Carroll, daughter of Judge Carroll.

The marriage has taken place of Miss Norma Haugen, daughter of Congressman G. N. Haugen, Mason City, Ia., and J. O. E. Johnson, cashier of the First National Bank of Norwood, Ia.

The two banks at Harold, S. D., have consolidated and will be operated under the name of the First State Bank. The field was too limited for two successful institutions.

The Farmers Bank, of Garden City, S. D., has been incorporated with the following stockholders, all of Garden City: C. E. Hayward, F. E. Gibson, Emil C. Voight and John Zugschwerdt.

The Aberdeen (S. D.) National Bank is about to begin construction on its fine $75,000 building, which will be 50x100 feet, of steel and concrete, with terra-cotta front and highly ornamental columns flanking the entrance. All of the building will be occupied for bank purposes except a suite of rooms on the second floor.

Among the Visiting Bankers

A. Hanson, cashier of the First National, Oelwein, Iowa, was in Sioux City Wednesday on his way from a Nebraska trip. Geo. L. Schoonover, president of the Anamosa (Iowa) National, was in Sioux City Tuesday looking after his large farm near this place. John D. Haskey, president of the Farmers National, Wakefield, Neb., spent Thursday afternoon with his friend, John McHugh, of the First National, playing golf at the Country Club. V. J. Fetzner, cashier of the Tripp County State, Colome, S. D., was in Sioux City Friday. Herman Fortin, cashier of the Farmers Bank, Salix, Iowa, was in Sioux City on business Monday. I. S. Large, president of the First National, Rock Valley, Iowa, was in Sioux City Tuesday.

NORTHERN STATE BANK

Northern State Bank of Grand Forks, N. D., under the last call shows deposits of $793,453.82. C. W. Ross, who formerly was connected with the old Commercial National of this city, is cashier of this enterprising institution. E. J. Lander is the president. The bank in its statement announces its willingness to place its services, facilities, strength and security at the disposal of its patrons.

CURRENCY SHIPMENTS BY REGISTERED MAIL

A. P. Coles, John K. Ottley and Jos. A. McCord, of the Georgia Bankers Association, were appointed a committee to investigate the shipment of currency by registered mail to see if the association could not secure a more advantageous arrangement than at present for insuring such shipments.

Fred I. Kent at the Ohio Bankers Convention

Fred I. Kent, vice-president of the Bankers Trust Company of New York, spoke this week at the convention of the Ohio bankers, choosing as his subject, "Twentieth Century Commerce and Its Regulations." After detailing the various conditions surrounding the development of our commerce, he touched upon the question of legislative investigation of business, saying:

"The introduction of politics into business always is attended with serious reactions, which inevitably bring suffering to the poorer classes. Business of any kind when subjected to legislative investigations carried on as they must be because of the way in which they are brought about, is apt to be injured seriously. It does not matter whether a congressional investigation is put into the hands of a conservative committee or is handled by some individual who has offered a resolution calling the committee into existence, it usually develops into a mere muckraking proceeding. Human nature, which is just as virulent in congress as out of congress, demands that it should be so. When a man in order to bring himself before the public offers a resolution which results in the creation of a committee, of which he is the head, to investigate some condition which he thinks would be of value to him before the people to have shown up, his every energy naturally is turned toward proving that his case is a good one, and that he was justified in calling forth the investigation. Instead, therefore, of the business which is under investigation having an impartial judge protecting its interests while it is under fire, it is obliged not only to prove its case, but to down prejudice against it, and then what is still more difficult, to obtain a verdict from a self-constituted judge which is absolutely opposed to his own interests, and which contradicts public statements previously made by him. The result is that all those who may have been driven out of the particular business, whether through their own dishonesty, inability or otherwise, are called upon or allowed to testify, and their statements are given the greatest credence. Many of these investigations are aimed to bring out information concerning something which may have happened a number of years previous. Then the whole proposition comes down to a memory test, and things are asked of men which are impossible. For instance, in considering the conditions which developed in the panic of 1907, no man can by any mental jugglery put himself in the exact condition of mind which he held at a particular moment at that time. He cannot differentiate between that which he knew before the particular moment in question, and that which he found out since. The result is that when men are put upon the stand and asked to explain certain actions, it is impossible for them to do so. They cannot tell whether the conditions which had developed at the period in question or soon after were known to them or anticipated by them when they reached the decision which resulted in the action that is under investigation. It is equally impossible for the man who is opposed to such a witness to state his position at the time under consideration, whether he honorably wishes to do so or not. Of course it is to the interest of one party to uphold his own action, and the other to decry it. In either case, however, can any fair judgment be arrived at as to whether the parties acted honorably and properly at the time? Whether subsequent events showed that some action was ill advised, and should not have been taken, has no bearing whatever upon the question of motive which may have induced the decision. In times of panic men of power act, and it is fortunate for the people that they do so. Even if later it appeared as though some other action than that taken might have worked out better, yet there is no way of proving it, for the course of events would have been changed and more serious results might have been encountered. While it is proper and right that all of the conditions surrounding a given panic be studied, yet a general airing of men's memories as to their sequence of thought at the time only leads to chaos and makes it impossible for those who read the evidence to get any real idea of anything which occurred. The result can only be injustice, and should a similar serious situation develop in the same generation, it would add another element of doubt and fear as to what to do on the part of those who were obliged to meet the brunt of the difficulty. Again, when a matter has been given to a special committee to investigate, while the chances of fairness are somewhat greater yet prejudice may easily develop. When the members of the committee meet with opposition in obtaining facts which they may think pertinent to the inquiry, but which may be unfair to bring out, it is only natural that they should try and bring pressure to bear in order to uphold their dignity and prove that they were right in asking for the information. The committee, therefore, gradually sides over against those whose actions they are looking into. This is the easier way to do also, because it is generally supposed that a verdict against the business interests will be more popular. Investigations of a certain kind are valuable to congress in helping it draft legislation, but they should be carried on in a most careful manner, without sensationalism of any kind. The public in the meantime should be able to go on in the even tenor of its way, and business should not be kept in a constant turmoil of excitement and uncertainty. While publicity is the cry of the day, and is proper in so far as facts are concerned, yet the encouragement of the unsuccessful and discontented to force themselves into the public eye to recite their tales of woes is a real menace. Again, the employment of lawyers to handle congressional investigations, who are skilled in winning cases through their sharpness in befuddling witnesses, is another serious abuse of the rights of the people. It is unfair to place business men on the stand before the general public and subject them to such treatment. When giving testimony they are always obliged to consider carefully what information it is fair and right for them to give. Much that has a bearing on private interests that they are bound to protect is valueless as far as the question of new legislation is concerned, but such matters are forced from them if possible. An inquisitive attorney trying to make a name for himself instead of allowing the man on the stand to think intelligently and give the facts which would be of value to congress, watches him like a hawk, and the minute he hesitates for any reason jumps at the conclusion that he is trying to cover up some rare morsel of scandal. The witness is then heckled and browbeaten in an effort to find out what caused the hesitation. He is at all times on the defensive, and must of necessity be so, for he is usually prejudged and found guilty and knows it. Commerce should not be regulated through any such means. High cost of living waters the seeds of discontent and encourages legislative investigations and indiscriminate criticism, but every individual who is endeavoring to improve his own position is living in the same glass house, and is equally responsible for his share of the seeming trouble. Increase in prices is repugnant to everyone, in so far as it has to do with the things which he purchases. On the other hand, no man nor set of men stops to consider this matter in connection with anything that they may be personally depending upon for their livelihood. The business man while objecting to high prices on the commodities which he buys for his home, strives to make himself better able to purchase by getting more out of his own line. Whenever he endeavors to do this through the obtaining of greater efficiency in production or distribution, it works to the advantage of all concerned, but where it goes into increased cost of the article in which he is interested, it means higher prices for some one else to pay on this particular commodity. When the men in a labor union feel the effect of the higher prices of things in general they strike for higher wages, in order to meet them, and demand all that they can get without regard to whether it forces up the price of the article they are helping to manufacture. All this is perfectly natural but leads to the conclusion that regulation of our commerce, which is in reality the regulation of the means which makes our commerce possible, should not be based on the action of men as individuals, but upon the system under which they work, and that the intent should be not to disrupt this, that and the other branch of business, but to bring them all in proper relation to each other. The farmers want high prices for wheat, corn, cattle, cotton and other commodities which they raise, and low prices for the same and other articles in a manufactured state. The manufacturing interests wish the opposite condition to prevail, and this of course, includes the majority of our laboring population. The mind poisoning trust plays one against the other with satisfaction, only to itself. This then is the first great trust which should be investigated, for it is at the bottom of most of the discontent existing in the world to-day. As the masses have come out from under the cloud of ignorance in which they have been enveloped, they have been led by this great octopus. Their eyes have been opened more by falsehood than by truth, but as their education progresses, and they begin to see the tremendous price which they are forced to pay through the constant turmoil of business brought about by their acceptance of vicious teachings, the conditions are going to improve and regulation will go forward in a more scientific and unbiased manner. It is needful, therefore, if we would take the premier position in the development of commerce with its resultant benefits to our people, that our law makers begin the study of the system of the mind poisoning trust immediately, with a view of bringing about its dissolution. Investigation of this trust should not be made a personal matter any more than in the case of any other. It is more the system itself that is at fault than the men who are in it, and the system is the result of the ignorance and action of the people themselves. The individuals represented by the reporters, editors, writers, public speakers, and others have been working under a pressure of public demand, and they have often been led on through necessity to do things entirely foreign to their wishes. Constant repetition of dishonest writing and speaking leads to self-hypnotism, and the wrong is forgotten in striving for a livelihood. The system, therefore, should be changed in such manner as to make it dangerous for that portion of the population which gives up its life to writing and speaking to knowingly or even carelessly distort the truth in order to play upon the human passions. If the work is undertaken in a scientific manner without permitting any personalities to enter into it, there is no doubt that the majority of those who are now servants of the system would be glad to do their utmost to put their life work upon an honorable basis. This is undoubtedly the most difficult of the problems which the world faces to-day, for the right of free speech must be protected, and at the same time license must be prohibited. It is a problem worthy of the best efforts of our law makers, and if satisfactorily solved they would be among the principal gainers. It would leave them more free to act as their best judgment dictated for the benefit of the country which they are chosen to govern, and would make the carrying out honorably of their oath of office a pleasure instead of a hardship. It would serve as well to simplify the regulation of all other public interests, and would be the first great step toward the real enlightenment of our people, and would lead inevitably toward contentment and happiness. This then is our one great problem which needs solving above

Distinguished New York Financier takes an unusual position in regard to legislative investigations and has original ideas on the difficulties presented by the situation

All The Work in Sight

Note the illustration—it shows one of the Burroughs "Class 300" line—visible writing, visible adding and visible printing, all at the same distance from the eye.

Note that all the printing—not part of it only—is visible all the time, in easy reading range. The paper carriage is but three inches back of the keyboard.

The adding is visible, in plain view directly under the eye. The item to be printed is visible and easily readable before it is printed.

The paper carriage on these machines (3 1-2, 12 1-2 or 20 inch, as desired) were designed to speed up the work of putting in and taking out the paper.

The extremely low keyboard is another big advantage on these machines, making them very convenient for use on either a high or low desk.

The Burroughs "Class 300" line was designed by our own inventors, and is built in the Burroughs factory, the biggest, most efficient and most complete adding machine factory in the world.

All Burroughs machines are backed by a real guarantee of continuous service—the kind that brings service to you—no matter where you are located. This insures you against inconvenience and loss from accidental disablement of your machine, though the Burroughs is the best built, longest lived Adding Machine in the world.

all others. Business men of themselves, for their own profit and protection, are constantly improving the conditions under which commerce is carried on. As soon as a wrong method of conducting business develops to the point where it becomes a menace, the customs of business change to meet it, and the public is protected before legislation is undertaken. The commerce of the future is going to follow the lines of least resistance and is going to change as time goes on, until every country produces that which it is best able to produce, taking into consideration its natural resources and the mental development of its people. Every line of business constantly is working toward a condition where it may be carried on at a minimum, natural expense. This phenomenon may be noted in the thousands of removals and liquidations of factories. In some cases where a town has been built up entirely on the production of some one commodity, something different has taken its place when it has developed that the article which it manufactured could be made more cheaply elsewhere. This is one of the evidences of evolution in business, and exactly as it is true in a small way in the case of towns and cities in the same country, so it is true between the different countries of the world. A time is surely coming when certain kinds of wasteful competition practically will be eliminated, and will be reflected in a world's trade of tremendous proportions. Its regulation will be more confined to the natural laws governing production and distribution than by man-made laws, the majority of which will become obsolete when man has learned properly to control public utterances of all kinds. The world's trade then will represent a fair exchange of commodities and their greatest possible distribution among the peoples of the earth, and we in the United States of America, with our diversified resources and composite mentality, should lead all the nations in the march toward prosperity and commercial peace."

A special meeting of shareholders of the Trust Company of North America has been called for July 9th to act on a proposition to merge the institution with the Commercial Trust Company.

final dividend. In closing this institution we found the situation more or less uncertain as to the final outcome, as a large part of the assets of the bank were regarded in Cincinnati as being of extremely doubtful value. Good judges of paper thought these assets might be worth 50 or 60 cents on the dollar, and for a long time it seemed that they were correct in their judgment. The natural resources and facilities of the department, however, proved that it had the ability to get some good results which an ordinary receivership might not be able to obtain. This proved to be true in a large measure, and we were rewarded for our efforts by a larger return on this paper than could under ordinary circumstances be expected. The assets of the bank have realized enough to pay its creditors 100 cents on the dollar, and this department had the pleasure of putting into effect and issuing checks for the final payment on the very day following the expiration of the one-year limit prescribed by law. A meeting of the stockholders was subsequently held as provided by the law, and the department was requested by them to complete the liquidation for their benefit. We now have on hand cash and equity in uncollected loans which will ultimately yield a fair and reasonable return to the stockholders.

There is reflected in the thirty-six voluntary liquidations and consolidations an earnest effort on the part of this department to eliminate the weak, unprofitable and unserviceable institutions which were fast bringing humiliation or disaster upon the community, and in other cases the bringing together, by consolidation, two warring institutions in a community which needed, and in fact was only able to support, one good bank. These thirty-six liquidations and consolidations for the most part represent hard, diligent labor on the part of this department, labor which was extended in the spirit of friendly helpfulness, and which was sincerely appreciated by those interested after the accomplishment had been made complete.

It is gratifying to me to be able to testify to the very great improvement that has been brought about in the methods of accounting. We seldom have occasion to make a positive requirement as to bookkeeping, and only so when in our opinion the system employed by the bank does not comprehensively show its true condition. We have refrained from interfering with the prerogative of the officers of the bank in selecting such style of books as they prefer, but we do insist that the bookkeeping, of whatever style, must be clear and comprehensive, and that every possible protection against manipulation to be thrown around their system. It is being demonstrated more and more that the loose-leaf system has quite as many disadvantages as it has conveniences. It does not require a very high degree of shrewdness on the part of a bookkeeper to manipulate the loose leaf or card. He can remove such leaf or card from the box or binder on a moment's notice, and can thereby very easily deceive the most careful and far-seeing examiner. You bankers should remember that the state does not equip its department with facilities for making an audit of a bank's books. If it did it would have to provide instead of twenty people which the department now has, something like two or three hundred, and at a correspondingly increased expense to the taxpayer. You should therefore make the discipline in your bank such as would throw around your accounting every possible safeguard against peculations by employees. And while it is not perhaps within our province, it seems to me that in many instances a readjustment of the wage scale of bank employees on a basis which would permit of their living within their income is a thought that is at least worthy of your careful consideration.

This department has earnestly sought to impress upon the directors of banks the importance of a close supervision, and it is gratifying to know of the reform that has been brought about in that respect. As a general rule state banks and trust companies now have a very close and efficient supervision by the directors; where a director of a bank formerly regarded the position as merely honorary, and had no thought at the time of his election of giving the bank the benefit of his counsel and advice, he earnestly gives, to-day, that which the law contemplates and asks, while the stockholders he represents are rewarded by increasing dividends.

The matter of excessive loans and investments has been and still remains a subject of more than ordinary importance, and one against which this department has adopted the sternest measures. The provision of the law limiting loans and investments to 20 per cent of capital and surplus is admitted by every reasonable person easily to be the best provision of the statutes in so far as safe banking is concerned, and we propose that there shall be no violations of this law without the persons responsible paying the penalty, and every loss accruing through the medium of an excessive loan or investment shall hereafter be made good by the directors responsible therefor, and in no case be charged out of the undivided profits, thereby working injury to an innocent stockholder.

NEW RAVENSWOOD NATIONAL OPENS

The new Ravenswood National at 4600 West Ravenswood Parkway, Chicago, opened for business on Monday morning last. Residents of the district will as a result have their pet wish granted in having an incorporated bank under supervision. Losers through two private banks, which were located on the same site as the new institution, they have long desired a state or national bank. The two private banks were the Ravenswood Trust Bank and William A. Mason's Wilson Avenue Bank, the latter of which went under recently.

Walter D. Rathje is president of the new institution, which is capitalized at $50,000, with a surplus of $10,000. Others interested are John W. Hirst, vice-president; George C. Keeler, cashier, and Peter Reinberg, C. F. Newkirk, John W. Hirst, Henry A. Rathje, Dr. Bussey, W. T. Perkins, William H. Bryan, Adolph H. Wessemann, William W. Pollock and Walter E. Rathje, directors.

NATIONAL BANKS

Washington, July 1.—Comptroller of the Currency Murray to-day announced that during the month of June, 1912, 21 applications to organize national banks were received. Of the applications pending 15 were approved and 8 rejected. In the same month 14 banks, with total capital of $545,000, were authorized to begin business, of which number 9, with capital of $235,000, had individual capital of less than $50,000, and 5 with capital of $310,000, individual capital of $30,000 or over.

On June 30, 1912, the total number of national banks organized was 10,219, of which 2,825 had discontinued business, leaving in existence 7,394 banks, with authorized capital of $1,040,545,435 and circulation outstanding, secured by bonds, $720,424,110.

The Texarkana National Bank of Texarkana, Tex., has let the contract for an eight-story building to be occupied by banking rooms and other offices.

which is going some in these literary bureau days.

FRED I. KENT was good also. He is a sort of human rapid-fire performer. All will remember how he jumped in at New Orleans after Sol. Wexler had touched off a big one, and Sol. had to have a life ring thrown to him for the first time in a long time.

S. FLETCHER FARRELL being "from S. Paris, Mo.," went down to Baltimore to help put his fellow Missourian over. He's back! Owing to the fact of having no resistance coil on the line, we couldn't get what he had to say about it over the telephone. He didn't run out of money, but out of patience, so H. R. Kent says. Kent is from Nebraska. Get the point?

WE believe Detroit bankers have things well in hand for the big A. B. A. gathering in September. The Chicago Train-de-Luxe will give a banquet on wheels and a daylight ride (5½ hours) to its patrons. Reservations are pouring in "for whatever it is."

AT the Cedar Rapids convention ten Iowa ex-presidents took part. Col. DuPuy enumerates them as follows: Simon Casady, C. H. McNider, C. B. Mills, Homer A. Miller, D. H. McKee, John J. Large, H. M. Carpenter, J. T. Brooks, L. E. Stevens, John McHugh.

SECRETARY HALL says, "When they dropped the 'Curtin' in Iowa they put up the 'Shade'—only another of the same."

CIIAPMAN told the Iowa bankers he expects to see the day when "Iowa will give her children as much training and care as she now gives her live-stock."

STATE associations get into queer habits. Iowa has been allowing the plumping of votes by owners of chains of banks—one for each bank.

AT Cedar Rapids they canned this custom for good. Hereafter each bank must send a representative or not vote. Good!

IOWA saw the trend of things in Illinois and promptly went to the head of the procession with the following resolution:

"WE favor taking the banking department out of the control of the state auditor's office, as at present provided, and the substitution therefor of a separate department which, in our judgment, would be more efficient and satisfactory to the companies involved and would afford great protection and security to the public at large."

"BE it Resolved, by the Iowa Bankers Association in convention assembled, that a separate department of the state government should be established for the sole purpose of exercising the control and supervision over the banking and trust companies of the state as now prescribed by statute."

"FARRELL is growing"—not J. Fletcher but the town Farrell, named after him in Pennsylvania. Two-bank town already.

WALL STREET JOURNAL says, "Bryan showed at the Baltimore convention that he had lost all standing and influence with his party." Cross-eyed?

QUITE a few third-termers along La Salle Street quietly slipped their T. R. buttons into their pockets on Tuesday morning—for further consideration.

THIRTY-NINE women — mostly suffragettes—were awarded divorces in the St. Louis courts on Monday. CASHIER.

Ohio Convention

Cedar Point, Ohio, July 3.—The Ohio Bankers Association has just concluded its twenty-second annual convention at this place, the sessions lasting two days. Registration was made on the day preceding the first day of the convention at Hotel Breakers, where the delegates and visitors obtained badges and entertainment credentials. At the outset delegates were requested to attend all sessions promptly, and to remain throughout. All sessions were convened and dismissed according to the schedule, giving ample time for the social features without conflicting with the business part of the convention. On the first day the convention was called to order by President W. P. Sharer, vice-president of the First National Bank of Zanesville. This was followed by the annual reports of the secretary, treasurer and council of administration, after which a committee on resolutions was appointed by the chair. B. F. Harris, president of the Illinois Bankers Association, delivered his talk on "The Banker and His Relation to the Public Welfare," which concluded the morning session of the first day. In the afternoon there were reports by group chairmen, followed by a talk on investment bankers by W. S. Hayden, of Hayden, Miller & Co., Cleveland, who was followed by the Hon. F. E. Baxter, superintendent of banks and banking, Columbus, and W. J. Burns, of the Burns National Detective Agency, the former talking on "State Banks of Ohio—Facts and Figures," and the latter on protection of banks. Immediately after the adjournment of this session the members of the American Bankers Association met to nominate a vice-president for Ohio, and a member of the nominating committee of the A. B. A. W. L. Allendorf, vice-president for Ohio, presided. In the evening at eight o'clock the Hon. J. Adam Bede, Pine City, Minn., entertained the convention with an instructive talk on "Our Nation: Its Problems and Progress." This morning reports were heard from the auditor of the association, and from chairmen of committees on purchasing, protection, taxation, legislation and resolutions, which were followed by a debate as to the advisability of allowing national banks to loan on real estate mortgages, by the Cincinnati and Cleveland chapters of the American Institute of Banking. This afternoon F. I. Kent, vice-president of the Bankers Trust Company, New York, talked on "Twentieth Century Commerce and its Regulation." Officers then were elected for the ensuing year.

The amusement features of the convention were well looked after by the efficient committee on entertainment. Yesterday, through the courtesy of the Cedar Point Resort Company, and the bankers of Sandusky, a social program was arranged for the afternoon and evening, including cards in the new pagoda at the Breakers Hotel, a musical program and refreshments, and a ride for the ladies on the picturesque lagoons. In the evening after the address by J. Adam Bede the guests enjoyed the hospitality of the Cedar Point Resort Company, and the Sandusky bankers at a reception and ball held at the Coliseum. A pleasing and enjoyable feature of the entertainment provided for to-day was a boat ride aboard the steamer "G. A. Broeckling." The trip was along the picturesque wooded peninsula of Cedar Point, in view of Marblehead and the historic Johnson's Island, where the Union prison of the southern soldiers was located during the Civil War, and in sight of the productive fruit belt of the peninsula, which separates Sandusky Bay from Lake Erie. Refreshments were served on the boat, and attendants provided for the wants of all the guests. All the delegates voted the hosts royal entertainers.

Report of Secretary S. B. Rankin

Secretary S. B. Rankin, in making his annual report, stated that the association has enjoyed a year of unusual activity, a great many visitors being reported at headquarters, and a vast amount of inquiries relating to banking subjects. Bankers were urged to endeavor to select competent and trustworthy representatives in the next legislature, as it is believed that several measures vitally affecting the interests of the banking fraternity of the state will be up for consideration and passage in the near future. He told of the willingness of the association to co-operate with those advocating the adoption of the plan of the National Monetary Commission, also the endorsement of the state organization of the movement for one-cent letter postage. A large amount of money has been saved to the members in insurance premiums, and especially in burglary insurance. Thus far it has been impossible to form any agreement with a bonding or fidelity company. The membership of the association has increased steadily. There are, however, about two hundred non-members in the state. Secretary Rankin has not given up hope of eventually inducing these delinquents to avail themselves of the benefits of the association, and will continue the persistent campaign he has been waging in an effort to attain that end. Originally there were but one hundred and twenty-five members; now there are over nine hundred, which is the result of efficient organization and generalship. The council of administration has been active during the year, having had five meetings. No action in the conduct of the association affairs is taken without the approval of this body, or standing committees. The protective committee has done good work in ridding the bankers of the state of those members of society who attempt to live by crooked practices. Much advantage has been derived from agreements made by the purchasing committee with various concerns handling bank supplies. It is expected to carry this good work on until the saving to the individual members will more than equal the cost of the annual dues. The groups are assisting nobly in harmonizing banking interests, and in several instances reforms, such as eliminating overdrafts, cash items and reducing interest paid upon deposits have been effected. Questions of this kind and others can be settled at group meetings.

Minneapolis Conference

The second annual conference of educators and of state committees on agricultural development and education has been called to meet in Minneapolis this year at ten o'clock A. M. on August 7th at the Hotel Radisson. The second session will be called to order at the same hour the following morning at the St. Paul Hotel in St. Paul. This is the organization which held such an influential session of bankers and teachers last year and elected Joseph Chapman, Jr., president and Charles R. Frost, the talented secretary of the Minnesota Bankers Association, was elected secretary. At the first conference the executive committee chosen consisted of B. F. Harris for Illinois; E. J. Curtin for Iowa; Isaac Lincoln for South Dakota; W. W. Bowman for Kansas; P. A. Pickett for North Dakota; L. A. Hutton for Minnesota; W. D. Vincent for Washington, and L. A. Baker for Wisconsin. The first conference was attended by about eighty bankers and educators, and the state associations circulated nearly twelve thousand copies of the proceedings book. At that time not more than a dozen states had taken up the agricultural and educational problems, whereas at the present time almost every state in the Union now maintains or has authorized the appointment of a committee covering these subjects. A circular letter has been sent out from Minneapolis requesting all of those who will attend the conference this year to come prepared with certain state information covering the relation of the population of rural to city districts, and certain facts concerning school provisions for the teaching of agriculture and domestic science. Mr. Chapman is of the opinion that the sessions of the conference will be much more interesting if the members come fully prepared on what is to be brought up for their consideration. A competent reporter has been engaged and the proceedings will be printed the same as last year for general circulation. The Twin Cities bankers are preparing to give the delegates a "royal good time" so that the meeting will not be one entirely devoted to work. Last year the clearing houses of the two cities entertained all of the delegates and guests both at luncheon and at dinner in the evening, after which the entire conference was taken to a theatre and automobiles were provided to transfer those in attendance from Minneapolis over to the session at St. Paul on the second day. In a large part this program will be repeated this year. It is expected that not less than twenty-five states will send either delegates or committeemen.

NEBRASKA CONVENTION

Secretary Wm. B. Hughes of the Nebraska Bankers Association announces that the Nebraska bankers will hold their annual meeting in Omaha, Monday and Tuesday, August 26th and 27th.

It is reported that the Indiana State Bank of Indianapolis is organizing in that city with a capital stock of one million.

John R. Washburn, assistant cashier of the Continental and Commercial National, who recently has returned from a trip to the Northwest, states that the crop outlook for that section of the country is better than it ever has been. The lumber business is better than it has been in five years. Great satisfaction is expressed out there over the favorable conditions prevailing.

CHARLES G. DAWES FOR G. O. P. TREASURER

The name of Charles G. Dawes, president of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, has been mentioned for the treasurership of the republican national committee.

EDMUND D. HULBERT ON MONEY AND BUSINESS SITUATION

Edmund D. Hulbert, vice-president of the Merchants Loan and Trust Company of Chicago, says that the money situation in Chicago has been tolerably close for the past three months. All of the banks have been well loaned up. There has been very little reserve. A little reluctance to raise interest rates has been manifested on account of the fact that they have been kept down in New York. The situation here has not justified the low rate we have had for some time back. Firmer rates are looked forward to from now on, and for the balance of the season. The general business situation is good, the outlook for crops being very favorable.

AGRICULTURAL AND EDUCATIONAL CONFERENCE

There was a conference at the Auditorium Hotel in Chicago at two o'clock on Wednesday, July 10th, of those interested in the International Boys and Girls League of home and school activities in agriculture, home economics and manual training. E. E. Balcomb is the executive secretary and treasurer. President B. F. Harris of the Illinois Bankers Association designated W. G. Edens, secretary of the committee on agriculture and vocational education of the Illinois association, to represent the state organization at this conference.

John A. Broeksmit, cashier of the Harris Trust and Savings, left the city last week for a vacation in Europe. He expects to be away about two months.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

SATURDAY, September 7th, about 10 A. M. the big Banquet-on-Wheels special will leave Chicago for the Detroit convention "loaded down with bankers." The committee has been refining its plan and announcement soon will be made.

TABLES will be reserved for "twos" and "fours" and in multiples of those numbers, so "choose your partners for the next dance." Any bank in Chicago will be glad to put you on the diagram.

THERE ought to be enough going up to the Minneapolis-St. Paul conference, leaving Chicago the evening of August 6th to fill one car. You will have the time of your life if you go.

LAST year the delegates were given a luncheon and an evening dinner on both days with a theatre party in between. The Twin Cities like it and will do better this year. The announcement says those who come will have a "royal, good time" and those in charge know how to deliver the goods.

THE whole country is relieved at the outcome of the contest at Baltimore. The election of either the republican or democratic candidate for the presidency would not be disturbing to the present condition of business. The tariff in either case must be readjusted, but in both cases this readjustment promises to be gradual. In fact, the democratic platform, while advocating the most radical policy, that for revenue only, distinctly asserts that the changes must be made "by legislation that will not injure nor destroy legitimate industry." Otherwise, the two platforms are as much alike as two peas and the question really reverts to the individual character and weight of the candidates.—Bache & Co.

BACHE & CO. further say: "Of Mr. Wilson it may be said that the democratic party has, in his nomination, regained after many years its former high position, and that the prospects of his election should cause no trepidation in the business ranks."

J. GRIER LONG of Spokane told the Washington bankers of his impressions of the New Orleans convention. This is the little bouquet which he handed to F. O. Watts who, as president of the A. B. A., presided:

"THE presiding officer, F. O. Watts, of Nashville, Tennessee, showed great tact and much skill in giving to each one his share of time for the proper discussion of his subject. His watchword was, 'There must be no time wasted.' Even in the heat of argument, the greatest of courtesy was extended to the most belligerent."

F. A. GOFF of Cleveland and Frank A. Anderson of California were credited with the two "most interesting" addresses and many will agree with Mr. Long.

YES, and the sun crowned Detroit with this: "Probably the most instructive, as well as amusing, address of the convention was made by E. St. Elmo Lewis, of the Burrough's Adding Machine Company, on 'The Saving Idea of the People.' From this, the savings bank section probably learned as much about the many kinds of advertisements,—banking and otherwise,—as was ever granted to them."

REPORT of the judges appointed to pass upon the essays submitted by the bank clerks of the state of Washington at the convention awarded the first prize of $15 to the essay signed "J. P. Maxon," written by A. R. Charles of the Fidelity National Bank, Spokane; and the second prize of $10 to the essay signed "Gopher," written by Ross McDonald of the First National Bank, Seattle.

W. D. VINCENT reported to the Washington convention on the Minneapolis agricultural and educational conference, held last year. In closing Mr. Vincent said: "Interest in the subject of 'Back to the Farm' is so great that it behooves the members of the Washington Bankers Association to become alive to the needs of the state and the opportunity for a better and more scientific development of our wonderful resources."

MR. VINCENT was in a small way rewarded for his work and interest in the association by being elected a member of the Big Council, to take his seat at Detroit.

J. W. SPANGLER of Seattle will sit on the nominating committee from Washington and M. F. Backus will be the state vice-president.

THE new officers of the Washington association are: president, W. J. Patterson, Aberdeen; vice-president, W. H. Martin, Ritzville; secretary, P. C. Kauffman, Tacoma; treasurer, C. K. McMillin, Bellingham.

THOMAS D. CATLIN naturally is for both state and national supervision and inspection of banks, for he is president of three incorporated banks and all doing well. The three banks are: National City at Ottawa, First National at Grand Ridge and State Bank of Seneca, all in Illinois.

ON his recent folder President Catlin says: "This bank (meaning the National City of Ottawa) has been in business for 46 years, under government inspection and supervision. It enjoys the distinction which comes from age, experience and successful management."

HOW could Col. Catlin be against state supervision on the executive council in the Illinois association, even if he tried, with such a record behind him? The Ottawa bank alone, on $100,000 capital, has $269,600.03 surplus and $1,858,177.90 in deposits.

ONE of our favorite poet laureates has sent in his ideas of the presidential situation (before the Bull Moose party was born, in a pair of limericks, too good to be lost.

THERE was a big fellow named Taft
Who was running a Salt River craft;

AFTER a first class meal at the station (Cedar Rapids) lunch counter Elbert Hubbard told the Iowa bankers, "Very few men really know what is in them." He was thinking of the hash he'd had.

OTHIER questions were settled at the Cedar Rapids meeting. A year previously there had been a division on the question of the election of Arthur Reynolds to the Big Council, and notwithstanding his easy triumph, there remained an opposing faction. It had voted for Henry M. Carpenter.

AT Cedar Rapids there was a sort of a reunion, the Reynolds people supporting D. H. McKee and the opponents supporting Mr. Carpenter. They joined forces and the two were elected members of the Big Council to go on at Detroit.

IT is not likely that the presidential election will slip by without a contest next year as it did this year at Cedar Rapids. Several prominent bankers have been mentioned, among them being Joseph H. Ingwersen of Clinton.

MR. INGWERSEN has been a patient toiler in the ranks for many years, and repeatedly has stepped aside for an older man, but his friends now claim that the time has come for his recognition. Let it be understood then that Mr. Ingwersen will have to be reckoned with at the Des Moines meeting next summer.

FROM being a "receptive" candidate, to use a term much abused in the recent republican primary campaign, T. R. Davis of Cincinnati has been pushed forward rather prominently by his admirers for the chairmanship of the Big Council at Detroit. Members of council are receiving letters advocating his election.

R. E. James on Segregation of Deposits

Human action is much the same at all times. Periods pregnant with unusual conditions startle for the moment, but a glance backward through the chronicles of the ages demonstrates that we are merely having a new view of an ancient event. With almost periodic certainty we have great upheavals, sometimes labelled progress, sometimes revolution, sometimes merely bluster.

It is only the old, old struggle between radical thought and conservative moderation. The radical is a necessity to blaze out new lines of advance. The conservative is still more important, and trims down his opponents' policies to reputable methods. The radical attacks everything that is, the conservative cuts out the fire works, destroys the evil, but saves the thing that is good. The resultant of these two forces is always advance, but an advance that is progress, sane and safe.

The civilized world fears and avoids financial and industrial catastrophes. We alone are indifferent to their coming and recklessly open our gates to the Wooden Horse, and then repent—but our repentance is ephemeral, and we quickly mount the walls to see if there is not somewhere another horse to bring within our gates. Panics at our invitation come to us with the regularity of small pox and mosquitos, but we never oil the waters of our financial pool, or inoculate the body to resist the disease, and swift upon the panic's heels come the doctrinaires. Panics breed more theorists than a business world can assimilate, more doctors than diseases, and the struggling, debilitated victims of the financial cataclysm are well-nigh dosed to death by the physic of the empirics. So as we emerged from the first shock of the recent prostration we were met by the suggestion of more remedies than illuminate the shelves of a cut rate drug store, by more devices for financial health than John Law in his palmist days ever dreamed of, and by more self-sacrificing theorists than could be accommodated in an up-to-date Eutopia. Bankers, by reason of close adherence to good methods, may have escaped the disaster of 1907, but they cannot escape the theorist and his cure-all. They may, by years of strictest observance of the laws of financial health, have held themselves and their patrons immune, when the scourge fell, but they can't avoid the physician who now volunteers his service. They do not know, but he knows that they are sick, and he proposes to administer his physic willing if possible, forcibly if need be. A certain gentleman of wide notoriety always builds his latest political phillipic about some biblical quotation or thought. It makes his heresy more alluring and flatters his victims by the intimation that they have a conscience. The Humanitarians who urge the plan for the segregation of deposits bank much upon the moral law and urge its application to everybody except themselves. Artemus Ward you may remember was willing to sacrifice all his wife's relatives on his country's altar. Let us say that the advocates of segregation are actuated by the best intentions, but are dwellers in the mists of theory, and are culpable in not understanding conditions, when the facts lie open to their observation. They have had every opporlogic of facts compels them to modify their program.

The plan proposed for the segregation of deposits differs somewhat in the several states where it has been offered for adoption, but the basis is much the same, and has been incubating in committees of the American Bankers Association for several years, but to this time has not received the endorsement of that body.

What do these gentlemen propose?

Segregation of deposits according to the plan they desire to impose by law national and state upon every banking institution, covers a class of deposits called "savings deposits." This term is vague and uncertain, and they are more than vague in their attempts at elucidation. They frankly admit that they cannot define what a saving deposit may be, yet base their entire fabric on this uncertain indefinable term. In the early days of the discussion they shrank from the magnitude the term might assume. They are bolder now, and admit that the term must cover all interest bearing deposits and deposits not actually engaged in business transactions.

What is the plan?

They require that all banks receiving "savings deposits" shall

First, keep all such accounts separate, separate books, etc.

Second, shall invest all such moneys separately.

Third, shall invest such moneys in "savings bank securities," such as United States bonds, state and municipal bonds and first bond and mortgage.

Fourth, that such investments shall be solely for the benefit of such depositors.

Fifth, that in liquidation, these securities shall be applied, and if insufficient then these depositors shall come in equally with all other depositors on other assets of bank.

It is not possible within the limit of time which I have at my disposal, or which your patience will extend, to argue each of these positions to its logical end.

Each one of these different requirements is fraught with danger and possibly disaster, if attempted to be carried out under the plan proposed by these gentlemen.

If this effort had been the evolution of the combined wisdom, not only of all classes of national financial institutions, but of all financial interests protected by state legislation, I sincerely believe that a broad, strong basis of mutual agreement and advantage could have been arrived at; however, let us take a glance at the proper results from the above mentioned requirements.

It appears plain that under this system, one class of depositors is given the preference over another class of depositors in the same institution, and there will arise two classes of depositors entitled "Preferred Depositors," and "Non-Preferred Depositors," or as they say "Secured Depositors."

It may appear to you with your experience in the matter of banking, that while this system might be an exceedingly good thing for the so-called savings depositors, it would not be a good thing for your active depositors. Nothing is so sensitive to attack as money, and the moment the active depositor sees the position he is placed in by the preference given to the savings depositor, he promptly changes his banking institution. He will not only do this because he is discriminated against most unfairly, but because, when the assets of the institution with which he is dealing are in large part compelled by the law to be invested in bond and mortgage or in outside securities, his institution will not have funds for the accommodation of its active business depositors, and he will soon discover that his bank is unable to discount his paper for lack of funds. In every community business enterprises depend on inactive deposits. Invest them abroad and the community suffers.

The active depositor then will soon find that he is a misfit in any institution which pays interest to depositors, and his only recourse is to find an institution which does not receive such deposits. On the other hand the bank with which this active depositor is dealing is in a dilemma. It sees these active depos-finding other banks to deal with, and with the foresight that is characteristic of the control of every financial institution, foresees and anticipates what must happen in the course of natural law, when such a plan is put in operation. It makes unusual efforts to retain its depositors, but when it is required to liquidate a large portion of its bills discounted or other loans made to active depositors in order to invest that money in legal securities as a protection to another class of depositors, the directorate of the bank soon learns that the situation is such that it is impossible to hold its old customers in line as depositors of the institution. Then there is one of two alternatives, the bank must either discard all interest-bearing depositors, or on the other hand it must discard all its active depositors. It is also plain that in any community where this condition exists the promoter will soon be at work. The banks are endeavoring to hold both classes of depositors. The promoter sees an extraordinary field for the creation of purely commercial banks, which will be an attractive resort for the active depositor, who under this system will be discriminated against by every bank, national or state.

Let us examine more closely the scope of the term, "savings deposits." What are savings deposits as they must be understood under the proposed plan?

The vague generalization indulged in by sundry philosophers on this question cannot be accepted. Their minds contemplate indefinitely the wages of labor, the protection of the deserving poor, the overshadowing shield which the statute should extend for the shelter of the deserving. But these humanitarian sentiments are not new, nor confined to the gentlemen, who now utter them from rostrum, or stamp them in print, neither are they absent from the hearts of those who manage banks and trust companies. If men were deposited and not dollars—even heartless bankers could discriminate and segregate. To ear mark dollars and infuse into each a sentiment is impossible. It raises issues within issues, each more difficult of solution than the other. Even a banker cannot discriminate, and the good humanitarian would resign a bank presidency and take to poetry after the first effort. If men were the subjects of deposit the thought could be worked out and the deserving could be properly posted. Here somewhere the trouble lies. No form, or entry, or method of receipting can distinguish the deserving from another. The wealthy, crabbed, mysterious oppressor of poverty may be owner of a savings book, as easily as a check account, and virtuous but poverty stricken labor may have a check account, certificate or a cashier's check.

The simpler form of an interest bearing book. But how will the learned examiner, though crowded to the marrow with the definition of the statute, tell in which form virtue lies? What divinity will frame a statute that can carry out the beautiful purpose of the philanthropic agitator, and what mere man can frame a law that will not leave distrust and inequity in its wake instead of good?

But what are "savings?"—If a statute is enacted it must define, so that the good may be applauded and the erring punished. But courts won't enforce visions, or punish for antagonism to a dream. Then what are "savings deposits"? The comptroller of the currency was in evident perplexity on the question, as he was unable in his call for this purpose to give such instructions as would bring harmonious and uniform results from the banks. The Monetary Commission, however, classify all interest bearing deposits, whether on book or certificate or otherwise, as "savings deposits."

These philanthropic gentlemen have struggled mightily with this problem. They have sought vainly for a lucid, logical statement that would define the object they have in mind. They have stated and restated conditions, hoping therefrom to extract a principle that would stand the test of a definition. They have failed. In their last pronunciamento on this question, the savings bank committee admit the failure, and say that the only definition possible, is a statement of conditions. So the ancient philosopher defined man as a biped without feathers, whereupon the skeptic held up a rooster plucked for the pan, and exclaimed, behold—a man. They not only fail to tell you what they mean by savings deposits, but, in the bill they offer, they admit their failure. At times their fatigued minds feel inclined to abandon the task, and they seek to place by legislation the whole vexing question upon the conscience of the commissioner of banking. We would then have the unusual spectacle of a statute, half of whose terms would be on the statute book, and the more important half under an official hat.

I beg to call your attention to a recent report of the law committee of the A. B. A. The matter of segregation and investment of savings deposits had been referred them for consideration—just why to the law committee may be difficult to understand, unless it was because there were no lawyers upon that committee except the general counsel. It is also true that the foremost advocate of segregation was made chairman of that committee. They followed their own methods in the investigation, reduced hearings to responses to questions framed by themselves—in which the two essential elements of the whole subject were given small attention, and yet in their report—make the following admission—rather confessions.

To the query—"What are savings deposits?"—They answer,

First, "Precise definition is difficult, perhaps impossible."

Second, "The committee is convinced, by talking with them, that most bankers know which of their deposits are 'savings,' and that it is not necessary to define them by law."

Here is a final and distinct admission of what we have contended, namely, their inability to define, and their lack of grasp of the subject, and with it the foolish suggestion that every banker be made the judge of the requirements of law as to his own bank. Anyone will instantly realize the absurdity of such course, and the folly of such suggestion, but these admissions show that the philosophers have at last opened their minds to the difficulties, even if their suggested remedy is hopelessly absurd. They would make each bank the judge of the application of the law.

A statute to be operative must be capable of self definition. If it fails in that, it is repugnant to common sense, and will not be enforced. There must be a clear object legislated upon—there must be some quality that distinguishes the class, and a mark that cannot be evaded at the will of the party interested. You cannot exclude from the operation of the law because of form, or material clause, or style. Will you exclude certificates—why then the opponent will issue nothing but certificates—will you determine, by the use of the word “savings”—why they change the name—will you fix a time qualification—or a form for deposit—or withdrawal? Why, then the opponent’s way is easy to avoid the prescribed method. To hold the opponent you must find some quality that is common to any form, method or style, and one he cannot avoid or abandon without suffering a loss too great to be profitable. These efforts at defining spring from a mind familiar with a custom, and not from a logical basis, upon which alone a legal distinction can exist. They do not define. They must leave the whole question to legal, not personal interpretation, and when the courts interpret “savings deposits” they will find a clean logical line of demarkation—and that line will be between active business deposits on one hand and all other deposits on the other hand. But of those other deposits that show a clean and clear line of distinction—easy of recognition and clear in definition, “interest bearing deposits” stand conspicuous. Interest bearing deposits without reference to any form or style or limitation of deposits, or character of deposits. The theorists protest that they do not wish to go so far—They need not do so, the courts will do it for them. These gentlemen may fool with the flood gates, but they cannot control the torrent. They may say thus far and no farther, but a greater power will control. The courts, not theorists, will interpret the law. The gentlemen toy with dynamite, and do not understand. They talk sympathetically about “savings deposits,” yet can frame no definition which answers their purpose. They claim to exclude all from the operation of their plan except what their minds vaguely classify as “savings,” yet are absolutely unable to fix their meaning on paper so that you or I could understand, and when you point out that they cover every species of interest bearing deposits, they stand mute and can make no answer.

They have been reared in a locality where the word “savings” has a limited technical meaning, and do not understand that that peculiar meaning does not prevail in other localities, where conditions are different. “Savings” in New England means savings bank deposits. Savings in Pennsylvania means money saved, be the amount small or great.

In order to demonstrate to you absolutely the fact that these gentlemen contemplate the segregation of all interest bearing deposits, notwithstanding any protest to the contrary, I refer you to a draft of a proposed bill for enactment by states, and presumably by the nation, for the control of all institutions receiving so-called savings deposits.

This bill, which has been widely circulated by the savings bank committee, provides as follows:

(See Bill).

Every bank soliciting and receiving deposits—(a) which are payable on presentation of pass book, or (b) which at the option of the bank may require notice of intention to withdraw, or (c) upon which interest is payable at fixed periods, or (d) in other manner to lead the public to believe that such deposits were received in the manner prescribed by this Act—shall have a savings department in which all such deposits shall be received, etc.

From this it appears—

First. That “savings deposits” are deposits in a savings bank or department; and Second. It requires that four different classes of deposits shall be deposited in such a savings department, and thereby become “savings deposits.”

Examine closely the four classes. The first one provides that if a deposit is payable only upon presentation of the pass book, that such deposit must be held in a savings department.

The second feature provides that deposits made under requirement of a notice to withdraw, shall be deposited in a savings department.

The third feature, covers the millions of dollars now on demand in check accounts, held especially by national banks, upon which interest is paid, and every other interest bearing deposit.

As to the fourth class. This is a drag net, and is so wide reaching in its terms as to make it impossible of enforcement, and no court would ever enforce it. More than that, it is so vague, indefinite and uncertain that it requires an extraordinary grade of intellect to understand what it means.

This clause “C” in the proposed law as to interest bearing deposits, cannot be evaded by the banks, and will not be destroyed by the decisions of the court. It is clear, clean cut and means just what it says. That is, that all interest bearing deposits under this law must be put into a savings department and passed through the mill provided by the bill for savings deposits. It distinctly specifies what very many of the friends of this proposed law deny. It positively affirms that under this scheme of segregation as proposed by these mutual savings bank men and other theorists, all interest bearing deposits of whatever description are subjects for segregation, whether they are time deposits, on book, certificates of deposit, cashier’s check, coupon certificates, check accounts bearing interest, or of whatever character. And in the last report made by the law committee of the American Bankers Association, they accept this wide significance of the word “savings” and by their own application include one-half of the deposits of the country in their scheme for segregation.

Now we know where we are at. All interest bearing deposits of every character whatever, when received by any institution, national or state, trust company or capitalized savings bank, shall forthwith invest that money in a restricted class of securities, and treat it in all respects as required by this Act.

For the purpose of illustration, permit me to use the data of your sister state—my own commonwealth, because of the fact that I happen to be more familiar with the statistics than I am with those of your state, and for the further reason that I have not had time to gather the statistics of your state sufficiently accurately to clearly place this matter before you.

In Pennsylvania, the monetary commission, after investigation made, declare in their tabulated and published statement that there are five hundred and twenty millions of sav-

YOUR CHICAGO BUSINESS RESPECTFULLY INVITED

IF YOU HAVE NO CORRESPONDENT

IN CINCINNATI

We will welcome the opportunity of proving to you the benefits which will accrue from forming a connection with us deposits. This statement is short of the fact. There are at least $600,000,000 of what would be called savings deposits under the law, which these gentlemen now propose to impose upon us.

Of this amount $165,000,000 is now held by mutual savings banks, of which there are only eleven in existence in the state, seven of which are in Philadelphia and one in the city of Pittsburgh; the other three of minor importance.

In Pennsylvania, then, with a total of interest bearing deposits amounting to $600,000,000, if we deduct $165,000,000, being the amount of deposits in mutual savings banks in that state, we have a result of over $400,000,000, subject to the provisions of this plan of segregation.

Four hundred million dollars—an amount greater than the total so-called “individual deposits” in all the national banks of Connecticut, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana combined.

An amount greater than the total of individual deposits in all the national banks of Kentucky, Arkansas, Tennessee, Michigan, Montana, Wyoming, New Mexico, Idaho, Utah, Nevada and Arizona combined, and almost equal to all such deposits in all the New England states combined, and yet these gentlemen would regulate these vast interests while taking lunch.

In the so-called proposition (see note 2 on page 16 of bill fixing investments) they recommend that in each state the investments should be such provided by the law for mutual savings banks.

In Pennsylvania, mutual savings investments are limited to United States bonds, state and municipal bonds and first bond and mortgage.

Imagine, gentlemen, if you will, the enactment of this bill as proposed, and the requirement that in Pennsylvania, four hundred millions of dollars must be taken from the ordinary channels of trade, and all the securities or loans represented by that $400,000,000 converted and then replaced in United States securities netting two per cent and somewhat upwards, or in state bonds, or in municipal bonds now netting four per cent or less, or in bonds and mortgages, and contemplate the condition that the Keystone State banks and people will have fallen upon. Business would be shaken—credits must be withdrawn, wheels must be stopped. Interest rates will oppress the business borrower. Municipal and government bonds would be at such figure as to make it impossible to net more than 3 per cent on investments, and every bank in the state of Pennsylvania would, as a last resort, be scrambling for first mortgage bonds which might offer a little larger rate.

And then imagine the Pennsylvania banker endeavoring to realize a sufficiently large sum to pay the current expenses of his institution—to pay a reasonable dividend upon his capital invested, and to pay a three per cent rate at least to his depositors, and yet “Nomine mutato, haec fabula de te narratur.” The law committee says West Virginia is in the same predicament as Pennsylvania.

When you mention this feature, some sapient person will inquire whether you still anticipate terrible results. Yet as the night follows the day, these results must follow these conditions. They tell you that in Texas and Michigan and in other states, such results have not followed. Two or three years is no demonstration, and few states do not foreshadow the results of a country-wide application of this plan; but even there, if the laws of those states are similar to the law intended to be imposed, either the commissioner of banking is winking at the violation of the law, or the bankers are successfully evading the provisions of the law, or the investment restrictions are so mild as to make the plan possible. If it were possible to enact a law which would permit every person interested, to be the judge of the law as recommended by the law committee, we might get results such as appear in some of these states, but under this law as proposed such results cannot follow. If the law is passed, it will be interpreted by a court of law, and not by either an easy bank superintendent or an easy bank officer, who may make a convenient guess do for a sworn report.

But what about the community? It will readily be seen that a large proportion, indeed, the greater portion, of a bank's deposits must be withdrawn from current loans, from discounting, from commercial paper of any character, and invested as above. This means that the bulk of the bank's deposits must be taken in the first place from its use in the community where the bank is located; second, that it must be invested, probably abroad, the bank seeking the great cities of the East or of the Middle West to find the character of new securities required by law. It means that the rate of income, discount or interest, which probably in former conditions realized from five to seven per cent for the bank, must be abandoned, and that a very much less rate, possibly not exceeding three to three and a half per cent, dependent upon the character of the investment, and also the premiums required, would be realized from such investment.

It means that the bank with an income of one-half or a greater amount of its deposits, not exceeding in gross three and one-half per cent, must pay its current expenses, declare a dividend on its stock, and pay, where interest is paid, at least three per cent to its depositors. A mathematical proposition which ought to reach any banker's mind and attract his attention.

It is easy to see that banking under such circumstances would be impossible. The profits that might be made from the business of

President W. W. Beall to West Virginia Bankers

I desire to congratulate the association on its healthy condition and the fact that it continues to grow in influence and importance. During the past few years there has been more agitation concerning banking and currency than there has been in the past quarter of a century, probably more than there has ever been with the possible exception of the period when the national bank act first was framed.

With the adoption of the gold standard the currency question for a time was more or less dormant. Interest, however, was revived after the panic of 1907, and that interest is directly responsible for the appointment and work of the National Monetary Commission. And I submit that we are right now facing the solution of a problem that is freighted with the most important results to the greatest number of people of any question demanding public attention at this moment. It is a matter of particular importance to bankers, and we cannot give it too much serious consideration. Loyalty to our institutions and our patriotism demands that we should lay aside all personal prejudices and exert our best efforts in the solution of this problem.

The scheme of guaranteeing deposits, which commanded our attention only a few years ago, has been to some extent at least tried out, and as some of us predicted, found wanting. It was not as was claimed for it, a new proposition, and anyone who desires has but to read the history of early banking in the State of New York for a verification of this statement.

Before this association holds its next annual convention a new legislature will have been elected, and will convene in the capitol of the state. It is important that a legislative committee composed of men who are willing and capable of giving the important matter of bank legislation the time and consideration it merits, and it is equally important that each and every member of this association keep in close touch with this committee, so that needed legislation may be enacted and anything of an unsatisfactory nature may be frustrated.

Our present bank law, which is modeled after the national bank act, has worked so admirably that I take it we are all interested in seeing that nothing creeps into any of its provisions which would tend to destroy its efficiency.

The conditions of the banks in our state are so generally satisfactory that I do not deem it necessary to dwell on this subject at length. The action of the association in dividing this state into groups is to be commended, if for no other reason than the success which has attended the handling of purely local questions, and solving them as local conditions demanded.

The agitation of those much discussed and frequently damned propositions laconically referred to as "Four Per Cent" and "Taxes," are still before us, and if the youngest of us be permitted to live the psalmist's allotted three-score years and ten, we may have the privilege of seeing them amicably adjusted, and the spirits of those who have gone on before will make an earnest effort to utter "Amen."

West Virginia Program

The address of President Beall was followed by the report of Secretary and Treasurer J. S. Hill and the appointment of committees. Dr. H. Parker Willis, Dean of the College of Finance, George Washington University, concluded the morning session on Thursday with an address on "Prospects for Banking Legislation." In the afternoon addresses were made by R. E. James, president of the Easton (Pa.) Trust Company on "Segregation of Deposits;" Hon. Wm. B. Matthews, clerk of Supreme Court of Appeals of West Virginia, on "Court Decisions Affecting Banks;" and by Hon. Charles P. Light, field secretary American Association for Highway Improvement. After the reports of the group chairmen, the meeting was adjourned until the next day. On Friday morning Hon. R. A. Heflin, member of Congress from Alabama, and F. W. Ellsworth, publicity manager of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, were the speakers. Mr. Ellsworth gave his famous talk on "Bank Advertising" which was followed by a general discussion. Hon. E. D. Sanderson, dean and director College of Agriculture, West Virginia University, was the only speaker at the afternoon session and spoke on "West Virginia Agriculture—A Neglected Industry." After the reports of the various committees, the next meeting place was selected and officers for the ensuing year were elected. In the evening the annual banquet was held at White Sulphur Springs Hotel. Hon. Wm. A. MacCorkle was toastmaster.

By C. C. Burford

With crop prospects in general as good as they are ever to be found in Illinois there is no reason why Illinois bankers should have any "hard times." The oats and wheat fields are wonderful to behold, and it is to be doubted if the oldest inhabitant can remember a year when the oats prospects were better than they are in 1912. In most fields the oats are as high as the fences and the yield of straw is most plentiful. There is naturally some anxiety lest some calamity such as wind, hail or beating rains will diminish the crop prospects, but optimistic observers believe that a record-breaking crop yet will be harvested. Continued rains have kept both the oats and the wheat green and the harvest will be late. Too much rain might, of course, decrease the yield of these cereals, but farmers are for the most part very happy over the crop prospects. Likewise the bankers.

Corn has made wonderful progress during the past two or three weeks. With seasonable weather, and with a late fall and delayed frosts there will be a large crop. Weather prophets hail with delight the idea that a late spring with continued rains all summer, as in 1912, tend toward a correspondingly late autumn, and this fact, if true, will mean much this year. With the corn greatly delayed in its planting and growth, an early fall with severe frosts will be almost a public calamity.

Pastures are good and live stock needs far less feeding than they did at this time last year, when the pastures were as "brown and seer" as ever a poet imagined a typical autumn to be. The abundance of straw, and the plentiful pastures will mean easy feeding conditions for both country and city. Gardens are "immense" and potatoes, so high last year as to be almost a luxury, will be plentiful and cheap. Many kinds of fruits have done well although it is true that there are no peaches and few apples. All in all, the year 1912 can be said to be a good year for Illinois farmers and bankers.

The farmer and his prosperity are synonyms nowadays and the sale of motor cars in the smaller cities, villages and in the country has been almost startling this year, and would be a "scary" proposition for bankers if it were not for the fact that the farmers and the villagers can well afford them. The man who is worried about motor cars bankrupting the country should see the oats fields in Illinois now.

Politics seems to have but very little part in a consideration of financial conditions in Illinois as people are more truly interested in oats, corn, wheat, automobiles and good things to eat than they are in party politics. However, the political situation is watched with care, and it might be added, with weariness, and outside of new motor cars and more black land, Illinois people are guarding their expenditures with caution.

Bank Consolidation at Decatur

The consolidation of the old private banking house of L. Burrows & Co., of Decatur, with the National Bank of Decatur marks the passing of one of the oldest and most reliable private banks in Illinois. Established in 1852, eight years before James Millikin began a private banking business in Decatur, which has grown into the gigantic Millikin National Bank, the Burrows bank has continued business as a private bank for sixty years. No word of doubt about the soundness of L. Burrows & Co. is to be found among the business men of Decatur. The passing of the name of one of Illinois' ante-bellum banking houses is a matter deserving of comment.

This consolidation means that there will be but three banks in Decatur, and there are few cities of approximately 35,000 people in the country which have but three banks. Although numerically few, the Decatur banks make up in size and strength what they lack in number. Every banker in Illinois knows the Millikin with its $5,000,000 in deposits, outranked by only three or four other banks in the state outside of Chicago. The Citizens National with its colossal bank building also is another monumental business for Decatur, while the announcement of a palatial new home for the National of Decatur will place the newly consolidated institution in the same public eye as the Millikin and the Citizens. The National of Decatur now is considering plans for a new structure, there being three plans in view, one a monumental banking house two stories high to be used only by the bank, another for an eight or nine story office building, while a third calls for a stock company to erect a building in which the bank would be only a tenant. In any case the National Bank of Decatur will be one of the show places in that city of enterprise.

Illinois Notes

George W. Busey, president of the Farmers Exchange Bank of Fisher, and Garrett H. Baker, cashier of Busey's Bank of Urbana, with their wives, have returned from an extended automobile trip to Boston and return. The trip, made in a 1912 Marmon, was without engine trouble of any sort, and only incidental tire trouble.

Receipts in the Internal Revenue office at Springfield for the fiscal year ending June 30th passed this year the ten million dollar mark for the first time. The total was $10,060,704, an increase of $213,176 over that of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1911.

Howard B. Harter, who through "unsuccessful speculation" wrecked the Citizens Bank of Akron, Indiana, is now in custody in Chicago indicted with embezzling the bank's funds. Harter is anxious to return to Akron and face trial. He lost $24,000 belonging to the stockholders and his own savings of $15,000 in wheat speculation.

The $105,000 bond issue of the board of education of Pekin has been sold to the firm of John Nuveen & Co.

Earle W. Butler, "jauntily attired in a white duck suit with a red cross seal upon his sleeve," asked in the office of the warden of the Joliet penitentiary to be released from bankruptcy. He is said to have lost none of "that debonair bearing which characterized him when he conducted his banks at Glasford, Ellisville and St. David" in Fulton and Peoria counties. The decision regarding his discharge will be made later.

Springfield Correspondence

That the Central Illinois Trust and Savings, Mattoon, Ill., is rapidly forging to the front rank of financial institutions in that section of the state is evidenced by the fact that effective July 1st, the capital stock of this bank was increased from $50,000 to $100,000. The deposits at this institution have also shown a healthy growth at the rate of about $100,000 a year. When the bank was organized the deposits were $100,000, and they were $366,000 at the last report made. An increase will be made in the membership of the board of directors from nine members to eleven members. The bank has also created a surplus fund of $35,000, which gives the institution a good working capital.

Adds to Surplus

The Litchfield National has during the past year increased their surplus from $6,500 to $10,000 besides declaring their regular 5 per cent dividend. This bank is one of the rapidly growing institutions of Litchfield, and its progress is greatly due to the management of Mr. Morrison, president; J. W. Kidd, vice-president; H. B. Herrick, cashier, and Frank Paden assistant cashier.

New Illinois Banks

A charter has been granted to the Newlin State Bank at Hutsonville, Crawford county.

The organizers were Allen, Stephen D., and Henry O. Newlin. The bank is capitalized at $25,000. The Peoples State Bank of Flanagan, capitalized at $25,000, and organized by Frank Swords, Chris Vollmen, Franz D. Malkwarf, S. Gueldenhaar and Thomas Dillon, was also chartered.

Held for Fleecing Springfield Bank

Palmer W. Halsey, alleged to have swindled the Ridgely National at Springfield out of $480, appeared before Justice Reilly last week, waived preliminary examination, and was bound over to the grand jury on a $1,500 bond. He failed to give bond and was committed to the county jail. Halsey was returned to Springfield from Kansas City recently, where he was located after a search of several weeks. The game he is alleged to have successfully worked on the Ridgely bank started when he deposited $25 to his credit in the bank. A few days later he appeared at the bank and deposited $25 in currency, and a worthless check for $428. The next day he withdrew the entire amount in cash and left the city. He is said to have worked the game in other places.

Illinois Banking Notes

Frank J. Leonard of Rockford, Ill., a director of the Manufacturers National of that city, died at his home on July 4th.

Miss Mabelle C. Smick of Decatur was married on Tuesday of last week to Richard S. Davis of the Continental and Commercial National of Chicago.

The State Bank of Rock Island, Ill., is installing a new set of clocks which will be operated by electricity from a meter clock in the director's room. There will be four dials in all, two on Second Avenue. The clock is a mammoth affair, and the dial will be visible for blocks, and will be illuminated at night while pipe chimes will toll the hours.

The Carthage Dime Savings Bank will continue its regular plan of giving a nice prize to every child who makes three deposits during the summer.

Philadelphia

The most novel consolidation plan yet devised for merging trust companies has been adopted by the Commercial and Trust Company of North America. The deal involves no increase in capital, but will be consummated by the exchange of 2,400 shares of Commercial stock and a transfer of the North American Company's building to a trustee, the trust to be capitalized at $250,000. Holders of North American stock will get 25 per cent of their shares in these certificates of interest and 24 per cent in stock of the Commercial Trust Company. The merger is considered by trust company officials as one of the best that has yet taken place, in the sense that the Commercial secures control of nearly $14,000,000 trust funds. The Commercial in order to pay for the assets of the Trust Company of North America, has options on the 2,400 shares of its own stock at $425 a share plus interest, making the cost of the acquisition $1,020,000.

B. M. Chattell, cashier of the Illinois Trust and Savings, is ill at his residence at 4932 Lake Avenue from nervous breakdown. He is being attended by Drs. Webster and Schmidt and, it is believed, will recover. Mr. Chattell suffered last winter from an attack of grippe from which he did not fully recover. He was obliged to give up work some time ago on account of his condition, which prevented him from sleeping. It is said that he has neurasthenia. A brief stay at Atlantic City gave him no relief.

MINNESOTA PROCEEDINGS BOOK OUT!

Secretary Frost of the Minnesota Bankers Association seems to have broken all of this year's records in getting out his proceedings book for the convention held June 14th and 15th at the Agricultural College in St. Anthony Park. The book already has been delivered to the members of the association, and is as complete a reflex of the proceedings as it is possible to make. The illustrations are among the very finest to be obtained, and all of the valuable addresses are printed in full. The volume contains two hundred pages, and is fully indexed and neatly bound. So far as known at present Secretary Frost holds the record in expertness in getting out his proceedings volumes. Last year after the Minneapolis conference the whole matter appeared in book form in less than ten days. Some state associations require almost that many months for a similar performance.

VERMONT STATE BANKERS CONVENTION

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, July 10.—Practically no change worthy of note transpired in the St. Louis monetary situation during the past week. Bankers report a gradual improvement in general business, with prospects considerably better than present conditions. The general verdict seems that the future, good or bad, is involved in the crop results. Good, or even fair yields, will doubtless turn the tide in favor of renewed activities, and put an end to the feeling of depression and quietness which has characterized the past few seasons. Financially the middle West is as strong as at any time in its history, but the element of confidence needed to turn loose the great streams of activity is lacking. It is conceded that more confidence is felt than a few months ago, when political uncertainties, added to the wheat scare, accentuated the feeling of unrest. While the political issue is still in doubt, it is known with a fair degree of accuracy what can and cannot be expected regardless of which party is triumphant in November. Specifically the market here is in better shape from the banker's viewpoint. There has been a gradual stiffening in rates, and the demand, both from the country and city, has picked up materially. Offerings of commercial paper are more plentiful, and rates on all classes of bills are a shade higher. The more seasonable weather has helped business, especially the retail branches. The railroad situation in this locality shows steady improvement, and all the big lines centering in St. Louis which serve the grain region, are making extensive preparations for crop movement.

Crop Outlook Good

On the whole the crop outlook is excellent. The cotton report was somewhat disappointing as to acreage, but recent reports from Texas and the other southwestern states, indicate that the condition will in a large measure offset the shrinkage in acreage. Threshing returns from the wheat fields are showing up excellently well, both in point of quality and quantity. In many places where it was reported that the broad acres had been plowed up, they are raising a third of a normal crop or better. The fruit crop will be a bumper one, hay has turned out well, and small crops generally, including potatoes, will far surpass last year.

Subtreasury Building Delay

The failure of Congressman Richard Bartholdt to get a bill through the House appropriating funds for the erection of the new subtreasury building on the southeast corner of Fourth and Chestnut streets, has been a sore disappointment to the financial district. The site is occupied by an old structure, which has been advertised for rent. Local bankers have made inquiries of Mr. Bartholdt as to when it was probable the work would commence, and received the reply, "Not for several years." Mr. Bartholdt obtained the appropriation of $300,000 for the subtreasury site while he was chairman of the house committee of public buildings. This has been invested in the property, but the funds for the building have not been obtained. Influence will be brought to bear to secure an appropriation at the next session of congress, as need for the new building is sorely felt.

Postal Savings Banks

Extensive developments are to be made in the postal savings banks in St. Louis beginning August 1, in accordance with a plan fostered by Postmaster Thomas T. Akins. About twenty-four branch offices will be made depositories for postal savings funds, and numerous other improvements will be put through. Mr. Akins says the system has been met with wonderful support in St. Louis, and the per capita deposits compare well with any other city in the country. The central bank will be continued in the main postoffice at Ninth and Olive streets.

Cornerstone Laid

The Belleville Savings Bank this week laid the cornerstone of its new building on East Main street, near the public square. Directors, and other local bankers, together with numerous visiting bankers from surrounding cities and members of the Commercial Club, were present at the ceremony. Emil Geil, president of the Commercial Club, made the opening address. Richard Hill, cashier of the institution, read a record of its history and financial condition, which with copies of local newspapers, were placed in the crypt. At the close of the ceremonies the participants were guests of the board of directors at a banquet at the Elks Club. The Belleville Savings Bank

A. O. Wilson on Money Investigation

A. O. Wilson, vice-president of the State National, is for expedition in the so-called money trust investigation. Speaking on the subject Mr. Wilson said: "There is this to be said about this money trust inquiry. Let us have it and be done with it as soon as possible. Until the apparent distrust is overcome it will be difficult to accomplish any real results along the line of better banking and currency laws. Out here in the West we want to continue making the progress to which we are entitled. We do not want our natural advantages to be overcome by real or apparent economic difficulties in any other section of the country. We desire to encourage the improvement in business that has already commenced. In my opinion the best remedy for evils such as are complained of is not through congressional investigation, so much as through the medium of the bank supervising departments, state and national, that the laws with reference to excessive loans, loans to directors and their interests, and ownership of stock in chains of banks, be more rigid if need be. Let there be greater power lodged in the comptroller and bank commissioner for the enforcement of the laws, and let there be more severe punishment provided for those who violate such laws."

Opposed to Rate Advance

St. Louis financial institutions are likely to oppose the general advance on bank burglary insurance rates, which has been adopted by practically all the companies doing business in this field. Agents here claim they have not as yet received the new schedules, hence cannot tell definitely what the advance will amount to. The premiums on this class of indemnity in St. Louis total about $60,000 a year. It is set forth by the insurance companies that the rate here is far below that of Chicago, New York and other large cities, but the banks take the position that it is high enough to enable the companies to make a good return on their risks.

New Casualty Company Organized

The Western National Casualty Company has been organized by St. Louisans and licensed by the Missouri Insurance Department as a mutual company to write life, accident and health insurance. The company has no capital stock and will issue non-participating policies only.

OHIO BANKERS ELECT OFFICERS

At the twenty-second annual convention of the Ohio Bankers Association at Cedar Point last week, S. D. Fitton of Hamilton was elected president, succeeding W. P. Sharer of Zanesville; R. D. Sneath of Tiffin was elected vice-president. Secretary Stacey B. Rankin of South Charleston, and Treasurer S. J. Brister of Canal Dover were re-elected.

The association reaffirmed its faith in the reform program outlined by the National Monetary Commission as amended by the American Bankers Association, and expressed the belief that the early adoption of this reform would put the banking system upon the firmest foundation it has ever known. As a remedy for "the high cost of living" the association advocated the application of more modern methods in farming, together with steps toward an exemplification of what was described as the "fact that too many young men and women are leaving the farm." The bankers approved the conservation and good roads proposals as adopted by the constitutional convention.

CLEARING HOUSE EXAMINER FOR NEW ORLEANS

J. R. Stevens, of Huntsville, Ala., who has sent in his resignation as national bank examiner to become effective within a short time, is to become the clearing house examiner for the city of New Orleans, that city having recently adopted the method of clearing house examinations.

Indiana

Indianapolis.—Proposed plans for the reform of the banking and currency laws of the United States were the principal matters of discussion at a meeting of Group 4 of the Indiana Bankers Association at Maennerchor Hall. At the close of the meeting the following officers were elected:

President, John P. Frenzel, Jr., Indianapolis; secretary, Will H. Wade, Indianapolis. Executive committee, E. F. Cahen, Fortville; F. E. Davis, Tipton; M. A. Roberts, Jamestown; Wm. Adcock, Greenwood, and E. F. Hadley, Mooresville. Harry Wilson, of Indianapolis, was made a member of the nominating committee of the state association.

Although examination of the law under which the five savings banks of the state operate has not disclosed any specific authority by which the banks may pay interest on deposits, the state bank authorities will not attempt to interfere with the practice of paying such interest, now followed by the savings banks in Laporte, South Bend, Evansville, Lafayette and Terre Haute, where the banks are situated. Harry L. Arnold, chief clerk in the bank department in the office of the auditor of state, said the banks began the payment of such interest to meet the competition of other banks. The question of authority to pay such interest was raised by the United States department of justice, and the state department's finding on the Indiana law will be forwarded to the United States authorities.

Indianapolis.—The old building in Virginia Avenue, south of the Indiana National Bank, is being torn down to make way for a part of the new addition to the bank building which will cost about $100,000. The addition will be a handsome structure, and will double the office and lobby capacity of the bank. After August 1st, the building in South Pennsylvania Street, now occupied by the offices of the Merchants Heat and Light Company, will be torn down to make room for the remainder of the addition. The purchase of the additional property was made through Volney T. Malott, chairman of the board of directors of the bank, and the consideration was about $100,000.

Indianapolis.—At the regular monthly meeting of the board of directors of the Indiana Trust Company, held last week, Charles H. Adam was appointed secretary to fill the vacancy caused by the recent death of Bement Lyman. Mr. Adam has been connected with the company practically since its organization, and has been assistant secretary for the last eight years. No action was taken toward naming an assistant secretary to succeed Mr. Adam.

Articles of association for State Bank of Goshen have been filed. The new bank will have $80,000 in capital stock. A majority of the stockholders are business men of Goshen. Notice was filed also that the Evansville Savings and Loan Association has increased its capital stock from $100,000 to $1,000,000.

THRIVING TEXAS BANK

Farmers National Bank of Hillsboro, Texas, has just celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary. This is the oldest national bank in Hill county. The success of the bank largely is due to the conservative management. W. M. Williams is the president. It enjoys the patronage of some of the most successful farmers and business men of Central Texas.

Editorial Comment

CHICAGO'S INCREASED BANKING POWER

The banking power of Chicago is five times as great as it was fourteen years ago, when THE CHICAGO BANKER was founded. We hope it isn't too much to say when we claim a modest part in helping to increase the banking resources and prestige of this great center. One year ago Chicago bank deposits had just passed $900,000,000. At that time a general review of fifteen years of Chicago banking brought out evidence of the amazing growth of that era, the national banks gaining 276 per cent and the state banks 460 per cent. Fifteen years ago total state and national bank deposits were $201,000,000. It will be seen they have grown to five times that amount. No one of the Eastern financial papers refuses to admit that Chicago is going to figure in the very center of things financial from now on. Notice has been filed twice within the past six months of our increased girth, for, in that period, Chicago banks twice have broken all previous records. The high point, so far as the joint calls of the controller and the state auditor show, was at the last call on June 14-15. At this time the deposits in state and national banks combined showed a total of $1,008,909,270. In April they passed $1,004,000,000. Not until this year had the total reached the billion mark. This, incidentally, is $6,000,000 more than the high record for all Canadian banks. The state banks alone showed a total of $521,000,000, continuing above the half billion mark. The national banks of the previous call had passed $490,000,000. No reason for mentioning the specially large banks by name. Their growth hasn't been greater than that of the smaller ones; neither has the "big banker" done his part any more faithfully or effectively than his less pretentious co-worker.

Outlying or suburban bank development in and about Chicago has gone on at a pace which couldn't happen elsewhere—not even in a dream. It isn't strictly new either. There's the Austin State which in ten years has doubled actually its capital twice (four for one) out of surplus and yet has paid continuously handsome dividends. According to the recent call from the office of the state auditor there are now thirty-seven state banks in the outlying districts of Chicago. A dozen years ago there were six. Six years ago there were but fifteen. In addition to these thirty-seven, there are seven national banks in outlying territory. The state banks, in number, show an increase of 146 per cent in six years. In the matter of deposits the growth has been considerably larger. At the bank call of June, 1906, outlying state bank deposits of $21,408,182 were shown. At the call of June, 1912, deposits amounted to $62,500,000—an increase of nearly 200 per cent. These new outlying fields are promising as any in America, and the light surface tillage for years carried on by the small private bank, with almost frequent failure, simply prepared the way for the well capitalized, incorporated institution which is making such a hit today. Ere long, let us hope, there will be but one kind of answer to the bank demand of any community in Illinois—the incorporated bank under supervision and inspection, with their attendant good management.

COMMENDS THE BALTIMORE CONVENTION

The influential Journal of Commerce, New York, comes out strongly in its editorial indorsement of Governor Wilson, the democratic standard bearer. Among other things it says that "There could have been no better outcome of the long contest over the democratic nomination for president at Baltimore than the candidacy of Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey." The Journal gives Col. Bryan much credit for the ultimate choice of the Baltimore convention and comments suggestively that it was done without the aid of the much baited "Murphy delegation." In concluding its indorsement the Journal of Commerce says: "There is no doubt of the progressiveness of Wilson. It is of the advanced but not the wildly radical order. He is a man of unquestionable ability, thorough intellectual training, wide study and scholarship, and a talent for administration. He is an uncommonly persuasive speaker and writer, and comes as near being a practical statesman as almost any man who could be mentioned now in public life. We have no reason to doubt his integrity of character and purpose, and he is above suspicion of tolerating anything crooked or corrupt in politics or public life. There is reason to believe that, clothed with the responsibility of high office, he will be a safe and prudent chief magistrate of the nation, if he should be elected. One great advantage of his nomination will be that it will leave no excuse for Mr. Roosevelt's third party movement in the cause of progressiveness, and will probably take out of it what life it might otherwise have."

With such strong, conservative papers indorsing Governor Wilson, and so many strong interests supporting Taft it is difficult to see where Colonel Roosevelt can obtain the necessary funds to man the polls in all the states, to hire halls, bands, speakers and newspapers, and to pay for "Orchestra halls." Then, too, La Follette wants him to publish the names of his contributors to the campaign before the Chicago convention and to tell what he did with the money. This the Colonel has not done, but he is likely to have much trouble in evading the La Follette demand without great loss of popularity.

B. F. HARRIS FOR GOVERNOR

Considerable "new life" has been injected into the third party question in Illinois by a rumor that B. F. Harris of Champaign, president of the Illinois Bankers Association, is being urged to accept the Roosevelt nomination for governor. Mr. Harris would add a great deal of strength to any political movement in Illinois, and there is a possibility that with his assistance the third term propaganda would show alarming strength in the state. Many persons affect to believe that the result simply would be the election of the democratic candidate, but the more enthusiastic of the third termers predict a clean sweep for the third party ticket.

CENTRAL TRUST CELEBRATES TENTH ANNIVERSARY

Central Trust Company of Illinois celebrated its tenth anniversary on Monday, July 8th. When its president, Charles G. Dawes, retired from the office of comptroller of the currency, and after his determination to engage in the banking business in Chicago, he rented the then empty room at the corner of Monroe and Dearborn streets, formerly the old home of the Chicago National. Here he built up his organization and the nucleus for the present big business of the Central Trust in their new home at 125 West Monroe Street, one of the best appointed banking quarters in the United States. Unlike other comptrollers of the currency, Mr. Dawes did not organize a national bank, or take over the business of a national bank, but established as a state bank and trust company. To-day the capital, surplus and undivided profits of the Central Trust are six millions, and the deposits are around forty-five millions. The out-of-town banking business amounts to more than six millions, and this feature of the bank's business has grown rapidly.

OUT-OF-TOWN VISITORS

Among those who visited Chicago during the past week are George W. Boyden, vice-president of the Farmers State Bank, Sheffield, Ill.; N. F. Reckard, cashier of the First National of Batavia; W. A. Rule, formerly cashier of the Bank of Commerce, Kansas City, and now treasurer of the United States Mexican Trust Company of that city. Mr. Rule reports the prospects for good crops in the West and Southwest as very promising; S. B. Cook, president of the Central Missouri Trust Company, and W. A. Dallmeyer, president of the Exchange Bank, both of Jefferson City, Missouri. C. O. Patch, vice-president of the Security Trust Company, Detroit; W. P. Holland, president of the Clarksdale Savings Bank, Clarksdale, Miss.; J. C. Mitchell, secretary of the Denver Clearing House; Nelson H. Green, vice-president, Peoples Savings Bank and Trust Company, Moline; and W. J. Smith, vice-president, Old National Bank, Battle Creek, Mich., were also in the city.

Private Banking

Portland, July 11.—The following article is from the Pacific Banker, and ought to be of interest to those engaged in the good fight for supervision in your state. Following is the article: The two most important commonwealths in this country in which private banking is not regulated are Illinois and Washington. In Illinois legislation is hindered largely by the fact that the State Bankers Association will not take any stand on the subject. But in Washington this is not true. All through the proceedings of this convention on one dared deny the proposition that every form of banking should be supervised, and, indeed, in addresses and reports the affirmative of this was asserted in unequivocal terms.

From the President's Address

by Charles A. McLean, cashier the Traders' National, Spokane: "I believe in the most careful supervision by both state and national examiners of banks, and that the depositors of every bank deserve the best protection possible against dishonest and incompetent bankers. That protection must necessarily lie in adequate capital, with ample surplus, reasonably large reserves and good live assets. The confidence of the public can only be retained by these qualifications with the addition of capable and honest management.

"To protect well managed banks and their customers, the legislature of this state is in duty bound to pass a stringent banking law. Now is the time to begin the campaign by inducing conscientious men to stand in the primaries."

From the Report of the Protective Committee signed by the chairman, George B. Burke, vice-president of the Bankers Trust Company, Tacoma: "Your committee believes that there will be no serious division of opinion in the membership of this organization; that the time has now come when the private banks in the state of Washington should be under the supervision of the state banking department. Such a provision in the law was favored by your committee at the last session of the legislature, but was looked down upon with disfavor by the majority of the legislators.

"In the light of recent events, however, it will not be seriously contended, we believe, that had at least one private bank that recently make a miserable failure been under the supervision of the state examiner, the loss to depositors would not have been nearly so great. In fact, had this particular bank been under the supervision of the state banking department, the chances are that there would have been no failure at all.

"Your committee believes that every bank doing business in the state of Washington should be incorporated under the laws of the state of Washington, or under the laws of the United States, but whether incorporated or not, any bank receiving the deposits of the people should be subject to some examination by the state or national authorities, and we trust that this convention will place itself on record by resolution unequivocally demanding that private banks be put under state supervision."

From Secretary Kauffman's Report

"The failure of several private banks emphasizes the necessity of so amending our state bank act as to place all financial institutions that solicit and receive deposits, under the control of the state examiner, and I believe that your legislative committee will be able to prepare and submit a banking law to the next legislature, which, while broad enough to allow our financial institutions to handle any volume of legitimate business, and meet any commercial exigency, will also through the ample power of surveillance and control given to the state examiner, protect the depositors from the reckless speculator or deliberate swindler. No banker is just to himself, or to his profession, who opposes the passage of a law whose purpose is to effect sane, conservative management, and to ensure fidelity in discharging the important trust committed to him."

PYTHIANS TO HAVE SPECIAL TRAIN

Knights of Pythias who attend the biennial convention of the organization to be held in Denver beginning August 6th, will be able to take a special train from Chicago, on the Rock Island, leaving Chicago Saturday morning, August 3d at nine o'clock. The train will be strictly up-to-date in every respect.

President John M. Kinard to South Carolina Bankers

Declares present banking laws of state unsatisfactory. Wants to be listed with progressives in agricultural advancement. Wants group system adopted in the association. Tribute to his fellow bankers

The annual meeting of this association is a matter of far-reaching consequence and importance not only to the bankers but to every business interest of South Carolina. It gives me much pleasure to greet so many of the members on this our twelfth session. Located as we are at the gateway to the Panama Canal it behooves us, representing as we do the business clearing houses of our state, to look ahead and prepare for the conditions that will confront us. That our whole state will be benefited by the opening of this ocean highway hardly admits of argument.

But it is well to take stock of our opportunities and do our utmost to bring about the realization or capitalization of the advantages which are ours by the location of Charleston, being "the most convenient port to Panama," as President Taft has so aptly phrased it. A glance at the map will show very clearly why this is so, and a moment's reflection will indicate clearly what has made the great cities of our nation. The location of Chicago destined it as a common meeting place or continental cross roads. The location of New York and other eastern ports being nearer to England and Europe, our chief markets, naturally attracted the overseas trade. And the same is true of our Pacific ports. Thus we see that trade follows the lines of least resistance.

The opening of the canal opens up to us vast opportunities for attracting trade to our southern ports, and the location of our own chief port appears to offer unusual advantages.

Many of the banking laws of the state are very unsatisfactory, and I would commend that this body go on record requesting our legislative committee to make vigorous attempts to strengthen its most pronounced and glaring defects during the next session of the legislature and work to that end without dismay or discouragement until accomplished.

More scientific agricultural methods are revolutionizing our farms and rural life. In this connection I recommend the appointment of a committee on agricultural development and education. South Carolina naturally is the best farming and producing state in the Union for diversified crops. We, as bankers, cannot disregard our self-interest as well as our obligation at large to foster and encourage more intensified and scientific farming.

Another suggestion I wish to submit for your careful consideration is the adoption of what is known as the group system. Your executive committee a few years ago made a similar recommendation, and I can do no better than quote their words in advocacy of the needs, namely: "We desire to suggest to the association that it exert itself along the lines of fostering and advancing the knowledge and methods of banking among the young bank officers and clerks in our state who are rarely privileged to attend our meetings—young men who in a few years are to take our places, and it is our solemn duty to them as well as to ourselves that they be given every means of obtaining information and the advantages of personal acquaintance with one another, and the consequent 'brightening up' that comes from an exchange of ideas and discussion of subjects among themselves concerning the business in which they are engaged."

From some cause this suggestion did not attract your attention or arouse your interest. This system is in vogue in many states, and is universally regarded as a potent factor in developing and educating the young bankers, as well as a great source of strength and power to the parent association in many ways that are obvious to you.

There is a demand to-day for ideals, and for constant struggle towards these ideals, and I would invite your attention to a few essentials which I conceive to be requirements in the discharge of the full duties of the ideal banker.

The bankers are not only the custodians of the nation's wealth, but they are the trustees of the nation's business confidence. It would be useless for me in this presence to recite the history of banking, its rapid evolution and development. With that you are all familiar. Its origin was in the necessity for a system of full faith and credit, and it has been nurtured by and has fed upon full confidence. Its growth has been wonderful. It is to-day a business whose ramifications are so extensive they can not be calculated. It touches every other business. It is the very heart of business.

The ethics of banking should be high. The ethics of the banker should be safe from even the faintest suspicion. I have no hesitation in saying that I believe the bankers of South Carolina will compare favorably in intellect, in moral endeavor, and in patriotism with the members of any other profession. But we should never make the mistake of being content with ourselves.

This brings us to a word in regard to the banker's field of activity in his community, and his duty to the community. The influence of the right kind of banker is large, and, as I have sought to emphasize, with increase of influence comes increase of opportunity, and increase of responsibility follows. There is always work to be done in the intellectual and moral advancement of any community. The business of a bank is the commercial advancement of a community. The responsibility of the banker, however, does not stop there. The ideal banker should be a leader in all things that pertain to the best interests of his people. The ideal banker is not a mere custodian of other people's money, seeking to accumulate riches for his stockholders. The making of money is an important feature of the business of a bank, but the making of money is not the banker's sole duty. When a man enters the banking business he should not sell his heart and soul in his efforts to increase his surplus and to pay big dividends. I would not underestimate the importance and the value and the satisfaction of an increasing surplus, nor would I undervalue large dividends. Good bank statements show healthy conditions. But the very fact that a banker can point with pride to the statement of his bank's condition should be an inspiration to him in the great and inviting field of the true advancement, along all lines, of his people. I would not seek to enumerate the possibilities and duties in this line of endeavor. Each banker knows the needs of his own community. Each banker who keeps his vision clear and broad sees the opportunity and realizes the responsibility. Let us render unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's, but let us not forget that the things we owe to God's people we owe to God.

And how may the bankers aid in the direction and control of those world-forces necessary to bring about this great step forward towards the goal of human endeavor? What part have they in this world-movement which is in part the application of the greatest principles of justice and truth—this movement which looks towards the alleviation of human suffering and the great uplift of the race?

Why are wars fought to-day, and why is there international unrest and turmoil? International law and international rights are well settled, and the assimilation of one nation by another is being brought into international disrepute. The prime cause of the world's unrest may be found in industrial conditions. There is no doubt that there is a deep unrest not only in this nation, but throughout the world, to-day. In this unrest great movements for good may take root and flourish. On the other hand, great movements which tend in the other direction might find equally fertile soil. An age of unrest is an age of opportunity—of opportunity for good or for evil. The result depends upon the channels into which the great world-currents are directed. Unrest which comes from industrial conditions furnishes the field for the banker. There are problems presented to-day which must be solved, and which come peculiarly within his province. Upon their correct solution much depends.

I believe that the application of the right influence by the bankers of this nation upon the varied industrial and economic problems which are presented to us to-day would mean the balance of power in their determination. I believe that the right settlement of the conditions of unrest in the United States would place this country in that position which the highest patriotism feels is her destiny—the leader of the nations in settling the problems of the human race, and in settling them in the interest of the home, and in the fear of God.

In closing permit me to leave with you to

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

Bank clearings among the cities of the Central West have fallen off to a marked degree during the past few weeks. Oddly enough this situation causes no serious concern among the bankers of this section, however, as they are looking forward to a great increase in business as soon as the wheat crop is fairly started. Heavy withdrawals a month ago were made in order that country banks could take care of the farmers. As yet this money has not begun to come back to the market cities. A few car loads of wheat have been received at Omaha, Kansas City and other markets of the Central West, but the avalanche is not under way. The wheat crop of the Central West will be tremendous. If it does not break all previous records, it will come close to it. The corn also is in excellent condition and the same may be said of the cotton. There has been plentiful moisture all over the district. As the Central West depends almost entirely upon agriculture for its prosperity, the outlook is decidedly encouraging to all classes of business.

Predicts Bumper Crops

"Talk about fine crops," said R. C. Menefee, treasurer of the Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City, to a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER last week, "I have just returned to Kansas City from a trip down through Oklahoma almost to the Texas border, and I never saw better crops anywhere. The wheat harvest, a golden crop, is now on in full sway. Corn is in great condition; they will have the finest crop of broom corn ever seen in that state. Oats are in good shape and a large cotton yield is assured. The farmers are also now getting their second cutting of alfalfa. This year should be a banner one for the farmers of Oklahoma."

E. F. Swinney

E. F. Swinney, president of the First National Bank of Kansas City, is a great admirer and warm personal friend of President Taft. On a recent trip East Mr. Swinney was a guest of the president at the White House and played golf with him on two afternoons. Mr. Swinney was with the president during the most exciting hours of the Chicago convention. All of which lends credibility to the report from Washington that Mr. Swinney will be selected as treasurer of the republican national committee. The Kansas City banker disclaims any knowledge of this report and says he will not discuss it in advance of definite information. His friends in Kansas City believe that Mr. Swinney is President Taft's personal choice for the honor.

G. W. Robinson of Wichita

made an address on "The Bank and the Average Man," in the course of which he said: "It is safe to say that the average man has a very hazy idea of what a bank really is. Of course he knows that it is a place where he can put his savings and draw interest on them and he is also undoubtedly aware of the fact that the bank will handle his checking account and keep his bank book balanced every month. Further than this he has a vague, general impression that the bank does a lot of work in connection with money affairs, stocks and bonds, real estate mortgages and other things of the kind, but just why or how this is done he does not attempt to discover until the day arrives when necessity sends him to the bank for advice or help, usually to discover that had he known something about what the bank could do, he would have gone to it sooner and so have avoided much worry and the loss of time and money.

"In the first place, there is no reason why the average man should have any different feeling towards the banker and his business than he has towards any of the numerous business men with whom he comes in contact from day to day. The banker, while compelled by the necessities of his profession to employ the highest degree of exactitude in all his transactions, is no different from anyone else and is just as anxious to please his customers as any other business man could be. His work is of the highest importance and value to the community and includes many conveniences and accommodations without which the business world would be unable to progress.

"In addition to the general business of providing a safe depository for the savings of the average man and a convenient place for him to carry his checking account, the bank conducts a number of departments which, though used and understood by fewer people, are nevertheless of the most vital importance in the business economy of everyday life. The average man sometimes has occasion to seek safe and profitable investments for his surplus funds, and at such a time the experience and facilities of the bank are placed at his disposal and he receives, free of charge, advice without which he might fall into mistakes entailing heavy loss. There are plenty of investments constantly being offered to the average man, either through the newspapers and magazines or by his friends and acquaintances. Of these, a very small percentage are of any value at all, and if the average man made a point of consulting his banker before he put any money into highly advertised or recommended schemes there would be far less good money thrown away and far fewer dishonest promoters making an easy living from the ignorance or credulity of the general public. It will be seen that the average man, in not acquainting himself thoroughly with the workings of his bank, is making a mistake that is very likely, sooner or later, to cost him dear. It is a simple matter for him to avail himself of the opportunity offered by his banker and he will never fail to reap the reward of his foresight in some very material way."

Ohio

Columbus.—In an opinion rendered State Bank Superintendent Baxter, Attorney-General Hogan held that authorized banks in Ohio, now doing business, may increase their capital stock after duly obtaining authority from proper quarters, and may retain in the treasury whatever proportion of such increased stock as it desires. The superintendent of banking had expressed a fear that such issues of stock should be entirely subscribed, and that the retention of any portion of it in the company treasury would be illegal.

Columbus.—Lewis J. Murphy, former assistant cashier of the West Side Dime Savings Bank of this city, recently discovered to have been appropriating about $10,000 belonging to depositors for his own use in buying an auto and in theatre dinners and other high-life episodes, pleaded guilty to a charge of embezzlement in the common pleas court, and was given an indeterminate sentence to the Mansfield Reformatory.

The stockholders of the old Third National Bank, which institution was merged into the present Fifth-third National, are to receive a dividend of 6 per cent announced yesterday by the liquidating trustee. There are some remaining assets which are expected to yield a further substantial dividend in the future.

SOUTH CAROLINA BANKERS IN NEW YORK

New York, July 10.—The delegation of South Carolina bankers who arrived in this city on Monday night were the guests at a theatre party given in their honor by local bankers of prominence at Hammerstein's Victoria last night. Alexander D. Campbell, assistant cashier of the Hanover National, is in charge of the arrangements for the entertainment of the visiting bankers.

To-day the visitors will be the guests of the Hanover Bank at luncheon, and the opening of the new headquarters of the American Bankers Association will be an additional feature in which the guests are expected to participate. Later in the afternoon they will go to Coney Island and test the attractions of Luna Park as the guests of the Chase National, Hanover National, National Bank of Commerce, and the National Park Bank. The automobile tour of the city and the trip around Manhattan Island by boat, which had been planned originally for Tuesday, has been postponed until to-morrow.

following beautiful creed, which I am sure you will adopt if you have not already done so, and for which I am indebted to one of the large New York banks:

"We believe in our country—the United States of America. We believe in her Constitution, her laws, her institutions, and the principles for which she stands. We believe in her future—the past is secure. We believe in her vast resources, her great possibilities—yes, more, her wonderful certainties.

"We believe in the American people, their genius, their brain, and their brawn. We believe in their honesty, their integrity and dependability. We believe that nothing can stand in the way of their commercial advancement and prosperity.

"We believe that what are termed 'times of business depression' are but periods of preparation for greater and more pronounced commercial successes.

"And we believe that in our country are being worked out great problems, the solution of which will be for the benefit of all mankind."

DEVELOPING A COMMUNITY AN ART

George B. Irving, 1958 South Sawyer Avenue, Chicago, has made a wonderful success of better town promotion. He delivers lectures before engineering and commercial clubs, conducts membership campaigns for boosting committees, raises industrial funds for promoting the same, and furnishes schemes for municipal advertising and general community conservation. Among the places where he recently has conducted campaigns are Idaho Falls, Idaho, and DeKalb, Ill. He has published a booklet entitled "My Town, or Community Patriotism," intended to inspire community conservation through a commercial club organization. It gives his plan, for creating a model town, and placing its advantages before the entire public from which advantageous increase in population might be made. It is a very interesting volume, and is supplied at fifty cents, postpaid, with special prices to commercial clubs, and others in lots of one hundred, or more.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

F. M. Prince, president of the First National, says that if the Northwest harvests 80 per cent of the grain which is now promised, Minneapolis will have notable business activity this fall. Money rates are as low now as likely and may harden as the demand for crop money comes in, but there seems no likelihood that the rate will go beyond reasonable figures. E. L. Mattson, cashier of the Scandinavian American National, returned from a trip, says: "The rains which came with the opening of July were beneficial. The crop which is now indicated is big enough, if we get it in safely, to make business active throughout the Northwest, when it begins to come to market."

"The news that we get," continued Mr. Prince, "is of a nature to inspire confidence and create optimism. The crop which now stands in the fields of the Dakotas and Minnesota could undergo 20 per cent decline from present indication of yield and there would still be enough to insure a total the marketing of which will start activity all along the line. Every man that comes into the bank from the country wears a smile. That was not the case last year at this time."

"We also note an improvement in the lumber business. This is true here and in the West, and there is not so much southern lumber coming up here this year. I would not attempt to discuss the lumber trade in detail, but will leave that for men who are in that industry and understand it. But the lumber trade is an index, and if we are able to say that there is a better condition in it than was the case in the recent past, that is important as reflecting conditions which are felt or will probably be felt eventually in general business."

"The Minneapolis situation looks favorable to me. I see nothing to prevent a very satisfactory fall business in all lines, if we get the present crop or within a reasonable degree of the quantity that the present outlook promises."

Minnesota State Banks

State banks in Minnesota report a reduction in real estate holdings and in overdrafts. Both are ends which the state superintendent of banks, Kelsey S. Chase, has sought. The gain in banks since the February call is six, making a total of 747. Loans and discounts were on June 14th, $110,900,638, a gain of $6,633,029. Overdrafts are reduced from $393,405 to $336,384. The deposits show an increase from $118,037,691 to $123,866,908. Checks and cash items are given at $518,038, which is a decrease of $176,636. The gain in furniture and fixtures amounts to $78,646, leaving on the books $4,295,780. Capital has grown from $14,215,800 to $14,393,800 and surplus totals now $4,028,593 a gain of $245,462.

W. G. Edens in Minneapolis

W. G. Edens of the Central Trust, Chicago, came up a week ago again to look over the Pythian books. He is a member of the finance committee of the supreme lodge, and visits Minneapolis often on that account. Mr. Edens was a guest at a dinner given at the Minneapolis Club for the visitors.

Death of George C. Power

George C. Power, president of the Second National, is dead after a short illness from pneumonia. He was born in 1858 at Burlington, Iowa, and has lived in Minneapolis since 1862. He left the high school at fifteen to become messenger in the Merchants National, and at the end of twenty-six years was vice-president. In 1899 he became national bank examiner for Minnesota and Wisconsin, and January 1, 1902, president of the Second. He was active in national banking circles, in Y. W. C. A. and Y. M. C. A. work at St. Paul, and a trustee of the Wilder charities, also director in the Minnesota Mutual Life Insurance Company. He was skillful in handling the loans of the banks, and the losses were too small to be figured. When he took charge of the bank its capital was $200,000 and surplus $135,000. The bank has since declared a stock dividend of 100 per cent, and the capital is $400,000 and surplus above $500,000. Northwestern bankers attended the funeral Monday, and the state association, of whose executive council Mr. Power was a member three years, was represented by E. C. Armstrong, Albert Lea; L. A. Huntoon, Moorhead; A. G. Wedge, Jr., Bemidji; G. A. DuToit, Chaska; C. W. Gress, Cannon Falls. Active pall bearers were bank employees and the directors were the honorary bearers.

Prevents Bank Robbery

"Sdeath," murmured Assistant Cashier Frank Ferrin, First State Bank of Mantorville, Minn., through his teeth, at 5:30 P. M., July 1st. As he was closing the bank he found a three-foot hole in the corner of the steel-plated vault, reads a special telegram, which revealed the fact that burglars were going to blow up the safe. The deduction was strengthened by finding tools in a coal shed adjoining the wall of the vault. A watch was therefore placed on the vault, in human form, and nothing has been doing. Not even a suspicious character has appeared in all this time, notwithstanding the watch. C. D. Brown, the protective association detective, says the work was that of an expert. He had bored through three feet of masonry and was about ready to blow the safe when the work was found by Mr. Ferrin.

C. T. Jaffray Receives News of Brother's Death

E. G. Jaffray, brother of C. T. Jaffray, vice-president of the Minneapolis First National, is dead at Port Arthur, Canada. He was manager for the North American Live Stock Company's yards at Port Arthur. Once he was a member of the Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce and lived here twenty years. C. T. Jaffray is in England on a trip. There are two other brothers, at Windsor and Galt, Ont.

payment of 50 per cent of their deposits. At the time the bank was closed it was announced that the depositors would be paid in full and the remainder of the amount may be disbursed by fall.

The directors of the new State Savings Bank at Gladstone, Mich., have elected officers as follows: President, Webster L. Marble; vice-president, George L. Slining; second vice-president, W. A. Foss; cashier, Wilber W. Gasser; assistant, Floyd W. Marble.

The First National of Gilbert, Minn., has completed a deal for absorption of the First State Bank. It purchased the latter's building and will move in.

Bronze paper-weights showing its first building and the present structure are being distributed by the Merchants National, St. Paul, in commemoration of its fortieth anniversary. In 1872 the capital and surplus was $182,000 and the bank is now a $2,000,000 institution.

The report of the South Dakota state treasury at the close of business, June 30th, showed a total of $992,289.26 in all funds. The common school income fund carried $207,302.38, and is being rapidly paid out, which will materially reduce the total. The general fund has $441,118.07, and will carry the state on a cash basis until the receipts come in from the September call for taxes. The twine plant fund carried $85,966.89.

C. E. Paulson is president of the State Bank of Twin Lakes, Minn., which has been authorized to begin business with $10,000 capital. Ben Clement is cashier.

RETURNED FROM OHIO CONVENTION

William G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, who attended the sessions of the Ohio bankers' convention at Cedar Point last week, says that the address of President B. F. Harris of the Illinois association was so well received by the Ohio bankers that resolutions were adopted providing that the address be printed and circulated among the bankers of the Buckeye State. There was a good attendance and a strong program presented.

CHICAGO POLICEMAN STARTS BANK

Lieut. John Dawney of the Chicago police force has retired from that position and expects to start a bank to be known as the Dauphin Park Bank. He is reputed to have been the wealthiest policeman in the city, having extensive real estate holdings in various parts of Chicago. It is said that he is worth about $200,000. He often has been termed a "walking real estate office." Many pieces of property for which he paid but $50 were sold a year or so later for $500. He is but 45 years old, and retires on a pension of $75 per month. It is said that at one time or other he has held every lot in Dauphin Park.

Investment Bankers

Chairman Geo. B. Caldwell of the organization committee of the proposed Investment Bankers of America, has called a meeting of investment bankers at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York, at two P. M., August 8th. All of the applications for membership received by Secretary F. R. Fenton, First National Bank Building, Chicago, up to the date of holding that meeting will be considered charter members. The proposed constitution has had serious and expert attention and is as follows:

Preamble

Spokane

Spokane.—At a meeting of all the bankers located west of the Cascade Mountains, held on the steamer, Nisqually, and presided over by Robert Moody, of Everett, it was decided to form two groups in western Washington, similar to the groups already formed east of the mountains. The groups, to be known officially as Group 3 and Group 4 of the Washington Bankers Association, will be composed of, in the case of Group 3, all the banks from the north line of Pierce county to the state line in the South and the Pacific Ocean, and the Cascade Mountains in the West and East, and in Group 4, the banks north of the Pierce county line. Two committees composed of three men each from each of the two sections were appointed by the chairman, and in the near future meetings of the various banks will be called to organize, and to consider constitutions to be presented by the committees. The group east of the mountains have been very successful, holding two meetings annually to discuss subjects that are of vital interest to the particular section that they represent, but which might not be of enough general interest to warrant consideration in the annual convention of the association.

EDMONTON HAS RAPID GROWTH

Edmonton, Alta.—Edmonton has once again demonstrated that it is the most rapidly developing city of its class on the North American continent. Four hundred and fifty-four building permits, involving $2,584,535, were issued in June, as compared with $357,927 in June, 1911, and $233,570 in June, 1910. The permits issued the first six months this year mean a total expenditure of $7,762,022, as against $1,620,431 for the same period in 1911, and $1,154,576 for the first half of 1910. Building operations in 1911 amounted to $3,672,260 and $2,159,106 in 1910. The estimate for 1912 is $12,000,000.

Bank clearings in June (24 banking days) amounted to $17,135,856, as against $9,689,373 for the same month in 1911. Clearings for the first half of this year totaled $100,227,747, as compared with $51,820,696 for the same period a year ago. The total clearings in 1911 were $121,438,394 and $71,633,115 in 1910.

Wholesale and retail dealers in Edmonton report increases in trade amounting to more than 50 per cent during June over the same month in 1911. City and country property is active and prices are correspondingly higher than a year ago. Lands adapted to diversified farming near the city and lines of communication are in good demand at good figures. The building of new railway lines and the establishment and extension of branches into the interior and northern country, of which Edmonton is the key, is opening to development and settlement large areas of rich agricultural lands in the district and is the direct means of widening existing markets, as well as creating new ones in all lines of trade.

The discovery of natural gas at Tofield, Alta., 50 miles from here, where a well with a daily capacity of 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 cubic feet was tapped recently, means new industries for Edmonton and the surrounding country. The municipality of Tofield is arranging for the expenditure of $50,000 on a distributing plant. The city of Edmonton, the Board of Trade and the Citizens League are negotiating with several large firms in eastern Canada and in the state of Washington to establish factories and branch houses in the local industrial districts, where the municipality has 240 acres of land.

Natural gas at pressure, which experts say will insure a flow of from 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 cubic feet every 24 hours, was struck at Tofield, 50 miles southeast of Edmonton, on June 22d. The flow started at 1,054 feet. The well-drillers have been employed by the municipal corporation the last 12 months, the expense to date being $11,000. The discovery is of importance to Edmonton, meaning cheap fuel, light and power, and making possible an increased industrial development. The strike is the sixth within a year. The others were under light pressure and soon "petered" out, as predicted by experts. The present flow is said to be a permanent character, and will be developed.

West Virginia Takes up the Agricultural Problem

West Virginia imports nearly as much food-stuff as it produces.

At least 65 per cent of the food-stuffs consumed by towns and cities are imported.

Not over one-third of the products of our farms are sold, at least two-thirds being consumed on the farm.

The last two statements may be readily deduced from a consideration of production in relation to importation. The U. S. Department of Agriculture reports that for the last ten years an average of but 6 per cent of our corn was shipped out of the county where produced, 15 per cent of the wheat, and 4 per cent of the oats. This means that these crops are practically consumed on the farm. Of the $22,672,083 produced by the five crops named, probably not over $5,000,000 is sold from the farms, as against nearly $10,000,000 worth of the same crops imported from outside the state. Of the total farm products of the state, probably not over one-third are sold off the farm, or about $20,000,000, as compared with $50,000,000 paid for imported food.

About one-third of the amount of food-stuffs now imported might be raised on our farms without increasing the acreage, and with an increased profit per acre, by the use of better methods so as to give a larger yield per acre.

In short, with an increased profit per acre, we might increase the production of the land now in use by at least $15,000,000 per year; this could be done indefinitely, and the system of farming which would produce such crops would tend to improve the land much more than at present.

We make a great ado over our production of oil and gas, each of which is worth about $17,000,000 annually, which goes into relatively few hands, while we have overlooked the fact that an equal amount of wealth might be added to the state by increasing our agricultural production on land now tilled.

"But," you say "is this really possible? Is this not merely the day-dream of a college professor?" I assure you that it is entirely feasible, and that the figures of possible increased production are purposely extremely conservative. The fact is, as is well known to those who have observed farming and farmers, that if the best methods now in use were used by all our farmers the production could be doubled or trebled.

However, let us examine the facts concerning a few crops, and seek their significance.

Production May Be Greatly Increased

Corn is our leading crop, and produces about one-third of our crop values. The average yield per acre was 25.3 bushels per acre in 1899, which was a good year. According to reports of West Virginia farmers to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, it cost them \$16.21 an acre to raise corn, their yield averaging 34.7 bushels. This would leave them a profit of \$4.61 per acre with corn at 60 cents. It costs practically as much to raise 25 bushels as 37 bushels, but the smaller crop pays only wages for labor and interest on the land but no profit. Most of you would call a nine-ounce ear of corn a "nubbin," as it is only $6\frac{3}{4}$ inches long; but if we could get but one such "nubbin" on but one stalk in a hill, with hills $3\frac{1}{2} \times 3\frac{1}{2}$ feet, we would secure the average yield per acre for the state. Any farmer would resent it if you insinuated that he could not get two such ears per hill, but two per hill would yield 47 bushels per acre.

The fact is that most of our farmers are planting seed that will not germinate, and so secure but half a stand. The cost of production of 25 or 47 bushels per acre is practically the same, but the former or average yield means no profit, while the latter means $11 profit; at least $5 per acre may be realized from the simple process of testing the seed corn. That the yield can be increased is shown by the fact that in Randolph county, whose average yield is 34 bushels per acre, two men last year produced over 100 bushels per acre. There is not a piece of land in the state fit for corn that will not produce 40 bushels per acre if rightly handled.

Furthermore, when we study the statistics as regards maintenance of fertility, it is evident that the soil is being mined and not farmed, for there is no return to it of the plant food removed. It is evident that our farmers have not come to appreciate the profitableness of commercial fertilizers. Neither are they maintaining fertility by barnyard manure, for the live-stock kept are entirely inadequate to return more than a fraction of the fertility to the land, and fully half the manure is wasted.

There can be no question, therefore, that, through use of better seed, deeper plowing, fertilization, and cultivation, the yield of corn can be very greatly increased, with corresponding profit.

The same is true of our hay crop. According to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, the average yield for West Virginia from 1896 to 1905 was 1.34 tons per acre, and from 1903 to 1908 it was 1.44 tons per acre. In 1909-10 it dropped to 1.25 tons, but according to the thirteenth census was only .9 ton per acre. Obviously, it is entirely possible to increase the yield to 1.3 tons per acre. On the experiment station farm at Morgantown, land which when bought produced not over half a ton per acre now produces three tons per acre at a good profit.

We are importing nearly $1,000,000 worth of dried beans per annum, and producing less than 10 per cent of that amount. The yield per acre in 1909 was less than half that of 1899 for the United States.

Nearly 2,000,000 bushels of potatoes are imported; yet there is no finer country for potatoes than many of our upland counties, a few of which could produce all now consumed in West Virginia, and have some left for export.

Returns from three towns showed importation of 27,680 cases of eggs, valued at $323,700. It is known that this is but a small per cent of the eggs imported. The census shows that there are but 37 fowls per farm in West Virginia, while Pennsylvania, Ohio and Maryland average 64 per farm. This state is admirably adapted to poultry; and if the number could be doubled it would increase the net revenue to the state by something over $3,000,000, and we would have no occasion to import eggs.

Sufficient has been said to show that our agricultural production may be greatly increased on land now tilled, and were it necessary corroboration might be secured from the results of scores and hundreds of West Virginia farmers who are securing high yields by the use of brain rather than brawn.

But besides increasing our yields we need the development of hundreds of thousands—even millions—of acres now not farmed or practically undeveloped. West Virginia has room for several times her present rural population, which unfortunately is decreasing instead of increasing in the best agricultural counties of the state.

The High Cost of Living Affects All Industries

Furthermore, we are all feeling the increased cost of living. Statisticians tell us that prices will probably be higher in the future, and that if our production does not very materially increase the next generation in this country will not produce more than it consumes. This increased cost of living falls more heavily on the poor than the rich, and affects wages and values in all lines of business. Increased production of gold may cause high prices; but we know that prices will surely rise if crops fail. Therefore, ample crops are a fundamental factor in determining the cost of all business.

Thus agriculture is of importance to the business world, both as one of our three leading industries contributing to the wealth of the state, and because it is a large factor in determining the living conditions of the workers in all occupations.

The Agricultural Problem One for Business Men

It is unnecessary to carry this discussion further. The figures quoted speak for themselves, and need no argument to convince this body of business men that it is high time that business men take hold of the agricultural problem as a business proposition.

During the last two or three years, many of the state bankers associations have taken a keen interest in supporting state and national campaigns for better agriculture. As usual, this movement did not originate in states which most needed agricultural development, but in the great farming states of Illinois, Minnesota and North Dakota. This movement of

Des Moines, July 10.—S. T. Shade, president of the Iowa Bankers Association, will probably increase the number of committees when he completes the list upon which he is now working. While in the city for two days last week, Mr. Shade consulted with Secretary Hall anent this subject. It is anticipated that the committees will be exceptionally strong. President Shade has considered the appointment of a program committee which will be in charge of the program at the state convention next year. He has also considered the naming of an enlarged legislative committee. This will include, if the plan is carried out, the usual legislative committee and in addition a representative from each group. The legislature meets next winter and this committee will be of greatest importance. Secretary Hall, however, is inclined to doubt the advisability of a committee so large. In sessions gone by, bankers have not always been successful in exerting influence in favor of legislation. Witness the present taxation law for instance. A smaller committee might be better able to secure legislation which the bankers need, Mr. Hall believes. One new committee will be an obituary committee. Heretofore, the secretary has not been able to gather entirely accurate information relative to the death record of bank officials and directors. Mr. Shade will name a committee which will assist in this work. Secretary Hall is sending out letters urging the bankers to send in full reports of deaths with date of birth, name of bank and date of death. In this way it will be possible to keep the obituary record more complete than ever before. President Shade will name a new time lock committee. It is anticipated that the committee will be ready for publication within a short time.

Bold Attempt at Bank Robbery

Charles Clark, aged 15, a lad who apparently has confined his literary pursuits to reading the life and adventures of Jesse James, made a desperate and foolhardy attempt to rob the bank at Rome near Mount Pleasant last Friday afternoon, and paid for his folly with his life. Just as Cashier J. N. Heilmann was putting away the money for the day, Young Clark drove up, left his horse and buggy in front of the bank and strode into the institution. "Throw up your hands," he shouted, as he levelled a revolver at the cashier's head. As the bewildered cashier complied, Clark grabbed $800 in money and backed out the door, shooting Heilmann through the left arm on the way out. Once outside, Clark leaped into the buggy and started off with his horse on the dead run. A crowd gathered and within a few minutes was in hot pursuit. Two automobiles full of armed men overtook the boy, who abandoned the horse and buggy and took to the fields, stopping to fire at his pursuers as he ran. One shot, fired point blank at an automobile full of men, caught J. J. Loughlin through the shoulder and another shot William Basham through the abdomen. After several shots were fired, the young desperado fell mortally wounded. It was found that he had a dozen bullets in his body, one of which had pierced his heart. Four revolvers were found on his clothes. The money was recovered.

E. J. Curtin Presented with Gavel

E. J. Curtin, of Decorah, former president of the I. B. A., at last has his gavel, a fine solid ivory token of the esteem in which he is held by the members of the association. The gavel was not finished when the state convention met, so it was not sent to Mr. Curtin until a week ago. The former president writes that he has placed the gavel in his home so that his children may use it in pointing out to visitors "what a great man their father once was." Incidentally Mr. and Mrs. Curtin are off for Yellowstone Park for a month. At Decorah there is a whist club of eight couples which has played the game for sixteen years and not a couple has dropped out. Mr. and Mrs. Curtin belong. This club has a special car and the entire party makes up the group at the Yellowstone.

Fourth of July Prank

A fake bank robbery at Mitchellville was one of the events of the July Fourth celebration there. This is something new in the way of Fourth of July amusements but it at least has the quality of being original and unique. The Mitchellville City Bank was opened for business on the Fourth to accommodate the country patrons. Suddenly three masked men drove up in automobiles, darted into the bank, dashed behind the counter and grabbed three sacks of money which they conveyed to the automobile, at the same time keeping up a heavy fire from their big revolvers. The latter were pointed upwards, however. The scheme worked well, and when the automobile started down the streets with the artillery in full swing, it was a most excited crowd which followed. The city marshal gave chase with a hastily formed posse. A few miles out the men were captured. They were brought back to Mitchellville and unmasked. Then it developed that the trio were prominent Mitchellville business men. It was a great joke and was highly enjoyed.

Calls Attention to Protective Department

Secretary P. W. Hall is sending out letters calling the attention of the members of the I. B. A. to the splendid showing made in the quick arrest and conviction of the bank robbers who did the Cylinder job. He calls attention to the fact that the I. B. A. has sent five desperate yeggs over the road in the past six months and reminds the bankers to have their burglary insurance written through the association as, in that way, the commission goes into the protective fund to enable the officers to continue the good work of catching crooks.

Resignation of A. Piatt Andrew

Iowa bankers have been interested in the resignation of A. Piatt Andrew from the treasury department and his letter attacking Secretary MacVeagh. Andrew was in Des Moines in company with Senator Nelson A. Aldrich when the latter was a guest of the Des Moines Bankers Club two years ago. Homer A. Miller, president of the Iowa National of Des Moines, was born at LaPorte, Ind., the native town of Andrew. Mr. Miller regards Mr. Andrews as a man of ability, although he says that since he came to Iowa he has not kept in close touch with either the retiring treasury official or his family.

Gain in Clearings

Des Moines bank clearings made a gain of nearly two million dollars for the month of June, as compared with the total clearings for June last year. Of course, the members of the clearing house association are well pleased at this showing. The total for the month was $18,129,541.95 this year, which is $1,841,190.53 greater than last year. Totals for the final week in June totaled $4,087,507.99, an increase over the corresponding week last year of $752,070.29.

Changes in German Savings of Des Moines

Important changes were made in the German Savings of Des Moines at the annual meeting held Monday afternoon. John Cavanagh, president of the Valley Junction Savings at Valley Junction, completed the purchase of 260 shares of stock held by the estate of the late James Watt and was made vice-president, succeeding James O'Donnell. The latter retires to look after his interest in other banks in the vicinity of Des Moines. Ill health is a factor in his retirement. Charles M. Weitz was made director, succeeding C. Huttenlocher. The usual 8 per cent dividend was declared. Mr. Cavanagh's election as vice-president will be of material assistance to the German Savings. He is one of the most popular of the younger business men and has been conspicuously successful as president of the Valley Junction institution and of the Rippey State at Rippey. Jesse O. Wells remains as president of the institution and John Hogan remains as cashier.

Iowa Banking News

Although the courts held that a codicil to the will of the late Oliver H. Perkins bequeathing 100 shares of stock in the Des Moines Savings to Mrs. Eliza A. Roscoe of Dover Plains, N. Y., was invalid because not witnessed, the administrator has chosen to grant the bequest as intended by the testator. Mrs. Roscoe accordingly receives the bank stock, $10,000 in cash and $700 annuity. The recipient is required to pay the collateral inheritance tax on the $10,000. She is a niece of the deceased.

Polk county is in earnest in going after the taxes which the supervisors claim are owing here by parties who have removed to the West or out of the state. E. C. Worthington, who was put out of a job when Iowa abolished the tax ferret law, has been put in charge of the collections. He will put six clerks to work. He declares that he will collect not less than a cool million dollars from the "expatriates." Of this amount he gets ten per cent.

Simon Casady, president of the Central State, Des Moines, has been named to administer the estate of George and James Hanley of Granger. These two men were killed when the automobile in which they were riding en route from Chicago home was struck by a Northwestern train near Geneva. Both the Hanley brothers and Mr. and Mrs. Nils Anderson, who were with them, were killed. It is estimated that their estate is worth close to a million dollars. The four victims were exceptionally popular at Granger and because of the accident occurring just before July 4th, the celebration which Granger had planned for Independence Day was abandoned.

By JOHN J. BIDDISON.

The wheat, oats, rye and barley crops in South Dakota are made. Nothing but an intervention of Providence now is likely to interfere with the production of the biggest corn crop the state ever saw. The hay is excellent, alfalfa booming, business picking up steadily. This encouraging word, passed around among the financial interests of Sioux City, the alien metropolis of the Gopher state, means much, for South Dakota was hard hit by the two successive droughts that visited large parts of it, and caused an exodus of homesteaders. Much land that became a drug on the market has gone into the hands of speculators, but the crop yield will bring thousands back to the state, in the opinion of keen observers, and South Dakota will be more confident than ever before.

The uniformly promising crop prospects, not only in South Dakota but in Iowa and Nebraska, have served to counteract the customary slump of the heated term, and bankers report a substantial business, largely induced by a picking up in the wholesale and retail trade.

W. A. Schaetzel, president of the Union County Bank, Elk Point, S. D., was transacting business at the First National, Monday.

enlisting the bankers of the country in agricultural campaign chiefly has been fathered by Joseph Chapman, Jr., vice-president of the Northwestern National of Minneapolis, and B. F. Harris, president of the Illinois Bankers Association. These men have spoken on this matter before state and national associations, and have aroused widespread interest among bankers throughout the country. I recently corresponded with the secretaries of all the state associations to learn what they are doing in this matter. Replies were received from thirty-three states. Sixteen have active committees at work. Eight states are discussing the subject at their annual meetings now being held, and expect to appoint committees on agriculture. Two states have had the subject presented at their annual and group meetings, while seven have given it no attention.

Last August, at the invitation of the Minnesota Bankers Association, there was held in Minneapolis the First Annual Conference of the Bankers' Committee on Agricultural Development and Education. Eighty men were present from eight states. The proceedings have been published, and form an admirable digest of the whole subject. As a result, the "banker-farmers," as President Harris calls them, from twenty-four states met at New Orleans, and secured the appointment of a permanent committee on agricultural development and education by the great American Bankers Association. A call has now been issued for a second conference to be held August 7th, at which representatives are expected from at least twenty states.

Just how this agricultural development shall be brought about is a very large subject, which demands serious consideration. Doubtless some of you are aware of the work which your state college of agriculture and agricultural experiment station are doing, and I trust you may become better acquainted with it in the future.

It is not my purpose to presume to suggest to you any program of work in the support of agriculture. With the facts before you, I am certain that you will feel the importance of associating yourselves actively with every legitimate effort for bettering West Virginia farming. I trust that you may see fit to appoint a committee on agricultural development and education, who shall be empowered to thoroughly investigate the agricultural needs of our state, to attend the national conference at Minneapolis, and to recommend to your executive committee any legislation which they feel should have the support of this association.

I cannot better close this address than by quoting the last sentence of an address of Mr. Harris, president of the Illinois association, on a similar occasion, when he said: "Effort and money spent in this cause will be the most marvelous earning asset of a magnificent future, not in dollars only, but in a contended, successful people, constituting an industrial and agricultural republic, peaceful and prosperous beyond compare and in political repose."

No state in the Union has a brighter future than West Virginia, providing that her agriculture is developed on a par with her other industries. No state or country has permanently succeeded which has not fully developed its agriculture. Prosperous farmers, well-tilled farms, good crops, reasonable prices, are necessary for industrial prosperity, and form the only adequate basis for the social well-being of all classes in both city and country.

BANK FEES INADEQUATE

Louisville, Ky.—In an address to the national and state bank examiners of this district Percy H. Johnston, examiner for Kentucky, said that the fees of examiners paid under the law of 1863 are not adequate, and force the examiners to make hurried examinations to earn a living. He urged straight salaries and expense allowances. These recommendations will be reported to President Taft by Comptroller Murray and sent to congress.

BANK MERGER IN SAVANNAH

The comptroller of the currency has announced the voluntary liquidation of the National Bank of Augusta, Ga., to be consolidated with the Citizens and Southern Bank of Savannah, Ga.

REPORTS TO COMPTROLLER

Washington.—Comptroller Murray says that a review of reports received by his office in response to circular issued June 1st show "that many essential features to a thorough understanding of the banks' affairs are not covered." He has issued a circular incorporating eleven suggestions as indicating what his office wants.

the active side of the bank would not meet the absolute loss constantly accruing on the savings deposit side of the bank.

By reason of the liquidation of this large amount of deposits invested at home, in home business paper, as the case might be, and its reinvestment in a class of securities which probably could only be purchased abroad, the bank would promptly find itself unable to meet the home demand for loans. The bank would be compelled to deny its business depositor the accommodations he was accustomed to getting, because of the fact that they were short of funds. The customer would speedily find a new bank to deal with and the business customer and depositor would be lost to the institution. That is to say, the bank's ability to take care of its customers and the business in its locality would be reduced probably not less than one-half by the stroke of the pen which would approve such a law.

Again, in what amount would this be likely to affect the banks? Our New England friends speak of this matter in a very light mood, as though what they call "savings deposits" were insignificant in amount, yet an examination of the statistics shows that in almost every state in the Union, the so-called savings deposits equal or exceed one-half of the total of all deposits. The monetary commission has ascertained that "savings deposits" include practically all of the classes of deposits I have mentioned above, and in classifying the different kinds of deposits I find that the total called "savings deposits" of the monetary commission is approximately the total of all these different classes of deposits which I have mentioned above.

In the state of West Virginia the monetary commission reports twenty-four millions of savings deposits, and the probabilities are that a proper examination of the state statistics would show that deposits, classified as they are by the monetary commission and the parents of segregation, would reach a total of at least thirty millions, which would be a very considerable proportion of the deposits of your state. Indeed, the comparative statistics of general deposits and savings deposits as reported by the monetary commission show that the so-called "savings deposits" which the monetary commission makes to include all deposits bearing interest, is in excess of one-half of the grand total of all deposits. So, for instance, in the report of the monetary commission for 1909, the grand total of individual deposits, subject to check is seven billions, and the grand total of savings deposits is about six billions and a half, but the former amount should be reduced by the amount upon which interest is paid by national banks on check accounts, and the latter should be increased by the same amount as also by amounts representing interest paid on cashiers', treasurers' or secretaries' checks, and especially on demand certificates of deposit, which may be written on demand, but upon which interest is payable. These changes would make the total of so-called savings deposits greater than the total of general deposits, and indicates that throughout the United States, even looking through the eyes of the monetary commission, "savings deposits," as they would be affected by a segregation law, would mean at least half and probably more than half of the total deposits in the United States.

Not having the exact amount of deposits of all classes I would not be able to give the percentage, but at any rate it would mean in the state of West Virginia that at least half of the general total of your deposits would have to be withdrawn from the present method of use by the banks and invested in the new method; that more than thirty millions of money now invested in large degree in business paper, discounts, loans to industrial enterprises, merchants and business operations, investments in the bonded indebtedness or other indebtedness of local enterprises not municipal or state, would have to be reduced in the amount of thirty millions of dollars, and those thirty millions of dollars would have to be sent abroad to buy the peculiar kind of securities which these wise men of the East would compel the bankers of West Virginia to invest in. The state of West Virginia and the banks of West Virginia cannot afford to deprive the state and local interests of the sum of thirty millions of dollars, and the taking out of that amount from the state through the agency of the banks would mean a scarcity of funds of such magnitude in every banking institution as to compel them to revolutionize their business.

If every banker of the state of West Virginia realized the situation in which the proposed plan of segregation would put his state, he would sit up at night to prevent it.

It is fair to say that the law committee of the A. B. A. has seen some light on this phase and say, "The investment standards of many states seem to be impracticable in operation; as, for example, those of Pennsylvania, Missouri, Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota and West Virginia."

Again, how would this proposed plan affect the state as a business community? The withdrawal of a great percentage of the deposits of all the banks from local investment and the sending of such funds to remote points for investment would immediately put upon merchants, industries, etc., etc., the necessity of paying in whole or in large part their loans to the banks. It would debar them in large degree from ability to discount their current paper. It would make it impossible for the general mass of merchants and business men to obtain sufficient accommodations for their business in their own state; would compel them to go abroad to endeavor to get some portion of the money back to the state, by borrowing what was sent out of the state under the process of this law; and if their credit, which, while good at home might not be established abroad, was not sufficient to enable them to obtain such loans, it would mean the closing of the doors of the industrial plants, the abandonment of business by the merchants and the cessation in large degree of every useful activity which goes to build up a state. It would be a mistake to imagine these statements to be either exaggerations or not founded upon facts. Any gentleman who will take the trouble to analyze the conditions, understand the statistics and use his grey matter for a very short period will see that the effect upon the business interests of the state would necessarily be ruinous.

Take the illustration of an industrial institution. Manufacturers as a rule are dependent for a certain proportion, and usually a large proportion, of working capital upon their ability to make loans from the banks, or upon their ability to discount their business paper promptly, thereby securing from the earnings of their business sufficient funds to renew the output from time to time as required. Under this method their loans in part would have to be called and they would have to settle. Their discounts would have to be largely diminished because the banks would not have the money. Employees would be put in a seemingly hostile attitude to the conduct of the business, for this reason, that under present conditions the factory pays out large amounts for labor. The laborer monthly pays his household expenses and other current bills and prudently puts the rest into the bank for the rainy day. The bank takes the aggregate of these deposits, reloan it to the factory or discounts the factory's bills, and these moneys make an unbroken chain, benefitting the factory, benefitting the laborer and benefitting the bank and all persons allied to any one of these classes.

Under the proposed law, as soon as the laborer's money goes into the bank, notwithstanding he has earned it in the community, and notwithstanding the industries of the community depend upon it for continued assistance, and notwithstanding the laborer's interests are all with the factory which supports him, yet the bank is compelled by these wise doctors to take his money and send it to New York, Philadelphia or Chicago and buy government bonds or state bonds or other securities, the result of which is that the funds deposited by the laboring class or the artisan class, whether in small or in large amounts, is forcibly taken from the community where it belongs without benefitting the depositor and bringing distress, if not worse, upon the whole business community.

These conditions are so apparent and plain that it needs merely the mention of them to convince a reasonable mind that the plan is a plan of a theorist and can receive no encouragement from the practical mind, that depends upon its toil for its living, and that knows that in order to live it must directly or indirectly give aid to the employer who offers the opportunity for labor.

Again, this lack of funds so occasioned in any community necessarily will raise the rate of interest, and the extra moneys must come from abroad. This will not only be a hardship upon the manufacturer and the borrower, or the discounter, but will have the effect of making the large bond houses, the brokers' houses of the great metropolitan cities, a clearing house or place of exchange, upon which directly or indirectly every rural community in the United States will depend for funds in order to conduct the modest business which heretofore they have conducted with the funds of their own community in their own way. Perhaps there is method in the great interest taken by some metropolitan bankers in urging this scheme.

I think I have heard somewhere something unpleasant said about Wall Street. The present banking system, with its reserve requirements, its lack of short time domestic bills and the consequent flood of idle money to

New York, has made and maintains Wall Street, and the provisions of this bill will double its iniquities.

It is difficult to conceive of a greater condition of financial entanglement and distress than must necessarily follow the taking of large amounts from a community where it has been earned and properly belongs and sending it to some other locality for them to farm out at an advanced rate of interest, leaving the community to which it rightfully belongs destitute and prostrate.

It is apparent then that, thinking along these lines, it can be demonstrated in any case, that to the banker, to the manufacturer, to the merchant, to the professional man, to the artisan, to the laborer, to everybody in every community, this new process of business methods would be injurious, distressful and destructive.

The worst end of this bill is the matter of investment of these funds. An examination of the statistics of the different states, which can readily be arrived at, will astonish any person who has never inquired. In the state of Pennsylvania, as I have said, the enactment of this law, with our present law regulating the investment of mutual savings banks, would take from the business interests of that state approximately four hundred millions of dollars and send it abroad, for which in return we would get as many restricted investments as the principal and premium of such bonds would permit us to buy, and would realize probably an average of three to three and a quarter per cent, which it is plain would make it impossible for us to do business; and, on the other hand, the sum of four hundred millions would be taken from the body of our people, who need every dollar of it, and be sent abroad, out of its natural channel.

These features alone are of danger to the banks, and the danger to the community from the enactment of any such bill ought to be enough to make every banker give heed and not treat this matter as a mere academic discussion for the amusement of an idle hour. This scheme may go through congress without an apparent opposition. A bill for the purpose has been offered, and yet if the law is enacted, every national bank will find itself in an alarming position, and every state bank should immediately see to it that these philosophic visionaries do not succeed in forcing their plans through the state legislature.

New York, Pennsylvania, and a number of other states have already met this movement and defeated it. In some portions of the West the legislators, seeing only a pretty thing, have passed it. If, however, the law is passed either in state or nation, and is interpreted by the courts as it only can be interpreted, and under such legal interpretation is enforced by the state banking departments and the controller of the currency, the banks and communities of the country will wake up when it is too late to find themselves very, very badly hurt.

In the so-called "proposition" on page 16 it is provided that "in states in which there are already savings bank investment laws the provision should be that the loans and investments of the deposits in the savings department shall be governed by the statutes relating to the investment of deposits in savings banks." These gentlemen make no effort to harmonize the laws in the different states, nor do they make any effort to procure a uniform law throughout the state; in consequence, in each state, if this plan or anything similar is adopted, there will be two standards for investment.

First. Investments dictated by act of congress for the national banks; and, Second. Investments dictated by the state legislature for state institutions.

It will be readily seen from this that confusing results are bound to follow.

If the act of congress is more liberal in the character of investments than the act of the state legislature, the national banks will have a manifest advantage over their state brethren. If the state legislature (which is more likely to happen) enacts a state law more liberal in its character than the act of congress prescribed them, the state institutions will have a manifest advantage over the national banks.

Under such circumstances the state institutions may be in position, without injury to themselves, to offer a higher rate of interest for deposits than the national banks would be able to do, and in consequence the national bank would lose very largely in deposits of this characted, and if the act of congress were more favorable than the state act then the state banks or trust companies would correspondingly suffer at the hands of the national banks. However slight the difference of advantage, it would be sufficient to give one class or the other a serious advantage over its competitor of a different class.

Again, banks located near state borders would be seriously interfered with by the legislation in the adjoining state, which would enable their neighboring state to offer to depositors a higher rate of interest occasioned by a more liberal legislation upon the subject of investments.

That this is certain to happen is manifest by glancing over the laws as they now apply in many states to the regulation of savings institutions, with reference to their investments. If the advice of the gentlemen who present the "proposition" is followed, then some states would have a preponderant advantage over others, as it will be noticed that in some states the savings bank law puts no restrictions whatever upon investments, in other states permits them to invest in almost anything, and in some states makes the restrictions so strong that they are confined to national, state and municipal securities.

Under any circumstances, it is more than likely that in your state the state enactment will vary with the act of congress and probably, or at least possibly, will be more favorable than the act of congress, under which circumstances a state institution would have a very serious advantage over the national banks.

If segregation is necessary or advisable, it can only be accomplished successfully by such legislation as in the first place will not take the money of every locality away from that locality, but by legislation which will enable the financial institutions to invest their money in home affairs to the limit of the needs of the home territory.

Again, if legislation is enacted it ought to be identically the same, both national and state, and should be enacted at the same time so that no logical or geographic advantages could be obtained by one class of institutions over another, or by one territory or state over any of the other sister states of the Union.

Segregation in so far as it intends the separation of accounts of different classes, and even of the separation of the investments made from the moneys deposited to such accounts, is not objectionable, provided, that one class of depositors is not preferred to another, either during the period of the running of the account or in liquidation, and investments are not too greatly restricted. Thus far everybody will probably favor segregation, but this is not what the doctors want.

What is all this for? The movement originated in the feeling among eastern mutual savings bank people that national banks, state banks and trust companies, by paying interest to depositors, were invading their territory. It was fostered and furthered by the same interests in their battle against the postal savings system. It was finally championed by theorists who to-day know that their plan is in part impracticable, and if put in country-wide operation would be disastrous. Business selfishness and ignorance of conditions are not good foundations to build on, and already a very modest investigation finds the structure crumbling before it is completed, and yet the conditions were open to sight if they had not been wilfully blind.

Segregation is one problem; investment is quite another. They couple the two and try to force results. The result must be disaster. Their minds seem bound up by the petty environments of savings bank methods. They seem incapable of a broader, better view, and can only progress in a rut worn deep by their ancestors' ancestors. A gentleman very high in their councils some time since said:

"Slight readjustment will transform our commercial banks, trust companies, etc., into savings banks." So the fox in the fable thought a slight readjustment in the matter of tails would vastly improve his neighbors. But we don't want to be transformed. We have learned the lessons of the years. Recent events have demonstrated the fallacies and weak points of statutory investments, as well as the superiority of moneyed capital to respectability as a security to depositors.

You cannot divorce the individual from the community. Mutual assistance is the only key to prosperous community life. Amputate a limb and preserve it eternally in alcohol if you will, but you have destroyed the efficiency of the body none the less. The seeing of visions and the dreaming of dreams as you tramp along on life's highway is very delightful—until the dreamer stubs his toe on some obstinate and obtruding fact. Keep to the middle of the way and wide awake. Adapt yourselves to new conditions, but don't expect the millennium to-morrow. Poetry is a pleasant diversion for the idle hour, but poor collateral to business experiments.

American banking is a natural growth from the soil of popular need. It is not an experiment or product of greed. It is ruled by experience and curbed and controlled by public demand. It is the finest exhibit of morality in business, and the most notable illustration of fidelity to trust. It is greatest in the efficiency and honesty of its agents, and weakest in the weakness of its statutory control. It has built up communities, and communities have given it faith and strength. It has built up a great nation by its integrity, its adaptability, its wisdom and its power. It will always tread where wisdom leads, but will not follow a will-o'-the-wisp. It will not tear down what it has builded at fancy's call—nor go back to the weakness of childhood, and be garbed in swaddling clothes at the beck or nod of those who do not understand or appreciate its virtues.

There is reason in the thought of separation of deposits. This we have maintained from the beginning. Two classes of depositors, one demand, and the other time, may cause fear in an emergency, and be fruitful of trouble. Experiences differ. But there is much of reason in this view. Segregation, if by that term is meant separation and classification of deposits, is not only not objectionable but laudible, but when it comes to the investment of separated funds there is no reason for novel or forced methods. The needs of the community must first be cared for and then such investments as the wisdom of tried boards of directors shall order. The reason impelling statutory investments for savings banks has no application here. No legislative body can improve on the wisdom of experience and practice.

If separation of deposits seems desirable on this basis, every bank can enforce it by its own act without statute. If separation and investment—sometimes called segregation—is desired to be enforced by statute, the way is open and easy for its accomplishment.

A way fair to all classes of financial institutions, and just to all depositors—a way which will not disturb the finances of the country nor ruin either bank, depositor or community.

First. Establish by law the class of interest bearing deposits which shall be segregated.

Second. Establish by law a uniform and liberal class of investments for such fund, as liberal as the needs of the communities require and as business wisdom and solvency demands.

Third. Provide by law that all other assets shall in liquidation be for the benefit of other depositors, until they shall have received a percentage equal to that received by the segregated depositors—and after that all classes shall share pro rata to the limit of assets and to the limit of their claims.

These laws to be enacted simultaneously in state and nation, and covering all capitalized depository corporations, state or national.

This outlines a complete system of segregation: Easy of construction; free from legal uncertainties; preservative of all interests; just to all interests, and accomplishing the utmost desires of the idealist, while it may receive the consent of conservative thinking people.

I regret that time will not permit me to take up other features of this phase. I have already transgressed and apologize for the transgression. I also apologize to the "doctors" if I have seemed unkind. They mean well, but it is difficult to be entirely polite to one who is throwing lighted cigarettes in your gasoline tank, even if he "didn't know it was loaded."

NOW AND THEN HE'S A K. P.

William G. Edens spent Friday and Saturday of last week in Minneapolis attending the annual meeting of the finance committee of the Supreme Lodge of the Knights of Pythias, of which he is a member. An examination of the financial affairs of this big fraternal organization developed the fact that they have $100,000 in their surplus fund, and everything is in good shape for the twenty-seventh biennial convention to be held in Denver, beginning August 6th. Mr. Edens says that Minneapolis bankers with whom he talked are well satisfied with crop prospects in Minnesota and the Dakotas, as well as in the Northwest generally, which makes them feel confident as to future business conditions.

REFERRED TO SAVINGS BANK SECTION

Pottsville, Pa., July 12.—Arrested for the nonpayment of a debt and about to be taken to prison, John Yann, of Mt. Pleasant, told the officers that he would pay the bill in full.

Yann secured a pick and led them to the mountainside in the rear of his home, where he dug up $700 in savings in an old jar. The bill was speedily paid, and the man released.

Yann said he knew of several instances where friends who were afterward killed, had concealed money in considerable sums in the same manner, and added that this will never be found, unless by the rarest accident.

MANY prominent western members of the council have expressed themselves as favoring an eastern man for that high station this year. At the same time they generally put in a saving clause, "and for Joe Chapman next year."

ORDINARILY this is taken to mean that the western members are for Cogswell of Albany or for Joseph Wayne, Jr., of Pennsylvania. The interests of the former have been more advanced in this section than have those of the latter.

THERE ought to be an interesting and friendly contest at Detroit if Cogswell, Wayne and Davis (and any other who may wish) all go into the race, without too much personal anxiety shown.

RECENT elections have indicated that the members will not be driven or badgered into supporting a man by personal appeals, by signed petitions or by solicited telegrams. Ability, character, experience and standing in the banking world are the principal assets of a good candidate.

NONE but the very highest type of men have succeeded to the chairmanship within recent years, and many having the best interests of the A. B. A. at heart believe that all future elections will be based upon merit. This is as it should be.

D. C. WILLS, former chapter-man and now cashier of the Diamond National, Pittsburgh, is the new Pennsylvania member of the Big Council. He will not be a strictly "silent partner," being full of initiative with a very active, follow-up mind.

WE all have lost a friend in the death of George C. Power. His loss will be felt keenly in St. Paul, for he was just as dependable and likeable as men ever get to be. His name was connected with every forward movement, both civic and moral, in the past ten years.

CHAIRMAN ARTHUR REYNOLDS passed through Chicago en route to the meeting of the committee of administration at New York. The details of the big Detroit convention will be passed upon.

COUNSELOR GREENE, of Moline, was in also. He says "all hats off to B. F. Harris. He's done more than all of us put together."

MR. GREENE is an ex-president of the Illinois Bankers Association and says it's no discredit to the other exes to say that "B. F. has them all beat in a bunch."

IT is said that all of New York's votes on the council will be cast for Cogswell for chairman, and that his general strength is growing fast.

WE know at least two men who are new members of the council who wouldn't have gone on at this time but for their desire to get in behind Farmer Joe in case there should be any difficulties.

GETTING back to Iowa! Col. Dinwiddie had enough written pledges to elect himself twice over, but failed to have any one planted to nominate him. There was a pause of half a minute and just then some foxy friend of Dave McKee saw the point and shot him over the plate and Carpenter got a pass on balls and it was all over. Funny story!

GOV. WOODROW WILSON, in addition to his more recent distinctions, belongs to the notable group of Houghton Mifflin essayists. His volume of "Mere Literature and Other Essays," and his "Congressional Government," a study of American politics, have had a steady sale for many years.

MEREDITH NICHOLSON is a close friend of Gov. Thomas A. Marshall, the democratic candidate for Vice-President. In dedicating one of his recent stories, "The Siege of the Seven Suits," to Gov. Marshall, Mr. Nicholson wrote: "My Dear Governor: It was ordered by the franchises of destiny that you become the chief executive of a state in which the telling of tales brightened the hunter's camp-fire and cheered the lonely pioneer's cabin before our people learned the uses of ink; and the supreme fitness of this lies in the fact that you are yourself the best of story-tellers and entitled, for your excellence in this particular, as well as for weightier reasons, to sit at the head of the table in that commonwealth to which we are both bound by many and dear ties."

SECRETARY McLANE TILTON writes in to give notice that the twenty-first annual convention of the Alabama Bankers Association will be held at Dothan, Ala., May 8th, 9th and 10th, 1913. Other association secretaries, and especially those of the southern states, "will please bear these dates in mind," and, in arranging their own conventions, endeavor to avoid conflicting dates.

CLEVELAND clearing house committee, consisting of representatives of the national banks, have elected Wm. D. Young, cashier of the National City Bank, treasurer of the Clearing House Association. Mr. Young takes the place made vacant by the death of Edwin R. Date, who also was cashier of the National City.

IF we could lose the Funk case, the Lorimer case and the pestiferous Colonel, even the hot weather couldn't jar our content.

THAT "houn' dawg" should be transferred to the republican party, since they do a large amount of "coon huntin'" at their quadriennial gatherings.

IF it's flatter than "as flat as a pancake" you can say it's as flat as a third party call. It's good form, too.

THE size of the "rumps'" convention will depend chiefly on the size of the expense account fund and the way it is used. Chicago is a fine summer resort for politicians out of a job.

BUT how could anybody expect the steel trust's business to do anything but decline temporarily when all its managers are so busy nowadays thirdterming?

KENTUCKY will hold its twentieth annual convention at the Galt House in Louisville on Wednesday and Thursday, October 2d and 3d. A tentative program has been prepared and several speakers of national reputation have been invited to address the convention. In addition to these, several Kentucky bankers will speak.

ONLY twenty banks remain to be converted to make Secretary Arch. B. Davis eligible to a seat on the 100 per cent efficiency bench along with Secretary W. F. Keyser, its only occupant.

SECRETARY ANDREW SMITH is expected to declare the Indiana hay fever season open any day. Oh, you Petosky!

MERCHANTS NATIONAL, Indianapolis, on October 1st will occupy its fine new bank and office building, "the largest and finest in the state." Yes, the bank is growing, too.

"ROOSEVELT is going to sweep the country"—if he can raise the "dust."

SPEAKS AT N. E. A. CONFERENCE

A conference of those interested in agricultural development and education was called by E. E. Balcomb, professor of agriculture, State Normal and Industrial College, Greensboro, N. C., and was held at the headquarters of the National Education Association in the parlors of the Auditorium Hotel on Wednesday, July 10th. Prof. Balcomb also is the executive secretary of the Boys and Girls League of America. This league is composed of the boys and girls constituting the various corn clubs throughout the country, and the girls who are interested in the study of domestic science. Recently Prof. Balcomb was made chairman of a newly created committee on rural and agricultural education. This conference was attended by William G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, who attended at the request of President B. F. Harris of the Illinois Bankers Association and represented their committee on agriculture and vocational education of which he is the secretary. Others who were present are Frank M. Leavitt, assistant professor of industrial education, University of Chicago, and chairman of the committee representing the Illinois Teachers Association; the Hon. Oliver Wilson of Peoria, master of the National Grange Patrons of Husbandry; Prof. E. C. Bishop, school section, extension department of the Iowa State College, Ames; Clarence P. Robinson, state normal school, Montclair, N. J.; Edward R. Wright, president of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, and organizer of the American Federation of Labor; Forest Crissey, special writer for the Saturday Evening Post. Mr. Edens told the conference of the agitation going on in Illinois looking to the betterment of farming methods, and of the bankers' ambition to assist in preparing a draft of an educational bill to be presented to the next legislature, that will embrace the subjects of agricultural education, domestic science and industrial training; also of the effort being made to secure national and state aid for field and farm demonstration work, and for the improvement of our public highways.

WHY SO SILENT, THEODORE?

La Follette's urgent inquiry concerning the Roosevelt campaign expenditures is met with the same deafness that La Follette's speeches in the senate encountered during the Roosevelt administration. Just at present Oyster Bay does not seem to know that there is such a person as Robert Marion La Follette.

The CHICAGO BANKER

A Weekly Paper Devoted to the Banking and Financial Interests of the Middle West

JULY 20, 1912

Entered as Second-Class Matter January 15, 1903, at the

10 CENTS A COPY

Constitutional Amendment.

The following proposed amendment to the constitution of the Illinois Bankers Association is to be formally proposed and will be voted upon at the Peoria convention in September. It comes to THE CHICAGO BANKER from one of the very leading lights of the organization, introduced by the following letter:

Editor of The Chicago Banker: Several years ago an amendment was suggested to the constitution of the Illinois Bankers Association, in which it was proposed to discontinue the practice of the ex-presidents of our state association voting in the meetings of the executive council of the organization, but for some reason or other the matter was side-tracked. I am of the positive opinion that the very best interests of our association demand that this change be brought about. I am therefore proposing the following amendment which I request you to publish in your paper that our membership may become familiar with the same, and which later on I will introduce through the secretary's office in accordance with the requirements of our constitution.

Section 2 of the Constitution of the Illinois Bankers Association to read as follows:

The administration of the affairs of the Illinois Bankers Association shall be vested in an executive council composed of thirty elected members, and the following ex officio members: The president, first vice-president, the ten group chairmen, and the ex-presidents of this association for three years after the expiration of their respective terms of office as president. The ten vice-presidents representing the groups, and the ex-presidents after the expiration of their terms as ex officio members shall be honorary members of the executive council but shall have no vote on matters of policy or business which may come before the executive council. A Member.

Chicago, July 18, 1912.

This is an Illinois perennial so far as mooted questions are concerned, and dates back to the time when the private bankers controlled the association by a constitutional provision that "never less than half of all committees shall be private bankers." Committees continued of odd number so that three out of five, two out of three, etc., were of the private bank faith. By another constitutional provision (the rank-est piece of class legislation ever devised) the presidents of the association in alternate years (when the legislature was in session) always were private bankers. Another provision of the old constitution put the ex-presidents "on the executive council for life." Result always has been that certain of the exes attended all meetings, and so built up a machine, which finally was overthrown by the adoption of the new constitution at Springfield convention last year. By an oversight the exes were overlooked and forgotten until they showed up at the Blackstone meeting of the council last winter in sufficient numbers to defeat the Harris supervision resolution, although it has been shown by poll of the membership to have almost unanimous support of the organized

Two Famous Upbuilders of American Bankers Association

SOL. WEXLER
NEW ORLEANS

E. ELMER FOYE
BOSTON

Mr. Foye is a vice-president for the Old Colony Trust at Boston and a vice-president for the A. B. A. in Massachusetts. He has just finished a term as president of the Massachusetts Bankers Association in which position he did much to build up and popularize that youthful organization. He has spread the A. B. A. gospel effectively and has brought in many new members. His state has need of just such men.

Mr. Wexler is a handsome, scrappy big fellow and a bigger banker. He can talk up to the speed limit and fears nothing that has been discovered and charted. He went through the chairs in the clearing house section with a fine record and ran for chairman of the Big Council the wrong year. He doesn't hold spite, is a good worker and a power in the association, and in things financial in the South has to be consulted.

Many of the ex-presidents never abused the privilege and never voted on questions of administrative policy nor at elections. Others never missed a meeting and truly "ran the association."

It was so in the American Bankers Association almost to a detail. The ex-presidents ran the machine and Col. Branch's defeat was impossible until the ex-presidents were cut down to three years on the council, "after the expiration of their terms of office." This was done at the Atlantic City convention, and resulted in Col. Farnsworth's election, and the complete reformation and upbuilding of the organization.

Members of the Illinois Bankers Association will do well to look into this matter fully so the question can be decided upon its merits. Many of the ex-presidents will support the reform, and but a very few will contest it.

Charles G. Dawes

Charles G. Dawes, president of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, has accepted an invitation to be one of the speakers at the convention of the Colorado Bankers to be held in Denver August 19th and 20th. Mr. Dawes will speak on the subject of investments.

DEATH OF EMERSON DEPUY

Banking circles in Chicago were shocked on Thursday at receipt of telegrams from Secretary P. W. Hall, of the Iowa Bankers Association, announcing the sudden death of Emerson Depuy, editor and publisher of the Northwestern Banker at Des Moines. Under Mr. Depuy the paper had become a power, and invariably stood up for high standards and condemned shady methods in banking and commercial life. Every advancing effort of the big Iowa association had his warm support, and he was a welcome speaker at bankers' conventions in his own and neighboring states. He enjoyed the close personal friendship of almost every banker in Iowa and could call most of them by name. The death of Mr. Depuy will be a distinct loss to financial journalism. His paper belonged to the "strictly clean" and was quoted liberally by papers all over the country. The funeral will be held to-day (Saturday) and will be attended by nearly every banker in Des Moines.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

IOWA is up and doing on the presidency of the state association. The walkover for Shade at Cedar Rapids has stirred up what looks like a four-cornered contest. The more the merrier!

CONFERENCE meet at Minneapolis and St. Paul, August 7th-8th, promises to be big this year. Twenty-one states have appointed committees on agriculture and education, and Ohio, Michigan, North Carolina and Nebraska authorized appointments.

CHAIRMAN JOSEPH CHAPMAN, JR., has made hotel reservations for the delegates at the Radisson and at the Minnesota Club, one of the best places to stop in the whole country.

FROM Chicago there will be a special car, evening of August 6th, for delegates from tributary points. Send in your name to THE CHICAGO BANKER, which will do the rest.

A MILLION dollar "farmers bank" has been incorporated in Chicago, but the real backers are not disclosed. Probably George Woodruff will have the field to himself for a time.

NOT so with the race for the chairmanship of the council. In this he has a good start, but Col. Aisthorpe is an opponent of "good steel." But then the two are good friends, and will remain so. You can bet on that.

COL. FRANK T. JOYNER and Ralph C. Wilson (not a colonel) are not "noisy" candidates for the Illinois secretaryship. Another case of good friends and each competent to acceptably fill the place.

HAVEN'T heard of any real rivals to E. E. Crabtree, and W. T. Fenton for membership on the big council. One has a holdover claim which no one can dispute, and the other an indorsement (Group 4) which is good collateral. Fortunate indeed is the state in prospect of having such high-grade representation on the council.

SECRETARY W. C. MACFADDEN of North Dakota has been asked to assist in locating the endless chain letter sent out to raise funds for the silver service committee for the battleship North Dakota. This letter evidently is pigeon-holed in some bank in the state. It has a number of drafts attached to it, and the committee would like to have the letter sent along on its journey, and kept moving. It is hoped that the remittances attached to the letter have not been "kidnaped."

MACFADDEN has a plan, too, to furnish North Dakota banks with "cashiers, bookkeepers, etc., without cost" to them. The theory is O.K., but it involves the co-operation of an employment agency in Kansas City, which, of course, charges the applicant a fee.

WE hope he will have no unpleasant experiences, and no regrets but suggest a "better plan" which is safe and in which no fee is charged, and thus no prejudice involved in the "recommendation."

CHAPTERS of the A. I. B. in Minneapolis Milwaukee, Chicago, and in many much smaller places are interested in finding "places" for their graduates. They furnish the best in the market, and at no cost to anyone concerned. Why couldn't Macfadden and other secretaries offer their services to member banks and to the employment committees of the various chapters and thus give loyal, earnest support to the educational feature of the A. B. A.? They then would be sure that none but safe men were recommended for bank employment. Chicago Chapter will be glad to co-operate. John W. Rubecamp, Corn Exchange National, is president.

THERE wouldn't be nearly so many "look out" notices and "lost" checks, drafts, etc., would be less frequent if none but "bank men" were put on guard.

BY the way, Director Geo. E. Allen should cut in about here and fix it up with the secretaries. He'll find them willing to co-operate in every way.

RESOURCES of Minnesota banks have increased $14,887,712.67 from June 7th of last year to June 12th of this year. On this comparison Kelsey S. Chase, superintendent of banks, says:

"YOU will notice that there were 712 state banks one year ago, and there were on June 14, 1912, 747. Statements do not include the mutual savings banks nor trust companies in this state. Overdrafts and bills payable have been reduced. The deposits have made a substantial gain and altogether the banking situation among the state banks under my supervision is improved over what it was a year ago."

TOOTLE-LEMON NATIONAL at St. Joseph, Mo., writes that "progress has been made within the last month toward bettering the position of the crops. Heavy rainfall over a considerable portion of the Northwest has relieved the situation in a district where high temperatures had exposed the wheat to serious danger. In the corn belt also the outlook has been helped by greater moisture, and the harvesting of winter wheat has been progressing at a satisfactory rate."

"MARBLE BANK MONTHLY," issued by the Union Trust and Savings, at Spokane is among the best of the house organs. It is a model of its kind.

GRAHAM & SONS BANK, 659-61 West Madison, Chicago, offers choice 6 per cent mortgages on improved property, notably on the West Side Hospital, a money-making institution.

MILLER WEIR, cashier of the Jacksonville (Ill.) National, justly can claim "a prosperous half year." The net was 11½ per cent of which 3 per cent went to dividends, and the balance to surplus and undivided profits. Only dangerous thing about the earnings is that it is "twenty-three" per cent a year.

FORD is going to make 250,000 automobiles in 1913. What if he only makes ten dollars per car, as his rivals allege, and a couple of fortunes per year on spare parts. Big banks can earn on small margins on their business, too. That's one of the advantages of size.

HERE is a pretty good "toot" from the literature of the old Bank of Pittsburgh: "The Bank of Pittsburgh, National Association, of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, is the oldest bank in the United States, west of the Allegheny Mountains. It was founded in 1810, and in the one hundred years of its existence it has never failed in the protection of its depositors. Its large resources and world-wide connections are available to all who desire a strong, capable banking connection."

MCLEAN (ILL.) STATE BANK has made a big bit advertising in the county paper the good roads and good farming literature of the Illinois Bankers Association. Try it in your county. Don't be a dead one!

AUGUST 7th-8th the conference of state association committees on agricultural development and education will be held at Minneapolis and St. Paul on consecutive dates. This is the most important banker conference of the year.

DON'T forget the Wisconsin convention at Milwaukee (July 24th-25th) next week. Bartlett has a fine program and the entertainment committee is on the job.

ILLINOIS bankers will go down to the Peoria convention in September over the Rock Island lines. So long since they've used anything but Illinois Central they will not know where to get the tickets. Carmichael was too modest to ask for it again. Besides all that, McCormick is a pretty good fellow. Now let everybody go.

THEY tell us that Teter has purchased a new stop-watch with which to time the speakers at the Council Club banquet at Detroit. Time limit is five minutes.

ARE you keeping your eye on the Second Ward Savings at Milwaukee? Deposits almost $12,000,000.

IOWA has only thirteen more A. B. A. members to get to qualify both McKee and Carpenter. Where's that old flying wedge formation?

Something Wrong With Our Agricultural Development

Geo. P. Wiley, a banker-farmer, at Waterville, Washington, tells what he thinks it is and points out a practical remedy. Able talk by an experienced, observing man

With all our advancement and progress we have overlooked the great fundamental. Agricultural science is not being applied.

The cities of our state have gone way beyond the rural development. This year we sent out of the state to purchase one-fifth of the ordinary farm commodities that might have been produced at home. This amounted to $18,000,000. Our farms are languishing, and until we can improve rural conditions and establish some sort of economic balance between the producer and the consumer at home, we cannot lay claim to permanent prosperity. That other states are in the same predicament explains why twenty-three state bankers' associations have standing agricultural committees to co-operate and assist in finding the remedy, and so applying it that these conditions may be materially improved. After three years of agitation and discussion, is it not time to accept the remedies agreed upon by the best thinkers who have given the case profound consideration and get down to work and eliminate this theorizing?

All of the great meetings on the so-called "back to the farm" movement show that our educational leaders and economists are an absolute unit on one thing, and that is that the great drawback to better farm production is our failure to get the best thought and results to the man on the farm who needs them at the time he needs them. These great meetings and conventions have not achieved their purpose, because they have failed to figure out some definite plan to make this information, some of which has been obtained at great cost, more available. Farm bulletins are all right for the progressive, enthusiastic farmer, and in individual instances have revolutionized farming methods; but it has been demonstrated conclusively that the great mass of farmers will not receive definite help through the farm bulletin unless there is an inspirational man on the ground to interpret the bulletin and demonstrate the work. For fifty years the government has been collecting valuable agricultural information, which means life and opportunity for the people, and storing it up in the bulletin warehouse at Washington, but you can't interest people in goods in a warehouse.

Joseph Chapman, Jr., and other deep thinkers on the subject arrive at the same conclusion. They all suggest redirected education, commencing with the child. The Home and School Association of Everett recently entered a plea to the board of education for more liberal instruction and equipment in nature study and constructive work in the intermediate grades. Now the people of Everett evidently are wide awake, and they absolutely are right in their idea, for let me tell you that less than one-half of our children go beyond the sixth grade, only one in three completes the grammar school course, only one in five enters high school and only one in thirty graduates from high school. Our system then does not educate generally or thoroughly. One-half of all the children of the United States are abandoned by the state at the tender age of fourteen and all children are forsaken as far as trade education goes.

The acute state of our disorder is found in the country, but every man, whether he lives in the country or in the city, has the same general interest, because we all are dependent upon agriculture. The city with high property valuations and comparatively low tax levies can secure splendid teachers and up-to-date equipment, and, best of all, there are a thousand persons in the city capable of assuming leadership in school affairs where there is one leader for school work in the country, so that the child in the city and town receives from two to ten times as much educational assistance as the one on the farm. National welfare depends upon agricultural prosperity and agricultural prosperity depends upon educational reforms in the country schools. There is a lack of effective organization and inspiration in educational work in the country. The National Bureau of Education sets forth the paradox that rural teachers are a positive force in depleting the rural districts. This is the result of inadequate preparation, years of training away from the practical, fostering wrong ideals and teaching only what is in the text books. The success or failure of this agricultural movement depends upon supplying teachers who adequately can impart this new type of education which it is necessary to install. Teachers must have a better and a different training. They must have a clear conception of the object of industrial, agricultural and home economic training before they can lay a good foundation for the pupil's future work in the vocational school. Our normal schools are doing what they can, but every normal student's idea of happiness is to get a city school as soon as possible and our normal schools cannot supply one-fifth of the demand. High schools in our country towns have not the means to do efficient work and supply this new type of education, yet they furnish the most and the best of our country teachers.

The most powerful factor used in the development of high schools is state aid. Let us apply this magic power to one or more country high schools in each county, conditioned upon self help, applying the scriptural principle, "To him that hath shall be given." State aid is no hospital for incurables—it is applied only to those who will contribute at least a like amount, and who have in them the elements of success. Let the state contribute half of five thousand dollars to one or more country high schools in each county and put at the head of each school an inspirational man strong enough to break away from precedent and tradition and conduct a new school which shall meet the needs of an agricultural population—a man who has executive ability; who has the initiative and enthusiasm to draw good instructors around him; who knows what the country needs and what the rural teacher needs; who knows what we mean by demonstration forms and who can get results. In this way we can inestimably help the country districts, leaven the rural population and enhance the value of our farms by increasing their production.

The office of county superintendent of schools, instead of being the poorest paid in the courthouse, should be the highest, in order that the best of talent could be attracted to this most important place. Eventually it should be taken out of politics, for next to the actual preparation of teachers, this office has most to do with the success of the rural school system. Agriculture, as a science, has not yet reached good pedagogical form. When properly treated and good instructors are provided, there will be as good training and mental culture in the study of farm problems as in reading Greek or Latin. The State College is overwhelmed with applications from all over the Northwest for agricultural teachers, which it utterly is unable to supply. The bankers of the state should co-operate with the State College, and I believe we can be of great assistance to it, but I think in view of the great need we should urge upon the State College the assumption of real leadership in all things rural and the abandonment of all effort to supply such leadership in respect to urban education and technical and professional courses, leaving that to the State University.

Your committee should have the means to meet together and carefully plan this work. Then we should send a representative to Minneapolis in August to confer with the national agricultural committee which is looking after federal legislation. Of the three bills now pending in congress providing for federal appropriations for agricultural extension work, the Page bill is the most comprehensive; it articulates with our whole school system; it is an admirable plan of co-operation and is meeting with great favor. This bill is likely to pass the senate at this session and we should use our influence to get it through congress next winter. We cannot get either state or federal appropriation by asking for it; we must work for it and work hard.

I am not an educational evangelist, nor yet a philanthropist. I am a plain banker-farmer and I know that we must have scientific agricultural assistance before we can diversify our farms and solve the problem of larger production and better care of land and crops. A twenty per cent shortage in farm products of ordinary consumption is only a foretaste of the problems which will confront us twenty years from now. Dr. Henry Wallace, one of the highest authorities on this subject, says: "There is no one to blame particularly for this condition of affairs. It is the working out of an economic law, and, unless it can be changed, this country will in fifty years cease to be a nation." The great question before the American people to-day is—Can these conditions be changed? When through the influence of properly trained, inspirational teachers we can inculcate in the minds of our children an appreciation of nature, a love for the country, a

MISSOURI BANKER NARROWLY ESCAPES DEATH

S. W. Webb, cashier of the Rolla (Mo.) National Bank, together with his family, narrowly escaped death the other evening. The engine in a new automobile which he recently purchased, stopped when the car was in the middle of the Frisco railroad tracks. A swiftly approaching train was bearing down upon them. They barely succeeded in escaping by jumping. The automobile was demolished by the train.

FOURTH AND FIRST NATIONAL

James E. Caldwell, president of the Fourth and First National Bank, Nashville, sends out an interesting letter to depositors and customers calling attention to the importance to the financial interests of Nashville and the South of the recent consolidation of these two strong banks. While the new institution carries a shadowing preponderance of the business of influential business men, it also will pay attention to the business of the young men and smaller customers. Mr. Caldwell says that good intentions without ability in banking are very poor comfort to a customer; hence it is important for the customer to consider that ability. Mr. Caldwell has been active in business and financial matters in Nashville for a number of years, and well remembers the trying times of '73, '93 and 1907, when financial strength was the then cry of all. The Fourth and First National presents this strength.

NEW ILLINOIS BANKS

Authority has been granted by the state to Alvin Newlin, Stephen D. Newlin and Harry O. Newlin to organize the Newlin State Bank at Hudsonville, to be capitalized at $25,000. Mr. Cooley has but recently returned from Europe, where he made a very careful investigation of the German and French systems, and upon his return made a comprehensive report to the members of the Chicago Commercial Club, who had engaged his services for this important educational investigation. The Minneapolis conference is to be congratulated upon securing Mr. Cooley for its program.

NEW GET-RICH-QUICK WALLINGFORD BOOK

Now we have from the Bobbs-Merrill Company, Indianapolis, a new Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford book, by Geo. Randolph Chester, entitled "Five Thousand an Hour," a regular million dollar romance. The new Wallingford tale isn't true but it reads true, from the depth of interest which its readers acquire. Johnny Gamble, penniless, but plucky, sees his fate in charming Constance Joy, and, inspired by certain sweet, new hopes and dreams, starts out to win her and confound her tacitly accepted suitor, Paul Gresham, by "making a million" in forty days. He does it, too! Of course, Johnny is very shrewd, and he receives a lot of help from Miss Joy, Polly Parsons and other good friends, who share his desire to down his astonished adversary, and of course the Gresham defeat and the Gamble victory are arranged in rather melodramatic manner, but then, what would you? The man who must earn $5,000 an hour or lose the sweetest girl in the world has got to be nimble, while such fellows as Gresham really don't deserve pity. This is a corking good story for those who like breeziness, up-to-the-minute romance and the briskest, most snappy of slang.

From the Bobbs-Merrill Company also comes "Fran," by John Breckenridge Ellis. At the outset the novelist, with deft descriptive touches, presents Fran as a girl still in short dresses, arriving at night at the home of the man who is really her father, but who does not know of her existence, and compelling him to take her into his household as the daughter of an old friend, not because she needs shelter from poverty, but because she, as she expresses it, "wants to belong to somebody."

The father, a leader in all church affairs, director of the choir and famous all over the country for his enormous charities, had deserted Fran's mother shortly after his secret marriage to her while in college, so that the woman who now is known to the town of Littleburg as Mrs. Gregory is not, of course, legally entitled to that name.

Fran enters abruptly into this household, where other complications are at work because of the unavowed passion of Gregory for his beautiful, insistently religious secretary. This is the enemy whom the heroine is compelled to vanquish in order to come into her own—and right courageously is the conflict waged.

The direct, quasi-confidential style of the author fairly matches the bold spirit of Fran, and lends added interest to her shrewd divinations of human nature.

The De Smet National Bank, of De Smet, S. D., has purchased the Bank of De Smet and the two will be consolidated under the management of F. M. Andrew, who will become vice-president, and O. P. Williams, who will be cashier.

Kewanee, Ill.—Organization of the new Union State Savings Bank and Trust Company, as successor to the Union National Bank, was effected, with J. H. Bennison president, W. H. Lyman and W. W. Calhoun vice-presidents and Harold Flint cashier.

Some of the Newer Court Decisions Affecting Banks

The decisions of the courts relating to banks and banking are numerous, and attest the great importance of the banking business, which really is the point of contact of all business amounting to anything. They likewise indicate the complex nature of the business, inasmuch as new and difficult questions constantly are arising which can be settled only in litigation.

It is safe to state, however, that a bank will not resort to litigation if it can effect a compromise whereby it can secure the full amount of principal due, together with interest to date of payment. When it does take such a step as a final measure, it is characteristically prompt with payment of the costs of the same as well as the payment of the final judgment should it be adverse. There never are any complaints against a plaintiff or a defendant bank on the part of court officials, who frequently long that other litigants possessed the same business like promptness.

Court decisions relating to the banking business may be of questionable interest to members of this association, since you must provide an annual legal retainer anyhow, and it is alike safer and easier to ask your attorney the perplexing legal questions as they arise from time to time in your business.

My official observation, however, tends to the conclusion that about half of the advice of lawyers in all litigation proves to be erroneous, and after the final order is entered there is no other redress than the futile indignation meeting held by the vanquished lawyer and his client, therefore it might be well to consider for yourselves some of the concrete cases which legally have been determined.

The penal statute passed at the last regular session of our legislature, relating to the unlawful giving of checks and drafts for value,

Show that advising attorneys are wrong half the time. West Virginia bankers greatly interested in fine paper by Wm. B. Mathews. Many of the cases cited settle every day questions in active banking is having the desired effect. The first conviction of felony thereunder for uttering a worthless check for more than twenty dollars has been duly entered, and the guilty party now is doing time in the state penitentiary. If you can obtain checks for some of your worthless overdue notes, there is a great incentive to make all such checks good that does not attach to the original notes.

Many important decisions are handed down by our circuit courts which are not appealed on account of the amount involved or for other reasons, and thus do not find their way into the published reports. I shall not attempt to refer to any considerable number of these cases.

Judge Kittle of the nineteenth circuit, in Crittendon, special receiver of the Bank of Horton vs. Wilt and others, held that the receiver could not enforce the constitutional and statutory liability against the stockholders of a bank, equal to the amount of their stock, except for the benefit of the creditors of the bank. It was not shown in this case that the statutory liability of the stock was needed to meet the claims of creditors, but that the receiver was trying to collect it upon the theory that it was an asset of the bank.

In Smith vs. Miller, recently decided by Judge Moss of the fourth circuit, involving a note in which the maker on its face waived all homestead and exemption laws, authorized judgment against himself without service of process in any action, authorized the holder of the note to confess judgment for him, and provided for the payment of all costs of collection and attorneys' fees, these provisions were held illegal and void, and judgment was given only for the face of the note with legal interest to date of judgment.

The case of Benedum vs. Citizens Bank of Cameron from the circuit court of Marshall county, in which Benedum sued for an accounting of the affairs of the bank, is a very voluminous and important one. Decrees were pronounced against Mr. Benedum on the cross-bill of creditors of the bank for about one hundred fifty-six thousand dollars and his recovery of a hundred thousand dollar deposit was postponed until certain other creditors were paid in full, so that the case involves something like a quarter of a million dollars. Mr. Benedum was president of the bank, and while acting as such, assisted in the promotion of a string of glass companies. These glass companies were permitted to overdraw, and to have a large line of credit, so that when the bank failed, these companies owed the bank on inadequately secured paper between seventy-five and a hundred thousand dollars. Defendants alleged that the insolvency of the bank was caused by the plaintiff's mis-

How Bank Directors May Make Effective Examinations

Washington, July 15.—Comptroller of the Currency Murray has prepared for transmission to directors of national banks a set of instructions with reference to methods of examination by directors. About the first of June he requested the board of directors of the banks to send in a copy of the reports of the annual or semi-annual examinations made by the examining committees or by other parties at the instance of the directors, and all but one complied.

A review of the reports that have been received shows that many of these examinations are deficient in their scope, and that many features essential to a thorough understanding of the bank's affairs are not covered. A number of the states have provided by law for reports by the examining committees of state banks to the state banking department. They require in general an examination into the books, papers and affairs of the bank and particularly into the loans and discounts, with detailed statements of all losses estimated and any irregularities discovered, and in these states a form of report has been prepared for that purpose.

The comptroller's suggestions to directors are as follows:

1. The cash should be counted and the total compared with the books of the bank. Cash items should be carefully scrutinized, and any improper items, such as unposted checks held for the purpose of not showing overdrafts, and other items that cannot be readily converted into cash should be reported.

2. The bonds and other securities of the banks should be examined, and those not on hand should be verified by reference to the receipts of the parties with whom they are deposited. The market value and the amount at which such securities are carried on the books in the aggregate should be shown, and any stocks held by the bank should be listed with a statement showing the reasons the securities were taken by the bank.

3. The notes should be carefully checked and their total compared with the general ledger. The genuineness, value and security of each note and of any collateral thereto should be carefully determined and any losses ascertained, or probable, in the judgment of the committee, should be noted. The liabilities of each of the larger borrowers and loans to affiliated interests should be aggregated and care-

New set of instructions issued by Comptroller Murray who believes the present annual or semi-annual examinations defective. Committee should certify to the bank's solvency fully considered. The report should also show the general character of the loans; whether well distributed; the general character of the collaterals; whether corporations in which officers or directors are interested borrow to an undue extent; also any large liabilities of the officers or directors. It should also be shown whether all paper claimed by the bank as its own property, including collaterals, is properly endorsed or assigned to it, and all mortgages recorded. Any loans exceeding 10 per cent of the capital and surplus of the bank should be reported. The signatures of all note-makers and endorsers should be carefully scrutinized, and any erasures and alterations or any indications of manipulation should be carefully investigated and reported to the full board. All overdue paper should be listed and comment made as to its collectibility.

4. The certificate of deposit and the cashier's checks should be verified by totaling those outstanding and as shown by the register and comparing with the general ledger, and also by comparing the cancelled certificates and checks with the register and checking them against the stubs.

5. The copy retained by the bank of the report of condition made to the comptroller at the last call should be compared with the bank's books at that date, particularly with reference to the excessive loans and directors' and officers' liabilities reported to the board of directors.

6. The bank's last reconcilements of accounts with correspondent banks should be compared with the bank's books and a transcript of the bank's account from the date of the last reconciliation to the date of the examination sent to the correspondent bank with a request for verification.

7. Individual ledger balances should be verified in such manner as the directors may deem advisable, by calling in pass books, by sending out reconcilements of certain accounts selected by the directors, or in some other suitable way. A trial balance of the ledger should be taken by some member of the committee or at least by some person other than the clerk engaged on the ledger.

8. Overdrafts should be totaled and carefully considered and the report should show any estimated losses.

9. The committee should consider carefully the profit and loss and the expense account, with a view of determining whether the charges against those accounts are proper and whether the earnings of the bank warrant the expense charges, and the bank is making a legitimate profit.

10. The examining committee should inquire carefully into the arrangement of the working affairs of the bank and ascertain whether any employe who keeps the individual ledger receives deposits or balances pass books; and whether the employes are properly bonded and in whose custody the bonds are lodged.

11. Any liability of the bank for borrowed money should be listed, and the proper authority and the necessity for such borrowing ascertained. The total amount of the present liabilities of that nature should be reported to the board, including money borrowed from other banks on certificates of deposit.

It is noted that the report of the directors or the examining committee should show that these points have been covered, and should recite any deficiencies discovered, while the report also should contain a complete statement of the total assets and liabilities of the bank, with any additions or deductions that in the judgment of the directors should be made as a result of their investigation. There also should be included a detailed statement of the loans which the directors estimate as worthless, doubtful or insufficiently secured, giving reasons therefor and as nearly as possible the real value.

The comptroller says on this subject:

"A statement also should be made of any matters which, in the opinion of the committee, affect in any way the bank's solvency, stability or prosperity.

"It is believed that there are few instances where the examining committee cannot, if they will take the necessary time, cover these points fully and satisfactorily.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

Crop conditions in Illinois remain about the same as at the time of our last report a week ago. There is a feeling of optimism prevailing among the farmers and this will be reflected in larger buying this fall. Weather conditions for the ripening of the tremendous oats crop have been almost ideal and the crop, though late, now is beginning to color. Corn also is making rapid and telling progress. It has that deep, rich color which comes from an abundance of moisture and with a late fall and delayed frosts will make a large yield. Oats are "off" in price, grain elevators now paying but twenty-nine cents for them (Wednesday, July 17th) and there is a feeling among accurate observers that this price will be lowered. The natural following of a large crop—lower prices—seems to work out this year. The question of the high cost of living might be partially solved if our country could continue to raise a few more crops like the one in 1912 for several years.

Northwestern May Enter St. Louis

It is believed that the Northwestern Lines are planning a St. Louis entrance, as there are rumors of negotiations for the purchase of the old Big Four lines from Gillespie into East St. Louis, together with terminal privileges in the city. The Big Four has built an air-line from Hillsboro into St. Louis during the past few years with the result that the old line from Hillsboro to St. Louis is used only for local purposes, and it is believed that the Big Four will be willing to sell this old line. As the Northwestern already is building a line from Peoria down into Macoupin county near Gillespie there is some foundation for the rumor. The Northwestern runs into Peoria from the north, having a road from near Sterling, on their Chicago-Omaha line, south into Peoria.

There is wide-spread interest in an interurban line from Peoria to Keokuk, Iowa. Many more interurban lines are being planned and it is believed that next year will see many of these electric roads built. This year has been one of more or less waiting among railroad men, and there has been comparatively little interurban construction in Illinois. However, the field is rich and the interurban possibilities are great so that construction naturally will follow.

The Waubonsie Trail

Wide-spread interest in the Waubonsie Trail from Denver to Indianapolis is being taken by bankers who are automobile lovers. The new trail will pass through central Illinois, touching, among other points, Springfield, Decatur, Monticello, Champaign, Urbana and Danville. The Decatur Auto Club is busy marking the trail in the vicinity of that city, and there is great interest in the project all along the line.

The name of the trail calls to the attention of history students good old Indian legends, and there could be no more appropriate name for an automobile trail than the name of some old Indian of long ago. With routes of this kind established across the state there will be more likelihood of more cars engaged in long tours crossing the state than heretofore. Illinois roads have been so bad that autoists in Eastern states, in many cases, have avoided the state. Many Indiana and Ohio people dislike to tour in Illinois, for if a week's rain sets in the car will have to be run into a garage, and the party return home on the train. The good roads agitation in Illinois is an interesting question, for where five years ago farmers and villagers opposed such ideas with all the power possible many of them now are enthusiastic over such projects, for in many cases they own and drive cars themselves. With the continued rapid sale of motor cars in Illinois most of the good road opposition will be forever silenced. The road-maker can then turn to his truly tremendous task with energy for the roads of the state have been neglected so long that the project will have to be commenced almost at the very beginning.

Illinois Notes

J. W. Crabb, president of the Tazewell County National of Delevan, has sold two car loads of two-year-old Shorthorn cattle for $9.75 per hundred pounds, the highest price paid on the Chicago market for forty-four years.

Cass Clifford, paying teller in the First National of Champaign, is spending his vacation as a delegate to the convention of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, which was held recently in Portland, and in visiting other points of interest in the West.

Jacob Funk, president of the State National of Bloomington, is mourning the death of his wife which occurred Sunday evening, July 14th. Mrs. Funk was seventy-four years of age, and is lamented by her husband and three grown children. Her husband was one of the wealthiest members of the well-known Funk family of Bloomington.

A run which had been carried on in an exciting way on the Granville Bank was stopped by the arrival of ample funds from Chicago. The run was started by false reports. $50,000 were withdrawn from the institution principally by miners and for a few days the excitement was intense. John W. Ranstead, president of the Home National of Elgin for many years, and county judge of Kane county for two terms, recently was married to Miss Julia Merrill, the latter for years a member of the teaching staff of the Lewis Institute in Chicago.

G. R. Trenchard, president of the First National of DeLand, Piatt county, recently has purchased 160 acres of land in his county for $240 an acre, a total of $38,400 for one farm. This price is the largest paid in that vicinity, and the land is near no towns of any size. Simply the land itself was purchased. With farming land selling for $240 an acre, we would like to see the man who predicted that Illinois land could not possibly sell for more than $200 an acre.

The state auditor has issued a permit to Jason L. Wilson, Jesse Ora Hunt, George L. Wilson, Gerard M. J. Badow and Edward S. Stickney to organize the Central Farm Land Mortgage, Bond and Trust Company, the enterprise to be located in Chicago. The principal work of the company will be to lend money on farm lands as the name indicates. No deposits or other demand liabilities will be accepted. The capital will be $1,000,000.

The Farmers State Bank, of Divernon has been opened for business by President D. L. Haire, Vice-President E. Herlan and Cashier Frank Lowe. The new institution starts out with every prospect of success. Mr. Lowe, the cashier, is well versed in banking affairs, and as one of the confidential men of the Farmers National, at Springfield, is recognized as one of the leading men in the banking interests in the county.

The doors of the new Palmer State Bank have been thrown open, the charter having been received from the secretary of state. The new financial institution starts under most favorable conditions, and no doubt will be a financial success. There are over forty stockholders, and the bank is capitalized at $25,000. Dr. J. F. Miller is president and R. E. Best is cashier.

The directors of the State Bank of Cuba met recently and declared an 8 per cent semi-annual dividend.

Harvey G. Riggs, president of the Chamber of Commerce Bank, and vice-president and cashier of the Mercantile Bank of Quincy, who has been ill at his home, is reported as improving steadily.

The forty-four banks in Champaign county had $6,500,000 in deposits on April 1st. These figures are taken from bank statements and from returns by assessors.

Simon Tollmeier, president of the Pearl City Bank, began his business career by doing chores for Col. James Mitchell, at that time head of the old Stephenson County Bank. At that time he made up his mind to be at the head of a bank himself some day, and by persistent endeavor in that behalf has attained that end.

Stockholders of the Rock Island Savings Bank met this week for the purpose of considering an increase of the capital stock of the bank.

The will of the late J. O. Mason, vice-president of the German-American National of Aurora, left large sums of money to various institutions of that town. The Y. M. C. A. gets about $20,000; the Y. W. C. A. $10,000 and $500 a year for five years. The total estate is estimated at $450,000.

The Bank of Keyesport has been sold to the Merchants State Bank of Centralia. Edward F. Ackerman, cashier, will continue in that capacity, but later will go to the Centralia institution.

Frank E. Long, manager of the savings department of the Manufacturers Bank of Rockford, died suddenly this week.

Leslie F. Anderson, cashier of the First National of Galesburg, recently was married to Ruth Marie Eaves of Davenport.

Everett Hamman, assistant cashier of the First National of Ivesdale, has resigned his position with the bank, and moved his household goods to Cerro Gordo.

MONEY SITUATION

There has been a good demand for money during the past week. The minimum rate for commercial paper is 4½ per cent. One prominent banker has predicted 5 per cent time money here within thirty days. As a result of the stiffer rates note brokers are doing a good business with interior banks. Chicago bank deposits are holding up well. Anticipating an unusual demand from agricultural patrons, country banks have begun to draw on their reserves.

WISCONSIN

All arrangements for the entertainment of the delegates to the annual convention of the Wisconsin Bankers Association in Milwaukee, July 24th-25th, have been completed by the Milwaukee bankers in charge of the program. This year's program holds many special inducements for the wives and daughters of the state bankers to attend the convention. A concert and supper at the Deutscher Club have been substituted for the trip on Lake Michigan held last year, out of deference to many of the feminine constituency to whom the thought of a lake trip even under favorable weather conditions was repugnant. A theatre party for all guests and delegates and a tally-ho ride for the women are also features of the program. The committee of the Milwaukee Bankers Club in charge of the entertainment consists of E. J. Hughes, First National, W. M. Post, National Exchange, Walter Kasten, Wisconsin National, and E. A. Reddeman, Germania National. Secretary George D. Bartlett of the state association expects that fully 500 of the 735 members will attend the convention, and has ordered badges and programs and made reservations accordingly.

Cornerstone Laid

The laying of the cornerstone for the new $2,000,000 home of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company, by President George C. Markham of the company was the closing feature of the convention of the national association of the company's agents in Milwaukee this week. The following trustees of the company were elected to fill the nine vacancies on the board at the annual meeting Wednesday: General Fred C. Winkler, Charles Allis, C. A. Loveland, E. J. Lindsay, Stuart H. Markham, Milwaukee; John H. Gibbs, Boston; Andrew J. Frame, Waukesha; John E. Wilder, Chicago; and Henry D. Harlan, Baltimore. The assets of the company now have passed the $291,000,000 mark, an increase for the year of more than $12,000,000. In his address to the agents President Markham stated that every phase of the company's activity is in a most healthy and prosperous condition and that it was never so well equipped to serve its members as now.

Writes Large Amount of Insurance

Dr. C. E. Albright, director in the Wisconsin National Bank, Wisconsin Securities Company, and other Milwaukee financial institutions, set a world record this year in writing $1,817,000 insurance for the Northwestern Mutual Company in his capacity as special agent of the institution. This sum is the largest ever written by any one agent of any insurance company during twelve months. Dr. Albright has held the record for writing the largest amount of business of any of the company's agents for six consecutive years. The announcement of his latest triumph was made this week at the agents' convention, when the standing of the various agents was read, and the prizes for the year's work were awarded.

Crop Outlook Bright

At the conclusion of a trip through the central portion of the state last week, Walter Kasten, assistant cashier of the Wisconsin National, states that with the exception of the corn, the crop outlook for the present year sets a new mark in the agricultural history of Wisconsin.

"The state bankers are most sanguine over the prospects of a record crop, and there is a marked atmosphere of prosperity in all the farming communities through which I passed," said Mr. Kasten.

Tobacco Affected

"Weather conditions have not been favorable for corn, the counties showing the largest acreage reporting an average of 77 per cent of normal," reads the report of Secretary J. C. McKenzie of the state board of agriculture issued this week. "The drought during the month of June has affected the condition of tobacco perhaps more than any other crop, the average, as reported from the principal tobacco centers, being 80 per cent. A heavy increase in the acreage of cabbage is noticeable, and the reports of the sugar beet, potato, and apple crops are favorable."

Wisconsin State Banking Notes

The incorporation of the Farmers and Merchants Bank of East Troy was authorized by Banking Commissioner A. E. Kuolt this week. James F. Jude is president, and Matthew J. Powers, cashier. Capital is $20,000.

The Neillsville State Bank this week increased its capital from $25,000 to $50,000, the amendment to its articles securing the authorization of the state bank commissioner.

HARRIS NOT TO BE A CANDIDATE

B. F. Harris of Champaign, whose name has been mentioned in connection with the nomination for governor on the third party ticket, has stated that he has no political aspirations and will not be a candidate. He said: "I have had letters from a number of men urging me to come out for candidate for congress, for governor and other offices, and while this is complimentary, I have no political aspirations and would not be a candidate. As president of the Illinois Bankers Association I have about all the business I care to handle outside of the many other lines in which I am interested. The subject of agriculture takes a good deal of my time and the use of my name is made without my knowledge. I suspect that Chicago friends simply used it, but I have repeatedly told them that I am not in the race at all."

OUT-OF-TOWN VISITORS

Among the out-of-town bankers who visited the financial district during the past week are the following: G. N. Henson, president of the Citizens National, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Robert Hunt, Jr., president of the Peoples State Bank of Ramsey, Ill.; Charles E. Carpenter, cashier of the Farmers National of Oklahoma City; and B. F. Harris of Champaign, Ill., vice-president of the First National of that city and president of the Illinois Bankers Association.

J. P. Hackett, cashier of the McClean County Bank, Bloomington; W. L. Duckles of the Citizens State and Trust Bank, Edwardsville, and Charles Bradshaw of the First National at Compton, are three Illinois bankers who called upon Chicago bankers this week.

Orson Smith

Orson Smith, president of the Merchants Loan and Trust Company of Chicago, is expected back from Europe on Monday. E. D. Hulbert, who is vice-president of the bank, will leave for Europe the next day.

NEW WEST SIDE BANK

Chicago is to have a new bank to be known as the Garfield Park Trust and Savings Bank, and to be located at West Madison Street and 40th Avenue. It will be capitalized at $200,000 and will have a surplus of $20,000. A new building, which will be modern in every respect, will be erected to house the new institution. The capital stock has been subscribed at $110 per share, thereby creating the surplus named. Ralph Van Vechten, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial National, will be chairman of the board. John E. Decker will be the president.

WILLIAM T. BRUCKNER INTERESTED IN NEW BANK

William T. Bruckner, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial National, is interested in the new Market Trust and Savings Bank which will open about September 1st on Halsted Street near the corner of Randolph. The capital stock of the new institution, all of which has been spoken for, will be $200,000. Mr. Bruckner also is interested in the Lake View Trust, Northwestern State and Cicero State banks.

Edward P. Bailey

Edward P. Bailey now is a vice-president of the Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company. Mr. Bailey formerly was with the National Malleable Casting Company, from which position he has retired.

NORTH DAKOTA BANKER KILLED

J. J. Gruya, vice-president of the Citizens State Bank of Enderlin, N. D., and president of the First State Bank of Halstad, Minn., was killed instantly and Conductor Leonard of the "Soo" line, who resides in Minneapolis, was seriously injured, when an automobile driven by Gruya went over an embankment west of Fergus Falls, Minn. Leonard's son, ten years old, was uninjured.

Gruya recently sold his automobile to Leonard, and was driving it to Minneapolis for him.

AGRICULTURAL COMMITTEE APPOINTED

At the recent convention of the South Dakota Bankers Association a committee on agriculture was appointed. W. S. Hill of Mitchell, S. D., president of the state board of agriculture, was placed at the head of the committee. The purpose of the committee is to advocate and to assist in bringing about better methods of farming, and to encourage the teaching in public schools of agricultural and vocational subjects. South Dakota, by the appointment of this committee, has placed herself in the ranks of the progressive states. The subjects of agriculture and vocational training are attracting the attention of bankers everywhere.

CRESWELL BANK INCORPORATED

—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, July 16.—A canvass of leading St. Louis banks elicited the comforting information that the demand for credits during the past week or ten days has undergone marked improvement. Several of the leading institutions are loaned right up to the handle, and still have applications from good borrowers. Reserves are universally strong, however, and the position here is extremely strong. Banks, especially those doing a heavy business in the line of crop financing, already have commenced extensive preparations for the movement. While there are some seductive opportunities to secure good rates just now, conservatism is being practiced. And it must be noted that after the long months of 4 to 4½ per cent discounts, the temptation to put out funds at present offers is very strong. The inquiry from the country is strong, but the best improvement is from city borrowers, and concerns in other big centers. Numerous firms here, which have not been borrowers to any extent for a year or more, are coming into the market for goodly sums. General business shows signs of picking up, and this fact is emphasized by the continued heavy daily bank clearings. The totals are running well over the corresponding period a year ago. The local banks have not yet begun to suffer losses to any extent on account of shipments to the adjacent territory, but this is a contingency which it is believed should not be overlooked. There will be some massive maturities between this and September 1st, which further will strengthen the monetary position. Call money continues fairly plentiful, and at reasonable rates, but the demand for that class of funds is not pressing for the moment. In the big wholesale district better crop prospects are being reflected in more satisfying sales. While fall buying has advanced well, there are still goodly orders for that season coming in, and numerous enlargements on orders earlier placed. Despite the lateness of the season for many crops, it is believed the agricultural needs this fall will be early, at least this is the opinion of several leading bankers in close touch with the situation. During the past ten days rates have advanced fully one-half per cent, and more money is lending at the major end of the prevailing range than has been the case for months.

Agricultural Committee Meets

The committee of the Missouri Bankers Association having in charge the campaign to induce farmers to increase the efficiency of the soil and the size of crops, met at Sedalia on Tuesday to arrange a program for the year's work. W. C. Gordon, cashier of the Farmers Savings Bank of Marshall, Mo., is chairman of the committee. The state board of agriculture met the same day at Sedalia, and there was a conference between the two bodies. Excellent progress was reported, though details of the plan outlined have not been made public as yet. It is understood that the movement will result in a working agreement among bankers, farmers and the railroads on the questions of crop production and movement.

Low Rate Bonds Not Wanted

The experience Missouri is having in trying to dispose of state bonds bearing 3½ per cent interest is taken as evidence by local financiers that there is little market for short term, low interest bonds. At best these bonds must be taken up within thirteen years from January 1, 1912. Although they were placed on the market last December, only $280,000 of the $3,000,000 issue has been disposed of. Fortunately public interests are not suffering in the least because the bulk of these bonds has not been disposed of. The plans for the new capital building, for which the proceeds are to be used will not be approved prior to September 16th, if an agreement is reached then. The bonds are taxable, and this has been pointed out as a defect, but it is one the legislature could not obviate, in view of the provisions of the constitution. This, however, is not deemed such a fault as the low interest. There are a number of much better securities to be had in this state than the Missouri Capitol bonds. There are public building, school, drainage, district, municipal, road improvement and a various assortment of reliable securities to be had at from 4 to 5 per cent, with twenty years to run.

Independent Brewery Bonds

The Independent Breweries Company, controlling eight breweries in and around St. Louis, is arranging a refinancing of its properties, involving a new general mortgage bond issue aggregating about $5,000,000. The plan soon will be submitted to the stockholders. It has been found necessary to readjust the financial status of the corporation, owing, it is said, to the increased cost of production during the last two years and the desire for future extensions. The company has an authorized capital of $8,000,000, all of which has been issued.

Bankers Assurance Affairs

Advices from Wilmington, Del., are to the effect that a decree has been entered in the Court of Chancery there in the case of the American Bankers Assurance Company of St. Louis, by which Chancellor Curtis perpetually enjoins the company from engaging in the insurance business. The court has directed that the assets of the company in the keeping of the insurance commissioner of Delaware are to be retained by the commissioner until a further order is made. This company has been the center of litigation in the Delaware and Missouri courts for more than a year. The trouble arose from a fight for control between a faction headed by A. C. Landon, the president, and John B. Christensen, a former St. Louisan, who helped Landon and his associates organize the company. Landon and Christensen fell out and the former set up a board of directors in Dover, Del., as a rival to the Missouri directorate. This dispute culminated last August in a new board of directors being elected, which continues Landon as president. The company now has under consideration several plans for merging with other companies, which, it is believed, this latest ruling makes possible.

Cape Girardeau Bankers Die

Advices from Cape Girardeau, Mo., state that the death of Major W. W. Ward on July 11th, the death of H. P. Pierronet on July 14th, and the death of Leon J. Albert on July 13th deprive southeast Missouri of three of its oldest and best-known financiers, and incidentally leave three vacancies in the board of directors of the Southeast Trust Company of Cape Girardeau. Major Ward had been an agriculturist and financier of Cape and Scott counties for forty years; Mr. Pierronet, a merchant and banker of Cape for thirty years, and Mr. Albert had been either cashier or president of the Sturdevant Bank for about forty years. These three old gentlemen had been life-long friends, and their deaths within four days of each other is an extremely sad coincidence.

ACTUAL value received from their connection with us has increased our accounts from other banks 50% in two years. We therefore invite the business of others with the assurance of mutual satisfaction.

ADDRESSES GOOD ROADS GATHERING

William G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, and president of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association, went to Rome in Peoria county on Saturday last, to address a good roads meeting. About two hundred members of the automobile club of Peoria, and other owners of automobiles living between Peoria and Chillicothe have come to the conclusion that the river road between these two cities should be improved, so they called an automobile picnic for Rome on Saturday and invited Mr. Edens to attend their meeting. W. E. Hull of Peoria presided and after the refreshments had been served introduced Eugene Baldwin, publisher of the "Peoria Star," who spoke of the benefits to be gained by the people of Illinois who will engage in the campaign for general road improvement. Mr. Edens called attention to the work of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association and to the possibility of a state good roads convention being held in Peoria in September following the meeting of the state bankers convention at that point. The four townships through which the road from Peoria to Chillicothe passes were represented by their supervisors or highway commissioners, and following the suggestion made by Mr. Bartholomew of Peoria, president of the Avery Manufacturing Company, a committee was appointed and funds pledged to take up the work of immediate improvement of this road, and later on to develop wider plans for its permanent improvement. Mr. Edens says there was a number of Peoria and Chillicothe bankers present at the meeting and that Peoria has a splendid opportunity in the development of this river road, as there is no more beautiful river scenery in Illinois than that along the river between Peoria and Chillicothe, and that with a river boulevard developed here it naturally would form a link in any trans-state road from any other southern part of the state that may be built to Chicago.

NORTH YAKIMA, WASH.

On May 1, 1912, for the first time in eleven and one-half years, North Yakima began issuing warrants for current expenses without registering and paying interest on them. The city was established on a cash basis in a little more than seven months from the time the commission form of government went into effect. On October 1, 1911, the outstanding current expense warrants amounted to $81,756, drawing 8 per cent interest. A refunding bond issue of $60,000 was made, redeemable after January 1, 1913, drawing 5 per cent interest. This was taken by the state treasurer and the proceeds applied by the city to redeeming its deficit. The remainder of the outstanding current expense warrants was reduced month by month until on May 1st the final call was issued by the city treasurer and there remained only $1,258 outstanding, most of which was represented by warrants for labor uncalled for in the city clerk's office. To take up the refunding bond issue a redemption fund was created, which now contains $14,352, and is expected to contain $20,000 by the first of the year, when the $60,000 issue becomes redeemable. In the period between November 1, 1900, and May 1, 1912, when the city had to depend on the money market to take up its current expense warrants, it paid in interest $26,149. The bonded indebtedness of the city now stands as follows: $48,000, sewer bonds, 4 per cent, expiring 1926; $80,000 general indebtedness bonds, 4½ per cent, expiring 1928; $30,000 refunding general indebtedness bonds, 5 per cent, expiring in 1930; $60,000 sewer refunding bonds, 5 per cent, expiring 1931; $50,000 main storm sewer bonds, 4½ per cent, expiring 1931; and $60,000 refunding bonds, 5 per cent, expiring in 1932, but redeemable at the option of the city after January 1, 1913. In addition there are outstanding local improvement district bonds amounting to $429,409, most of which is redeemable at the option of the city after the first year. This bears 6 and 7 per cent interest. The legal limit of indebtedness, under the assessed valuation of $9,779,975 is 5 per cent, or $488,998, for any purpose and an additional 5 per cent which may be used only for water, sewer or light bonds. With the $328,000 bonds now in existence North Yakima has a margin of $228,998 for bonds for general municipal needs or of $689,997 for water, light or sewer bonds. The city commission now is planning to submit to the people at the general election in November the question of a $350,000 or $400,000 issue for sewers.

HARRY S. SMALE INDORSED FOR SECRETARY

Harry S. Smale, of the Continental and Commercial National of Chicago, who has been president of Chicago Chapter for the past year, has been indorsed by the chapter for the office of secretary of the Associated Chapters, and it is expected that many of the chapters will give him their hearty support at the coming convention to be held at Salt Lake City. Mr. Smale has been one of the effective, earnest workers for the Institute for many years, and his experience and ability is such that he would fill the position of secretary with great credit to the A. I. B. A strong resolution was unanimously passed by the Chicago Chapter at an open meeting.

Editorial Comment

ARE ROOSEVELT'S ALLIES DESERTING HIM?

All of the seven governors who originally urged Theodore Roosevelt to make his third campaign for the presidency, which that gentleman so reluctantly consented to do, at the expense of his convenience, are reported as deserting from the cause of the Colonel. Mr. Roosevelt has one consolation, however. Some of the trusts and big interests, of whose welfare he has been such an ardent champion, still will remain loyal to the third term, that is as long as he hoodwinks the people into believing that he is looking out for their interests, and not for those of Col. Roosevelt, and the trusts. Rumor has it that it has been proposed to President Taft to try to effect a reconciliation with certain interests by requesting the resignation of Attorney-General Wickersham, whose offense appears to be his able enforcement of the Sherman anti-trust act, and principally because he prosecuted the United States Steel Corporation which Roosevelt, contrary to law, permitted to absorb its only rival—the Tennessee Coal and Iron Company. There is no doubt that Senator LaFollette is correct when he says that Roosevelt has enrolled himself with the progressives simply to further his personal advantage, when, in reality, he has been receiving campaign contributions from some of the most gigantic combinations in the country. Most of the progressive members of congress have refused to stand by him owing to his criticism of Governor Wilson's views on the tariff question. By his action in that respect the Colonel has shown conclusively that he does not advocate any revision which will in any way be beneficial to the people. Friends of the Wisconsin senator believe that until Roosevelt injected himself into the recent campaign, the fight for progressive republicanism, which was being waged, was almost won. It is not believed that President Taft will acquiesce in the demands to dismiss the efficient attorney-general, any more than he did when a similar proposition was made at the beginning of the campaign; therefore Colonel Roosevelt is sure of the support of someone—at least as long as he continues submissive to the will of those who pay his freight.

AS THE BRITISH CONSUL SEES IT

Reporting to his home government, British Consul Courtenay Bennett, located at New York, has forwarded a fifty-page pamphlet detailing tendencies and conditions in the United States as he sees them officially. In fact, he covers a wide range of topics, including social and business conditions. The consul-general, discussing immigration into America, expresses the fear that the enormous influx of immigrants with different ideas of law, liberty and justice from those who founded the country, may lead to serious trouble in the future.

He says that the outlook indicates a lessening of Anglo-Saxon supremacy.

Mr. Bennett also points out that New York City is losing its supremacy as the money center of the United States, which is due, he declares, to the increase of wealth in other parts of the Union. This is in keeping with a former report in which it was predicted that Chicago ultimately will be the financial center with the largest and most powerful banks in America, if not the largest and most powerful in the world.

NON-WISDOM OF UNION LABOR

They have a bureau of labor statistics in New York and there should be one in each state. Such statistics are valuable to the business man and to the laboring man alike. Possibly the unions after awhile could see that a gain of 2½ per cent in wages is not a gain, but a loss, if secured by keeping an average of ten per cent of all union men out on strike for the year? In New York there are at present 2,450 labor organizations, with a membership of 497,000. The membership of the men's unions has decreased about 1 per cent in the last twelve months, and the membership of the women's unions has decreased about 4 per cent.

About 20 per cent of the union workers were idle on the last working day in March, and nearly 10 per cent are reported as continuously idle throughout the first quarter of the year. An "index figure," adopted by the bureau several years ago, sets the level of wages for 1911 at 125 points and for 1912 at 128 points, indicating an increase during the year of about 2½ per cent. When strike benefits have been paid to the 10 per cent on strike the loss is 11½ per cent on the general issue, as against a gain of 2½ per cent in wages for the 90 per cent employed. Economically the year's work must be put down as a failure. Labor statistics should, in such cases, be studied with a view to improving the tangible results. There are too many strikes.

WHY NATIONAL BANKS FAIL

Perhaps the most potent influences instrumental in causing the failure of a national bank may be said to be dishonesty in the bank itself, excessive loans to individuals and firms and investment in prohibited classes of securities. If all banks would adhere strictly to the requirements of the national banking act, it is believed that the number of failures would be reduced to a minimum. One of the most prolific sources of disaster is excessive loans. This is a matter to which great attention should be paid by the national bank examiners. Loaning large amounts of money to persons with little or no financial standing, and who are unable to furnish collateral of any appreciable worth, practically is certain to result in dire disaster to a bank. While the banking law contains a provision in regard to this feature, it is not believed that it is specific enough, and should cover those cases of interlocking concerns where the division of a given loan among several signers is a technical rather than a real compliance with the law. The classes of security permissible to be taken also should be defined very explicitly. Another factor may be said to be hasty and superficial examination of banks. Much has been done to correct this, however, by the efficient course pursued by Comptroller Murray, who has issued certain instructions to his examiners by which they are to be governed in discharging their duties. It is rather difficult for a bank examiner to contend with dishonesty among the banking officials themselves, often being hindered in his work by opposition of the officers and directors of the institution. When Mr. Murray first took office he found that more than half of the banks were violators of the law. Under his administration this has been remedied to a large extent. The only way in which to obviate an evil of this nature is to enforce strict compliance with the law, and to have laws placed on the statute books sufficiently stringent to insure safe, conservative banking.

Plans and Purposes of American Highway Improvement Assn.

Charles P. Light, Field Secretary, explains the work to West Virginia bankers at White Sulphur Springs. Aims to correlate and harmonize the efforts of all existing organizations working for road improvement.—To arouse and stimulate sentiment for road improvement.—To strive for wise, equitable and uniform road legislation in every state

It is only within the last ten or fifteen years that the term "good roads" has held a serious meaning to the people of the United States. "Good roads enthusiasts," "good roads meetings," were formerly regarded with a sort of tolerant derision. Those who had lived only in the sections of the country afflicted with bad roads could not comprehend the blessings of a good road—they could only see with half-like vision the baneful shadow of increased taxation. To such men the good roads cranks were dangerous disturbers of society somewhat in the same category with the anarchist. On the other hand the people dwelling in the cities and in the regions of fashionable country homes knew little and cared less about the people who were living all about them in an isolation made complete by the impassable barrier of bad roads. These wealthy citizens looked upon the good roads workers not with hostile distrust, but with a sort of languid toleration. Later on when the advent of the automobile sounded the call of the road to the rich travelers, and the more important problems of agricultural development, and public welfare began to arouse a feeble interest in the minds of our people, the inevitable professional agitator and charlatan made his appearance much to the detriment of legitimate organization and helpful educational work. At the same time, misguided but well-meaning efforts of honest road enthusiasts brought about all sorts of confusion in the road movement with organizations overlapping each other, with duplication of effort, and with mistaken ideas as to the real problems involved. But through it all the tremendous importance of the question and the calm judgment of the people have together worked a steady evolution until to-day the road movement in America is on a firm basis, the educational propaganda is well organized and practical, and favorable results constantly are being achieved. Now the tax-fearing owners of farms are awakening to a realization of the fact that a good road is a good investment; now the languid interest of the wealthy city dweller has become a keen and practical interest largely through the influence of the automobile; now the public-spirited, strong-minded men of the nation who are its leaders in the various walks of life, who study its problems and contribute to its welfare, have become informed as to the importance of the road as a factor in our national and individual life; now the interests which may profit commercially through the improvement of our public roads have become far-sighted enough to see the wisdom of uniting their private interest with the public welfare. For example, the railroads, the manufacturers, the owners of pleasure resorts, all actively are casting their support with the road movement. Some of the most progressive railroads, among them the Southern Railway Company under the able presidency of W. W. Finley, and the Frisco Lines under the wise guidance of B. F. Yoakum, have been sending out special trains equipped with models demonstrated by experts for the purpose of spreading the knowledge of road construction and maintenance.

Representing the crystallization of all these forces which have been moving toward a common end is the American Association for Highway Improvement, which has for its president, Hon. Logan Waller Page, director of the U. S. Office of Public Roads; for its treasurer, Hon. Lee McClung, treasurer of the United States; for its vice-president, W. C. Brown, president, New York Central Lines; for the chairman of its board of directors, Hon. James S. Harlan, of the Interstate Commerce Commission; and for the chairman of its executive committee, W. W. Finley, president of the Southern Railway Company; and for the chairman of its membership committee, Thomas Nelson Page, the noted author. The association has strong leaders; it has about 1,400 of the best men of the nation on its roster as members, and it is striving for the necessary practical reforms, and is working to bring about a correlation of all existing agencies in order to obtain them. There are now between forty and fifty organizations affiliated with the American Association for Highway Improvement and working with it in entire harmony. Before explaining in detail the purposes of the association and the manner in which it is seeking to accomplish them, I wish to say a few words to you first in your official capacity, and second in your capacity as citizens, as to the road movement in general, and how it concerns you so closely as to demand your active and thorough support.

It would seem to me to be axiomatic that the promotion of general properties redounds to the profit of banking institutions, because securities are safer, deposits larger, and large business transactions more frequent. If transportation of commodities is made easier between the farms and the markets, banking institutions will increase the radius of their business transactions to the extent to which the improved transportation facilities increase the traffic to the towns in which banking institutions are located. If the farmers can get to the town readily and from considerable distances, there will be a noticeable decrease in the primitive banks made up of tin boxes, old stockings and holes in the wall. Furthermore, if the farmers are able to market their crops without regard to road and weather conditions generally, collections will be more prompt and financial stringency more readily avoided. R. G. Dun & Co., some years ago, gave out a report that the financial stringency at that time was due more to bad roads than to any intrinsic weakness in financial conditions, because farmers could not get their crops to market and consequently could not meet their obligations. This produced a scarcity of money at local centers and the effect spread to the great financial districts just as the waves would spread from a stone thrown into a river until they reached the banks. Another phase of the situation which I do not believe is given sufficient consideration in financial circles is the fact that we are spending now about $150,000,000 a year on public roads. Last year about $40,000,000 of this amount was in the form of bonds voted by counties and townships and not including the bonds voted by cities and states. Bankers certainly should be interested in having these enormous sums wisely expended so that the securities may be safe and easily negotiated and so that all of the financial transactions may be on a business-like basis designed to benefit the community and to protect investors. These bond issues also mean the deposit of large sums of money pending the building of the roads, and the banks profit by these deposits. Bond issues afford an excellent means of obtaining good roads if the money is expended wisely, and I do not know of any class of citizens who are better equipped to see that proper expenditures are demanded and secured than the men who operate banking institutions.

It is idle for me to tell you that good roads pay because they increase the value of land and reduce the cost of hauling, but there are very few people who realize what a really remarkable difference good roads make in these two respects. I personally have known of increases of 900 per cent in land values following the building of a good road, while as to the cost of hauling, I may say that some experiments conducted in California with gasoline tractors demonstrated the fact that hauling could be done as low as 3 cents per ton mile. This is, of course, an exceptionally low figure, but think of its possibilities when it is compared with the present average of 23 cents per ton mile on our country roads. Any very large reductions in the cost of hauling would mean a tremendous increase in the acreage of farm lands under cultivation, a consequent increase in the production of food stuffs, and a lowering of the cost of living. With so large an element of our population crowded into the city, and a consequent decreasing percentage of food producers, our trouble must be considered as largely due to under-production and over-consumption. Good roads would increase our national wealth, halt our rapid progress toward a dependency upon other nations for our food products, and again make us a great exporting instead of an importing nation of food stuffs. A glance at our export and import records will show how alarming is the decrease in our exports of grain, showing that we rapidly are approaching the time when we will not produce enough to supply our people. It is time that we were doing something to increase our production, and what better way can we do this than by lowering the cost of hauling and bringing the city and country closer together, and making country life more endurable, more profitable, and far happier than it is at present. Railroad rates in 1838 were 7½ cents per ton mile, and they have been brought down steadily until they are now seven or eight mills per ton mile, and we still are kicking about high railroad rates. Why should we not devote a little of our famous American energy toward a lowering of public road rates and a more general use of the road? The roads of France haul 1½ times the traffic that the railroads haul. If we bring about similar conditions here our public roads will have an annual traffic of over 1,200,000,000 tons, as our railroads now are hauling about 900,000,000 tons annually.

Leaving out of consideration the question of money benefits, do you know that bad roads are lowering the standard of our citizenship, and that good roads are having a contrary beneficial effect, and that this process if it goes on in time will place the good road sections of the country far ahead of the bad road sections in the mental and moral qualities of their citizens. The explanation of this statement is simple. According to some careful government investigations it was found that in five states where the roads uniformly are

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

The most important bank announcement of the Central West within the last two years is the formal notice of the consolidation of the Southwest National Bank of Kansas City with the National Bank of Commerce of that city which was consummated last week. The merged institution will be known as the Southwest National Bank of Commerce and it will have a capital stock of $3,000,000, the aggregate of $2,000,000, capital stock of the National Bank of Commerce and $1,000,000 capital stock of the Southwest National Bank. It is said that the deal was made on the basis of the holders of shares in the two respective banks exchanging their holdings for an equal number of shares in the merger bank. No bonus was paid for stock in either bank. The new bank will be the largest in Kansas City and the Central West. The last statement, made June 14th, showed the deposits of the National Bank of Commerce to be $19,466,162 and the Southwest National to be $9,687,952, or a total of $29,154,114. The same call statement showed the deposits of the First National Bank, which were the greatest of any bank in Kansas City, to be $26,308,593. The National Bank of Commerce showed surplus and undivided profits of $781,505 and the Southwest National $337,469. The news of the merger has caused the market price of the stock in both banks to rise. For the Southwest National $200 a share has been bid and $201 asked. For the National Bank of Commerce $199 has been bid and $200 asked. J. W. Perry, president of the National Bank of Commerce, will retain his office in the consolidated bank, while F. P. Neal, president of the Southwest National Bank, will be chairman of the board of directors. The other officers of the National Bank of Commerce and J. M. Moore, cashier, and Eugene P. Davis, assistant cashier of the Southwest National Bank, are to be retained. The Southwest National Bank is to abandon its quarters in the New York Life building and the merged bank will occupy the present banking rooms of the National Bank of Commerce in the fifteen-story Commerce Trust Company building at Tenth and Walnut streets. The following will be the board of directors of the new institutions: A. W. Byers, Frank G. Crowell, W. S. Dickey, George D. Ford, Edward George, John G. Groves, H. A. Guettel, J. D. Guyton, S. Harzfeld, J. J. Heim, George R. Hicks, Walter M. Jaccard, L. T. James, W. D. Johnson, R. A. Long, J. Z. Miller, Jr., John M. Moore, Fernando P. Neal, E. D. Nims, J. G. Peppard, J. W. Perry, W. A. Pickering, H. L. Root, Nathan Schloss, C. J. Schmelzer, O. C. Snider, J. P. Townley, S. H. Viele, C. H. Whitehead, Edwin W. Zea.

Alleged Swindler Arrested

Postoffice inspectors have arrested E. C. Wooddell, late of Oklahoma City, Okla., upon an indictment returned against him at Oklahoma City, June 13th, charging him with using the mails to defraud. According to the inspectors Wooddell, as manager of the Bankers Loan Association, maintained elaborate offices in Oklahoma City where he kept stenographers busy sending letters to the bankers of the Southwest. In these letters to bank presidents and cashiers, Wooddell is alleged to have given notice that he, as representative of a wealthy capitalist of London, England, was ready to negotiate loans on real estate. The wealthy capitalist of London was said to want only five per cent interest. Wooddell, it is said, asked the bankers and cashiers to make out the notes for eight per cent. An eastern representative was to get one-half of one per cent, and the remainder over five per cent was to be divided equally between the Bankers Loan Association and the bank presidents and cashiers securing the loans. With each application for business, Wooddell is alleged to have demanded that one-half of one per cent and his half of the interest over five per cent be sent in advance. The government charges that sums from $25 to $400 and amounting to more than $10,000 were obtained in this way.

Oklahoma Deposits Fall Off

Oklahoma state bank deposits fell off nearly four million dollars between the time of the consolidated statement issued in May, and the showing reported on for June 14th, according to the statement issued by Bank Commissioner J. D. Langford. In June there were 623 banks reporting, which is four less than the previous report. The deposits as shown in the June report are $34,413,504, while for the May report they were $37,121,207. This is accounted for through loans made to farmers who when borrowing take the money out of the banks, whereas merchants when making loans generally redeposit the money. It is the opinion of Bank Commissioner Langford that from now on deposits will begin to pick up, and a much better showing will be made in the next call.

Bank Robber Captured

In October, 1911, Daniel Carney, while in jail at Marysville, Kan., waiting transfer to the penitentiary to serve a ten-year sentence for bank robbery, escaped, and the Kansas authorities offered $500 reward for his capture. Carney was caught last week in Denver through the work of an amateur detective who formerly lived in Marysville and knew the yeggman by sight. With a gang of other outlaws including the desperate Neal Mulcahey, Carney robbed several banks in Kansas in 1911, making good hauls at Waterville and Bettie. Mulcahey also escaped from the Marysville jail and still is at large.

Negotiations Pending for Franchise Extension

In order to protect the interests of the stockholders of the Metropolitan Street Railway Company of Kansas City in the negotiations for an extension of the company's franchise, a call has been issued for all owners of stock to deposit their holdings with the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank, 129 South Clark Street, Chicago. It is proposed to authorize a committee representing these stockholders to act for the best interests of all concerned. Foreclosure proceedings have been begun on behalf of the bondholders, but if a new franchise is granted by Kansas City it is believed that this suit will be dismissed. The obligations of the company amount to $28,478,100, of which $4,103,000 is due September 1st next. The prospects now seem good for a settlement of the franchise negotiations which have been under way for nearly two years.

HIGH RECORD IN CLEARINGS

The marvelous prosperity of Pittsburgh in financial, industrial and general trade conditions accurately is reflected in the enormity of the bank clearings for the first six months of 1912, which set a new high mark in the history of the banking institutions of the city. Bank clearings reaches the new high record of $1,342,000,000 for the first half of this year.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Whether the bankers will go into the harvest fields and help out in garnering the grain on the Northwestern prairies is the burning question. Two counties along in the Dakotas will want 5,000 men. A car shortage is inevitable. Will a man shortage be? If it is, is it up to the bankers who have been showing the farmers how to farm, to go out and harvest? Flits of thoughts through the banker brains are as above. A problem, with such a harvest as seems to be approaching at headlong pace, is how to get it cut. Will there be a bumper crop of men? And if not, the farmers will want to know from the bankers, having followed their advice thus far, how to get the sheaves into the barns and stacks.

Large Sum for Crop Payments

A large amount of money is to be sent out of Minneapolis for crop payments, borrowed by grain commission men, elevator men, railroads and others. Joseph Chapman, Jr., has something to say of this, as follows: "If 260,000,000 bushels of wheat had to be moved all at once at a dollar a bushel it would require an immense outlay of money, but inasmuch as a great many of the farmers will hold their wheat for higher prices, the immediate demand for money will not be so great. The loans are all for six months. There is no question but that the Northwest crop of 1912 will be the greatest in 20 years, and the demand on the banks will be in proportion. In addition to the money we are required to furnish, there is also a great amount from Chicago and New York."

Crop Conditions More Favorable

Crop conditions are indicated by a Wells & Dickey Co. circular, showing them a trifle more favorable than a week previous, owing to general rains in North Dakota and Montana. It continues: "At least 80 per cent of our correspondents feel the crop is now saved, except in a few isolated localities, where more rain may be needed later."

"Corn is late, but showing good, steady, healthy growth. Barley harvest has started in South Dakota, and some winter rye in North Dakota. Winter rye crop shows excellent prospects. Early wheat is headed; in some localities the straw is short.

"Conditions generally throughout the Northwest augur well for a prosperous season."

Tribute to George C. Power

Resolutions by the directors of the Second National of St. Paul on the death of George C. Power, late president, read in part: "In our finite and limited view it would seem that Mr. Power has been taken from us at a time when he could least be spared. He had attained a very influential position, not only in this community, but among the business institutions of the Northwest.

"His painstaking devotion to work, loyalty to employers, integrity and high sense of honor, pronounced ability, and accurate knowledge of human nature, account in a large measure for his rise from errand boy to president.

"He was as simple, unostentatious and unassuming as a child, yet forceful, sane and wise."

Boosts California

F. H. Peterson, president of the Union State, back after three months in the West, mostly in Southern California, says: "Every man in that country is a 'booster'; they do things down there. Why, in Los Angeles county they have laid out 300 miles of roads, and have built 250 miles at a cost of $8,000 to $13,000 per mile. And such roads—every rod as good as Nicollet Avenue in its best portion; and they keep up the roads they have built."

Member of Chamber of Commerce

Charles G. Gates is now a full-fledged member of the Minneapolis Chamber of Commerce. He had his seat and has now been voted in. He has just returned to New York. "I think Minneapolis has the best chance for a big fall business of any western city," he said. "The crop outlook is certainly good."

Perry Harrison Says Crop Conditions are Good

Digesting reports from crop correspondents, Perry Harrison, vice-president of the Security National, says: "Such South Dakota reports as we have received are favorable. In all the reports we have not one that can be said to be bad. One reports rust in the grain and several speak of sufficient moisture and the desire for warm weather. All indicate that the possibility for any great loss or deterioration rapidly is passing and that only excess moisture or very serious general storms can sufficiently bring down the whole to make a material difference."

Banking Miscellany

Various aldermen in the Minneapolis council are worried over the alleged taintedness of $125,000 which Andrew Carnegie has offered for branch library buildings. Sane citizens have leaped to the fore to deny the taint and defy the tainters. One of these is Joseph Chapman, Jr. He says: "I think the talk about tainted money is the most foolish thing I ever heard of. I am in favor of taking as much as we can get. We need the libraries."

A prospect is announced of the State Bank of Commerce of Winnebago, Minn., being re-opened under the management of an Iowa banker. A committee of stockholders has presented the matter to Kelsey S. Chase, state superintendent of banks, and he arrived Thursday to confer.

W. Anderson, vice-president of the Scandinavian-American State of Badger, Minn., has filed as state representative from the sixty-first district, opposing D. P. O'Neill, Thief River Falls.

The Farmers and Merchants State of Donnelly, Minn., has incorporated with $15,000 capital. C. B. Kloss is president and C. C. Erstad is cashier. The surplus is $3,000.

The estate of the late George C. Power, president of the Second National, was probated at $8,000. Of this amount $6,000 is given as personal. The life insurance is understood to be $25,000.

The Farmers and Mechanics Savings has asked the city council tax committee to reduce the valuation of its property from $225,000. The bank says that in this amount is included tax-free mortgages and territorial bonds, the question of whose taxation is now in the courts. It was said that even including these items the total valuation would not exceed $189,000.

Paving bonds issued by St. Paul to the sum of $45,000 were bid at 5¼ per cent by Edwin White & Company, local house. Several other offers were made, but the White bid is expected to take a large proportion of the issue.

George A. Lyon, assistant cashier of the First, Minneapolis, returning from the Washington bankers' meeting at Tacoma, said: "We found business good in Washington compared with what it has been, and the depression seems to be lifting. The lumber business is much better and the crops are doing well."

After a Labrador fishing trip with James J. Hill of the Great Northern road, W. H. Dunwoody, director in the company and chairman of the Northwestern National, has returned. The trip was on the yacht "Wacouta."

WORK OF SOUTHERN COMMERCIAL CONGRESS

"Seeing South America" may be added to the prospectuses of railroads advertising tours to Washington, D. C., as a result of the joint efforts of Secretary of State Knox and President Fletcher of the Southern Commercial Congress to install in this city a permanent exhibition of South American products.

Ever drink yerba mate? They do in South America. It is only tea—the kind they grow in Paraguay. This will probably be one of the exhibits set out for the edification of Washington tourists. Peru may send up samples of her paltas and chirimoyas. These are tropical fruits. Think of the best Baldwin apple you ever tasted. Multiply its lusciousness by three, cut your apple in half, and eat it with a spoon. That is an unflattering portrait of the palta.

Llama wool, uncut emeralds from Colombia, diamonds from Brazil, rubber from the wild headlands of the Amazon, nitrate from Chile, cabinet woods from the interior jungles of the North, and what not in the way of Latin-America's products which the Panama Canal promises some day to make part of our everyday consumption, will probably form part of the exhibit. Then, too, South American countries are expected to show American sight-seers astonishing facts regarding their production of staple articles, of the grade of wheat raised in Argentina, of the cattle industry of Uruguay and the Argentine, of coffee from Brazil, and cocoa from Ecuador and Colombia.

The work of gathering this exhibition is being done directly by the Southern Commercial Congress. Secretary of State Knox has ordered the American diplomatic and consular officers in South America to lend their assistance to the work. The gathering of this exhibition is only one part of an extensive program for the expansion of Pan-American trade interests outlined by the Southern Commercial Congress. In the fall of 1913 the congress will hold a convention in Mobile, Ala. This is at the time of the opening of the Panama Canal, and it is proposed to have the Latin-American Republics represented at the convention by delegations. Secretary Knox is lending the congress the entire strength of the department of state in so far as it can be extended in behalf of a private organization. He believes that such work as that which the congress has undertaken will prove a great step in bettering relations between the United States and its Latin-American neighbors, and has, consequently, instructed both the diplomatic and consular officers to co-operate with the congress in every possible way.

BANKERS TO TOUR YELLOWSTONE PARK

The New York Central is arranging a special train for bankers to start from New York on August 24th. Those on board will tour Yellowstone Park, Salt Lake and the Colorado Rockies, and will consist of those bankers who expect to attend the convention of the American Bankers Association to be held in Detroit the week of September 9th. The train will go direct to Yellowstone Park via Chicago and St. Paul; it will be known as the "Red Section." After leaving the Park at the western gateway the bankers will go to Salt Lake City, where a brief stop will be made in order to enable them to visit the points of interest; thence they will proceed over the D. & R. G. to Glenwood Springs, through the Royal Gorge to Colorado Springs, and after making the usual side-trips, will go to Denver. The train will arrive in Detroit about four o'clock the afternoon of September 8th, and will land the bankers there in ample time to attend the convention. After the convention the tourists will leave Detroit on the new steamer, "City of Cleveland" for a trip across Lake Erie, after which they then will proceed to New York. The cost of the entire trip will be $250, which includes round-trip Pullman accommodations and expenses in Yellowstone Park; in fact, all expenses except hotel accommodations during the convention at Detroit and stateroom in steamer from Detroit to Buffalo. Full information will be furnished upon application to W. V. Lifsey, general eastern passenger agent, 1216 Broadway, New York City.

management. This cause has been appealed to the supreme court, has been argued ably and fully by a large array of counsel, but has not yet been decided.

The question of bank officers' liabilities is one which frequently comes up in connection with banking institutions which are wrecked by reason of the failure of other concerns in which such officers are interested.

In Elliott vs. Farmers Bank, 61 W. Va. 641, the following broad doctrine is laid down by the supreme court:

"The relationship of officers and directors of a corporation and stockholders and creditors is that of trustees and 'cestuis qui trustent.' This especially is true in regard to banking corporations where they owe an earlier duty to depositors, and if by their gross mismanagement and neglect loss is incurred, they will be rendered liable therefor to creditors and stockholders. Directors and officers of a banking corporation will not be relieved from such liability on account of ignorance or want of knowledge of those matters which it is their duty to know; and if they negligently entrust such matters to others, the loss incurred thereby should fall on them, and not upon their confiding depositors and stockholders."

A few of the recent leading cases of our supreme court of appeals will be noticed with a brief statement of the facts involved.

The cast of the American National Bank vs. Ritz, (74 S. E. R. 679) is one involving due notice to a bank. The plaintiff bank sued defendant Ritz on two negotiable notes on which he was endorser. The notes were given by the Southern West Virginia Fuel Company, and were discounted for the benefit of that company. Fowler, at whose request Ritz endorsed the notes, was president of the company and also president of the bank, and practically made the loan. Ritz also was a director in both corporations.

Defendant Ritz set up as defense that he was merely an accommodation endorser of the notes at the request of Fowler as president of the Fuel Company; that he signed the notes with a distinct understanding and agreement between himself and Fowler that the other directors of the company would endorse them before they were discounted, and that the notes should not be used until a writing was signed by all the directors stipulating that said directors as endorsers were liable only in proportion to their respective stock; that such a writing was prepared by him, signed by himself, Fowler and one other director, and that Fowler was to obtain the signatures of the other directors to this writing as well as on the notes before using same. Fowler, however, discounted the paper without getting the signatures of four directors, either to the agreement or on the notes. The defendant further claimed that at the time the notes were discounted, the bank had notice through its president, Fowler, of these agreements in the premises, and was therefore advised of the infirmity of the paper in relation to the defendant, when it became the holder of the same.

The trial by jury in the circuit court of Mercer county resulted in judgment for the defendant, but on writ of error this judgment was set aside by the supreme court, which held: Knowledge by one of the officials of a bank acquired in a capacity other than as its representative, relating to infirmity in commercial paper offered for discount, is not notice to the bank, when that official is also an officer of the corporation seeking the discount and has an interest in the transaction so adverse to the bank that the reasonable presumption is that he would not communicate the knowledge to it.

The case was remanded for a new trial, and defendant has another opportunity of proving other and proper notice to the bank. The opinion of the court was prepared by Judge Robinson.

The hard-fought case of Bank of Williamson vs. McDowell County Bank, (66 W. Va. 545), is one involving the question of mutual negligence. The facts are briefly as follows:

One D. B. Young had on deposit in the Bank of Williamson one thousand dollars, on which he never had drawn any checks. He resided in Kentucky, several miles from Williamson. A forged check for eight hundred dollars, drawn on the Bank of Williamson in favor of "George Horner" and purporting to be signed by D. B. Young, was presented to the McDowell County Bank, at Welch, by a stranger who wrote the name George Horner on the back of it, and delivered it to the bank. For some reason, the bank did not give him the cash or place the amount to his credit, but took the check for collection, and, after stamping the following endorsement upon it: "Pay to the order of any bank, banker or trust company. All prior endorsements guaranteed. McDowell County Bank, Welch, W. Va., I. J. Rhodes, Cashier," sent it to its correspondent at Williamson, W. Va., the Mingo County Bank, which endorsed it in a similar way; and the Bank of Williamson paid the amount thereof to the Mingo County Bank, which in turn paid it to the McDowell County Bank, where it was deposited to the credit of the person calling himself Geo. Horner, who afterwards withdrew it from the bank. Later, the forgery was discovered, the money was replaced to the credit of Young upon his demand, and a demand was made upon the defendant bank for reimbursement. The person who collected the check from the defendant bank was wholly unknown to the officers and agents of the bank, and they required from him no identification. No inquiry was made as to who he was.

No recovery was allowed by the drawee bank; and it was held: In taking a forged check from an unknown person, for collection, without inquiry as to his identity, and forwarding it for collection, after having taken the endorsement thereon of the reputed payee and placed its own unrestricted endorsement on the same, a bank omits a precautionary duty which the law merchant devolves upon it for the protection of the drawee, and makes a warranty of the genuineness of the signature of the payee, which it cannot afterwards deny; wherefore, it is liable to the drawee for the money paid on the check by the latter in ignorance of the forgery, unless the latter, by omitting some duty resting upon it, likewise is in fault.

If in such case both parties have been guilty of negligence, the drawee in failure to have in its possession any means of testing the genuineness of the signature of the drawer, and the paying bank in failing to have the payee identified, when he is unknown, the former cannot recover of the latter.

The exhaustive opinion of the court in this case was written by Judge Poffenbarger.

Pinkney vs. Kanawha Valley Bank (68 W. Va. 254) created considerable comment among the banking fraternity. Judge Miller delivered the opinion.

The bank received from Pinkney the check of Dent Brothers, endorsed by him, September 25th, about two o'clock P. M., and the letter enclosing it requested that it be placed to his credit. After being opened, the letter and check, along with other items, were laid aside by Dickinson, the cashier, for attention the following day. The next day, Dickinson, before forwarding the check for collection, phoned Champe, president of the Montgomery Bank upon which the check was drawn, to come to Charleston for consultation. Champe arrived about noon, saw Dickinson, who explained to him that his bank had this check of Dent Brothers for collection, and credit to Pinkney, but that he was unwilling to forward it to the Montgomery Bank, unless assured that that bank was in condition to send currency in payment. Champe professing to be ignorant about the actual condition of his bank, but expressing the opinion that it was all right and that the check would be paid, agreed to return to

Building Up a Bank by Increasing its Deposits

The question undoubtedly uppermost in the minds of all progressive bankers to-day is how to build up a bank; or, more properly speaking, how to increase a bank's deposits? Probably these matters are associated more intimately with bankers in the extreme West, for the reason that the tide of immigration has been "Westward, ho!" for a number of years, the result being large increase in population in cities and rapid development of farm lands. With the immigrant comes the capitalist and the business man, all with available funds for investment; also many well-to-do farmers who have disposed of holdings in the East and Middle West and travel towards the Pacific Ocean, looking for new and cheaper lands to conquer. Practically all of the classes mentioned have more or less funds in some bank, and the problem, if your institution is to show gains, is how to reach the newcomer. It is true that occasionally a thoughtful man will call upon the banker with whom he has been doing business at home, advise him of his contemplated removal and ask for a letter of introduction to a banker located in the place where the thoughtful man expects to locate. Such cases, while not infrequent, are small in number compared with the very large number of families that have moved West in the past few years, and have made banking connections after their arrival at their new homes.

To give an idea of the interest taken in the Pacific Coast states, let me say that our institutions ordered an issue of ten thousand maps of California, showing in detail everything of interest to the general public, and on the reverse side of which was another map giving all the postoffices near Los Angeles and all the many suburban electric car lines radiating out of that city. An attractive advertisement was placed in one magazine, with a catchy headline: "Coming to California?"—suggesting that, if interested, the reader send for a map. In less than six months ten thousand requests were received from all over the world, and it became necessary within the past few days to order a new supply of this map. As the suburban electric lines out of Los Angeles have increased materially, the new edition will be more attractive and more interesting to those contemplating settling in the Southwest.

It having been demonstrated that Los Angeles is growing rapidly, and having a most optimistic view that this growth not only will continue but that the ratio will be increased materially by the great good resulting from the opening of the Panama Canal, it behooves all wide awake, intelligent and conservative bankers to take such action as may be necessary to secure a share of the new business rapidly drifting westward. It always has been my opinion that the greatest asset a bank can have is its "satisfied depositors." Now the question arises: "What is a satisfied depositor and how may we secure him?" From a study of the situation it would appear that a satisfied depositor is one who feels thoroughly at ease in his banking home and one who considers it a pleasure to have frequent business transactions with the officers and employees of the institution to such an extent that he is willing to recommend his bank to friends, relatives or business associates, and to urge them to place their funds in an institution he has found eminently satisfactory in every respect.

Personality is a great factor in business life,

Motley H. Flint, Vice-President of the Los Angeles Trust, tells Idaho bankers of a plan which has made good. Extreme west has problems of its own and it absolutely is essential, in a well conducted institution, that each and every patron be treated with courtesy and cordiality. The officers always should be ready with a hearty handshake or a cheery smile, for it must be understood thoroughly that many a good account has been lost by a thoughtless word or a gruff answer to a question. It is a most difficult matter to be even-tempered at all times, but it absolutely is necessary that our tellers handle their customers in the most gracious manner possible and be ever ready with a word of greeting. One other essential detail in making satisfied depositors is prompt service, the impatience of the American public being so well known that it becomes vitally necessary that each and every request receive immediate attention and that lines at the tellers' windows be reduced to a minimum. Many a good account has been lost by an impatient depositor being required to wait in line at a teller's window, the idea suggesting itself to him that the bank is getting too large and does not place any value on his business. Without saying a word, his balance is withdrawn and the account transferred to an institution where more acceptable service is rendered.

Working in harmony with the theory that courteous treatment of customers absolutely is essential, western bankers should not overlook the fact that very frequently "a small account is of some account." Undoubtedly the correct method of conducting a bank is to figure the cost of each account; but, while the figures would show a loss on small accounts carried on the books, still it must be taken into consideration that in our western country the little fellow of to-day is not infrequently the big fellow of to-morrow, and a person with a small account may have many friends or relatives in the East who are looking longingly westward, and are endeavoring to dispose of their holdings in order to follow Horace Greeley's advice. The result is that if your patron with a small account is a satisfied depositor he will some day in the future introduce his friend or relative at your bank and secure for you an account with a very satisfactory balance.

Proper advertising will bring results, but the advertising of to-day has become a science, and to secure results careful thought and study must be given to this very important feature in connection with bank publicity work. Thousands of dollars are wasted each year in souvenirs and improperly written or placed advertisements, whereas under proper supervision the money thus expended or wasted would bring excellent results. With the constant arrival of strangers and the ever changing and migratory population of the West, it would seem almost essential that the advantages of your bank should be placed properly before them and, while some of our very best bankers strongly criticize the bank advertising of to-day, still experience and statistics show very clearly that proper publicity on legitimate lines, handled under proper and correct supervision, can and will bring the bank excellent results. One thing is certain: the majority of the colonists, home seekers, business men or mechanics who intend to move from the East or Middle West ultimately will open accounts and you either must have their good will before they leave their old homes or get in touch with them immediately after their arrival in the far West, for the average man carries with him funds in the shape of exchange or sufficient cash to meet immediate travel necessities.

The question for you to decide: Are you getting your share of this new business and are your customers satisfied and working for the good of your institution? If not, perhaps a little inside work in the bank with your clerical force, a sufficient amount of good advertising persistently carried into effect, a jogging up of the officers, will result in increasing your business and deposits; and you also will have the pleasure of knowing that your depositors not only are satisfied but are your friends, and are making really, and in fact, a small account a good account.

SIDELIGHTS ON THE OHIO CONVENTION

A. W. Burnett, president of the Bankers Guaranty Title and Trust Company, Akron, was one of the live wires in attendance at the Ohio state bankers convention held at Cedar Point recently. This company, operating under a state charter, has capital and surplus of $187,500, fully paid up, and is required to deposit $50,000 with the state. Mr. Burnett and Lorenzo D. Brown, cashier of the First-Second National of Akron, were busy while in Cedar Point handing out literature and pamphlets descriptive of their respective institutions and cities in general.

One of the regular attendants at the meetings of the Ohio Bankers Association is C. D. Schaffner, cashier of the Marion County Banking Company, Marion, Ohio. This bank has capital and surplus of $350,000 and deposits of $557,000. Warren G. Harding, who nominated President Taft at the Chicago convention, is a director of this bank.

The First National of Lewistown, Mont., will erect a new bank building.

Accounts of Iowa banks invited. Reserve agents for national banks

Articles of incorporation have been filed for the establishment of a savings bank at Grand Mound; the name of the bank will be The Farmers and Merchants Savings Bank, and will be capitalized at $20,000. The charter tenure is fifty years. Conrad Brick is to be president.

Des Moines, July 17.—Waterloo is about to join those Iowa cities which boast of a bank with a capital stock of $400,000 or over. The Commercial National of that city has voted to increase the capital stock from $200,000 to $400,000 and the surplus from $50,000 to $100,000. The undivided profits will be increased to $75,000 so that the bank will have practically $600,000 working capital. This is a big move for the Commercial National and it has attracted much attention over the state. There are only three other Iowa banks with a larger capitalization than the Waterloo institution will have. Two are in Des Moines and one is at Davenport, while Sioux City has one of equal capitalization. Twelve years ago this Waterloo bank had a capital of $50,000 and a surplus of $10,000. These amounts were doubled in 1900. Three years later the bank increased its capital to $200,000 and its surplus to $50,000. In the meantime the bank had adopted the policy of soliciting deposits from banking houses in northeastern Iowa. This has proved of high value and the bank now has deposits of approximately $2,500,000. The officers at present are: W. W. Miller, president; E. W. Miller, F. C. Platt and George E. Lichty, vice-presidents; H. C. Schultz, cashier, and H. W. Wente, assistant cashier. The increase in capital stock will take place on August first.

Waterloo Bank Acquires New Property

Another important bank deal is announced from Waterloo in the acquiring by the Leavitt and Johnson National of that city, for $150,000, of the property adjoining that already owned by the institution. This deal gives the bank a frontage of 140 feet on Commercial Street and makes a splendid location for the permanent home which this institution expects to erect within the coming year or so. O. C. Miller, for fifty years a resident of Waterloo, was the principal seller and it is probable that he will remove from Iowa to the far West. The Leavitt and Johnson National is the oldest financial institution in Waterloo and is one of the strongest banks in Iowa. It now is possessed of much valuable real estate in Waterloo and in such locations that its market value is certain to increase.

Col. W. F. Baker Relieved of Pocketbook

Col. W. F. Baker of Council Bluffs, well known largely through his continued agitation for improved highways, was the recipient recently of a conscience pocketbook that convinces him that there still is honor among thieves. Col. Baker was "touched" for his pocketbook while trying to board a crowded street car. Within the purse were two one-dollar bills and a check for $219, the latter endorsed and negotiable. Some days later he was surprised to receive the pocketbook through the mail. The dollar-bills were gone but the check had not been cashed. Apparently the thieves had considered it a risky undertaking to attempt to pass as Col. Baker, and had made up their minds to be content with $2.

Good Advice to Col. Roosevelt

Captain Albert Head, one of the well-known bankers of Jefferson, and rated a millionaire, is attracting some little attention in the Iowa newspapers from a telegram which he sent to Col. Theodore Roosevelt advising the latter not to be a candidate. The banker framed up his telegram like this: "Dear Colonel—Don't monkey with the third term buzz-saw. It will be more fatal than the third term and Wall Street steam roller at the Chicago convention. Remember Horace Greeley. Let your followers vote as they please. They belong to the class that knows how to govern themselves. I'll vote for Wilson and stay in the republican party. I will write fully later. Respectfully yours, Albert Head." Captain Head was once speaker of the Iowa house of representatives, and his son, M. M. Head of Jefferson, is tenth district member of the republican state central committee.

Tax Convention to Meet in Des Moines

Preparations are being made for the national tax convention which meets in Des Moines, September 3d, 4th and 5th. Governor Carroll is sending out invitations to the tax experts all over the country asking them to be present. There will be 151 accredited delegates, but the governor expects a great number of visitors who are interested in taxation problems.

Iowa Banking Notes

W. A. Cunningham has purchased the interest of E. G. and E. K. Ray in the Citizens Savings at Anamosa. E. K. Ray retires as cashier, and W. F. Hellberg, formerly assistant cashier, succeeds him.

H. A. Ahlers has been elected one of the vice-presidents of the Le Mars Savings at Le Mars.

J. C. Morrow, president of the First National at Washington, Kan., died last week at his home in that city. He is a brother of W. W. Morrow, state treasurer for Iowa, and the latter attended the funeral. Both the decedent and the state treasurer are well known in Iowa and especially in Iowa financial circles.

H. S. Abbott has disposed of his interest in the Milford National at Milford, of which he has been cashier for seven years, to E. L. Ewen. He probably will remove to California. Mr. Ewen was chosen assistant cashier of the bank while F. A. Heldridge was chosen cashier. He formerly was assistant cashier.

Arthur Reynolds, president of the Des Moines National, has gone to New York to confer with the members of the executive council of the A. B. A. This is the meeting at which plans for the national convention at Detroit are being formulated.

Pictures of the late C. J. A. Ericson, the well-known Boone banker, have been presented to the Ericson Library by his daughter, Miss Rena. The City Bank, of which Ericson was president, also was given one of the pictures, and other institutions in which the deceased was interested were remembered.

The state treasury likely is to be increased some $50,000 from the estates of the late O. H. Perkins of Des Moines and the Hanley Brothers of Granger. Both estates go to collateral heirs, and the state will get a collateral inheritance tax that will be one of the largest received in months.

"The Central State" is to be the name of a new bank at State Center. State Center is said to be the center of Iowa, and the bank in selecting its title chose a name that seems characteristic of its surroundings.

The Elkader State has reorganized and filed articles with the secretary of state, giving capital stock of $30,000.

The Melbourne Savings has increased its capital stock from $11,000 to $16,000.

The State Bank of Jewell has filed articles with the secretary of state. The capital stock is $25,000. The incorporators include W. E. Anderson, G. T. Chamberlain, J. C. Hansen, Gilbert Knudsen, E. W. Knudsen and Carl Miller.

Dr. W. N. McNaughton, whose recent death occurred at Villisca, left an estate of $300,000 to be divided among his wife and two daughters. Some of the property consisted of bank stock, but the major part was real estate.

The State Bank of Laurens has renewed its articles, giving capital stock of $50,000.

George T. Keeler, assistant cashier of the Farmers and Merchants at Mount Pleasant, has resigned to become cashier of the Ravenswood National at Chicago. Mr. Keeler has many Iowa friends who will rejoice in his promotion.

Charles N. Voss, the well-known Davenport banker, has been granted a two-months' vacation with all expenses paid by the directors of the German Savings. This is in appreciation of the splendid efforts which Mr. Voss has made in improvement of the institution, which is regarded as one of the best and most popular in Iowa.

The Citizens Savings is the name of a new bank at Oakland. The articles as filed with the secretary of state give the capital stock at $30,000. The officers are W. H. Freeman, president; L. F. Potter, vice-president; W. W. McRory, cashier; F. A. Nash and J. Q. McPherrin, additional directors.

The Citizens Savings of Riverside filed articles with the secretary of state giving capital stock of $15,000. The president is Frank Critz; vice-president, Anthony Yeggy; cashier, Leo C. Critz. Additional directors include Richard Helzman and John Knittell.

The Huxley Savings at Huxley has voted to increase its capital stock from $10,000 to $15,000. The name of the institution will be changed to the above from the Farmers Savings, by which title it has been known in the past.

The Farmers Savings at Massena is occupying quarters in the postoffice building while its new structure is being completed. The new building will be a credit to the town, and to the bank which is to call it home.

Cashier O. E. Wesenberg of the State Savings at Corwith has resigned to become connected with the Armstrong Manufacturing Company, at Waterloo.

The stockholders of the Farmers Bank at Rockwell are preparing to organize the First National of that town. The officers of the former also will be in charge of the new institution.

The Citizens State at New Sharon has made some handsome improvements in its interior and has been decorated nicely and painted.

The Farmers and Merchants and the Gravity State are vying with each other in the matter of improvements. Both are making extensive changes in the structures which they occupy.

An outing at Linwood the last of the month is being arranged for by the local bankers, the party to leave Davenport by steamer in the afternoon following the close of business. A ball game and dinner will be the feature of the outing. The arrangements for the event are in charge of a committee of which George Hamann of the Scott County Savings Bank is chairman.

Announcement has been made that on August 1st the capital stock of the Commercial National Bank of the city of Waterloo will be increased from $200,000 to $400,000. The surplus will be increased from $50,000 to $100,000. The Commercial carries deposits of nearly two and one-half millions. This is the third time in twelve years that the Commercial National has felt the necessity of doubling its capital stock in order to take care of increasing business.

Big Land Deal in Cherokee

One of the largest land deals ever made in Cherokee county was closed recently when Robert Gracey, director and principal stockholder in the First State at Holstein, disposed of his 400 acres of land in Marcus township. The purchasers are F. W. Cave and Emanuel Pierce. Mr. Cave took 160 acres unimproved at $162.60 per acre. Mr. Pierce got 80 acres, unimproved, at $162.50 and 160 acres with improvements, at $206.25 per acre. That makes a total of $72,000 for the 400 acres. The land all is classed with the best in the county and no doubt soon will be worth more money. Mr. Gracey still owns 640 acres of Cherokee county soil.

By JOHN J. BIDDISON

An important ruling by Circuit Judge W. G. Rice, at Deadwood, S. D., probably will result in escape from punishment on the part of the officials of the defunct Meade County Bank of Sturgis, S. D., a possibility had the case come to trial. The judge has held the law under which they were indicted to be unconstitutional, by reason of the fact that the legislature, in passing it, slipped a criminal clause into a civil law, without indicating it in the title of the bill. The indictments were found to be adequate, but the court considered the flaw in the passage of the bill sufficient to invalidate it, and the demurrer of the defendants was sustained. The bank now is in the hands of the state examiner, undergoing liquidation.

Had King Midas lived in Iowa and traded in Iowa farms he might have had more excuse for his fame, as well as enjoyed the privilege of eating something beside gold. John McCarley, a Williams, Ia., banker probably was not granted any "wish" by a fairy; but if he was, there is no danger of his wanting it taken away, for he has been coining money hand over fist, just by buying and selling farm lands.

Mr. McCarley is president of the First National. About a year ago he bought a quarter section of land, which he lately sold at an advance of $35 an acre. Another section purchased about the same time has been sold at an advance of $40 an acre, while still another piece netted the cozy profit of $55 an acre. These three farms, therefore, have turned in a profit in a year of $20,000 and better.

Another piece near Williams, not handled by Mr. McCarley, has been turned four times within a month, each time at an advance over the preceding sale of $10 an acre.

The suicide of R. H. Williams, cashier of the State Bank of South Shore, S. D., has brought to light a shortage of $500 in his accounts. He had been connected with a grain elevator in the town, in which was stored $14,000 worth of grain owned by farmers of the section. He disposed of the grain and used some of it to speculate on the board of trade, losing heavily. He drew on a grain firm for $500 and placed the draft in his bank to the credit of the farmers. When he could not make good on the draft and faced exposure, he chose the suicide route. Telling his wife he was going out to shoot a weasel, he took a rifle to his chicken house and shot himself, dying soon after. Williams was an Englishman and had been in this country only a year. He was sent by his family because of his eccentricities, but had lived uprightly, it was supposed, until the time of his defalcation.

Caught with the goods and desiring to plead guilty, Frank Williams, known as "Dakota George," has been turned over to the federal authorities by the police of Huron, S. D., and will be lodged in Sioux Falls until September. Williams is wanted by the Burns agency for the blowing of a safe in a bank at Emmetsburg, Ia., as well as for several other robberies.

M. W. Fity, president of the Farmers Savings Bank of Manson, Ia., his wife and his son and several others, have departed to spend three months in Europe.

Excavation is in progress for the new building of the First National Bank of Carroll, Ia.

Plans are being prepared for a new building for the Magnet State Bank, of Magnet, Nebraska.

L. A. McMurray, president of the Hamilton County State Bank, of Webster City, has been elected president of the Ellsworth State Bank, of Ellsworth, Ia., succeeding the late M. H. Brinton.

Among the Visiting Bankers

C. H. Cassill, former treasurer of South Dakota, and a former banker at Canton, S. D., now a resident of Spokane, Wash., was in Sioux City Wednesday.

Montgomery, make an investigation and telephone Dickinson. About nine o'clock that evening he did telephone Dickinson the message, "O. K.," meaning, as arranged, that he had found his bank could and would send the money for the check. Dickinson, having held the check all that day, on receipt of this message, at once enclosed it and a letter of advice, printed form, in an envelope addressed to the drawee bank at Montgomery, and shortly afterwards deposited it in the post-office at Charleston. The printed form of this letter said: "We enclose for credit," but plainly written below, the letter said: "Kindly ship us currency for above on No. 3," meaning No. 3. C. & O. train arriving at Charleston about noon. At the same time Dickinson wrote Pinkney on a printed form, advising him of the receipt of the check and saying: "Your favor of the 25th inst. with stated inclosure received. We credit your account, $2,500. Thank you. . . . Foreign items credited subject to payment." The letter to the bank reached Montgomery by the mail leaving Charleston about 3 A. M. of the morning of September 27th, and was actually delivered to the bank at the opening of the bank that morning. The check was not otherwise presented for payment to the bank that day. The money was not sent as requested by defendant's letter of advice, but instead was debited some time that day to Dent Brothers and credited to the Kanawha Valley Bank. Champe was at the bank that morning when the bank opened, saw the check, was there several times afterwards during the day to see if a deposit which Sims, a director, had gone after, and out of which it was intended to pay this Dent Brothers check, had arrived, the last time about twelve o'clock M., and the deposit not arriving, he returned to Charleston, reaching there about 2 o'clock P. M., explained to Dickinson the condition of the bank, and why the money had not been sent, consulted counsel, and as a result, on application a receiver of the bank was appointed and the bank closed. The defendant bank that evening sent an attorney to Montgomery to try and get the Dent Brothers check. On arriving he went to the bank, made demand for the check with a view of making demand for payment, and if not paid to have it protested. But Coleman, in charge of the bank, refused his demand, giving some reason, probably that it had passed through the books, or had been charged to Dent Brothers and credited to the defendant. At all events the check was not recovered, protested or returned to Pinkney, but, after the receiver was appointed, was returned to Dent Brothers as a paid and cancelled check. The next day, the 28th, Dickinson wrote Pinkney, also Dent Brothers, at Montgomery, advising them that the check had been duly presented, payment demanded and refused, of which he had been advised that morning, and to do what they might think necessary to protect their interests.

Held: It is negligence for a collecting bank to send checks direct to a drawee bank. The drawee bank who is to pay the check is not a suitable agent for its collection, and the fact that the drawee bank is the only one at the place where it is located constitutes no exception to the rule.

The qualification of the general two-day rule, allowed for forwarding paper for presentment is, that if there be more than one mail on the second day it need not go by the first, but, if there be but one, it must go by it unless it leaves or closes at an unreasonably early hour. The whole of the second day is not allowed, unless the last mail of that day goes at the close of business.

A collecting bank, knowing of the depressed financial condition of the debtor, is delinquent in its duty if it neglects to inform its customer of such vital condition, and fails to take vigorous measures under the circumstances to secure payment, and if loss occurs by its negligence to exercise. That degree of skill, care and diligence which the nature of its undertaking calls for, with reference to the time, place and circumstances surrounding the undertaking, it will incur liability to its principal for the loss sustained.

Interesting cases recently decided in other jurisdictions may be briefly noted.

In Richardson vs. Cheney (146 N. Y. App. Div. 686), a bank discounted notes for the plaintiff and took from him as collateral security a check for $2,000 and charged his account with $2,000. The bank suspended; the notes were duly paid; the plaintiff sued to recover the $2,000 left as collateral security, but the court held he must share as a general creditor.

In Slein vs. Empire Trust Company (133 N. Y. Supp. 517), it was held when a forged check is deposited, the bank may charge back to the depositor's account the amount of the check, just like any other check which is returned unpaid for any other reason.

Notice of dishonor by telephone has been held good in Bank vs. Fertilizer Company (143 S. W. Rep. 597; Tenn.), but it must be given direct to the party bound or his agent. It is not sufficient to simply talk to a clerk or other employee of such person, without inquiring his name or relation to such person.

A hard case from the standpoint of the bank was Russell vs. First National Bank (56 South 868), decided by the appellate court of Alabama, wherein it was held that the signature to a deed signed by a man other than the owner of the property but bearing the same name was a forgery, and that his endorsement of the check erroneously given him in payment thereof was likewise a forgery, and that the bank was liable to the drawer of the check. In that case it would seem the purchaser of the property was at fault in not properly identifying its owner rather than the bank which was not a party to that mistake.

An Arkansas case (Commission Company vs. Bank, 140 Southwestern 992) holds that when a bank accepts the check of a depositor, it is liable for the amount thereof, without reference to the state of the drawer's account. Furthermore, in an Oklahoma case it is held (Bank vs. School District, 120 Pacific 614) that no obligation attaches to the drawer of a check until same is accepted and the check is revocable until presented and paid. In a recent case in Maryland (Mfg. Co. vs. Bank, 81 Atlantic 294), a draft accepted by a bank from a depositor, and discounted, was held as the property of the bank as against the depositor's creditors.

Two New York cases decided this year (Shattuck vs. Guardian Trust Company, and National Park Bank vs. Koehler) both were decided against the bank by the highest court of the state. The former involved the forgery of one of two necessary signatures to a check, and the latter an extension of time for payment beyond maturity without the consent of the endorser.

bad the average school attendance shows 59 out of each 100 pupils enrolled, and that in five states having uniformly good roads, 78 out of each 100 pupils enrolled regularly attended school. This means that of each 100 children 19 more were being educated in the good roads states than in the bad roads states, or 19,000 out of each 100,000 children. You can easily verify these facts by observing the schools in your own community, and instituting a comparison between those on the good roads and those on the bad roads. Consider further the well-known fact that from those desolate regions which are cut off from communication with the outside world because of bad roads the boys and girls are moving to the city where the struggle for existence is keener, and where the physical and moral influence tends rather to deteriorate than to build up the standard of manhood and womanhood. To-day 47 out of every 100 people in this country live in cities of 2,500 inhabitants or more. Good roads would check the trend of the population to the cities and would constitute a strong invitation to the city dwellers to remove to the country, and thus bring about a better balance in population and production.

I have traced the good roads movement, and have assured you that it is now well organized, and on a sound basis; I have pointed out to you some of the reasons why it merits your support. The question now arises as to what steps should be taken to bring about an improvement in these adverse conditions. The purposes and objects of the American Association for Highway Improvement are capable of accomplishment, and they have intrinsic merit. It is a self-evident fact that the thousands of influential citizens working as a unit can accomplish infinitely more than these citizens could by working separately. Hence it follows that if the question is of sufficient importance, if the purposes of the association are practical and meritorious, tangible results must follow. The culmination of this year's work will be had in the great American Road Congress to be held at Atlantic City September 30th to October 5th. President Taft and Governor Wilson will be there, and all of the forces now striving for good roads will be represented. I earnestly trust that the Bankers Association of West Virginia will be represented by a large and enthusiastic delegation.

(Mackintosh vs. Gibbs, 81 N. J. 577) that the negotiability of such a note, even if it fell due after the act took effect, must be determined by the prior law.

There are a number of cases pending under the uniform law in this state in which final decisions have not yet been reached.

I take it that all will agree that the adoption of the negotiable instruments act by the legislature of a large number of states has had the effect not only of bringing about greater uniformity, but in making more plain, certain and general the controlling rules of law on this subject. The design of the act was to obliterate state lines as to the law governing instrumentalities so essential to the conduct of interstate commerce as checks, promissory notes and bills of exchange, to remove confusion and uncertainty which might arise from conflict of statutes or judicial decisions in the various states, and to codify the law relating to negotiable instruments and to make it certain, clear and uniform throughout the country. While it does not cover the whole field it is decisive of all matters comprehended within its terms. Its words are given their natural and common meaning under the prevailing principles of statutory interpretation. The decisions of the courts of any state where the act is in effect are given great weight and respect by those of the other states that have adopted it, so that in time general harmony and clearness will be attained in the interpretation of commercial law.

The ultimate effect of this legislation will be less litigation and its attendant delay and greater certainty and security in the transaction of your highly important business, so essential to the successful conduct of every other business.

NORTHWEST CROP CONDITIONS GOOD

The Northwestern National letter on the Northwest crop conditions as reported at Minneapolis says: "Reports of the crop situation throughout the Northwest generally continue favorable. After two years of diminished moisture in many localities it seemed that the spring was sufficiently wet to restore the ground to a normal condition. Despite this fact the rains of the past two weeks, which have been unusually satisfactory in volume and distribution, were hailed with delight by the farmers. Although such a bountiful supply of moisture was not perhaps an absolute necessity at this time, the condition of the crops generally has been greatly improved by the rainfall, and a reserve supply of moisture is in the earth which puts still further into the future the possibility of a serious drought."

SEASON'S NEW BOOKS

One of the season's most attractive new books is a love story entitled "Rosemary for Remembrance," by Helen Sherman Griffith. The book comes from the Penn Publishing Company. It is illustrated, and has a beautiful cover in colors. The tale is one of two families separated by a difference which had not been adjusted, attempting to keep separate and apart a beautiful young woman, and an eligible young bachelor, who are deperately in love with each other. Perhaps the most engaging character is "Grandma," a fine old lady who is the good genius of her own family, and of most of those who live in the town and vicinity. David Hollister meets Rosemary at sunrise one spring morning with the natural result. Rosemary's mother sides with the young couple, but her father remains obdurate, which gives rise to a great number of interesting episodes and contributes to the well-known legend that "true love never runs smoothly." Finally the mother makes a superb sacrifice, becomes the heroine of the neighborhood, and the young couple are united. For sale at all booksellers at $1.20 net.

From the Penn Publishing Company also comes a beautiful little book entitled, "Grandma," devoted to the life, character, and deeds of one of those sweet, mild-mannered old ladies of whom everybody has had some knowledge during his lifetime. It has to do with Sunday schools, neighborhood events, sewing circles, and the small social pastimes of the neighborhood. For gift purposes to just such a grandmother as is described, or to anyone having such a relative or acquaintance, this little book will come as a treat.

INDIANA STATE BANK LEASES QUARTERS

The Indiana State Bank, which has had a tentative existence for several weeks, and which will be incorporated before long, has leased the quarters of the Continental National Bank, 18 Meridian street, Indianapolis, and will occupy the same some time before Oct. 1. The Continental National is to remove to the quarters of the old Capital National in the Commercial Club building. The Indiana State Bank will be capitalized at $1,000,000 and will have a surplus of $200,000. It is reported that more than $400,000 of its stock has been subscribed.

A number of provincial bankers in Indiana will hold stock in this new institution. While no definite statement has been issued as to the officers of the Indiana State Bank, it is generally understood that Francis I. Galbreth, of Sunman, Ind., and Fremont Goodwine, of Indianapolis, will be vice-presidents, former Attorney General James Bingham will act as attorney-general, and F. L. Murray, who represents Swift & Co., will be on the board. The proposed bank expects to begin business with something like $1,500,000 in deposits. A number of state banks at various points in Indiana are said to have pledged the new bank their backing.

8th an organization meeting will be held at the Waldorf-Astoria.

RESERVATIONS can be made through George B. Caldwell at the Continental and Commercial Trust, or direct, through George Thompson, general agent of the Lake Shore line, Chicago.

THERE should be a good attendance, since prompt and intelligent support will make the movement a success from the start. The A. B. A. will take notice, all right. The Big Council is too wise to pass up a demonstrated good thing.

ALL legitimate bond and investment houses are invited to send a "delegate." Had the term not been politically abused the "new life" fellows—Caldwell, Bowman, Hayden, etc.—might be called the progressives. They're hummers, all right!

SECRETARY F. R. FENTON says that "from the large number of responses received from bond houses and banks with bond departments all over the country, it is thought that the meeting will be a very interesting one and well attended, and that the new association which will be formed at that time will start out with a very representative membership."

ADVOCATES of the new association are very anxious to have co-operation in this effort to form a high-grade organization, which will have for its purpose the betterment of the investment banking business. The first two hundred and fifty applications will, when accepted, be classified as charter members. Now is the time to get in line!

JEFFRIES & CO., private bankers, send out a circular letter saying, "the officers ('of the larger banks') cannot give the attention to you which you might expect, even were they inclined to do so."

THE words in black face type are basely insinuating and an offense to all officers in the big clearing house banks. The "carpet" ought to be spread for such persons, and their clearing bank and the clearing house should purge their list of all such ungrateful beneficiaries who seek to profit by creating public prejudice against legitimate banks. There are persons, no doubt, who will believe such rot to be true.

TWENTY-THIRD session of the Trans-Mississippi Commercial Congress will be held in Salt Lake August 27th-30th this year.

THE last meeting was held at Kansas City last year, where Messrs. Aldrich, Reynolds and Laughlin and President Fuqua of the Texas Bankers Association all spoke on the currency question. It also will be discussed at Salt Lake.

ARTHUR C. TRUMBO of Muskogee, Okla., is president. Both as a banker and as presiding officer he urges all bankers to attend. There is no organization of like character that has done so much for the western states in the securing of necessary legislation and appropriations from our federal congress for western projects. Discussions are open to all those who feel a deep interest in western development, and the congress is not under the control of any individual or any interests. It absolutely is living up to that progressive motto "The free forum of the West."

GOVERNORS can appoint delegates, and state and national officials, including congressmen and senators, are members ex-officio.

THE Colonel has substituted "Thou shall not steal" for his tariff reform plank, but most of us think the high tariff itself is a steal?

WHEN it's ninety in the shade and the crossing policeman is buttoned clear up to the chin is he a copper boiler?

AND, what's more, the Finns didn't win a single swimming event at Stockholm.

IF La Follette keeps after T. R., wanting to know where he got his pre-convention money and what he did with it, a Third Party issue will be formed. Look over the Colonel's whole career and see if anything he has said or done entitles him to rank with the Wisconsin Progressive?

HERE'S a La Follette plank from the Wisconsin state constitution:

Every person is entitled to a certain remedy in the law for all injuries or wrongs which he may receive in his person, property or character; he ought to obtain justice freely and without being obliged to purchase it; completely and without denial, promptly and without delay, conformably to the laws.

THAT plank is 'way over the head of the Bull Moose.

MISSOURI association has increased its bonding business materially by shifting its agency to a local company at St. Louis. The ousted company has been cutting rates and talking nasty but "you all" know Keyser?

WARNING NOTICE! (Double extry.) E. J. Bowman of Anaconda and W. D. Vincent of Spokane are to stop over in Chicago on their way to the big meet at Detroit. Both are members of council and are Chapman boomers for 1913.

WOODROW WILSON said the other day when asked about the inelasticity of the currency: "My dear sir, inaccessibility would be a better understood term."

CASHIER.

CLERKS IMPRISONED IN VAULT

A somewhat amusing incident, involving the enforced imprisonment of two clerks in the strongroom of the Boheman Bank of Prague, occurred the other day.

While the clerks were engaged in detaching coupons from bonds the manager was showing the strongroom and the mechanism of the armor plated door to the director of a provincial bank, and inadvertently locked the door upon them. A few minutes later the manager tried to open it, but could not. Locksmiths were called in, and though they worked hard the whole day they failed to unlock the door.

The Berlin firm who constructed the strongroom sent some mechanics by express train to Prague, but their endeavors were likewise in vain. It was only after thirty hours of toil and search that the spring was discovered, the door opened, and the two prisoners were released. During their imprisonment they had been fed with milk supplied through an India rubber tube slipped through an airhole.

YE EDITOR, J. HARRY ASHLEY

The past week saw an editorial change in "The Bank Man," official paper of the Chicago Chapter, A. I. B. For the past year, Joseph J. Schroeder of the National Bank of the Republic has wielded the brush and scissors at the head of the table. He has been succeeded, as a part of the new administration by J. Harry Ashley, who has done faithful work on the committee the past year. Mr. Schroeder advises "more personals" as the only thing that gives real "life" to the paper.

tion? Oh, yes. They're getting in training to put quarter back Ingwersen in the president's chair at Des Moines next year.

SUPPOSE Arthur Reynolds is promoted at Detroit? Ah, there, you vacancy!

BY the way, Mr. Reynolds has just returned from New York where he went to attend a meeting of the committee on administration. The new offices were opened and New York bankers called by the score. Then the Carolina bankers, on tour, happened to be in town and they all came in, so Col. Fred was a busy man for a while.

THE embarrassment of a large national bank in one of the reserve cities of the state of Ohio, and the subsequent taking over of the assets of the institution by the Clearing House Association of the city, is another illustration of the usefulness of that institution.

MOREOVER, it is another excellent example of the spirit which dominates the organization uniting the banking resources of any particular community in time of trouble. Time and time again have mild panics been averted, stringency been relieved, and weak though solvent institutions assisted, though the instrumentality of the clearing house organization.

TO read the questions of the Pujo committee one would suppose clearing houses had anything else than the public good for a governing motive. The history of the Chicago Clearing House is the history of all.

ALWAYS they are governed by the very leading bankers of the town or city. They are the chiefest of all the stop-loss institutions of the country. They prevent bank failures in a hundred other less conspicuous ways than by taking over assets. That is a last resort.

TIME will come when the public will appreciate the work done by these volunteer associations in completing what the banking laws have left off in the way of safety-provisions.

PERHAPS the new law, when we get one, will leave them less to do. In the meantime they are the life insurance of our credit and banking system.

MR. WILSON owes his nomination to the fight that T. R. made here, and the fight that Bryan made at Baltimore; that is conceded even by such tory journals as the New York Times. Wilson was rammed down the throats of the majority to head off Roosevelt. Ergo, (1) the democratic party as a whole is progressive, and (2) a progressive republican ought to vote for Wilson.—Chicago Tribune.

"THE CHICAGO OF TO-MORROW" articles in the S. W. Strauss & Co. magazine, should be printed in booklet form—pictures and all. Nothing better in type.

WHEN a teacher asked a class to define elocution, a little girl said it was the way some states put people to death.—George E. Nolan.

NEW ORLEANS clearing house is the latest convert to the Chicago plan of maintaining a special examiner. A little touch of trouble makes quick converts to the modern, scientific method of self-protection.

GEN. J. W. WHITING has resigned the presidency of the Peoples Bank of Mobile after many years of faithful service. Vice-President J. W. Little was promoted to the position. Gen. Whiting is one of the most interesting of men. To him fell the lot (during the late unpleasantness) of defending Mobile Bay against the forces under Admiral Faragut. The general tells the story well and modestly.

Of course, if the Detroit hotel reservations are not to be available until Sunday the big Chicago special will be changed from Saturday to one day later.

H. N. TINKER is the president of the new First Trust of Portland. He has had banking experience in St. Louis and Houston.

A PORTLAND banker writes that "the wreck of the Oregon Trust and Savings Bank was due to the fact that Louis J. Wilde, who helped float the Omaha Telephone Company, unloaded more than $1,100,000 worth of this class of securities on the bank through Cashier Cooper Morris, who now is serving a term in the penitentiary for his part of the transaction."

SURE thing! Hasn't the comptroller been telling for years that of all plans for breaking a bank this is the surest and quickest?

JAMES O. MOORE, one of the assistants to John W. Wilson, clearing house examiner, has been elected cashier of the International Savings and Exchange of Los Angeles. He will be succeeded by Leo H. Martin, at present of St. Helena, Cal.

W. D. VINCENT has said that in his opinion the afternoon spent in the discussion of the "Back to the farm movement" was the most instructive part of the Washington convention. "Everyone was so interested in the subject," said Mr. Vincent, "that the entire convention remained in session until seven in the evening."

"HOW do you compare Pittsburgh 'Money' with Cleveland 'Finance'?" writes a correspondent. "Money" is just a little bit thicker than "Finance."

"MONEY" takes a rap at "Financial Age" anent its strictures upon "official organs." That was a narrow escape at Bedford Springs!

EVERY time we see the name of J. J. Sullivan of Ohio we think of our own old comrade-in-arms, Ezra D. Durham. For 'steven years or more they have been going upon the platform at the close of conventions, pinning on retiring and incoming badges, bestowing cups, gavels, etc., and emitting a line of talk with weeps in every paragraph.

SORT of social undertakers! Every state association has, or ought to have, their counterpart. They ease the suffering of the departing and swell up the incoming with glowing predictions. May they be with us yet these many years.

WITHOUT such, many a vote of thanks never would be tendered, and many a comforting resolution never would be penned. You may smile at this, but their services have been real and disinterested.

DUDLEY E. WATERS, Grand Rapids, is the new member of the Big Council from Michigan. He is an ex-president of the state association and chairman of the board of the National City Bank.

JOSEPH SHATTUCK, JR., will go on from Massachusetts. He is a banker at Springfield.

WALTER H. BENNETT, retiring president of the state association, was elected from New York.

J. E. CLINTON, City National at Boise, is the new member from Idaho.

J. L. BELL will go on from North Dakota if—only a few more members are secured. Mr. Bell is a banker at Bismarck and is co-operating with H. P. Beckwith, present member from Fargo, to help put it over.

EVERY indication is that better and still better men are going on the Big Council yearly, and we give them just one more year to produce a scientific business program for conducting the affairs of the association justly and economically. No outside help should be required.

ROCK ISLAND is to haul the official train to Peoria convention. This promises, owing to the great work accomplished in the past year, to be the largest convention ever held by the Illinois bankers.

NEW YORK continues to recruit the ranks of her active vice-presidents from Chicago. Guaranty Trust has added to her list of Chicagoans by making William C. Potter, son of E. A. Potter, formerly president of the American Trust, a member of the official staff.

MARY ANTIN, the author of "The Promised Land," on being asked how she remembered so much about her childhood days, said: "People express wonder at the minuteness of my early recollections, not realizing how much they could recall of their own childhood if they tried. You never know what you know till you try to tell it. Teachers understand this. I made more discoveries while writing my book than in all the years of which it is a record."

MEREDITH NICHOLSON'S Atlantic Monthly article, "Should Smith Go to Church?" which has aroused an unusual amount of comment, will form a part of his volume of essays entitled, "The Provincial American, and Other Papers," which Houghton Mifflin Company will publish in the autumn. The book will have another essay entitled "Smith, the Tired Business Man."

"SCRAMBLED RESPONSIBILITY" is the title line of a long editorial in the Chicago Roosevelt organ on Wednesday. Readers were surprised, no doubt, that it was not a disclaimer for the manner in which the Third Party situation has been "scrambled" in Illinois. Can you beat it?

SHERMAN P. ALLEN, one of the White House secretaries, has been appointed in place of J. Piatt Andrew who "resigned" as assistant secretary of the treasury recently. Scat Piatt!

AUGUST 7th, at 2:30 P. M., the Investment Bankers Section boosters will foregather in Chicago for a trip to New York on the Twentieth Century Limited. On the Bank Supervision

A bank supervision plan to which it isn't believed that any private banker can object, has been drawn by the Dawes committee. The plan has been submitted to the members of the Illinois Bankers Association through its president, B. F. Harris of Champaign. Inasmuch as the committee on private bankers in the association has filed a remonstrance against using the association funds in promoting the supervision fight, the plan will be circulated on other funds. The committee says the private bankers do not wish to "help pay the expenses to put us out of business." All of the Chicago morning papers have endorsed the Dawes committee plan and editorially commend its fairness to all concerned. They have pledged support in passing such a law and the down-state papers have expressed a willingness to "join in." After all, the biggest kickers were the unexpected. They are the stock and bond houses which have thought to add to their prestige by calling themselves "bankers." The committee was much amused at their antics.

Incorporation of all the banks of a private character is the first step demanded, three years being given for the institutions to convert their assets into those that will comply with the law regulating state banks. Provision also is made that no banking business shall be done by concerns that fail thus to incorporate. A minimum capitalization of $25,000 is fixed in the skeleton plans, special provisions being made for banks outside of Chicago. Private banks now existing are exempted for two years from publishing reports upon their condition.

Regulation of trust companies and of the use of the words "trust company" by business concerns and an exemption of loans made on personal property and real estate from the provisions governing the total amount that may be loaned to one person are other provisions of the skeleton plans.

Text of Report

The report to Mr. Harris follows:

"The committee appointed by you on May 1, 1912, to make suggestions regarding a bill providing for the supervision of all banks in the state of Illinois except national and otherwise to safeguard state banking, herewith submits its report:

"In this connection the committee desires to state that its members have been actuated by a desire to make such suggestions only which, if enacted into law, will cause the least possible injury or annoyance to the large group of conservative, safe and successful private bankers scattered over our state. It is unfortunate that, in order to safeguard the community from unscrupulous private bankers who, because of a lack of state laws providing for private bank supervision, have been enabled to misappropriate the savings of large numbers, it seems necessary to advocate a law which at best must put all honest and reputable private bankers to some inconvenience. It is no light thing to pass laws interfering radically with any class of long established financial institutions, not only because of the

EAU CLAIRE

Mr. Dow for many years president of the State Bank of Plymouth was elected president of the Wisconsin Bankers Association at the Milwaukee convention this week. He has been a patient, effective worker in the upbuilding of the organization and will pass no opportunity to advance its interests.

Mr. Joyce the retiring executive is vice-president of the Union National at Eau Claire. Considerable growth and largely increased efficiency mark his administration and set a rapid pace for Mr. Dow.

WISCONSIN BANKERS ELECT OFFICERS

The Wisconsin Bankers Association elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, E. A. Dow, president of the State Bank of Plymouth; vice-presidents, H. A. Moehlenpah, cashier, Citizens State Bank, Clinton, and H. S. Flieth cashier National German-American Bank, Wausau; secretary, George D. Bartlett. The four members of the executive council elected to fill the places of those whose terms expired are: E. A. Reddeman, assistant cashier, Germania National Bank, Milwaukee; Gardner P. Stickney, vice-president, Wisconsin Trust Company, Milwaukee; F. W. Humphrey, cashier, First National Bank, Shawano; and C. R. Thomson, cashier, First National Bank, Richland Center.

POSTPONE DEPOSIT INSURANCE PLAN

The problem of establishing a mutual insurance company among the bankers of Wisconsin for the purpose of insuring bank deposits proved too big a one to handle at this week's annual convention of the Wisconsin Bankers Association. After consuming all of Wednesday afternoon and part of Thursday morning in discussion of the committee's report, the members unanimously voted to refer it back to the committee and the executive council for further alterations and later to take final action at a special meeting of the association. Principal objections to the committee's plan in its present form were that it insured only half the deposits of any bank subscribing to its benefits, and that while its acceptance might be nominally optional, competition would make it practically compulsory. T. R. Frenz, Oshkosh, brought out a storm of protest by advocating compulsory guarantee of bank deposits furnished by the state or national government, the sentiment crystallizing on Thursday morning in a resolution in which the association went on record as opposing any such form of compulsory guarantee.

GEORGE D. BARTLETT PRESENTED WITH TOURING CAR

As a mark of appreciation for the efficient service rendered the Wisconsin Bankers Association by its secretary, George D. Bartlett, the membership presented him with a seven-passenger Kissel touring car.

H. B. Smith, president of the Peoples National of Monmouth, Ill., has returned from an extended western trip.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

SO the Wisconsin bankers have presented their secretary with a brand new touring car? We know of one or two whom the membership would like to hand a one-way ticket to the other end of the road.

REALLY, Bartlett has been a find for Wisconsin! He organized their group system, put in the insurance plan, and proved to be an expert in legislation. Then, too, the office hasn't panned out as it ought for a man of his size. The touring car will keep him content.

WHAT Mortimer I. gets out of the deal is—?

FIRST NATIONAL, Milwaukee, kept open house for the visitors at the Wisconsin convention with all-the-comforts-of-home at Room 7, the Pfister. The stenographer was quite as obliging as she was handsome.

WISCONSIN in 1903 had 238 members and now has 735. There are seven groups in the state and they have developed the group idea to a very profitable and satisfactory basis. The attendance is above the average.

BARTLETT says that "owing to the fact that our association has during the past year become interested in agricultural developments and other subjects outside the usual banking lines, the people of Wisconsin are becoming more interested in our organization, and I am confident that with continued cooperation and interest in educational work, our association will soon be recognized as in the forefront of every movement having for its end the upbuilding of our state."

THE insurance department has not shown any recent gains but the purchasing department did a business of $52,000 on a 10 per cent discount basis.

MANY students of the game believe this to be an improper field and that the banks should patronize their own customers in their own towns for their supplies. Bartlett doesn't handle clothing and haberdashery, but don't be surprised. The list is a long one.

EX-PRESIDENT J. P. HINTON of Missouri, who wrote the best article on "Proper Functions of a Bankers Association," condemned this descent to trivialities as beneath a well conducted, high-minded state organization. That is presupposing it to be for profit to the association and not a secretarial enterprise.

CONTRARY to general thought the Wisconsin Banker is not an official organ and goes only to those who subscribe and pay for it. It does an advertising business with those who benefit by the purchasing department. To settle this question finally Secretary Bartlett publishes the following disclaimer:

"ALTHOUGH the Wisconsin Bankers Association is in no way financially interested in the publication of the 'Wisconsin Banker' its publication and circulation by M. I. Stevens has seemed to meet with commendation from those members of our association who are subscribers therefor. Mr. Stevens is certainly entitled to the thanks of our association for the free use of his columns for such articles as our association or its officers may desire to publish."

AFTER winding up his contract with several newspapers to write special feature stories of the republican national convention in Chicago, George Ade, the humorist, whose new book, "Knocking the Neighbors," is to be brought out this fall by Doubleday, Page & Co., made a brief visit to New York and then left for Europe, where he will make a stay of several months. For the last few years Mr. Ade has been giving the greater part of his attention to his Indiana farm, and his new book will be joyously welcomed by all lovers of the Ade type of humor.

BANKERS who carry a hammer for the bank "on the opposite corner" will do well to put in an advanced order for this book.

EUGENE H. GRUBB, known as the foremost potato grower in this country, and whose book, "The Potato," has just been brought out by the same publishers, is spending a couple of weeks lecturing on his hobby in North Carolina and other southern states. Mr. Grubb declares that unless American farmers adopt scientific intensive methods of potato culture this country will be brought face to face with a potato famine.

CHICAGO ASSOCIATION OF COMMERCE is entitled to great credit for its fight for the 15 per cent reduction of express rates. Now let it pull for a real parcels post and one-cent letter postage. We have suffered long at the dictation of the "interests."

"OUR Banking and Currency System a National Problem," the able address delivered before the New York bankers at Buffalo, has been published in pamphlet form and is the best document of pocket, or readable size, extant on this great question.

WHEN you do take time to read up on this subject it is well to know that what you read comes from a man who knows. Theorists are all right in some branches of educational reading but in finance or banking it is quite a waste of time to study their efforts.

K. L. HATCH of the University of Wisconsin is another example of the man who knows. Will any banker in his state doubt what he told them at the Milwaukee convention about their fruit resources? Not a man jack of them. He knows and they know he knows.

I. H. NAKDIMEN, down in Oklahoma gets this off and who can deny it? He says: "Our guaranty law is a good law in principle. The intent of it is practical but it needs amendments which will make it fire and water proof. Consider, fifteen banks have failed with five million in deposits and not a single depositor lost a penny."

BANKERS fight laws sometimes which they should control by their support. Had the A. B. A. canned M. T. Herrick at the Denver convention and appointed an able committee to confer with the platform making powers of the two national parties they could have had postal savings banks of their own design.

TROUBLE was Herrick thought he was a national politician (or statesman) and a bigger man than "Ole' Brian" who started the thing, but he wasn't.

EVEN as they are, they will work fine in the end. A laboring man of the socialistic type walked into the Central Trust the other day with $300 just withdrawn from the postal bank. He said he never had believed in banks before but now he wanted that extra one per cent interest, and the conveniences of deposit and withdrawal which a bank afforded and which the government couldn't give.

HE has two other friends who are going to do the same thing. Thus you see the postal is doing a good work in educating the unbelieving. The natural landing place of all postal depositors will be in well conducted, incorporated savings banks.

WOULDN'T right now be a good time to do a little work on the re-enactment of the Vreeland bill which runs out in less than two years? The December short session is the only hope. What would we do with another panic on our hands and no legal means to fight it? The public took the volunteer clearing house certificates but would they do it again, without warrant of law?

A CHICAGO private banker claiming 3,000 savings depositors and $200,000 deposits, offered to "sell out" to an out-of-town banker for $5,000 cash. If you want anything as good as this we can give you his name.

THERE seems to be something of a rivalry between Taft and Teddy as to which shall drive the hearse.—Washington Post.

WHILE it may be a little premature to inventory North Dakota's grain crops, some discussion of probabilities will not be. Never since the wheat acreage in that state has been large have conditions the middle of

Frederic Cranefield on Wisconsin as a Fruit State

Secretary of the state Horticultural Society presents his subject attractively to the bankers at the Milwaukee convention. Digs into the rainbow-chasers, who, living in Wisconsin, buy "orchard shares" out beyond the Rockies. Read this, it will do you good

It would not in the least surprise me to learn that many of your members consider the topic assigned me to-day more or less of a joke. Indeed, horticulture in Wisconsin has been considered a joke for many years, at least by those who have taken the word of western promoters as to conditions in Wisconsin and without taking the trouble to look around. It is a fact which I state reluctantly that we have thousands of men in Wisconsin, otherwise sane, who firmly believe that the only place where apples can be grown with profit is some remote point west of the Rockies, some fabled land of sunshine, just at the foot of the rainbow. It is a fact which we cannot dispute, that hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of good hard Wisconsin dollars have been invested in the Far West in "Unit Share" orchards, in Colorado, in Washington, in Oregon and even in the Bitter Root Valley of Montana.

These rainbow chasers did not know nor take the trouble to learn that greater opportunities are offered right at home. They did not know, nor will they believe when told, that more money may be made from a commercial orchard of fall apples in Wisconsin than from an orchard of Spitzenbergs or Newton Pippins in Oregon or Washington; that the raising of apples and small fruits in Wisconsin is safer, more staple and more profitable than raising oranges or lemons in California, peaches in Michigan or Connecticut or pineapples in Florida; that Duchess, McMahan or Wealthy apples raised in Wisconsin and sold for 75c a bushel are more profitable than Hood River Spitzenbergs at $1.50 a bushel, the average price received; that the famous McIntosh apple can be, and has been, grown to a higher degree of perfection in Wisconsin than in Montana; that the Wisconsin orchardist can buy an acre of land, plant it to fruit trees and bring it to profitable bearing for less than it costs to ship a carload of western apples to Chicago; that the cost of producing a bushel of apples in Wisconsin is less than the freight charges on a bushel from Washington or Oregon to Chicago.

Slowly, however, Wisconsin people are coming to appreciate the possibilities of their own state. Lest you hesitate to accept these statements unsupported, I will read a newspaper report concerning an exhibit of fruit at the Wisconsin State Fair. "This exhibition of the fruits of Wisconsin exceeded the expectations of everyone who looked in to see it. It is no exaggeration to say that the show of apples, as a whole, taking into account the number of varieties, size, fairness and perfectness of maturity, could not be beaten by any other state. A visitor remarked that he had attended like exhibitions in New York, but that this show of apples far surpassed any he ever had seen before. Over 100 varieties were on the tables. The show of pears and grapes was excellent and could not be beaten in quality. There were also some good specimens of peaches and quinces."

This report was printed in the "Wisconsin Farmer" for November, 1854, describing the fruit exhibit of that year at the State Fair. From this we can see that fruit growing is not new in Wisconsin. Within twenty miles of Milwaukee may be found thousands of apple trees fifty years old and still vigorous and profitable. These trees show conclusively that Wisconsin soils and climate are favorable to the raising of apples.

While dairying and stock raising have been the leading agricultural industries in Wisconsin, fruit growing rapidly is coming to the front. Leaving out entirely the farm or home orchards and berry patches, Wisconsin now has over 6,500 acres of tree fruits in commercial orchards and nearly 10,000 acres of strawberries and other small fruits. A conservative estimate of the 1911 apple crop is 250,000 barrels. Door county has 3,000 acres of tree fruits, including the largest cherry orchard in the world, 520 acres in one solid block. Bayfield Co. has 700 acres of orchard and 250 acres of berries. Monroe county, 1,000 acres of berries and other counties lesser acreage but enough to place them on the map as fruit centers. Not less than one million fruit trees were planted in Wisconsin in 1911. While we are not by any means at the top of the list we are "going some." We are well on the way to success, and there is no good reason why Wisconsin should not within the next twenty years rank among the leading fruit producing states, if not the leading one.

That Wisconsin now leads in the production of butter and cheese is due not more to natural advantages than to methods employed in the business. Hiram Smith, the pioneer, Hoard, Henry, Farrington and others of the present day preaching the gospel of better feeds, housing and scientific practice in the making of butter and cheese, account for the success of dairying in Wisconsin. So also in fruit raising we have natural advantages unexcelled, all we need now is the application of proper methods in order to win. In discussing Wisconsin as a fruit state we may state affirmatively:

1st. That fruit raising is a profitable business when properly conducted. Even with the indifferent methods too often employed, apple orchards yield $200 to $300 an acre annually; cherries $400 to $600 an acre with a maximum of $800; strawberries and other small fruits $200 to $500 an acre.

2d. Fruit raising pays better through a period of years than any other branch of agriculture. This may be easily and readily demonstrated by a comparison of actual profits from the best dairy or stock farm in Wisconsin with even an average fruit farm.

3d. But small capital is required, but a fraction of the amount needed in most other sections, east, west or south. With a capital of five thousand dollars a splendid fruit farm may be developed in Wisconsin that will yield in ten years an annual income equal to the original investment.

If this sum is not available, two thousand will answer and if that is too much, one thousand and fair credit will place a beginner on a safe foundation. If the thousand is lacking a young man with good horse sense, plenty of ambition, a stout heart, hardened muscles and a clever wife can start without a dollar and before middle age have a business that will yield him a comfortable income for the rest of his days. We have men in Wisconsin who have done it. The cost of transportation of a carload of apples from the Pacific coast states is about the same as ten acres of good fruit land in Wisconsin. Negatively it may be said that:

(1) Not all parts of the state are suitable for fruit raising but Wisconsin is not different from other states in this respect.

(2) The mere investment of money in orchard enterprises is not fruit growing. In no other occupation are more brains required than in fruit raising and no method has yet been devised of successfully raising fruit by proxy.

(3) Fruit raising is not a get-rich-quick business. Brains and energy are quite as essential as in any other business. In short, it all depends on the "man behind the tree."

The chances for success depend:

1st. On the selection of the proper location and the choice of the varieties best suited to that location. Concerning the former it may be said that there are but few sections in Wisconsin wholly unsuited to fruit raising; in fact, berries and all small fruits may be grown successfully in any county in the state. The nearness to market or transportation is all that need be considered. Concerning apples and other tree fruits, certain sections are much better than others. This is true of other crops and of fruits in other states. Monroe county leads in acreage and production of small fruits with Bayfield a close second. Sparta and vicinity has 600 acres and Warrens and other points will add enough to make 1,000 acres. Crawford county has some of the best apple lands to be found anywhere in the United States. On ridges on either side of the Kickapoo river from Wauzeka to La Farge, west to the Mississippi and east to Richland county, are thousands of acres of fertile clay soil with air and soil drainage that produce the finest Wealthy, Duchess and McMahan in all the world. Crawford is destined to be one of the leading apple counties of the state.

All that has been said of Crawford applies to much of Richland, especially the western part. Apples, grapes and cherries have been grown successfully and profitably in Richland county for sixty years. Door county, and especially Sturgeon Bay, is now famous on account of its cherry orchards. Over a quarter of a million cherry trees now are growing in Door county and this number will be doubled and trebled within five years. Door county cherries have yielded as high as $800 an acre for a single crop. Four-year old trees yield 50 to 75 dollars an acre. We have been a long time learning that latitude is not the most im-wrong that may be done by ill-considered action to the owners of those institutions, but as well because of unnecessary losses which may also result to the depositing public.

Must Recognize Public Rights

"The private banker, trusted in his community because of general knowledge of his integrity, wisdom and financial strength, intimately known and respected by his neighbors, naturally is inclined to protest against the passage of laws making necessary a material change in the nature of his assets and methods of conducting his business, and yet it is right that he should recognize that banks of deposit are quasi-public institutions, in connection with which, for the protection of the people, the state has the right and is impressed with the duty as well of safeguarding the depositors through proper regulation.

"Considering both the inconveniences to which the honest private banker may be put by the passage of a regulatory law and the untold suffering to which thousands of the poor have been put by the lack of such a law in this state, your committee feels if a proper regard be given in any suggested law to the equitable rights of private banking as it now exists in the state, that the public spirit of the private bankers themselves will lead them to be of assistance in its passage.

Makes General Report

"It was unanimously decided that the best service which the committee could render would be to submit to you, and through you to the association, its recommendation in general terms only, considering the ultimate results desired to be accomplished, rather than to attempt definitely to formulate the law.

"We recommend the passage of a law in the state of Illinois:

"(1) To provide for the incorporation of existing private banks that their net assets may be applied toward the payment of their capital stock and a period of three years after incorporation given for the conversion of their present assets into such assets as they may legally hold as a state bank.

"(2) A prohibition against engaging in the business of receiving general deposits except by companies organized under this act, to take effect after such length of time as will be reasonable to allow for the incorporation of existing private banks.

"(3) Providing for a minimum capitalization of $25,000, with a further provision as to the conditions under which banks may be organized outside of the main financial center of Chicago with a capital of not less than $50,000.

"(4) A provision exempting reorganized private banks from publishing their reports until two years after the passage of this act.

Relief for Small Banks

"(5) A provision to relieve small banks from payment direct of fees and mileage to the bank examiners and providing for the payment of their salaries and expenses by the state.

"(6) A provision for reimbursing the state, wholly or in part, for this expense by an assessment upon all the banks doing business in the state of a percentage of the capital, surplus and undivided profits of each bank.

"(7) A provision for enabling small banks to do a trust business by reducing the amount of the compulsory deposit with the state auditor and limiting the use of the words 'trust' and 'trust company' as a part of its name to companies complying with this act.

"(8) A provision that loans secured by real estate or personal property shall not be considered a violation of the section relating to maximum loans."

The report of the committee is signed by the following: Charles G. Dawes, president Central Trust Company of Illinois, Chicago; E. D. Hulbert, vice-president Merchants' Loan and Trust, Chicago; M. O. Williamson, president People's Trust and Savings, Galesburg; John J. Doherty, cashier First National, Dwight; W. M. Folger, president First National, Vandalia; F. B. Flanders, Bank of Noble, Noble; John R. Wallace, Bartlett & Wallace, Clayton; E. T. Walker, Citizens' Bank, Macomb.

REASONS WHICH HAVE INTERFERED WITH GROWTH OF THE FARM MORTGAGE

This is the subject which comes up for discussion by Dr. Edward S. Meade in the August Lippincott's, under the title of "The Mortgage Bank."

Dr. Meade says in part: "Productive land furnishes the ultimate security for the investor. Outside of the mining industry, which contributes but little to the supply of investment securities, all other forms of investment rest directly or indirectly upon the farms. Railway traffic comes mainly from the farms, and yet there has been little utilization of the farms themselves as a basis of investment. In round numbers, the railroads of the United States are worth $20,000,000,000. This entire value is outstanding in the hands of the investors in the form of stocks and bonds. The amount of securities issued by industrial corporations is probably greater than the value of the property which these companies own. Public service corporations are fully represented by investment securities. It is only in the field of real estate, and particularly farm real estate, that investments still lag far behind value."

ILLINOIS A. B. A. MEETING AT DETROIT

State vice-president for the A. B. A. in Illinois, President William A. Heath, of the Live Stock Exchange National will call a special meeting of the Illinois members at the Detroit convention on either Monday or Tuesday, September 9th or 10th, to elect two members of the Big Council, a state vice-president and a member of the nominating committee. This will be the regular annual meeting and none will be called at Peoria during the state convention. Nelson N. Lampert and William George are the retiring members. E. E. Crabtree, of Jacksonville, and Wm. T. Fenton, of the National Bank of the Republic, have been mentioned quite prominently for the positions. Group 4 at the Yorkville meeting indorsed Mr. Fenton, and Mr. Crabtree has a sort of holdover claim in that having been elected he declined in favor of Lampert at Springfield. Latham T. Souther, of Springfield, has much the same sort of claim on the vice-presidency, and it isn't likely any other will be suggested for the place. The long-standing tangle in A. B. A. positions in Illinois will be completely straightened out by the prompt decision and action taken by Mr. Heath. The official call for the meeting will issue within a few days.

WISCONSIN AS A FRUIT STATE

portant factor in fruit raising. Anyone who is still of the opinion that it is too cold "up north" to raise fruit, should visit Bayfield and the Apostle Islands. This is about as far north as we can get in Wisconsin and is one of the very best fruit regions of the state. A strip along the Lake Superior shore line one to two miles wide and extending north from Washburn and west to Douglas county is unexcelled as an orchard region. Bayfield county ranks second in the production of strawberries.

2d. The second factor in determining success lies in the employment of up-to-date methods. It required a quarter of a century for Hoad and Henry to convince farmers that a rail fence afforded insufficient winter protection for the dairy cow and a strawstack too little of nourishment for the best results in the yield of butter fat. Let us hope that it will not require so long for the Wisconsin fruit grower to "get salvation." Indeed, there is no reason why it should require more than a quarter of that time to place Wisconsin in the front rank as a fruit state for Wisconsin fruit growers enjoy exceptional advantages aside from those of soil and climate. Wisconsin excels in education and especially in the aid and comfort afforded every branch of agriculture. Other states support agricultural colleges and experiment stations but too often their teachers speak only in the language of science and feel their duty well done when they have placed on record in some journal of science or official report the results of their research. In Wisconsin the college aims to speak to the farmer in the language of the farm, and in addition using every effort to bring the farmer to the college, not only through short courses in agriculture, farmer's courses and institutes, but aims to take the college to the farmer by means of the Extension Bureau. While in the past the energies of the college have been devoted to live stock and dairying, fruit growing now is receiving the recognition it deserves. The horticultural department under Prof. Jas. G. Moore, the department of entomology and nursery inspection headed by Prof. J. G. Sanders and the division of plant pathology directed by Dr. L. R. Jones, all are working for the fruit grower.

Agricultural endeavor and uplift in Wisconsin received further impulse through auxiliary organizations, quasi-public bodies supported in part by state aid such as the Live Stock Breeders' Association, the State Dairymen's Association and others. The fruit growers are represented by the State Horticultural Society, a voluntary organization of nearly 2,000 active members. The society is a co-operative and educational institution having for its sole purpose the advancement of horticulture in its different branches. When there is added to these the influence of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, which may well be exerted in the line of increasing confidence in our state, it would seem that Wisconsin soon must be placed where it rightfully belongs—the leading fruit state.

CHICAGO TO DETROIT

The hotels in Detroit have sent notice that they will be ready for the bankers any time on Sunday September 8th. The committee on transportation, in charge of the Chicago Train-de-Luxe, has decided to leave Chicago on Sunday morning, September 8th, at 10 A. M., and the run will be made in five and one-half hours. All incoming trains will get into Chicago in plenty of time on Sunday morning to make connections, and those who get in on Saturday morning will have a pleasant day in which to visit the banks, play golf or go to the ball game. Reservations are being made by four's or two's for the "banquet-on-wheels," which will be a feature of the trip. The smart thing to do, if you are going, is to reserve a table and then fill it up with your friends. THE CHICAGO BANKER or any bank in Chicago will fix you up.

LIPPINCOTT'S FOR AUGUST

The completed novel in the August Lippincott's is "Lady Make-Believe," by Florence Selden Peple, and the scenes are laid chiefly on an ocean greyhound. The vein of humor is well defined and the romance delightful. Will Levington Comfort has a short story and Edward Sherwood Meade describes "The Mortgage Bank." This is one of a series of financial sketches contributed by this great Pennsylvania educator.

DELEGATES TO TRANS-MISSISSIPPI CONGRESS

Governor Charles S. Deneen has appointed Charles G. Dawes and W. G. Edens delegates to the Trans-Mississippi Congress at Salt Lake, August 27th-30th. Mr. Edens is intending to spend a month in the West and will be at the Denver convention where Mr. Dawes will be orator of the day. One, perhaps both, will go on to Salt Lake for the A. I. B. meeting and stay over for the congress, the most important of all western commercial bodies. Mr. Reynolds and Senator Aldrich were the principal speakers last year.

CORRECTION

The convention this year of the Colorado Bankers Association will be held at Pueblo, August 19th and 20th instead of Denver, as announced in last week's issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER.

Farmers Co-operative Credit System of Russia

Washington, July 21.—Even in remote Siberia and Turkestan has the farmers' co-operative credit system reared a financial fabric to assist the peasant farmer of the Russian Czar's domain. The state department has just received from Ambassador Curtis Guild at St. Petersburg an exhaustive report on the farmers' co-operative credit system in Russia.

This is the first of a series of reports requested by President Taft from nearly every one of the diplomatic officers in Europe on this movement which he is striving to transplant to this country for the benefit of the American farmer. Ambassador Guild's report has been taken under consideration by the state department as the first step in preparing a plan to fit the co-operative credit idea to American conditions.

At the present time the Russian government has nearly forty millions of dollars of government money invested in the farmers' co-operative credit system, which is perhaps the strongest testimonial of all as to the success of the movement among Russian farmers, and of the great benefits which it is bringing to that nation.

How established a part of the Russian peasant's life this financial machine is becoming clearly is shown in the practice of the peasants to deposit their savings with the credit societies on the understanding that the deposits will be paid out after their death for their funeral expenses or that they will be returned to them at the time of the coming of age of a son or the marriage of a daughter.

The co-operative movement among Russian peasants now has developed two distinct aims: First, to educate the peasants, a large proportion of whom are quite illiterate, along the lines of modern farming; and, secondly, to encourage them to save their earnings and acquire the habit of providing against the rainy days. The direct aim of the Russian government in organizing this system was to relieve the peasant from the necessity of paying exorbitant and ruinous rates of interest, imposed upon them by their money lenders, the rates often running as high as 60 and, in known cases, to 240 per cent. The movement affords further education for the peasant since the Russian government very wisely has left the management of the societies largely in the hands of the farmers themselves, conducted through the general meetings of the societies, in which every member of the society is given one vote. The peasant thus is given considerable experience in financial affairs and management. The members elect a board of directors and a council. These bodies take care of the executive work. They report to the general meetings of the societies, at which all the members are present. The government exercises supervision over the societies through the ministry of finance.

Ambassador Curtis Guild has sent to Washington an extended and valuable report. Department of State will furnish additional information of a like character

Although instituted as late as 1895, the movement has spread in Russia to include 10,000 farmers' societies, with an average membership in each society of nearly 500. The network of societies covers practically the entire immense area of the Russian Empire. Widespread interest is taken in the movement both by the Russian government and by the peasants, and the government at the present time is considering a further elaboration of the scheme.

In studying the Russian co-operative credit system from the viewpoint of the American farmer, Ambassador Guild finds that naturally the great difference obtaining between conditions in the United States and in Russia, in regard to the amount of land farmed by individuals, the system of land tenure, the wealth of the farming class, and in the general facility for borrowing money, makes it impossible for this country to secure much benefit from a study of the Russian system beyond its general principles.

For example, the average loan required by the farmer in Russia does not exceed $50 and generally is employed to purchase some article necessary at the moment, such as an agricultural implement or a horse, the loan being repaid by the Russian farmer immediately after the harvest. Of course, the American farmer, who works a much larger acreage, usually would need more money and longer time. He would require his loan, not so much for the moment's exigency, as for the gradual development of his property.

In brief, Ambassador Guild reports the Russian system to be an institution of co-operative loan societies among the farmers, conducted under governmental patronage and supervision, by which the farmer, at no cost to him-

Wisconsin Leads in Highway Improvement Work

W. O. Hotchkiss, of the Highway Division, State Board, explains what is being done for good roads under the new law which is in effect in all but six counties already. How and why it is being done

In opening this discussion on better roads for Wisconsin, I want first to point out to you briefly the part which roads have in the big economic questions that must be solved before conditions of living become ideal in our state, and then to outline to you what the new state aid law is and how you can get work done under it.

We hear a great deal about efficiency these days. The employer of labor hires an expert to hold a stop watch on his men and find out what movements they make in their work are superfluous and can be cut out with a saving of time and effort. And the expert figures to a cent just how much time can be saved. You bank presidents buy an adding machine because you are convinced that you can take care of the increase in your business without hiring that extra clerk. Both you and the employer of labor and every other man who is up to his job is endeavoring to see how he can accomplish most with the least effort—not for the sake of cutting down the effort but to accomplish more with the same energy or money expended.

Now I want you to think of roads in this same light—as a means to an end, as a machine to accomplish a purpose—and see what we can find as to the efficiency with which this machine works. Many estimates have been made that always used to seem to me to be extravagant. The office of public roads computed the tonnage of farm crops, the average haul to market, and the average expense per mile, and then found that the saving of 15 per cent per ton mile, which could be made if our hauling were as cheap as that of Europe, would amount to the total of $900,000,000 a year—nine hundred million dollars. That looks preposterous on the face of it, but I am not so sure as I used to be that it is wrong. The loss is certainly an amount beyond the conception even of bankers. Henry Holt, head of the great publishing house that bears his name, stated that if simplified spelling were adopted it would result in a saving of ninety million dollars a year—in type, paper, time, etc. If simplified spelling could save that much—and Mr. Holt is no wild visionary person—certainly it should be possible to save ten times that sum on roads.

We never shall get accurate figures as to just what it costs to have poor roads, because roads influence too many things and the books of the world are not kept closely enough to show the items. But we can appreciate something of the loss if we analyze the conditions a little. If we set down in our books the three items:

1. Production cost of food and clothing materials,
 2. Distribution cost of food and clothing materials,
 3. Educational and social conditions,
- we have the three fundamental things we all are interested in. If production and distribution costs are lowered and educational and social conditions improved, we all are benefited, and if the contrary is true we all have to pay.

Production is largely a farm item. It depends somewhat on the quality of the farm but far more on the quality of the farmer. You who come from the northern part of the state know what conditions are demanded by the farmer of the quality you want to see settling up your country, and filling your banks with money. He won't buy land way off from a road, or on a poor road, except in rare cases, and in those rare cases he soon has a road fixed up. The man you can take ten miles into the woods and stick with eighty acres of cut over land isn't ordinarily the live kind of man you want. To make production cheap and plentiful you want the farmers to be first quality as well as the farms. You want to keep the best boys on the farm as you were told this morning, you want to get Cranefield and Hatch to tell them how to raise the largest crops and the finest quality of fruit, but you can't keep a live man in a dead country very long. One of the surest signs of a dead country is poor roads. You don't see them where the people are really wide awake and getting all the farms will produce. The sleeper and more backward the people, the worse the roads are. If you build good roads and provide good schools—which are only feasible in a district having good roads—and thereby improve the social conditions of farm life you will make it possible to keep a larger percentage of the bright boys at home.

So much for the influence of roads on production. The next item is "Distribution cost of food and clothing materials." Here again the farm product plays the biggest part. If we compare bulk freights on the railroads with road haulage, we find 25 cents per mile against 2½ cents per mile. The dollar and a quarter that it costs to haul a ton the average distance from farm to market will take it fifty to one hundred miles by rail. We talk a lot about high freight rates, but when we do we don't usually mean the highest freights that we have to pay on the food and clothing we need. It will not be disputed that good roads will save by cutting the cost of distribution.

The last item is "Educational and Social Conditions." This is the most important item of all, in my opinion—for the sensible man, that first quality farmer that you want, is not going to stay long where his children can't get the best of schooling and where he and his family can't get about easily to enjoy themselves. The best schools and good social conditions never are found where roads are bad. The one is a necessity for the other.

I have attempted to point out briefly one thing—that good roads are instruments of efficiency that play an important part in our lives—both economic and social. The next question is how to get good roads. Are the poor roads—unfortunately so plentiful—due to the fact that we simply haven't paid enough money, or have we been paying the money and not getting the results? In other words, is our present road business efficient or not? As to this we have the verdict of 500 of the most intelligent farmers I could reach. The average of their estimates was that about 50 per cent of our road funds were wasted. This agrees strikingly with the figures given in a definition of an engineer I once heard—"a man who can do with one dollar what any fool can do with two."

This waste is due primarily to our antiquated system. There are 16,000 town road officials, each one of whom has his little share of the road taxes to spend practically as he sees fit. Under these conditions it isn't the

WOODRUFFS TO GO ABROAD

Joliet, July 24.—George and F. W. Woodruff will sail from New York August 7th for London, for the purpose of meeting some of the head men of the largest land mortgage banks in Europe. During the consultations that will follow the meeting the plans of the new Woodruff Trust Company, the first institution in the United States to adopt the European system of rural credits, will be carefully examined by the European bankers who have given years of study and experience to the working out of the plan. The young Joliet bankers will take with them all the legal papers and trust agreements of the Woodruff Trust Company, and they will be submitted to the European experts and their most rigid criticism will be invited. The Woodruffs will spend two weeks in London in these consultations, and they plan to be back in time for the Detroit A. B. A. convention.

President Woodruff said that he heartily approves the plan which has been submitted to President Harris of the State Bankers Association for a state law to regulate private banks. The committee suggests a law making it imperative to incorporate all private banks and place them under supervision of the state.

A minimum capitalization of $25,000 is suggested and it is proposed to give private banks three years to adjust their assets so that they will comply with the state law.

WANT FIVE-THOUSAND-DOLLAR BANKS

Without waiting for official copies of the Dawes' committee plan for universal bank supervision in Illinois, some of the smaller private banks already are writing to President B. F. Harris making a "kick" on the twenty-five thousand dollar capital minimum. One from a small country bank that wants to organize on a five or ten thousand dollar capital, says that the bill evidently is drawn to drive out the small banks, and that the committee is "working for the larger banks," although he "had understood that Mr. Harris believed in building up the farming community."

To such letters Mr. Harris is making careful replies, calling attention to the following governing conditions:

"Two of the bankers who indorsed this report were private bankers, one in a town of less than 500, the other in a town of less than 900. This committee made an honest and sincere effort to do absolutely the best it could in the matter of suggestions with reference to bank supervision, which is sure to come. I am not responsible for their report, or the nature of it, but feel free to say that, taking all the details into consideration, private bankers can never hope to get a bill that will be less burdensome to them. The committee gave great attention to the capital requirements, and their idea is that, inasmuch as it would take a year or more for the legislature to act, and the matter be referred to the voters of the state, and that in addition to that three years are given to the private bankers to get ready, that they would then be in a position, directly or indirectly, to raise the required minimum capital.

"I am decidedly in favor of building up a farming community, and the best way to do this is to get all the progressive and responsible farmers and landowners interested in such movement. Even the smallest community, made up of such people, if it needs banking facilities adequate to its requirements, can easily get from five to twenty-five farmers and country merchants to raise a capital of $25,000, which would make the bank strong financially, and bring it much business that might otherwise be inclined to go to the larger towns in the vicinity."

Mr. Harris cites the fact that the would-be five thousand dollar banks, so far as revealed, have, or claim, from sixty to one hundred thousand deposits now, and that supervision will double that, and that twenty-five thousand capital is only fair security for such a line of deposits. His letter concludes: "The business of banking is of such public character that none of us can attempt to operate or conduct it on a purely selfish basis, or with reference only to our own notions or convenience, and I sincerely trust you will understand the spirit of this letter, and the whole movement."

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

The agricultural committee of the Missouri State Bankers Association held a conference last week with the Missouri state board of agriculture at Sedalia, Mo., to discuss agricultural education and good roads. Similar committees from many states, which have been investigating into the causes which lure the boy and girl from the farm to the crowded cities, are to hold meetings and make reports at what is known as the Minneapolis-St. Paul conference August 7 and 8. The report of these committees, which will contain some very interesting statistics, is to be published in book form ready for the meeting of the American Bankers Association later in Detroit. After conferring with the Missouri state board of agriculture, the committee from the Missouri State Bankers Association practically agreed to recommend the state's agricultural college at Columbia, Mo. It is possible that an effort will be made later to establish country high schools throughout the state, each one drawing from several school districts, where soil culture, soil tests, seed tests, rotation in crops, domestic science and other useful arts will be taught.

Consolidation Effected Nicely

Consolidation of the National Bank of Commerce and the Southwest National Bank of Kansas City took place without a ripple on the local financial waters and now the consolidated institution, the Southwest National Bank of Commerce, is running smoothly with the old officers and most of the customers of both institutions delighted at the ease with which the big deal was put through. All the cash, books and accounts of the Southwest National Bank were transferred from its old quarters in the New York Life building to the Commerce Trust building last Saturday and the combined bank opened for business last Monday with a public reception. There were flowers banked high on all of the officers' desks, and from 9 o'clock in the morning until the close of banking hours nearly 10,000 persons visited the splendid banking rooms of the Southwest National Bank of Commerce. About $2,500,000 in coin and currency was transferred by wagons from one bank to the other without the least excitement. More than 100 country banks having accounts with the merged bank sent representatives to the reception and hundreds of letters of felicitation were received. The Southwest National Bank is now the largest financial institution west of St. Louis and its nearest rival is the First National Bank of Kansas City. It is predicted that there will be spirited competition between these banks for supremacy.

Resources of Nebraska Banks Over a Hundred Million

For the first time in the history of banking in Nebraska the total resources of the Nebraska state banks now run over one hundred million dollars, according to the report of the secretary of the Nebraska state banking board issued last week. The number of banks reporting was 681, showing 256,188 depositors and an average reserve of 30 per cent. Since the report of March 16th deposits have increased $2,496,380 and loans have increased $1,474,104, and there has been a gain of ten in the number of banks reporting. Compared with the same period in 1911 the increase in deposits of Nebraska state banks is $10,948,872. "With deposits the highest in the history of the state," said Secretary Royce, "an average reserve double the amount required by law, and a reduction of $63,000 in notes and bills rediscounted and bills payable during the last year, a very satisfactory showing for the banks of Nebraska is presented at this time, and indicates a most safe and sound condition, a substantial growth in business, and the careful and conservative lines upon which they are being operated."

Kansas Banks Flourishing

Kansas has $6,000,000 more in its state banks than it had a year ago. "From a commercial and financial standpoint, Kansas rates 95 per cent perfect for the year 1912," said Bank Commissioner J. N. Dolley, at Topeka, the other day. Mr. Dolley's statement shows an increase of $1,600,000 in bank capital, surplus and undivided profits, and a decrease of $54,000 in overdrafts since the June statement of 1911. "The corn crop prospects have not been more promising for many years at the middle of July than now," said Mr. Dolley. Kansas probably has the greatest wheat crop this year it ever has produced. It may not total the greatest yield the state has had, but there are more reports of unusually large yields and of wheat testing exceptionally high this year than ever before. Taking the price of wheat into consideration, the money yield is far in advance of bumper crop years. Grain dealers in Topeka, Wichita and other points where the new grain is coming in, assert that they never have seen Kansas wheat of such high tests and of such uniformity in color and size of the berries. Threshing has just started and the wheat is beginning to appear in the markets of the state."

Proposed Changes of Oklahoma Guaranty Law

Important changes may be made in the Oklahoma guaranty law as a result of a meeting of Oklahoma state bankers called for Oklahoma City July 30th. The meeting was asked for by the Oklahoma Bankers Association through W. B. Harrison of Enid, secretary. It is proposed that a definite plan regarding legislation will be formulated at the Oklahoma City meeting. Mr. Harrison believes the guaranty law should conform to the Kansas law in that it should not be made compulsory but optional with the banks, and all who take advantage of it should be required to stand a thorough examination as to soundness. He also is in favor of the plan proposed by State Bank Commissioner J. D. Lankford, that annual assessments for the support of the guaranty fund should not exceed one-fifth of one per cent of the bank's deposits, the deficit, if any, to be paid by the state at large. That members of the state banking board should be bankers of experience is a requirement which Mr. Harrison believes should be incorporated in the law.

Kansas City Selects Delegates for A. I. B. Convention

C. W. Allendoerfer, assistant cashier of the First National Bank, and Jerome Thralls, manager of the Kansas City Clearing House Association, have been selected as delegates to represent the Kansas City chapter of the American Institute of Banking, at that organization's annual convention this year at Salt Lake City, August 21st and 23d. Mr. Allendoerfer is a candidate for membership on the executive council. This body consists of fifteen members and includes the officers of the

—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, July 23.—Some diversity of opinion exists among St. Louis bankers and financiers as to the immediate future of the money market. Nearly all agree, however, in a hopeful verdict for the coming fall and winter, and indefinitely thereafter. The demand from the country, especially in the South and Southwest, is somewhat belated, primarily on account of the floods and secondly because of the general backwardness of the season. The demand, though, must come and come strong, as prospects for bumper crops are more promising every day. Experts on crops here see only one dubious factor, and that is speculative. It is that on account of the recent deluges of rain, the law of averages meteorologically will produce a drought later when corn needs moisture. This is by no means certain, but is a probable contingency. To have the incipient prosperity, recently started, rounded out there must be a large and abundant corn crop. Corn stocks are almost nil in many sections and it is highly essential that the Indian cereal turns out of bumper proportions. The recent Missouri state crop report on corn is hopeful. Almost 8,000,000 acres have been planted to corn this year, and thus far prospects are fine, though it is conceded a late fall will be indispensable for maturing the crop. Small crops will be enormous, including fruits, in this state. The outlook for potatoes and other roots was hardly ever better.

No Alarming Factors

Outside of the political uncertainties there are no really alarming factors in the horizon. Even the political developments can be guessed with some accuracy, and the worst that can happen has been discounted while the best that may transpire will bring a wave of expansion. In the territory tributary to St. Louis, extensive preparations are being made by merchants for a heavy fall trade. Wholesale houses report enormous orders, many of them indicating replenishing of stocks which have been allowed to work almost to the shelf during the past two or three years. Daily clearings continue to hold up well, and rates here are firm in the range between $4\frac{3}{4}$ and 6 per cent. Bankers report collections, both city and country, as being for the most part satisfactory.

Commerce has Housecleaning

The principal topic in local financial circles during the past week was the grand summer housecleaning of the National Bank of Commerce. The unanimous verdict of bankers here is that the charging off of $5,748,729.35 of bad and dubious assets was an extremely wise dispensation. It places the institution on a most solid basis and ultimately must redound to the good of the bank and its stockholders. The announcement overnight that nearly $6,000,000 had been stricken from the surplus and undivided profits was a surprise and disappointment to many of the shareholders, but, it is stated, a majority now realize that it was the wisest course which could be pursued. Several reports were current that a change in the personnel of high officials in the bank was contemplated, but in an interview Ben F. Edwards, president, said that these rumors were without foundation, in fact. The great strength of the National Bank of Commerce is shown in the fact that after the heavy charge off, there remains still an unimpaired capital stock of $10,000,000 and surplus and undivided profits of $2,332,038.

Houston Oil Dividend

An announcement of much interest and pleasure to numerous St. Louisans was that by the board of directors of the Houston Oil Company that a 3 per cent dividend had been declared on the preferred stock. This is the first disbursement to stockholders in eight years, and it is understood that 3 per cent will be paid semi-annually from now on. The company has a capital of $30,000,000, and was financed and largely is owned by St. Louisans. After many years of litigation, the affairs of the big concern were refinanced recently by Edwards Whitaker, president of the Boatmen's Bank, Colonel S. W. Fordyce and other local financiers. It now is on a better basis than at any period in its history, with prospects excellent for working out all its tangles and accumulating velvet.

West End Bank Organized

Business men and residents generally in the vicinity of Parkview and University City, have organized the West End Bank, with a capital stock of $25,000, to be located at No. 6500 Delmar Boulevard. J. W. Harris, president of the Harris-Polk Hat Company, has been elected president and Ernest L. White, former cashier of the First National of Morrisonville, Ill., cashier. The directors are J. W. Harris, E. L. White, H. R. Swartz, E. T. Miller, George R. Baker, John E. Ritchey and C. S. March, vice-president of the Bankers Trust Company. It is understood that the Bankers Trust Company, which controls a chain of banks in the Middle West, largely is interested in the new bank.

Bankers Assurance Likely to Consolidate

Officers of the American Bankers Assurance Company failed to secure a quorum of the shares to vote at the annual stockholders meeting and the meeting accordingly was postponed until August 1st. At that time the shareholders will vote on a proposition which was to have been submitted at the original meeting to liquidate the company and use its assets in making a merger with another assurance company. Sundry proposals have been received and will be considered, but the one regarded most likely of consummation is a consolidation with the Western Casualty and Guaranty Company of Dallas, Texas. The Bankers Assurance has about 300,000 shares outstanding, and about 15,000 shares were short at the meeting of making a quorum. The company perpetually was enjoined by the court of chancery at Wilmington, Del., from longer engaging in the insurance business.

Negro Bank Projected

The colored aristocracy of St. Louis and the moneyed class of that race have decided to engage in the banking business. A meeting was held early this week in the Third National Bank building at which tentative plans were formulated for the establishment of a negro bank in St. Louis with a capital stock of $200,000. The meeting was largely attended, and in spite of the warm evening, great enthusiasm was displayed. A large portion of the stock was subscribed for, and it distinctly was given to be understood that the bank is to be conducted exclusively by negroes, from office boy up to president. H. M. Romberg of Indianapolis, who attended the meeting in the capacity of organization expert, stated that there were more than twenty-five negro banks throughout the country and that St. Louis is the only city of its size without one. "Here in St. Louis," said Romberg, "you have many negro residents who have overcome the obstacles naturally thrown in their way to such an extent that they are worth more than $100,000. There is no doubt that such are able business men, and the bank will be a success under their direction." Another meeting has been called for the near future at which plans will be perfected and an organization formed. It is likely the new institution will be a state bank.

Building and Loan Assets

According to a report just issued in Jefferson City there are 134 building and loan associations in Missouri, with total assets aggregating $12,633,297. During the last twelve months the associations have gained $1,201,845. The report shows that building and loan associations decreased in assets from 1896, when they reached their high-water mark of $26,352,954 until 1903, when their aggregate assets amounted to only $7,771,890. From 1903 to the present their assets have steadily increased until the $12,000,000 mark was passed last year. Of the total assets $11,788,446 is invested in real estate. All of the associations of the state were examined during the last year and each was found in a safe condition, and all were prosperous. Numbered in their total membership are 9,700 borrowing and 17,250 non-borrowing members.

Scanlan on Directory

Philip C. Scanlan has been elected a member of the board of directors of the Mortgage Trust Company. With his election the board was increased to fifteen. Mr. Scanlan was park commissioner under the Wells administration from 1907 to 1911. His successor, Dwight F. Davis, is also a member of the board of the Mortgage Trust Company. Mr. Scanlan formerly was connected with the Wiggins Ferry Company, and was its secretary and treasurer when he retired in 1902. He is a member of one of the old French families of St. Louis on the Distaff side.

institute, and three unofficial members elected each year. There are three other candidates already announced, two from the Pacific coast and one from the East. The Central West has had little representation on this body, yet its organizations are as strong and active as can be found in the country. When Mr. Al-lendoerfer and Mr. Thralls start for the convention they will first go to Chicago, where they will join a special train of delegates from the East and Middle West.

Oklahoma Prospering

Oklahoma comes in for its share of the good things this year and its crop prospects appear to be quite as bright as those in Kansas, Nebraska and Missouri. The prosperity of the new state is reflected in the report of the Oklahoma bank guaranty fund made public last Wednesday. The report shows an increase in cash on hand from $19,054 on April 1st, to $44,021 on June 30th last. The board received $84,157 from assessments of banks during the period and collected $1,213 from assets taken from defunct banks. Settlements amounting to $2,245 were made on account of failed banks and outstanding warrants in the sum of $56,382 were paid.

Central West Notes

In order to secure notes for the building of an interurban trolley line from Dallas to Waco and Corsicana, Texas, the Southern Traction Company has filed a mortgage in Dallas hypothecating all of its physical properties to the St. Louis Union Trust Company to secure a bonded indebtedness of $7,500,000.

State Bank Commissioner John E. Swanger of Missouri has withdrawn from the race for the republican nomination for governor. Mr. Swanger says in explanation that he was a strong Roosevelt partisan before the Chicago convention, but that now he is for Taft and believes that in the interest of harmony and republican success in Missouri he can best serve his party in the ranks.

W. W. Bowman, secretary of the Kansas Bankers Association, announces a meeting of the executive committee to be held within the next ten days at which important business will be transacted. Various cities of Kansas are awaiting with interest the designation to be made by the committee for the next state convention of the association. The citizens of Hutchinson are making a strong effort to get this convention and with every prospect of success.

L. F. Adams, cashier of the National Bank of Lamar, Lamar, Colo., died recently from the effects of an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Adams was very well known among the banking fraternity of the Central West.

Through the merger of the El Reno State Bank and the State Guaranty Bank, El Reno now has one of the strongest banking institutions in Oklahoma. The capitalization is $50,000 with assets of $400,000. George Bellamy, vice-president of the El Reno State Bank, becomes president of the new institution; W. J. Finch, vice-president of the State Guaranty Bank, vice-president; and Arthur T. March, cashier of the El Reno State Bank, becomes cashier.

Fred A. Cuscaden of Omaha has been appointed national bank examiner and has just returned from Washington where he conferred with the officials of the treasury department regarding his assignment, which has not yet been announced.

Editorial Comment

PROPOSED REVISION OF SHERMAN ACT

Dispatches from Washington tell us that both Woodrow Wilson and Senator La Follette have contributed toward the structure of the new anti-trust law, the proposed Stanley improvement on the Sherman act with its many vagaries and cumbersome ambiguity. The importance of connecting Wilson's name with it is to avoid mentioning Bryan and in the belief (at least at Washington) that the next president will hail from New Jersey. The bill proposes that individuals shall have the power to bring suits in equity for an injunction under the Sherman anti-trust law, and that they also shall have the power to intervene in any suit brought by the government under this act. Now the federal government alone is empowered to begin proceedings under the Sherman law. The bill also proposes that the burden of proof in regard to the reasonableness or unreasonableness of a restraint of trade shall be shifted from the complainant to the defendant corporation. In addition the bill defines ten acts which shall constitute unreasonable restraints of trade. The committee contends that the definitions of these restraints will remove the uncertainty of business men in regard to the meaning of the Sherman anti-trust act. There are a dozen other radical changes proposed which ought to be studied carefully by every man interested in this vital question. The changes will make the anti-trust laws practical and effective, rather than a political asset of the president as they now are.

WAITING FOR THE COLONEL'S REPLY

Colonel Roosevelt as yet has sent no reply to the oft repeated requests of Senator La Follette for an itemized list of his contributions and expenses in the pre-convention or primary campaign. Such neglect is serious, for La Follette will not let up until he has convinced a lot of people that the Colonel is afraid to tell. All the Roosevelt talk about publicity will be recalled to that gentleman's discomfort if not to his undoing. Nor is Senator La Follette the only one. Charles H. Betts, editor of "The Republican," at Lyons, New York, and worldly-wise, has written the Colonel an open telegram, which for two weeks has not brought forth even a snort from the Bull Moose. Colonel Betts has been a republican progressive for many years, since long before Oyster Bay discovered the issue. He was invited to sign the New York call for the organization of a third party. This is his reply:

My Dear Colonel: I notice in the newspapers that you are looking for a paramount issue for your third party of treason, and that you are considering the "high cost of living." Permit me to suggest that it would be more appropriate for you to adopt as your paramount issue, "the high cost of presidential primaries," in which your millionaire friends, and the steel trust, the harvester trust, and several other trust magnates, indicted by the Taft administration, are reported to have squandered $3,000,000 in a vain effort to buy for you the presidential nomination on the republican ticket. You could, with your matchless versatility, easily explain to the public how all this trust-tainted money was honestly expended to debauch the electorate, just to give emphasis to the cause of reform and to vindicate the rule of the people.

Mr. Betts neither is an "undesirable citizen" nor a "malefactor" of any kind or he would not have been asked to sign the call. Yet he has had no reply, and he sent his telegram of declination on July 8th. The Colonel should reply to both Mr. Betts and to Senator La Follette. They want to know and the public wants to know what he did with the money when he got it; also from whom it came. Little wonder Colonel Harvey suggests a substitute for the eighth commandment which Roosevelt discovered and adopted. Harvey would write it, "Thou shalt not Steel, neither shalt thou Harvest." Let "social justice," the "recall" and other issues slide and reply to Betts and La Follette is the wish of every honest man.

PLANNING FOR SUPERVISION

Iowa couldn't do a wiser thing than to borrow the Illinois plan for putting all banking under supervision. The report of the Dawes committee couldn't be milder, nor fairer, and do the work intended. The three-year extension of time in which private bank assets can be converted to fit the requirements of the examiner and the two-year "twilight zone" in which he may publish no reports are all in the way of leniency that even the cardinalate of the opposition could ask in reason. The Tribune says that

These recommendations are extremely conservative and do not infringe upon the legitimate interests and proper activities of reputable private banking. They were framed by expert bankers who have canvassed conditions in Illinois thoroughly, and they will be backed by intelligent and right-minded members of the banking fraternity throughout the state.

Present conditions are a holdover of other days when not much of anything was supervised or regulated by law. Private banking has escaped longest of any important branch of business, and all sections of Illinois have grown accustomed to the private bank. In the main they have been honest and respectable institutions against which no honest, individual complaint could rest. In Chicago and in the mining and manufacturing towns, however, the abuses have been the scandal of the age. Failure after failure (calling it no worse name) is the history recorded by the daily press. Losses have been total as a rule. In mining towns the situation is unspeakable.

There is no reason why honest private banks should resist regulation—none but taxes—and that should be mentioned in a whisper. The public welfare is the chief consideration at interest. The private or incorporated banker who would not defraud the unthinking and the ignorant depositor owes the public a duty in doing all he can to prevent the unscrupulous fake banker from preying upon them. President Harris has made a gallant fight and let great credit be his. He secured some of the ablest bankers in the state to draw the bill and no fair man can question its honesty or its fairness.

Iowa went on record as favoring supervision at the suggestion of President A. J. Curtin at the Cedar Rapids convention and now has an opportunity to avail of the work done by the Dawes committee. The Illinois plan will fit Iowa conditions for they are much the same as in Illinois. These two great states should get out of the rut and join their modern, up-to-date neighbors with new banking laws and separate banking departments to conduct supervision and make careful examinations. Banking should not be a side issue in the state auditor's office in charge of a mere clerk.

The Citizens State Bank of Altus, Okla., has been organized with a capital stock of $25,000. Another new bank is the First State Bank of Talco, Texas, with $12,000 capital.

Charles L. Beissner, owner with his brother, J. E. Beissner, of the Rosenberg Bank, Rosenberg, Texas, died last week at his home in Galveston. He was 73 years old and had been a resident of Galveston since 1843.

self, is given the benefit of loans from his society on long time and easy terms, and, at the same time, is permitted to share in his society's profits. The loan societies are of two classes—the loan savings associations and the societies of small credit. They are both co-operative, and the aim of each is to lend small amounts to the farmers through governmental assistance. The difference between the two classes of societies is that the members of the loan savings associations are obliged to make deposits of a small amount in order to form a reserve capital for their society, while members of the societies of small credit do not participate personally in the formation of their society's capital. The latter societies are adapted to the poorer and more sparsely settled communities.

The management of all the societies is placed under the control of the ministry of finance, and is directly supervised by a department of the State Bank. When a group of twenty or more individuals wishes to form a co-operative loan society a petition to that effect is presented to the government. A government inspector then makes a personal investigation of the responsibility of the signers of the petition and of the value of their land. Upon his recommendation the government grants the society a loan of one to three thousand rubles ($500 to $1,500 for a period of thirteen years, at an interest rate of 5 per cent, payable annually. This loan serves as the foundation capital of the society. For its working capital the State Bank is authorized by the government to lend money to the society upon application. The amount of the loan from the State Bank depends upon the number of members in the society, their aggregate wealth, etc., but is not restricted to any one amount, and generally varies from between $1,000 to $1,500 and $25,000 to $50,000.

The State Bank loan is at the same rate of interest as the government loan—i. e., 5 per cent—but is made for a short time only, usually for twelve months. Besides the foundation capital from the government and the loans from the State Bank, the societies may obtain other loans from banks or individuals, usually at from 6 to 10 per cent interest. Savings deposits are received by the societies. The average society begins business with a total capital—that is, both foundation and working capital—of from $4,000 to $6,000. It is then in a position to make loans to its members, who are responsible to the society.

These loans are of three kinds: (1) Those used for current expenses for a term of not more than one year; (2) those used for the purchase of agricultural machinery, horses, etc., up to three years; and (3) those used in agricultural improvements, irrigation works, etc., which run, generally, for five years.

Loans to members usually bear an interest rate of 8 per cent to 12 per cent. On the small loans up to $150, no other guaranty is required of the borrower than his personal word or that of another responsible individual. Where security is given on the land or the farm products of the debtor the farmer may borrow as high as $500. In case of failure of crops or other misfortunes coming to the borrower an extension of time is granted him in which to repay his loan, and when the harvest is not good in any district the State Bank also will extend the same leniency to the society for the repayment of its loan.

In the societies of small credit the initial loan from the government, made for thirteen years, is repaid by reserving 60 per cent of the society's net earnings as a reserve fund. This is done only in times when the society has had a prosperous year, but, so far, prosperity for the societies has proved almost the invariable rule. In the same way the loans savings associations put aside 10 per cent for the repayment of loans, and a dividend, not exceeding 5 to 10 per cent, is then paid to its depositors.

CHICAGO BANKER BOOMS WESTERN CANADA

"Western Canada fully justifies the confidence that has been and is being placed in its resources and possibilities by capitalists in eastern portions of the Dominion and throughout the United States," said G. H. Dunscomb, representing the First National Bank of Chicago, who was a visitor in Edmonton with seventeen members of the Chicago Association of Commerce, July 16th, on a tour of the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, described by Hubert F. Miller, business manager of the organization, as a "crusade of acquaintance." "The growth and progress which seems to us so phenomenal is, no doubt, accounted for by the fact that the builders of western Canada have been assisted in their development by the financial resources of the East," Mr. Dunscomb continued, adding: "In that respect the Canadian West is more fortunate than were the Middle States at a similar period in their development. In those days there was not the almost unlimited capital, which is at the call of western Canada to-day. The people of western Canada have the faith that moves mountains, to use a figure of speech, that will come somewhere near doing justice to the subject. There is a country of wonderful potentialities, and we find, too, that the people on the ground are fully conscious of their heritage and will bring the country, as yet hardly scratched, so far as the development of its resources is concerned, to the forefront of nations in the years that are ahead."

HOUSTON MAN HEADS NEW BANK

The organization of a new trust and banking company for Temple, Texas, with a capital stock of $200,000, has just been completed. The institution will begin active business on August 1, with H. C. Glenn, late of the Houston firm of W. I. Williamson & Co., as president and active head. The principal incorporators are Charles M. Campbell, Dr. J. M. Woodson, T. B. Duggan, W. S. Rowland, Governor George C. Pendleton and H. C. Glenn, together with several other Central Texas prominent bankers. The institution will be incorporated under the banking laws of Texas, but will not receive checking accounts. Mr. Glenn, the president of the new bank, is well known in Houston. He was actively connected, for ten years, with W. I. Williamson & Co., and the reputation he made for integrity and sterling business capacity was a guiding factor in his selection for the presidency of the new company.

The Bank of Black Oak, Craighead county, Okla., has been incorporated; capital, $100,000. The officers are: G. W. Mangrum, president; W. C. Craig, vice-president; C. W. Williams, secretary and treasurer, and M. C. Arington, cashier.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Among Chicago business men returning from a western trip through St. Paul, was Byron L. Smith, president of the Northern Trust Company. He said: "This Northwest, both as to the country and the people, is the finest section of the United States. The farther west one goes the broader and more generous the people become. Politics is not worrying them—it's the crops, and from what we have observed, the difficulty will be in getting sufficient labor to move them, for the harvest promises to be the best ever. We have no intention of mingling business with our pleasure trip and therefore will not attempt to discuss any business problems. This I will say, though, the officials of the Great Northern Railroad deserve unstinted praise for their work in opening up the Glacier National Park. We had all seen the Yellowstone, but the other park is a marvelous place. We spent some time in both parks." The party includes besides Mr. Smith: C. L. Hutchinson, vice-president of the Corn Exchange National Bank; A. C. Bartlett, president Hibbard, Spencer & Bartlett; A. A. Sprague, president Sprague, Warner & Co., and Martin A. Reyerson, president board of trustees Chicago University.

Agricultural Conference

"What proportion of your entire school population is receiving a practical education?" is one of the questions sent to the agricultural committee of twenty-five state bankers' associations preparatory to the convention of these committees in St. Paul and Minneapolis, August 7 and 8. This convention, it is said, will be one of the most important in the country this year, because of the vast influence of the investigations of the bankers on the educational programs of the public schools of the states in the past few years. In addition to the states which already have appointed agricultural committees, the associations of several states will meet this month and more representatives are to be named to the convention.

Joseph Chapman, Jr., of Minneapolis, in sending notice of the meeting to the bankers, has asked them to consider a number of questions in relation to the people on the land and the schools of the state and to be prepared to bring definite facts to the convention. There will be a number of addresses by prominent educators, but much of the meeting will be devoted to planning the future work of the bankers.

The bankers will assemble facts bearing on the proportion of the people on the soil now and how this has grown in the last two decades. The number of agricultural high schools in the state and the extent to which they reach the people also will be considered.

Banking Miscellany

The Wisconsin State Bank Commission has approved the incorporation of the Citizen's State of Trempealeau, Wis., at $10,000. Officers are: President, William Nicholls; vice-president, Fred W. Graves; cashier, Merton Utter.

Perry Harrison, vice-president of the Security National Bank, is a road dragger. He has a summer home out at Excelsior, Lake Minnetonka. Roads used to give a great deal of trouble. Harrison one day told the village street committee to take a look at the roads around his place. The committee found the highway in good form, without ruts and chucks and forthwith adopted road dragging for the village. Now Minneapolis has hired an expert from Iowa to demonstrate road dragging on unpaved streets, unaware of a road prophet in its midst.

The Albert Lea Trust Company and the Fidelity Trust Company, each $50,000 capital, have been formed at Albert Lea, Minn. The latter is promoted by H. E. Keller and others, and the former by D. C. Armstrong. The two new formations increased the banking and trust company capital of the city to more than $400,000.

Returned from the Pacific coast J. A. Latta, vice-president of the Northwestern National, says that business conditions are reported as increasingly favorable there. In San Francisco much interest was manifested in the Panama Canal. Seattle and Portland lumber trade is more active. The crops are everywhere looking good, with prospects for big yields of grain.

Nearly $19,000,000 was handled by the Minneapolis postoffice in the fiscal year ending June 30th. Of this sum $6,668,577 was received as over and above reserve in postoffices of Minnesota, the Dakotas and parts of Wisconsin and Michigan.

Anyone tipping off the whereabouts of Harry W. Parker, alleged to have diverted from the Bank of Commerce at Winnebago, Minn., some money, April 26, to Governor A. O. Eberhart, will have a chance at $250 hung up as the trophy. The information must lead to arrest and conviction, otherwise there is no advertised string to the purse.

Tacoma Letter

BY BARTON KAUFFMAN.

Bank Clearings

The bank clearings for Tacoma for the week ending July 13, 1912, were $4,596,264.96.

Death of George Browne

George Browne, one of the founders, and for many years secretary and treasurer of the St. Paul & Tacoma Lumber Company, Wilkeson Coal and Coke Company, and many other corporations, died early Sunday morning, July 14, at his country residence on Gravelly Lake, at the age of seventy-seven years. Mr. Browne was a member of the board of trustees of the Fidelity Trust Company from the date of its incorporation, 1889, and for many years secretary of the board. He was re-elected annually as trustee and was a member of the board at the date of his death. Mr. Browne was induced to come to Tacoma twenty-five years ago by Mr. Thomas F. Oakes, then president of the Northern Pacific Railroad, a near kinsman. He at once became thoroughly identified with many of Tacoma's leading corporations and was a large stockholder up to the time of his death. As a public citizen he was very active in promoting every important movement tending to the upbuilding and developing of his adopted city and state. He was one of the organizers, and first president, of the Union Club of Tacoma; member of the first legislature that convened after Washington was given statehood; was an active member of Tacoma's park board and as president of the park board he helped plan the arrangement and superintended the planting of the valuable trees and shrubs that have made Wright Park famous as one of the most beautiful parks in the country. Mr. Browne as a boy entered the army and won distinction in the Civil War, mustered out as captain of the same organization in which he enlisted. He was one of the original organizers and president of the board of trustees of the Ferry Museum and did much to make that institution what it is to-day. With the exception only of Col. Ferry, the city of Tacoma owes more to George Browne than to any other man for the organization and equipment of the Ferry Museum. Mr. Browne was in every sense of the word a citizen of the highest type and he dies full of honors and with the highest respect and esteem of all who knew him. In respect to his memory the banks of Tacoma adopted a resolution to close Tuesday, July 16, at one o'clock for his funeral.

Personal

A. G. Prichard, cashier of the Fidelity Trust Company, leaves the last of the week for his vacation, and will motor to Vancouver, thence take his car by boat to Victoria and spend a couple of weeks motoring over Vancouver Island.

Eugene Cazedessus, cashier of the Bank of Baton Rouge, Louisiana, with his wife, who have been touring the Pacific Northwest, spent Saturday in Tacoma the guests of Mr. and Mrs. P. C. Kauffman.

Currency Reform

It deeply is to be regretted that both political parties at the recent conventions saw fit to treat the important questions of currency reform in such an indefinite manner. Each of the platforms recognized the necessity of important modifications in our present currency system; both of them, however, seemed to be afraid to put themselves in the position of making a positive affirmative declaration. The republicans did not seem to have the courage to endorse the plan proposed by the Monetary Commission, while the democratic platform placed the party distinctly on record as opposed to the so-called Aldrich Bill, or the organization of a central bank, yet at the same time recognized the necessity of some thorough revision or modification of our existing currency system. When the Monetary Commission was appointed, from the very fact that it was constituted of practically an equal number from each of the two great parties, and from the additional fact that its report when finally submitted to congress with the proposed bill providing for the National Reserve Association, was signed by every member of the commission and therefore was a unanimous report, it was hoped that this most important business question would be kept entirely out of politics and be treated by congress in a businesslike manner. In 1896 the republican party had the courage to meet the free-coinage-of-silver heresy by a frank, positive declaration in favor of a single gold standard, but in 1912 it lacked the courage to place itself on record with a decisive declaration in favor of a more positive plan for reformation of our defective currency system, and in place has given a colorless plank dismissing the subject with an inconclusive statement that the republican party is committed to the "progressive development" of our currency and banking system; that our banking "arrangements" need further revision to meet the requirements of current conditions; that we need measures which will prevent the recurrence of money panics and financial disruptions; that we need better currency facilities for the movement of crops and better banking "arrangements" abroad for the promotion of American foreign trade.

A few threadbare platitudes like those furnish a poor substitute for a definite, positive declaration in favor of a carefully proposed plan such as the bill providing for the organization of the National Reserve Association.

The republican platform is only better than the democratic platform in that the latter definitely opposed the organization of the National Reserve Association, or central bank. The remainder of the republican plank is filled with platitudes and misstatements. It is evident and deeply to be regretted that the proposed currency planks in both platforms will make this question a football of politics. The undoubted result will be to delay, probably for years, any definite action by congress in the matter. The chief reliance that the bankers of the country now have for any improvement in our currency system is through the work of the National Citizens League, and in this connection I take pleasure in quoting the resolution unanimously adopted by the Washington Bankers Association at its recent convention in Tacoma favoring the work of that league, which is as follows:

Work of the National Citizens League

"Believing that the permanent prosperity of this nation depends upon a sane and sound banking system and a currency that will respond to the seasonal demands of the different sections of the nation and that the business men of the country, bankers, manufacturers, merchants and farmers alike are concerned in this most important problem of our economic and commercial life;

BE IT RESOLVED by the Washington Bankers Association, that it heartily approves of the campaign of education for sound banking and currency reform which the National Citizens League is carrying on in the state of Washington and in other states of the Union.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED: That the

Des Moines, July 24.—It probably is no exaggeration to say that the genial presence of the late Emerson DePuy of Des Moines will be more missed from Iowa bank gatherings than would that of any other man in the state affiliated with the fraternity. Mr. DePuy attended more group meetings in Iowa, in all probability, than any man in the state. He never has failed to respond when invited to appear on the program and he never has faltered when called upon for a toast at the banquet which is always a feature of the group meeting. His death in Des Moines Wednesday night of last week has caused genuine sorrow throughout the entire state. The funeral was held Sunday afternoon and the bankers of Des Moines were in evidence. Mr. DePuy had been publisher of the "Northwestern Banker" for more than five years. Prior to that time he had been connected with the "Iowa Homestead" and had labored as a newspaper reporter in the earlier years of his life. He was born at Havenock, N. Y., and came to Iowa twenty-six years ago. At the time of his death Mr. DePuy was 54 years of age and he had attained a wide reputation in Iowa as a speaker and entertainer as well as a magazine writer. His death was for the most part unexpected. He was taken ill while in Minnesota and was rushed to Des Moines, where an operation was performed in hopes of relieving his suffering from congestion of the bowels. He seemed to improve, but a blood clot formed near the heart and a few days after the operation, death came. A widow and two children, a son and a daughter, survive.

Many after Presidency

It is quite apparent that the presidency of the Iowa Bankers Association next year is going to be a hard-fought affair. Although Charles T. Shade had a walkaway this year, someone will have to "go some" next year. Already D. L. Heinsheimer of Glenwood, J. H. Ingwersen of Clinton, and Charles T. Ellis of Charles City have been mentioned as presidential possibilities. The name of S. M. Leach of Adel, who aspired two years ago but retired in favor of E. J. Curtin of Decorah, also has been mentioned. It is believed that the early entrance of so many candidates into the field means that there will be more hats in the ring when the convention assembles in Des Moines next June.

Bright Outlook for State

Des Moines bankers seem unanimous in the belief that Iowa this year is going to surpass all previous records in the production of crops. It is likewise the consensus of opinion that presidential politics will have no effect whatever upon the prosperity of this state. In fact, the bankers think that the coming election likely is to clarify the situation and perhaps eliminate some of the political agitation that has been on the boards for the past four years. "The people are tired of politics," said Arthur

Reynolds, president of the Des Moines National, and well known authority on matters financial. "They will welcome the relief which I believe likely is to follow the election this fall. After election, no matter whether Wilson, Taft or Roosevelt wins, we are going to have good times. We are having good times now. But they will be better after the election. Crop prospects are magnificent, not only in Iowa but throughout the entire country. Eastern financiers whose range of vision is broad tell us that conditions never were better in all sections of the country. I do not believe that any president hereafter will be able to wield a big stick. I do not believe that any one man, elected president, will be able to upset conditions. If he is ultra-radical, the members of the congress or of the senate will not follow him."

Other bankers who were quoted in a Des Moines paper on the financial outlook coincided in their views with the belief of Mr. Reynolds. G. E. MacKinnon, president of the Mechanics Savings, George Pearsall of the Citizens National, Harry T. Blackburn of the Iowa National, and John Hogan of the German Savings, all expressed the view that Iowa's crops this year are going to be too big for presidential politics to affect the prosperity of the state.

Alleged Swindler Arrested

Secretary P. W. Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association, and Gust Patek, detective for the Burns agency, and stationed in this state, are rejoicing over the arrest of P. W. Hawley by the latter in Des Moines. Hawley was suspected of being guilty of a bunch of forgeries at Fort Dodge. After he was arrested Secretary Hall discovered that he was wanted at Omaha, and it was to that city that the man was taken by Mr. Patek. It is stated that the City National at Omaha is several hundred dollars shy as the result of the machinations of Hawley. The latter had four big trunks with him. He also was accompanied by his wife and a bulldog. He was extremely reticent when put on the grill by Messrs. Hall and Patek and declared that he was only visiting Des Moines and was about to return to Omaha. However, it was ascertained that his trunks were marked with Cincinnati as his address and that he was intending to go East the day he was placed under arrest.

Postal Banks Make Good Showing

Interesting statistics as to the amounts deposited in the various postoffice banks of Iowa have been published by the department at Washington. The postal savings depositors in Iowa applied for $12,160 of the postal savings bonds on July 1st. Council Bluffs leads the other cities with a request for $2,080; Des Moines is second with $1,800, and then come Ottumwa, $1,100; Dubuque, $940; Muscatine and Perry, $600 each; Decorah, Belmond and Remsen, $400 each. The banks showed as deposited on May 31st: Des Moines, $32,528;

The First National Bank of Bloomberg, Texas, has opened for business with a capital of $25,000. The incorporators are J. S. Conley, T. H. Leeves, S. T. Sherman and R. H. Stuckey. This institution is a conversion of the First State Bank of Bloomberg.

Council Bluffs, $13,625; Ottumwa, $6,305; Dubuque, $5,060; Muscatine, $2,445; Centerville, $7,345; Albia, $14,625; Decorah, $2,134. Centerville and Albia are in the center of mining communities and this is advanced as the reason for their big showing.

Building Company Organized

The Leavitt & Johnson National at Waterloo, which recently acquired valuable property in that city, has organized a building company with a capital stock of $500,000. "The Leavitt & Johnson National Bank Building Company" is the name of the concern and its purpose is to prepare for the handsome new building which is to be erected in the near future.

Prominent Bankers Die

David J. Pattee, president of the First National at Perry, died last week very suddenly while sojourning at Spirit Lake. Although he had been failing for two years following an attack of apoplexy, Mr. Pattee's end came as a distinct shock to the bankers of the state. The deceased had resided in Perry for forty years and was accounted one of its wealthiest citizens. His estate is estimated at $500,000. Two sons who survive him are Harry M. Pattee, vice-president of the First National, and Will H. Pattee, cashier of the institution. The funeral was held at Perry and was largely attended.

Henry C. Struck, cashier of the Davenport Savings and one of the well-known business men of Davenport, died last week of apoplexy at his home in that city. He had complained of not feeling well, but his death came absolutely without warning. The deceased was born in Germany. His family came to America in 1853 and in 1856 they sailed up the Mississippi to Davenport, where the deceased banker always has lived. In September, 1892, he entered the Davenport Savings as cashier. He was made a director three years later and shortly thereafter was made one of the managing board of the Davenport Clearing House Association. The funeral was held Sunday morning and was private. The body was incinerated.

Iowa Notes

President A. F. Balsh of the Marshalltown State motored to Des Moines one day last week and visited Secretary Hall of the I. B. A. Mr. Balsh reports crops as magnificent in his section of the country, as indeed they are in all parts of Iowa. Although urged to attend the Detroit convention, he stated that he is planning a month in the East in August and doubts whether he will be able to drop into Detroit for the sessions. Iowa bankers have been having some trouble securing hotel accommodations in Detroit, but Secretary Hall believes there will be no necessity for any of them sleeping in the streets.

Council Bluffs bankers are feeling mighty good over the showing the institutions in that city are making. The deposits as shown at the time of the last call totaled $7,018,364, and at the time of the call in February they totaled $6,888,192, a nice gain of $130,000. The undivided profits were listed at $51,799, and in July they had increased to $102,498.

George Bates, after working at the carpenter trade at Reinbeck for a couple of months, floated $91 in bogus checks on merchants in that city and made his getaway.

Mrs. L. J. Lynch of Ames had the misfortune to leave her pocketbook in the waste paper basket and it found its way into the fire. Mrs. Lynch gathered up the ashes, took them to President Meltzer of the Ames Savings and the latter packed the remains in cotton and sent them to Washington. After some days the woman received $31 in good new bills.

The treasury department had been able to identify the ashes and was prompt to forward good money in exchange.

The Home Savings of Des Moines is getting in line and is making extensive improvements on its quarters in East Des Moines. Alterations are being made which will give it twice the floor space now available. A new white terra cotta front will be installed, a ladies' rest room will be added and there will be new fixtures and new furniture. It is anticipated that $25,000 will be spent in making the contemplated improvements.

The Citizens State of Fayette has increased its capital stock to $45,000.

The city council of Des Moines has approved a bond issue of $124,000 which will be issued for flood protection purposes. It is anticipated that a second issue of $26,000 will be authorized later.

A. C. Bielenberg of Davenport has been chosen as cashier of the new bank at Toronto, Iowa, of which Herbery Mowry is president and P. H. Schneider, of Massillon, vice-president. The bank will inspect numerous structures and will erect a building of its own in keeping with advanced thought in the way of bank buildings.

William I. Collins, formerly a banker at Knoxville and at Indianola, died at Fort Dodge. He was the son of A. W. Collins, who was the first to establish a national bank at Knoxville, and he was a cousin of Lafe S. Collins, present president of the Citizens Bank of that town.

The Juvenile Savings Company is a new organization which has been launched in Des Moines and in which several business men and a banker or two are interested. It is announced that the organization will foster the habit of saving money among children.

John C. Ruymann of the Bank of the Philippines at Manila has been visiting his father, William Ruymann, at Davenport. The guest is owner of a 43,000 acre plantation near Manila and has been on the islands for twenty years. The bank of which he is an officer is capitalized at 10,000,000 pesos or $5,000,000 in American coin of the realm.

D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National Bank, Spokane, definite and sure. BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

WISCONSIN

The Milwaukee building figures last week were just $1,000,000 in excess of those of a corresponding week in 1911, the increase being largely accounted for by the permit for the new $1,600,000 First National Bank building, which was granted during the week.

Milwaukee Bankers to Take Lake Trip

Milwaukee banks will be well represented on the Michigan trip of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association as guests of F. C. Reynolds, vice-president of the Pere Marquette Line, on July 31st and August 1st. The banker contingent includes George W. Strohmeyer, Milwaukee National; E. J. Hughes, First National; E. A. Reddeman, Germania National; W. L. Cheney, Second Ward Savings; E. H. Williams, Marine National; William M. Post, National Exchange; and E. A. Farmer, German-American. The eighty members of the association for whom reservation has been made will leave on one of the Pere Marquette Line steamers on the night of Wednesday, July 31st, arriving in Ludington the following morning. A trip on the lake shore to Manistee will occupy the day, the Milwaukeeans returning Friday morning.

Ex-Chicago Banker Arrested

William W. Paulson, Chicago attorney and former banker, was arrested in Milwaukee this week charged with forgery. In addition to a $1,580 note on which the charge was based, six other notes, aggregating $10,050 and bearing forged signatures, were found in Paulson's possession when the arrest was made.

Former Sheboygan Falls Banker Fined

Stedman Thomas, former cashier of the Dairymens National Bank of Sheboygan Falls, was fined $250 in the Milwaukee district federal court this week after entering a "nolle contendere" plea to a charge of violating the national banking laws. Thomas was indicted by the grand jury when alleged to have made a false certificate of an $11,000 check to the bank of which he was formerly cashier. The case has been pending since May 19, 1910.

St. Paul Purchases Property

With the purchase of a narrow strip of property on the south side, near the harbor mouth, the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway has completed its continuous right of way within the Milwaukee city limits this week. The property was purchased from the Chicago & North Western Railway for $84,653.45. The Milwaukee road's main line tracks have occupied the ground for many years, the company leasing it from the North-Western Line. The negotiations were hastened by the railway commission's recent order for track elevation for all roads on the south side.

Dispute Over Property Valuation

The dispute over the Plankinton House property valuation, recently decided in favor of the heirs by Judge L. W. Halsey of the circuit court, probably will be reopened before the county board of review next week, following Tax Commissioner Arnold's assertion that the property will be assessed at $3,100,000, or $200,000 more than last year, despite Judge Halsey's decision that the building could only be assessed as salvage. Property owners and real estate men are interested in the case as setting a standard value for downtown property in the vicinity.

Allis-Chalmers Receivership

Arguments in the Allis-Chalmers receivership and foreclosure proceedings opened this week in the United States court. Nathan Eisenmann has filed petition to be permitted to intervene on the ground that the proceedings were fraudulent and collusive on the part of the reorganization committee.

MERCHANTS AND MANUFACTURERS BANK, MILWAUKEE, WIS.

Just a few weeks less than six years ago a number of prominent business men of Milwaukee met and organized the Merchants and Manufacturers Bank of this city, or, to be more exact, the bank began its existence July 20, 1906, with a capital of $100,000. L. M. Alexander was elected first president; W. S. Paddock, vice-president; J. F. Conant, vice-president; M. H. Graettinger, cashier; E. C. Knoernschild, assistant cashier; and F. X. Bodden, assistant cashier. The original directors were L. M. Alexander, J. F. Conant, W. S. Paddock, S. O. Nuff, Fred Doepke, G. A. Seefeld, H. P. Andrae and H. W. Schwab. The bank opened its doors in the Plankinton Block on the corner of Grand Avenue and Second Street, its present location.

Organizing as a bank for the merchants and manufacturers of Milwaukee, this institution has enjoyed a steady growth. Its deposits at close of business June 14, 1912, as shown in deposits, which show on June 14, 1908, $1,126,354.43; two years later, or June 14, 1910, the deposits amounted to $1,333,310.34; and as stated above, on June 14, 1912, the deposits reached $1,613,863.54.

The present directors are as follows: L. M. Alexander, president and treasurer, Nekoosa-Edwards Paper Company; H. P. Andrae, treasurer, Julius Andrae & Sons Company; J. F. Conant, president, J. F. Conant Manufacturing Company; Fred Doepke, president, Wrought Washer Manufacturing Company; Nathaniel Greene, real estate; E. C. Knoernschild, cashier; W. F. Myers, vice-president; W. S. Pad-the bank will occupy its new quarters within a few days of its sixth anniversary.

The exterior of the new building will be faced with blazed terra cotta to the top of the second floor, and with enameled brick to the roof, with large terra cotta cornice near the

In line with other progressive institutions in this city, the Merchants and Manufacturers Bank is erecting on West Water Street, between Wells and Grand Avenue, a modern reinforced concrete office building; dimensions are 80x135 feet, and it will be eight stories high without the basement. Work on the new building was commenced about October 1, 1911, and if present plans are consummated,

The first floor will be used for stores and banking purposes; the bank will occupy the entire rear half of the building, and the front part will be divided into stores to suit tenant. The main entrance and bank room will be finished in white marble and African mahogany. The floors will be marble mosaic. The grille work for the banking room will be bronze. The ceiling will be decorative plaster, and the room will be lighted with indirect lighting fixtures. No money will be spared in making the banking room and the building throughout modern and perfect in every respect.

Wisconsin Bankers Hear of Country Life Movement

The county work, or rural department of the Young Men's Christian Association seeks to unite in a town, village, rural community, or in the open country the vital forces of young manhood for self improvement, physically, socially, mentally, and spiritually, and to give expression to these resources in community life for the betterment of others. It considers its legitimate field to include all communities that are too small to maintain the city type of Young Men's Christian Association work, generally conceded to include towns of four thousand and under. Experience has proven that its best work is done, however, in communities in which the rural environment dominates the community ideals. It therefore is a movement which must be determined from the standpoint of qualitative rather than quantitative values. There are 45,000 such communities in the United States and Canada with a combined population of boys and young men of over 12,000,000, thus including over sixty per cent of the boyhood and young manhood in this field. There are 2,000 counties considered organizable in the United States and 500 in Canada on the present basis of organization and type of work.

County Work for County-Wide Co-operation

The term "county work" is applied to this movement because the county affords a ready geographical unit for constructive work. Counties have distinctive traditions of their own, social elements, and existing organizations of a county-wide character. As the result of repeated failures in individual communities apart from other communities, a county-wide organization, commanding the combined resources of men and money within a county, made possible in community life that which could not have been accomplished independently.

Efficiency in Organization

There are two factors that enter into this plan so essential to success—volunteer effort and expert supervision. The voluntary organization, the county committee, consisting of from fifteen to twenty prominent business

Henry Israel, editor of "Rural Manhood" and field secretary for the International Y. M. C. A., tells what that powerful organization is doing in this interesting work and professional men and successful farmers, constitute the administrative unit and clearing house for policies and programs for the county-wide activities as well as for individual communities. These county committeemen are selected with great care, primarily meeting one of two qualifications: to be able to command resources of their own to promote this work for a period of years, or to possess such influence as to command the resources of others, both in time and money. They all must stand for the best things in community life, be vitally related to the church, to the school and other agencies that make for community progress. They constitute a voluntary body not unlike the faculty of a university at one time, or the health board of the county in another instance, as the clearing house for a religious campaign at another time, as a voluntary body of commissioners to advance the specific interests of a county, and in no uncertain degree measure out their best judgment frequently along the lines of advancing the agricultural or economic interests. Therefore, the county committee assigns these various aspects of its work to sub-committees, each of which renders its reports at the quarterly meeting of the county committee which works in close contact with the employed secretary and trained experts.

He is in a real sense a community builder. As he is employed by a voluntary organization, his services and his largest contribution to a county will be in reproducing his expert knowledge and experience in volunteer service. Therefore, his primary task is to discover, enlist, train, and utilize leadership. He is also a servant. Pastors, Sunday school superintendents and teachers, public school superintendents and day school teachers, fathers and mothers, granges, farmers' clubs and institutes, women's clubs, and many other organizations seek his co-operation and advice. In the individual community, having discovered leaders and set them to work, he executes the plans and policies adopted by the county committee through volunteer leadership. His relationship is with the few men who are the leaders rather than with the masses. In addition to the county secretaries some of the older and larger counties are employing assistant secretaries, physical directors, boys' work directors, etc. There are now fifty such secretaries in forty-nine organized counties.

The Basis of Operation

County work is not an attempt to build up a new organization in country communities. It recognizes as the primary institutions of the community the home, the school, and the church. Many other supplemental organizations are doing splendid work, but the aforementioned are recognized as fundamental. It is also a fact that though these are the primary institutions, they are in many cases functioning inadequately, or have ceased to perform their function entirely. Again, in the supplementary organizations which are found in country life many are overlapping and even working at cross purposes. There seems to be no well defined or unified policy. Furnishing a common platform upon which the various interests of the people will find expression and where these interests can come together in a democratic spirit is the unifying task of the county work in the organized counties. It stands for the elimination of waste, for the interpretation of real needs after careful surveys have been made, for the assumption of specific tasks by specific individuals and communities. It gives itself to the awakening of a social consciousness, a getting together; it seeks to supplement and not to supplant. If it can persuade a virile type of a man to teach a class of boys in a Sunday school, or a leader to supervise the play and athletics of a school,

In 1866 the bank was reorganized, Mr. Phil. Best, Jos. Schlitz and Val. Blatz coming in as stockholders. The name of the bank was changed to Second Ward Savings Bank and Val. Blatz was elected president, Jos. Schlitz, vice-president, and W. H. Jacobs, cashier.

The capital then was $25,000 and was increased to $100,000 in July, 1872; to $200,000 in July, 1877, and to $1,000,000 in 1908.

In 1869 Mr. Phil. Best died; in 1875, Mr. Jos. Schlitz was lost on the ill-fated steamer Schiller; in 1882 W. H. Jacobs died and after his death the bank again was reorganized, Mr. August Uihlein, Fred Pabst, Emil Schandain, Frank R. Falk, Chas. C. Schmidt and Henry Biefeld coming in as stockholders, and elected the following officers: Val. Blatz, president; August Uihlein, vice-president; Chas. C. After the death of Val. Blatz, which occurred in 1894, Mr. Aug. Uihlein was elected president; Fred Pabst, vice-president; Chas. C. Schmidt, cashier, and Henry Biefeld, assistant cashier.

In consequence of the sudden death of August Uihlein in October, 1911, a reorganization took place and his son, Jos. E. Uihlein, was elected his successor as president, with Chas. C. Schmidt, Henry Biefeld and Albert C. Elser as vice-presidents; W. L. Cheney, cashier, and Frank Brand, assistant cashier.

The bank's new building is now practically completed. It is of the flat-iron type, being located in the triangular area extending from Cedar Street north to the intersection of Third and West Water streets. This building has a frontage of 152 feet 10¾ inches on Third Street, 151 feet 11¾ inches on West Water Street and 87 feet 9 inches on Cedar Street, the last two frontages not including the curved outline closing the acute angle at the south-east corner of the building. The main entrances, of which there are two, are located practically at the centers of the east and west fronts, and open through vestibules into the main lobby.

The facades are of gray limestone, all decorative details being hand carved. The construction of the building, as well as the interior finish, is of the best type. This building is designed for banking business only, and as such it will be one of the finest and most expensive to be found in the Middle West.

The capital stock of the Citizens Southern Bank of Savannah, Ga., has been increased to $1,000,000.

road official who is to be blamed; it is the system that permits the division of the road money into such small parts that they must necessarily be spent inefficiently even in the hands of good men. If anyone were to suggest that the railroads adopt a similar policy for maintaining their line, even the most ardent opponent of change in our road system would laugh him out of court. But there is no reason why the public business should not be as wisely conducted as a private business and we should not rest content until it is.

The new state aid law is a single step only in the right direction. I hear many critics of the law say, "It does not go far enough," and I am glad. It is true, it does not go far enough. It was only aimed to go as far as public sentiment would follow. As fast as public sentiment is educated the road laws can be changed until we get a really intelligent business-like system of doing our road work. My own belief is that the county is the proper unit for road work, with a sufficient supervisory power in the state to bring about desirable unity, and the local road work all or nearly all in charge of the county. The state aid law was drawn with this plan in mind as the ultimate aim, and after a year or two we can tell better how the county is going to be able to work. At present the counties are paying for the course in practical road building which their highway commissioners are taking in the school of experience. So I want to ask you not to be too critical until another year has gone by.

Now as to the manner of working of the new state aid law. While it is necessarily somewhat lengthy, its principles are simple and easily understood. In the following explanation the various steps necessary to get state aid are taken up in their regular order. The first step is for the county board to select a system of main roads leading from the various market towns out into the surrounding country. This system must reach into every town in the county. It is known as the "county system of prospective state highways," and when any part of it is permanently improved that part becomes a full fledged "state highway." All counties in the state (with possibly two or three exceptions) have selected such a system.

The next step is for the county board to provide a competent man to have charge of the construction of these roads—either by electing a competent man as county highway commissioner or by requesting the state commissioner to place an engineer in charge temporarily.

The third step is to raise the money to do the work with. The usual way is for the town meeting in April to vote a special tax (which must be at least $400 and may be three mills) to be used on some one part of the selected system in that town—the town meeting selecting the place where the improvement is to be made. This money is put in the tax roll the next January and the work is done the year after the town voted the money. While it might be more desirable to do the work the same year, it is impossible on account of the fact that the state and county must make their allotments and this cannot be done quickly enough to permit the work to be done the same year.

Another way of raising the money is this: If any taxpayers want a special part of this system of roads improved they can subscribe an amount equal to what they desire the town to raise and the town board must put an equal amount into the tax roll exactly as though it had been voted at town meeting. The money thus subscribed and raised as tax, together with the amounts which this total sum would receive from the county and state as aid, must be spent on the road named by the subscribers in their petition.

After the money is available in either of the ways named, the town board makes application to the county board which must provide a sum equal to the total the town has available. The county clerk notifies the state highway commission and if the state highway fund has money enough in it a third equal sum is allotted for the particular improvement desired.

All this money is turned into the county treasury and is expended by the county highway commissioner under the guidance and on plans approved by the trained engineers of the state commission.

The fourth step is the surveying, planning and construction of the road. Under the state aid law this work is put in the hands of the most efficient and most experienced men available. Wherever possible the work must be done by contract and all contracts must be approved by the state before becoming effective.

The kinds of work done with state and county aid are limited only by the provision of the law providing that it must be of the "best practicable under the local circumstances." Clearing, grading, cutting hills and filling valleys, as well as the construction of stone, gravel, concrete and sand-clay roads can all be done with this money. In a new and poorly settled community where the opening up of the forested country is the most important purpose to be served, the clearing, grubbing and grading up of a good dirt road would unquestionably be the best type of work to be done "under the local circumstances," and state aid is given in such cases.

In a rich old community, long settled and made up of rich farms, the only proper type of construction would be some form of macadam, gravel, concrete or other type of more permanent form of road bed, and under the terms of the law state aid is only given for this type of road in such places.

The counties of the state are taking up this work very extensively—only six are not constructing roads in 1912 under this law, and three of these have voted to take it up in 1913. Many of them are going in very heavily, issuing bonds to pay for the work. Ashland county will have a total of $50,000 to spend on its county roads this year; Walworth county, $26,133; Sauk county, $65,667; Florence county, $20,000; Grant county, $48,915; Portage county, $21,416; Rusk county, $18,419; and Pierce county, $19,157.

The absence of all records and of one of the defendants is hampering the work of the Ashland courts in the hearing of the cases against Charles Fleishbein, Glidden, and John Gordon. Gordon bankers accused of defrauding the town of Gordon out of bonds and orders. When the case was called on Thursday records on the matters were found to be missing, and Gordon, who disappeared when the matter was made public, has not returned. Fleishbein denies any criminal act on his part.

The Farmers State Bank of Markesan has secured authority to increase its capital from $30,000 to $40,000.

The Oconto National Bank has installed a new manganese steel safe.

Wisconsin Convention

Milwaukee, Wis., July 25.—The Wisconsin Bankers Association has just concluded its eighteenth annual convention at this place, the sessions being held in the Empress Theatre. The convention proper was held yesterday and to-day, but on Tuesday the executive council met at association headquarters, Room 502 Merrill Bldg. At 6:30 p. m. on the same day there was a reunion of the "veterans" of the association at the Hotel Pfister, where dinner was served. Being a "veteran" consists either of having attended one or more of the first four conventions, or having served as a president of the association. Delegates, associate members and guests were requested to register and secure badges, tickets, etc., as soon after arrival as possible. Registration was conducted at the Hotel Pfister club room from seven until nine o'clock on Tuesday and continued at the Empress Theatre on Wednesday. The nominating committee met on the theatre stage at 9:45 A. M., immediately before the opening of the first session. It was announced beforehand that all sessions of the convention would convene according to schedule, the program being so arranged that the social features would not conflict with the business part of the sessions; also that discussion of various subjects presented to the convention was invited. The convention was called to order on Wednesday at ten o'clock by President James T. Joyce, who delivered his annual address immediately after the invocation by the Rev. R. S. Donaldson of Milwaukee. Following President Joyce there was the report of the executive council, also consideration of reports of the secretary and treasurer, and the appointment of committees. Detective Burns of New York then delivered an address on "Protection of Banks against Criminals." After announcements were read a recess was taken until two o'clock. At 1:30 members of the A. B. A. met on the theatre platform to select a vice-president for Wisconsin and a member to serve on the nominating committee at Detroit; also to select two members from Wisconsin to succeed Messrs. Frame and Sherman upon the A. B. A. executive council, whose terms will expire in September. J. T. Joyce, the present vice-president for the state, presided. Wednesday afternoon a report was heard from the special committee on "Insurance of Bank Deposits," by H. A. Moehlenpah, cashier of the Citizens Bank, Clinton, which was followed by a general discussion of this most important subject.

In accordance with instructions received at the 1911 convention the committee submitted a "Tentative Plan for Insurance of Deposits." The session this morning was devoted to agricultural matters. The committee on agriculture reported upon agricultural conferences with other associations, the report being made by L. A. Baker, cashier of the Manufacturers' Bank, New Richmond. Results of agricultural contests and future plans also were announced by the association secretary. Then there were five-minute talks upon the advantages of these contests. W. A. von Berg, cashier State Bank, Mosinee, spoke of the advantages to the farmer; J. R. Wheeler, cashier of the Farmers and Merchants Union Bank, Columbus, spoke on the advantages to the town; Earle Pease, cashier of the First National, Grand Rapids, told of the benefits to be derived by the banker. Prof. John Munroe, principal associated school of agriculture, Co-kato, Minn., delivered a most interesting address on agricultural high schools, and Prof. K. L. Hatch of the Wisconsin College of Agriculture, Madison, read a paper on "Laws as to Agricultural Education in Wisconsin High Schools;" Henry Israel, editor "Rural Manhood," New York, made a few remarks on keeping boys on the farm. After a general discussion the meeting was adjourned until two o'clock. In the afternoon of the second day there was an address on "One-cent Letter Postage" by George T. as a fruit state, by F. Cranfield, secretary of the Wisconsin Horticultural Society, Madison, who in turn was followed by W. O. Hotchkiss, secretary of the State Highway Commission, who talked on better roads for Wisconsin. The committee on resolutions then made its report, which was followed by a report from the committee on nominations and the election of officers for the ensuing year. A meeting of the new executive council was held immediately after the adjournment of this session.

The entertainment features of the convention were greatly enjoyed by all those participating. The local committee, consisting of Messrs. E. J. Hughes, W. M. Post, Walter Kasten and E. A. Reddeman, is to be congratulated for its efficient work. A special invitation was extended to the visiting ladies. On Wednesday afternoon at four o'clock an inspection was made of the C. M. & St. P. car shops. Delegates and visitors thereby were enabled to see in process of manufacture every article used in the operation of a railway system, from the coupling pin to the complete locomotive. At 8:15 delegates and visitors were tendered a theatre party at the Majestic. This morning there was provided a special entertainment for the ladies, consisting of a tally-ho ride through the city parks, followed by a mid-day luncheon at Lake Park Pavilion. This evening at 6:30 an informal dinner, band concert and dance were tendered the association members and their guests at the Deutscher Club.

The sessions of the convention were largely and enthusiastically attended. The program sent out by Secretary Bartlett was quite unique, being printed upon the Wisconsin bankers' watermarked safety paper, the use of which, for drafts, checks and certificates is restricted to members of the association. Members were requested to aid in the prevention of

"check raising" by the use of this safety paper. Secretary Bartlett is to be congratulated upon the strong program presented.

Deposit Insurance Wisconsin Plan

The Wisconsin bankers heard with great interest the talk of H. A. Moehlenpah at the Milwaukee convention on the subject of the mutual insurance of bank deposits. Mr. Moehlenpah is the hard-working, able chairman of the committee having the new plan in preparation. He spoke extemporaneously but the following in an accurate résumé of the points made in his address. The company proposed will be called the Bank Deposit Limited Insurance Company, therefore no assessments are possible and the company can transact no other kind of business. Maximum policy to be three times average policy. Therefore no loss can exceed $1\frac{1}{3}$ per cent of the amount of insurance in force.

Officers are to be the same as any incorporation. Duties the same. Directors chosen by members, one from each group of the Wisconsin Bankers Association, and one at large. Members of board of directors must be stockholders of the bank within the group. Each bank has one vote irrespective of size. Headquarters and meetings to be at Madison in close touch with the banking and insurance commissioners. Meetings of stockholders held annually. Each bank appoints a person to represent it at annual meetings.

Any bank within the state, either a national, state bank or trust company, can become a member after written application has been filed within thirty days, automatically, upon paying the premium required and contribution to surplus made. Action upon any application can be postponed for periods of sixty days, in all not to exceed one year, except upon a seven-eighths vote of the board of directors. Notice of postponement to be served upon the banking commissioner and comptroller of currency.

Premium will be one-fourth of 1 per cent annually upon the average deposits of any bank as determined by the last five previous published statements. This should be credited to the account of the company upon the books of the insured bank and will bear interest at the rate of 3 per cent per annum, payable and credited on July 1st and January 1st of each year. This account can be drawn upon only for current expenses and losses. The current expense fund not to exceed 5 per cent of said fund. After payments of current expenses and losses the company may make additions to surplus funds and declare dividends.

Each bank joining the company will pay for the purpose of creating a surplus fund, one-half of 1 per cent on the average deposits as determined before. The company, however, will give to the bank a company note bearing interest at 3 per cent, payable annually. This will also be credited to the account of the company upon the books of said bank, and will also bear interest at 3 per cent credited in like manner. This surplus note cannot be paid under five years and is not a liability of the company, nor can it ever be paid except only when the surplus funds of the company are equal to twice the amount of the surplus notes outstanding. This note can be carried as an asset of the bank.

Examinations can be made by insurance company at any time at the expense of the company. Each bank filing application for insurance agrees to furnish all necessary information for said examination. Liquidation of insolvent banks to be had within thirty days, according to law. All claims to be certified to, less legal set-offs, and duly assigned to the company when the company then issues a certificate or order. The company can cancel a policy upon the consent of the banking commissioner or comptroller of currency. A six months' written notice to be given all depositors if bank desires to cancel.

Safeguards provided are:

(1) State and national supervision now is recognized to be more and more efficient. The state banking commissioner now makes three examinations annually of all state banks. The force has been increased so that two men can be used for the purpose of caring for any weak banks. We have no private bank. (2) The company will make its own examinations along lines best known to bankers and bank auditors. (3) The deposits of no bank will be insured where over 3 per cent is paid on same. (4) Notice of any change of ownership in bank stock will go forward to insurance company's headquarters on the day of such transfer in order that the company may keep track of any change of management. (5) Any deposit otherwise secured does not come under the policy. (6) All officers or employees of banks handling funds must be bonded. (7) If deposits go above ten times the amount of capital and surplus, then premium rates are increased. (8) All certificates of deposit and pass books, or any evidence of debt of said bank must bear the printed or stamped notice thereon that the insurance only applies where the 3 per cent is paid. (9) Company has oversight of all advertising.

GEORGE D. BARTLETT

Re-elected Secretary of the Wisconsin Bankers Association

Recommendations of committee to the legislative committee for amendments to the banking law are to be handled thus: The establishment of a banking board with the state banking commissioner as chairman, consisting of at least three members to be appointed by the governor, one of which is to be designated by the state bankers association. All applications for new banks must first be submitted to this board for ratification. The ratio of capital and surplus to deposits is to be fixed by statute, the ratio not to exceed 8 to 1.

Harvey Fiske and Sons, New York investment bankers, recently have opened a Chicago office in the Merchants Loan and Trust Building, of which Norris B. Henrotin is to be the manager.

or a farmer to give his boy a man's chance. It has made a contribution to the community life, and its leaders are as well satisfied as they would be if a new organization were formed.

Community Interests Conserved

No real progress in community life can be made with any degree of permanence without commensurate progress of its material well-being, and in the rural communities particularly the natural resources play an important part in demonstrations showing the possibilities of soil production. This is shown in the corn-growing, poultry-raising, and fruit-growing contests, in the horticultural classes and demonstrations, in potato-raising, in dairying, re-forestation, etc. For this work it is necessary to secure the help of experts at experiment stations and agricultural colleges, which always comes more than enthusiastically. One-day courses are set up in various communities.

Supplementary Education

The boy in the country needs to have his school education supplemented by various other educational activities. A more intimate knowledge of the natural sciences, practical rather than academic, is imparted through simple talks on astronomy, biology, botany, zoölogy, geology, and on mathematical subjects related to the farm and to the home. This training in practical mathematics covers cost, accounting, measurements of garden plots, of the height of trees, and other necessary practice in mathematics. An extensive variety of "Practical Talks" with demonstrations also is conducted.

Social Aspects

Country-life experts unanimously are agreed that what the country needs is social life. The inherent organization germ of the Young Men's Christian Association is social. It takes isolated communities and brings them together under the county work plan; it brings isolated individuals together in groups; it brings communities together in play, in inter-community debates, in inter-community agricultural contests, and in inter-community church movements. It eliminates the tendency to social stratification or the formation of cliques, which result naturally from the lack of social direction. A many-sided program of social activities is carried out involving neighborhoods, various homes and families, boys and girls.

Rural Recreation

Rural recreation is another great factor in achieving a healthy consummation of content and normal living. Here the boy needs a normal physical expression, again socialized, particularly in the games, such as baseball, or in relay races, where one runner depends upon the other for the success of the team. This team work will do much to bring about a neighborly spirit of co-operation and neutralize individualistic tendencies. Community play days and community carnivals in which every boy and girl, man and woman takes part have been held. In one instance ninety per cent of the entire community turned out to spend the day together, the girls in their particular games, the boys in baseball and outdoor basketball, the smaller children enjoying sand-boxes and children's games. These are known as the great community play carnivals.

Under this head must also be considered the conservation of rural health. Sanitation, domestic and community, hygiene, etc., are taken into consideration; practical talks and illustrated lectures are given; the rural school teacher is encouraged and aided in organizing plays and games during the recess periods; Sunday schools are brought together in athletic leagues; and many other similar efforts afford the rare opportunity to the county secretary in some genuine social engineering.

The Home

The whole question of the home virtually is involved in rural community progress, which implies a more intimate knowledge of the needs of the home and the conditions that must be met before home life can be made satisfactory. Among the results of this better knowledge will be the further invention and introduction of labor-saving devices. The spirit of the home will be conserved by the development of a closer relation between parents and children and children and parents, and by the awakening in the minds of the parents of a need for boy-mindedness and girl-mindedness. Many parents' meetings are held where emphasis is being laid upon the comradeship and friendship of parents and their children, as well as the need of inspiring boys and girls to a greater interest in the arrangement of the home and in conserving its spirit and orderliness. The important matter of sex hygiene is not overlooked in this domestic educational campaign.

Conserved by State and International Organizations

Twenty-two state and provincial committees of the United States and Canada have separate sub-committees on rural work and employ experts who maintain direct relationships to the county secretaries and county committees and who with their committees constitute a clearing house for the state. In similar lines the international committee through its sub-committee on rural work employs five experts who are related to the various state departments and provincial departments of the United States and Canada, where a clearing house is maintained from a national standpoint. It is to this department that already requests have been sent from Great Britain, India, Japan, and other nations that are desirous of having the county work movement of the Young Men's Christian Association. The official organ of the movement, "Rural Manhood," is published by this committee.

A movement which commands the confidence of business men to the extent of a quarter of a million dollars a year at the present time, which enlists 2,000 leaders and committeemen and which reaches in its activities more than 25,000 young men and boys in 500 communities with 62 trained experts and 35 years of experience, is glad to share in a small degree at least in the present onward movement for country-life progress.

FIRST NATIONAL OF KENOSHA

In speaking of the influential and growing banks of Wisconsin, one must not lose sight of the First National of Kenosha. This institution was established at a state bank in 1852 and as a national bank in 1864. It was one of the first to enter the national banking system. The charter number assigned to the First National was No. 212, which number it still retains. At the present time there are less than ninety national banks in operation in the United States which are older than 212. By reason of efficient management, and strict compliance with the regulation relating to national banks, this institution has been enabled successfully to weather every financial crisis with which the country has been beset. The personnel of its board of directors and officers has included some of the most prominent and influential men of the state, among whom were Zalmon G. Simmons, president of the bank for thirty-eight years; L. G. Merrill, Edward Bain, George Yule, Frederick Robinson, James H. Howe, Vrail Newman, Thomas B. Jeffrey and many others. The present officers are Charles C. Brown, president; George Yule, vice-president; W. H. Purnell, cashier, and A. W. Frantz and M. G. Boerner, assistant cashiers. Mr. Brown was president of the Wisconsin Bankers Association in 1910. The directors are George Yule, president of the Bain Wagon Company; C. C. Allen, president N. R. Allen's Sons Company; Charles T. Jeffrey, president the Thomas B. Jeffrey Company; Z. G. Simmons, a son of the first president of the bank, and president of the Simmons Mfg. Company; Richard F. Howe, International Harvester Company; A. H. Lance, first vice-president and treasurer, Simmons Mfg. Company and Charles C. Brown, the present president, who has occupied this position ever since the retirement of Mr. Simmons, the first president.

The last statement of the condition of the bank made to the comptroller of the currency shows deposits of $3,310,936.37. The bank has a capital stock of $150,000 and surplus of a like amount.

July been so favorable for such a large crop as they are at present.—Commercial West.

EDITOR RIDDLE of the Texas Bankers Record is supporting John E. Swanger for governor of Missouri on his record as banking commissioner. Since the talented and beautiful Miss Riddle cannot vote it is up to "Dick" Hames, R. L. Rinaman, J. S. Calfee or some other gallant crusader to become her "alter-nate" and get busy.

WE'RE for Swanger, too!

WE'RE still for B. F. Harris for governor, Bull Moose or no Bull Moose. Illinoisans will be proud to vote for such a man. Our vote is pledged now although we'd rather read a Tribune editorial on Lorimer than even hear T. R.'s name mentioned.

WHEN you get a letter from the "Secretary O. B. A.," whom is it from, W. B. Harrison or Stacy B. Rankin?

FRANK D. BRUNDAGE (K. N. & K.) was in Chicago this week enroute to the Milwaukee convention, then for two weeks in the iron range country. Fine to work up north in the summer and "way down South" in the winter.

OKLAHOMA's delegation to the A. B. A. convention at Detroit, September 9th, will join the Kansas-Missouri delegation at Kansas City and travel with that party on a handsome special train.

SANTA FE will put a special car into Oklahoma City for them and it will run through without change.

PRESIDENT ASA E. RAMSEY of the O. B. A. is pushing the better agriculture movement this year as hard as the officers of the association did last year. Mr. Ramsey is president of the Muskogee Clearing House and that organization recently took up this subject with an earnestness and directness that is worthy of emulation in every part of the state.

A YOUNG man in New York, just come of age, said he didn't know whether to become a gambler or to go on the police force. His papa, who reads the papers, said it didn't make much difference in which class he started.

THEY are not likely to hang anyone in New York for the murder of Gambler Rosenthal. It will end much like the killing of one "labor man" in Chicago by another, is the general opinion.

OUR good friend T. R. Preston of Chattanooga is being boomed for governor of Tennessee. He has made such a success of the Hamilton National and the Hamilton Trust that he could run on that record alone.

"AS soon as Mr. Reynolds is up I should like to speak to him on the 'phone," ran the message to the Moraine Hotel up in Highland Park. "George M. Reynolds has been up and gone an hour; takes the 7:32 regularly," was the answer.

"WHAT do you think of that?" said the caller-up, who hails from New York. "Little wonder they've quit trying to head him off."

KANSAS CITY claims one banker who can have his hair cut without removing his hat. Whom did you say?

LOGAN C. MURRAY of Louisville is one of a board of fifteen who control the destinies of the Presbyterian church of the world. Also an ex-president of the A. B. A.

LAST we heard from Col. Buck, down Mobile way, he hadn't decided whether to join T. R. or to start a new third-party in the A. B. A. with his new constitution plan as a platform.

LAST week a few lines were devoted to putting in for the chapter boys when state secretaries are called upon to assist in finding acceptable help for their member banks. Many expressions of kindest appreciation have been received from "the boys."

SOME may not know that every large chapter has special facilities for furnishing "bank help" and is glad to do it. Furthermore, the beneficiary has this service free of expense or embargo upon future salary.

THE shooting-out was done over the kindly shoulder of Secretary W. C. Macfadden, of North Dakota, who generally is and always wants to be right.

NO name of any employment bureau or agency was mentioned, but a concern in Council Bluffs, through some unreadable signature as "vice-president," has sent in a two-page "holler," much as if their honor had been assailed, in the attempt to help the chapter boys. Here is paragraph No. 1 of the Council Bluffs letter:

"RECENTLY we had called to our attention an editorial in THE CHICAGO BANKER; we are wondering why you have taken it upon yourself to criticize the methods of our company. You have done so in a very rank manner by your several paragraphs regarding Secretary Macfadden, and his connection with our company for the filling of positions free of charge to the members of the North Dakota Bankers Association."

SECOND paragraph reads: "You intimate that we are offering inferior services, and that by employing the American Institution of Banking at Minneapolis, Milwaukee or Chicago, that 'no one but safe men would be recommended for bank employment.' You go on to say, 'there wouldn't be nearly so many look-out notices, and "lost" checks and drafts, etc., would be less frequent if none but bank men were put on guard.'"

YES, and we stand by all that falls within the sub-quotation marks as being true, and likewise stated in good English.

THE Council Bluffs writer then goes on to say: "Also, let us add for your information, that all of our applicants are bank men." The firm claims to investigate every applicant through "reliable channels," whatever that may mean.

HERE is the hottest one of all, for the Council Bluffs man loses his temper with this: "The only reason which comes to our mind at the present time for this 'knock' is, possibly, because we do not carry an advertisement in THE CHICAGO BANKER. We often heard of this manner of attacking non-advertisers, but we supposed these methods were used only by disreputable publications who did not have any standing."

ENGLISH is a little turgid, rhetoric worse, and the intention to hurt someone's feelings is obvious. We now have given our "kicker" a pretty liberal amount of space, considering that there was no direct reference nor any criticism of this man's firm in what was published. We believe still that state secretaries should work with and in the interest of the chapters of the A. I. B.

THE great American Bankers Association helps to maintain the Institute and its work is intended better to equip bank men for their positions and to fit them for other, better positions, and every loyal member bank and every loyal, efficient state secretary will help on the good work when the method and opportunity are pointed out.

OUR thanks to the shoe-pinch gentleman at the Bluffs for "a good excuse" to exploit the chapter offer all over again, and there is added pleasure in printing the following manly paragraphs from Secretary W. C. Macfadden, who also is vice-president of the Secretaries Section of the A. B. A., and is sure to be promoted at Detroit to the Big Chair.

INOTE your suggestion in reference to furnishing bank employees on page three of the July 20th issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER. Your suggestion is first-class and I am sure will be the means of working out the plan you suggest.

IPRESUME all secretaries have the same experience as I have, and I often get letters from members as to whether I know where they can get a first-class assistant cashier, bookkeeper or teller. I also receive a great many letters from young men wanting such positions.

OUR association is somewhat under obligations to Chas. E. Walters Company, for the reason that they furnished us with very handsome badges at our recent state convention. When they suggested the plan outlined in our bulletin we were glad to give their proposition courteous consideration.

THE plan you propose, however, is very much better all around and am sure your suggestion will be the means of it being adopted in a great many associations. We have organized two chapters of the A. I. B. in North Dakota, one at Fargo and one at Grand Forks. By co-operating with these chapters and the ones in Minneapolis, St. Paul and Chicago we no doubt can work out your plan to the benefit of our members and the A. I. B. chapter. Thanking you very much for your suggestion, I am, Yours very truly,
W. C. MACFADDEN, Secretary.

CASHIER.

J. S. Calfee, cashier of the Mechanics-American National, a member of the executive council of the A. B. A. will spend his vacation in Michigan this year. William McC. Martin, assistant trust officer of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company, also will spend his vacation in Michigan.

Fun at Detroit

The entertainment committee at Detroit has been busy in the interests of their A. B. A. friends who are coming to the big Thirty-eighth Annual Convention. A program has been provided such as but few cities would attempt to pull off. It has something for each day, with two strong numbers for Monday and is as follows:

Monday, September 9th: At 12:30 P. M. to 2:00 P. M. Reception and luncheon at the plant of the Burroughs Adding Machine Company. At 4:30 P. M. Steamer Tashmoo for ride on Detroit River and Lake Ste. Claire; returning about 10:00 P. M. Luncheon served aboard the boat.

Tuesday, September 10th: At 8:00 P. M. Reception to visiting bankers and ladies at the Wayne Pavilion, to be followed at 9:00 P. M. by a ball.

Wednesday, September 11th: At 2:00 P. M. Golf tournament at the Country Club. The chairman of the golf committee announces that suitable prizes will be offered. At 3:00 P. M. Base ball at Navin Field. Detroit vs. Philadelphia. A section has been reserved for visiting bankers. At 8:00 P. M. Theatre.

Thursday, September 12th: At 3:00 P. M. Base ball at Navin Field. Detroit vs. Philadelphia. A section has been reserved for visiting bankers. At 3:30 P. M. Luncheon at Walkerville; compliments of Hiram Walker & Sons. Boat leaves foot Woodward Avenue at 3:30 P. M. and returns about 7:00 P. M. At 4:00 P. M. Reception for the ladies at the Country Club. The chairman having in charge this reception is exerting every effort to make this one of the most enjoyable functions of the week. At 8:00 P. M. Theatre.

Friday, September 13: Autos in attendance for visits to industrial plants at pleasure of visitors.

In addition to the program as announced, the entertainment committee has other features for the entertainment of guests which will be announced as soon as the details can be worked out.

The chairman of the Hotel Committee states that already between 1,700 and 1,800 people have been well taken care of at the hotels and that now the Steamer City of Detroit III has been chartered for use as a hotel during convention week. This virtually means adding another Ponchartrain to Detroit's list of hotels as this boat is equal in accommodations and cuisine to the very best hotels of the country.

The boat is the final word in passenger boat construction and the largest and best steamer afloat on fresh water. Arrangements have been made in case of hot weather to run the boat up into Lake Ste. Claire at 1:00 o'clock in the morning, returning to her berth after breakfast.

The City of Detroit III will be docked near the Wayne Pavilion, where the ball is to be held on Tuesday evening. This is within a very short distance of the Michigan Central and the Union Station and is 300 feet from the Woodward Avenue car line, four minutes ride from the Ponchartrain.

The general arrangement of cabins, passages, and staterooms is such that a very large portion of the ship has the best of natural ventilation. Where artificial circulation of pure air is desirable, a new system is installed by which rooms are continually supplied with washed air. On the three decks, the promenade, the gallery and the upper, are six hundred staterooms, and twenty-five parlors with private verandas. All staterooms on the ship are supplied with hot and cold running water, and telephones with all connections necessary for shore service.

There are still good accommodations to be had at the hotels but the chartering of the City of Detroit III makes it an assured fact that Detroit will give the delegates of the American Bankers Association the very best of accommodations.

F. A. CRANDALL RETURNS FROM EAST

F. A. Crandall, vice-president of the National City Bank of Chicago recently has returned from a vacation in the East. He spent a portion of his time in northern Vermont. He says that the hay crop in that state, which represents quite an industry, will yield about the average this year. The weather has been cold and dry and the people are a little bit afraid that the crop may fall off to some extent on account of this factor. The deposits of banks in that section of the state which Mr. Crandall visited are a little bit above normal. The banks seem to be pretty well loaned up, with good rates prevailing.

To Minneapolis

George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National, will go up to the big agricultural conference at St. Paul and Minneapolis on Wednesday and Thursday of next week. This is a good omen for the great cause which was set upon its feet in a modest way by Joseph Chapman, Jr., of Minneapolis. President B. F. Harris of the Illinois association, who is vice-president of the conference, also will attend. Bankers and delegates will go up by the C. & N. W. at 6:45 P. M., Tuesday evening, the 6th.

BANK PRESIDENT DEAD

Daniel Staley, president of the Loami (Ill.) State Bank, died on Wednesday. He was president of the bank for fifteen years and was well known in the community in which he lived.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

CHICAGO has suffered a real loss in the death of B. M. Chattell. Since January he had been in ill health. The end came on Saturday last, the cause being general breakdown.

WE hear that Sol. Wexler has been browsing around to see how the land lays on the chairmanship of the Big Council at Detroit.

MR. WEXLER was "out for it" at New Orleans, but it was the wrong year, organically and geographically. He would have retired earlier had he read the signs aright.

HIS foxy contemporary from Albany, New York, was the more crafty. The New York delegation hadn't been on the ground two hours until Ledyard Cogswell saw the situation, and tendering his support to Mr. Reynolds, cast his castor into the ring for 1913. That gave him a sort of running start.

SINCE then powerful Pennsylvania interests have been pushing Joseph Wayne, Jr., of Pennsylvania, and later the South Central states got in behind C. T. Davis of Cincinnati. Should Mr. Wexler's friends enter him in the race it will give added interest to the friendly, good-natured contest.

TWO or three gentlemen have been talking about the treasurership, but no real entries are expected, for it has been customary to hold that office two years in succession. Arthur Reynolds is the only exception and he gave it up at New Orleans because he was elected chairman of the council. J. Fletcher Farrell of Chicago, often referred to as "the most popular young banker of the West," holds the treasurership now and will be re-elected.

ABOUT rooms at Detroit! There is no cause for worry, as through Col. Farnsworth the hotel managers have assured us that they will be ready for those on the big Chicago-Train-De-Luxe on Sunday, September 8th. They now say they could have been ready on Saturday even. Don't go as late as Monday evening unless you want to miss a lot of fun provided for Monday. Members of council and committeemen of all kinds should arrive Sunday evening to be "in it" at all.

GUARANTY TRUST, New York, has adopted a style of dress for the various departments. Here is what the poets' department wrote about one of the divisions:

WELL, here we are. Aren't we fine?
How do you like the new design?
The Transfer Clerks are all the rage;
Perhaps you've noticed in the cage
The men are garbed in coats of tan,
Look at the coat, not at the man.
These coats are bright, without a spot,
Look for a fault, you'll find it not.

IN Davenport, Iowa, there are eleven banks with a total capital, surplus and undivided profits of $4,076,230; deposits approximately $30,000,000. There are over 40,000 individual accounts in Davenport banks.

HENRY W. YATES, president of the Nebraska National of Omaha, and Mrs. Yates spent two weeks in July making an automobile trip to their old home at Columbia, Mo., where they were married fifty years ago.

MR. YATES already had left there as a young man to locate in St. Joseph, Mo., and two years after their wedding they went to Omaha, where Mr. Yates has been in the banking business ever since. This was their golden wedding trip to the old home, although the actual celebration occurred earlier in the year.

J. FLETCHER FARRELL and family have returned to Chicago from a month "back in good old Missouri," in the neighborhood of Columbia, which city Mr. Farrell says has doubled in population in ten years.

HE also says the Columbia College is second to none and holds high rank among American educational institutions.

A SHOT at a clay pigeon is a success when the target blows up. A one-line paragraph, ending in an innocent looking little question mark is a bull's eye under similar conditions.

WARE & IELAND say: "With the exception of the political outlook, which is still in such a chaotic state that it is difficult at this time to form any reasonable opinion, general conditions continue good. Such reports coming to hand regarding mercantile business throughout the country are encouraging, despite the hesitancy that is naturally felt during a political campaign, and the possibilities of considerable changes in the tariff with the incoming of a new administration. However, taking everything into consideration, we continue to feel that underlying conditions are good, and that, while no big bull market can be expected in the immediate future, nevertheless we think securities bought on reactions will prove profitable."

LITTLE wonder that the Kansas City-Council Bluffs concern got hot when we suggested that the leading chapters of the A. I. B. gladly would furnish "bank help" of the highest type at not only no cost to the bank but at no cost to the applicant.

THEY had secured the good will of a state secretary by a tender of free delegate badges for his state convention and accepted their "free service" offer of bank help for member banks, also at par. Here's where the shoe pinches.

ON the application blank which applicants for positions sign is the following "colored man in the wood-pile." It reads:

"I AGREE to conduct all the correspondence through you concerning the offerings of positions that you submit, and to pay you a fee in event you furnish me information or are otherwise instrumental in securing me a position in accordance with your schedule of fees as follows: Position of cashier, $100; assistant cashier, $75; bookkeeper or clerk, $50; same to be due and payable on my acceptance of the position. * * * No fee or expense unless position is accepted. I also agree to treat all information strictly confidential and not impart it to others."

ABOVE only is a sidelight and bears out what, unsupported, might have been regarded as harsh comment. The extract quoted above was enclosed in a letter written over the "president's" signature.

SECRETARY WM. B. HUGHES has nailed the biggest of the recent "cards" for his convention. J. A. S. Pollard of Ft. Madison, Iowa, will speak on "Soil Culture." If Joe can repeat his Springfield success of last year Hughes will be congratulated by everyone.

Wisconsin Legislation on Agricultural Teaching

If this paper were to be restricted to the narrow limits of the title printed in the program, a very few words would suffice. The Wisconsin legislature in 1911 enacted its first and only law pertaining to agricultural teaching in high schools. By the provisions of this law any high school in the state offering instruction in agriculture is entitled to receive from the state treasury an annual subsidy of $250.00, provided this instruction is given in the high school only, and $350.00 if such instruction is extended to include the three grades next below the high school. No attempt will be made, however, to limit this discussion to this particular law. With your leave we will raise one or two important questions relative to agricultural teaching in Wisconsin which seem to us at this time to be especially pertinent.

Eleven years ago this state committed itself to the policy of establishing special county schools of agriculture and gave the movement handsome stimulus in the way of an annual subsidy of $4,000.00 to each school. This amount was, by the last legislature, raised to from $6,000.00 to $8,000.00, depending upon the average daily attendance in these institutions. Under this law, seven such institutions have been established and five of them have been doing active work for half a dozen years. The character of the work done by these schools, the class of students which they attract who would not now be in any other school, and the general results obtained, fully have justified the wisdom of the legislature in providing for their establishment. These schools have pioneered the way, developed and organized the subject matter, created an atmosphere favorable to agricultural teaching throughout the state and convinced the public that such instruction should have a place in our secondary educational system. We now are ready to move on, and the rapidity with which high schools are developing courses of study in agriculture is abundant evidence of a widespread sentiment in favor of such instruction.

Up to the present time there has been little necessity for a law fixing qualifications for teachers of this subject, but with the rapid increase in the demand for such teaching and the strong probability of many unskilled and unprepared teachers being attracted into this new field, early attention should be given to this important matter. A law is needed in this state that shall define the sort of preparation which teachers of agriculture should make and that shall induce school boards to employ only those who are fully competent to teach. This can be effected by giving a larger amount of state aid to schools employing the best prepared teachers and doing the most efficient work. A similar law now is operative in Minnesota and this matter should receive early attention at the next session of the Wisconsin legislature.

Our county schools have taught us the value of extension teaching by a competent man resident in the country. This work usually is done by the principal of these schools in so far as his other duties will admit. But there are counties having no special schools of agriculture which can not afford the expense of providing such an institution or which do not care to risk the outlay. Many of these counties would be glad to employ a traveling teacher who could be attached to a local school, like a county training school for teachers, and who would give time during the winter months to the instruction of farmers' sons in a local short course in agriculture and during the rest of the year to itinerant instruction. In fact, three counties in this state have already made such an arrangement and four others have negotiations now pending. The results already obtained in Oneida county, the first one to create such a position, are exceedingly gratifying and justify an extension of this work on a state-wide basis. A recent editorial in the Rhinelander News says:

K. L. Hatch, head of the agricultural extension department of the State University, in a fine talk before the bankers at the Milwaukee convention. Qualified teachers the one great problem. Views on bills now before congress

"Reports from all sections of Oneida county show a great and valuable increase in interest, enterprise and energy in farming, and it is assured now that the area planted in corn and potatoes will be at least 50 per cent larger than last year, while the clover crop will be fully double that of 1911.

"In another column will be seen reports of large land sales in this and neighboring counties, indicating the attention being given by would-be settlers and farmers to this locality which has proved its worth so clearly and forcibly by actual results in recent years.

"Much credit must be given the state agricultural department for its part in aiding Northern Wisconsin through the agricultural school inaugurated here last year and special praise must be given the County Representative, E. L. Luther, for his enthusiastic and skillful work in and for the county.

"Since Mr. Luther came there has been a steady increased interest in scientific methods of farming, as the settlers have been shown how much more can be obtained by right methods than by the old careless, haphazard methods. Now farmers are actually tearing up the soil and preparing it for new crops, not being satisfied to see their neighbors pass them. The county is filling up rapidly, new settlers are coming every week and more land sales are expected this summer than ever before."

This indicates the possibility of such work in the newer portions of the state, and the opportunities for such teaching in the developed section are equally great, though results doubtless will be much harder to obtain.

The Lever Bill, now before congress, provides for the expansion of this work on a nation-wide scale and a provision of the Page Bill, another federal measure, has the same purpose in view. We now have arrived at a point in this state where further development of the county representative plan must receive legislative encouragement. A statute is needed which will enable counties to institute this work and which will provide funds for its permanent establishment. There are, then, the following measures which should receive encouragement from the Wisconsin Bankers Association if they desire to aid in the agricultural development of the state and believe in education as a means to this end.

First: A measure fixing the qualifications of teachers of agriculture at a standard sufficiently high to insure adequate preparation.

Second: A measure recognizing efficient preparation in teachers of agriculture by larger subsidy for schools employing such teachers.

Third: A measure accepting the county agricultural representative plan as a policy of the state and providing for its expansion to meet existing demands.

If these things ultimately will increase the agricultural prosperity of Wisconsin, they should receive no uncertain support from this association as a whole and from each one of its members individually interested in his own rural community."

WILLIAM G. EDENS AT WISCONSIN CONVENTION

From the stenographic report of the Wisconsin Bankers Convention, held at Milwaukee last week, we make the following interesting extract:

William G. Edens, Chicago, assistant secretary Central Trust Company of Illinois and secretary of the committee on Agricultural and Vocational Education of the Illinois Bankers Association: Mr. President, I will make a brief statement only on this subject of agricultural development and education with reference to conditions in Illinois. The members of the Illinois Bankers Association felt that the state was lagging in this respect and two years ago the association created a committee on agricultural and vocational education, and a year ago a committee on good roads was appointed, and I want to testify here this morning, as a good Methodist, that we have never had anything in the work of the Illinois Bankers Association, considering the matter of each individual's love of having his deposits grow, and seeing the comparative statement of his bank with his neighbor's bank show to advantage, that so interested the banker as the matter of agricultural development and education and the work for improvement of our roads.

Last winter, under the call of B. F. Harris, our president, a meeting was held at the University of Illinois, and a committee of bankers and educators was appointed to draft a new educational bill, looking to the promotion of the study of agricultural and vocational pursuits. Illinois as a state is nearly 100 years old; nevertheless, the elements of agriculture have never been taught in any of the 10,000 one-room school buildings of the agricultural communities.

Furthermore, we suggested that provisions should be made for instruction in domestic science or home making for the girls. Then, realizing that in the industrial centers it is the son and daughter of the working man that provide the attendance for continuation schools for industrial training, or for manual training, the teaching of the hand to do the useful thing, this committee sought to provide proper, thorough, practical instruction along this line. We meet again the 31st of this month at Springfield to present a final draft on this subject; and we have invited to join with us the representatives of the trade unions of the state, because in Chicago and in the industrial centers outside of Chicago, in our mining and manufacturing communities, the working man and the son of the working man is recognized; and it is the duty of the banker to recognize him and to take the working man into our confidence and into our counsels. We feel we would rather have the co-operation of the representatives of the trade unions now than their criticisms and opposition later on.

When we had our meeting at Champaign we were fortunate in having with us a gentleman who, like Prof. Munroe, had gained from practical teaching valuable experience in agricultural training in the Minnesota high schools. I refer to Prof. Sexauer of Albert Lea, who had three years' experience in agricultural high school work. He showed us what he had accomplished, but the sad thing about this is that he was then considering a commercial offer from a seed selling concern, offering him a larger salary to take his superior knowledge that the agricultural college had given him and go into the commercial life of the nation. Our state gave him a tentative offer of a like salary to come to the Illinois Agricultural College. This matter of developing an efficient agricultural teaching force is important and must keep step with the demand.

Your University of Wisconsin has sent a message to the American people that your agricultural college is progressive and aggressive; and many of the adjoining states are looking to you to furnish us this new teaching force. If to-day Illinois had to have a supply of this kind of teachers to introduce the proper study of agriculture, we would turn first to Wisconsin. What Prof. Munroe said about the increase in bank deposits being 120 per cent in one locality in their central district, due to proper agricultural education of the farmer, is important, but Mr. Israel of New York has struck the key note to this whole matter in efficient agricultural training in the rural districts, which, let us hope, will eliminate the American hobo and the tramp. (Applause.)

In the city with manual training and continuation trade schools, let us hope we can eliminate the street corner idler and hoodlum.

Colorado Plans

Pueblo, July 29.—Charles G. Dawes, controller of the currency under the administration of President William McKinley, and president of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, a $50,000,000 corporation, will be the principal speaker at the annual convention of the Colorado Bankers Association to be held in Pueblo August 19-21. Word to the effect that he had consented to accept the invitation of the association for an address upon important matters of the day, was received by G. F. Trotter, secretary of the bankers' association, this morning, from F. N. Briggs, president, of Denver.

Mr. Dawes will appear in Pueblo Monday, August 19, and his talk is scheduled for 7:30 o'clock in the evening. In order that the citizens of Pueblo may be afforded an opportunity to hear him, the committees in charge of arrangements for the meeting here have decided to engage a big hall for his appearance and a cordial invitation to the public will be issued. The exact topic of Mr. Dawes' speech has not been announced yet, but he has promised to talk on one or more of the big subjects of the present time.

An address also will be made at the same time by John W. Springer, of Denver, who will respond to the speech of welcome by Alva Adams, of this city.

In connection with the barbacue of buffalo meat upon which the bankers are to be fed at one meal, a novel scheme has been devised. It is proposed to use the head, the hide and the feet of the buffalo for souvenirs and tickets will be given to each visiting banker. At the conclusion of the convention a drawing will be held and the first prize will be the mounted head of the buffalo, with silver engravings appropriate to the occasion, which will be worth no less than $400. The second prize will be a tabourette, of which the legs and feet will be from the buffalo, while the third prize will be a buffalo robe made from the hide.

The invitation committee, of which Mahlon D. Thatcher, Jr., is the chairman, is extremely busy. Not only are the bankers of Colorado expected to attend en masse, but about 50 big financial men from outside the state are looked for. Invitations are to be sent to banks and bankers in all sections of the country and some 500 of the special requests for attendance will be issued. The committee, beside the chairman, is composed of W. L. Graham, C. C. Slaughter, W. K. Dudley, J. Q. Greene and H. E. Wheeler.

TO EQUAL EVERY DEMAND

President Perry of the National Bank of Commerce in Kansas City explains the recent absorption of another bank in a way that puts it 'way above personal ambition or sordid consideration, and makes it appear almost, if not quite, patriotic. He said: "We have been planning a consolidation for nearly two years. It has been our fond ambition to build up a bank with capital enough to handle the immense banking business of the Kansas City territory—to be in a position finally where no request for funds, be it ever so large, would stagger us. That is what we have achieved."

INTERNATIONAL DRY-FARMING CONGRESS

The seventh annual convention of the International Dry-Farming Congress will meet this year at Lethbridge, Alberta, Canada, October 21-26. Exhibits of dry-farmed products and machinery are expected from all over the world. Hon. Duncan Marshall, member of agriculture for Alberta, joins in the general invitation which has been sent out. President John A. Widtsoe, of the Agricultural College of Utah, is president of the congress.

Short Term Securities

Investment bonds and notes issued to mature in from one to five years are favored by many investors as yielding a somewhat better income than long time obligations.

Such securities, particularly of the larger issues, also usually command a ready market and are not subject to extreme fluctuations in price.

Our recent booklet, "Short Term Securities," met with so favorable a reception that we have been prompted to issue a second edition. This contains brief descriptions of current issues, brought down to June, 1912. We will furnish copies on request.

BANKERS APPOINTED AS DELEGATES

Governor Charles S. Deneen in filling out his quota of twenty delegates to the Trans-Mississippi Commercial Congress which will meet in Salt Lake City August 27th to 30th, took note of the fact that a number of well-known Chicago bankers will be in Salt Lake City about that time attending the annual convention of the American Institute of Banking. Among those remembered by the governor with a delegate certificate are William G. Edens of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, George A. Jackson and Harry S. Smale of the Continental and Commercial National and John W. Rubecamp of the Corn Exchange National. Mr. Edens is secretary of the committee on agriculture and vocational education of the Illinois Bankers Association and president of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association; Mr. Jackson is chief clerk of the big Continental and Commercial National and chairman of the transportation committee which will take the chapter members to the convention city. He also is an ex-president of the Chicago chapter; John W. Rubecamp is president of the Chicago chapter at the present time, and for years has been an active worker in its educational branch; Harry S. Smale was president last year and has been endorsed by the chapter for the chairmanship of the executive council to be elected at Salt Lake. Governor Deneen has selected four of the most active of Chicago's junior bankers, all of whom are ready and eloquent speakers and men of excellent judgment.

OUT-OF-TOWN VISITORS

Among the out-of-town bankers who called in Chicago last week are S. W. Reyburn, president of the Union Trust Company, Little Rock, Ark.; George L. Blackford, president State National Bank, Denison, Texas; L. L. Will, cashier Lowell Bank, St. Louis; William F. Kamps, cashier Outagamie County Bank, Appleton, Wis.; W. B. Taylor of Boatman's Bank, St. Louis; Amos Gipson, vice-president National Reserve Bank, Kansas City, Mo.; J. H. Bennison and H. W. Flint of the Union State Bank, Kewanee, Ill.; Latham Souther, vice-president Sangamon Loan and Trust Company, Springfield, Ill. Mr. Souther stopped in the city on his way to Castle Park, Mich. He is convalescing from a Texas-acquired case of typhoid fever, but expects to be in good shape for the Detroit convention.

Minneapolis Conference

Twenty-six bankers associations will be represented at the second annual conference of the state bankers associations on agricultural development and education, to be held at Minneapolis (also St. Paul) on August 7 and 8 next. Not only will they be represented, but they will be represented by men who will work and act. All members of state bankers' association committees on agricultural development and education who will attend this conference, and who naturally will pass through Chicago, should make reservations with the Chicago and Northwestern Railway, for the special cars provided for the occasion will leave Chicago on the evening of August 6th. Special provisions for their reception and entertainment have been provided for in both St. Paul and Minneapolis.

MILWAUKEE BANKS TO HAVE NEW HOMES

The new bank homes being erected in Milwaukee are so numerous and of such a character as to attract general attention from those who attended the sessions of the convention of the Wisconsin Bankers Association held in Milwaukee last week. The Marshall and Ilsley building is nearing completion as is that of the Merchants and Manufacturers and also the splendid new home of the Second Ward Savings, while the ground is being cleared and foundation plans are in progress for that of the First National. When these buildings are finished and occupied the banks in no other city of like importance will be better housed than will the larger Milwaukee institutions.

SIDELIGHTS ON THE MILWAUKEE CONVENTION

The Second Ward Savings, the First and the Wisconsin National kept open house at the Pfister, and the younger men of these institutions set a hot pace for entertainment. Hughes of the First National, Reddeman of the Wisconsin National and Pounack of the Second Ward are hard to beat.

The reception and dance at the Deutcher Club were greatly enjoyed by all who attended. The Milwaukee hosts are the most genial of entertainers.

The tally-ho ride given to the ladies was a most enjoyable affair. It consisted of a ride through the city parks and was followed by a mid-day luncheon at Lake Park Pavilion.

The inspection of the C., M. & St. P. car shops proved to be an entertaining and very interesting affair. The visitors were enabled to see in process of manufacture every article used in the operation of a railway system from the coupling pin to the complete locomotive.

W. K. Coffin, president of the Eau Claire National, entertained with stories in the headquarters of the Second Ward Savings in the Pfister, and made quite a hit in that capacity.

PYTHIAN CONVENTION

A large number of delegates to the twenty-seventh biennial session Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias will leave Chicago Saturday, August 3d, on a special train over the Rock Island Lines. William G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, after attending the Pythian convention, will attend that of the Colorado bankers to be held in Pueblo August 19th and 20th, and from there he will go to Salt Lake City to be present at the national meeting of the American Institute of Banking, to be held August 21st, 22d and 23d.

OF INTEREST TO NEW YORK PRIVATE BANKERS

Attorney-General Carmody in an opinion rendered this week to State Comptroller Sohmer ruled that the provisions of the general business law, exempting individuals or partnerships receiving money on deposits for safekeeping or transmission, where the average amount of each sum so received in the ordinary course of business during the preceding fiscal year shall not be less than $500, make it incumbent upon claimants to the exemption to satisfy the state comptroller of the existence of such a state of facts, and unless and until the comptroller is so satisfied it is unlawful for such parties, without a license, to engage or continue in the private banking business.

And the opinion further holds that if, after engaging in business under this sub-division, the comptroller signifies his dissatisfaction with the evidence offered to establish this exemption, the right of the parties to continue such business without a license ceases. "While the comptroller may receive and consider evidence," says the attorney-general, "other than the affidavit required by the statute of the average amount of deposits, he has no power to compel persons doing or seeking to do business under the law to submit to an examination with respect to the nature and extent of their business, or to compel the production of their books and papers for examination."

This opinion on private banking over which the state comptroller exercises broad jurisdiction was the result of a misunderstanding on the part of metropolitan private bankers of the functions and powers of the state comptroller.

August Blum

August Blum, vice-president of the First National of Chicago, has returned from a vacation spent in Germany. Speaking in regard to the financial situation in Europe, Mr. Blum says there is no cause for uneasiness; conditions are good. He also says that Germany is prosperous and making money.

NEW STATE BANK

Albany, N. Y.—The Farmers and Mechanics Bank of Bath, N. Y., with a capital of $50,000, has filed articles of incorporation with Superintendent Van Tuyl of the state banking department. The Bath bank will take over the private bank of Frank Campbell, former state comptroller, who will continue with the organization as a director and head of the new institution. The other directors are: Reuben R. Lyon, Wilson R. Campbell and Fred R. Webster, of Bath, and Henry Frey, of Hammondsport.

MONEY TO CHARITY

New Castle, Pa.—Maintaining his opposition to the Standard Oil trust and all it stands for, even after death, Thomas W. Phillips, of this city, banker, philanthropist and the largest independent oil producer in this country, wills money to institutions for education, provided no financial aid is ever accepted from John D. Rockefeller or from any fund he establishes. Mr. Phillips' will was probated, disposing of an estate of more than $2,000,000. He gives $30,000 to the University of Oklahoma, provided it never asks or accepts aid from Rockefeller or any educational fund he establishes. If it does, the bequest is to go to the board of ministerial relief of the Christian Church denomination. A $5,000 bequest is made to the board of women's missions of the same denomination, under similar conditions. Mr. Phillips, during his life, opposed religious and educational institutions accepting aid from Rockefeller upon the allegation that it was "tainted."

CANADA FOR GOVERNMENT INSPECTION OF BANKS

Canada's banking act may be revised this year as a result of altered conditions since the last decennial revision. There is a strong agitation for government inspection of all banking institutions, but this is not likely to be granted. The principal objection is that in the event of failures of banks so inspected an attempt might be made to make the government financially responsible. Additional safeguards, however, are proposed by providing an independent audit by the shareholders apart from that of the management and also in increasing the personal responsibility of directors. It is proposed to make the currency more elastic by enabling banks to increase their circulation to within fifteen per cent of paid up capital and reserve combined.

DETROIT BANK FORMALLY OPENED

The forgery is the largest Seattle bankers have encountered for a long time.

Some of the youngsters already are calling him "Papa."

The program for the meeting August 8th at the Waldorf-Astoria provides that at 10 o'clock a. m. the secretary's office will be open at the Waldorf for the registration of delegates.

At 10:30 o'clock a. m. the meeting of the organization committee will be held in the Astor Gallery.

At 2 o'clock p. m. the convention will be called to order by Chairman Geo. B. Caldwell. Report of the organization committee submitted. IMPROVING AGRICULTURAL METHODS

The Kentucky State Bankers Association is co-operating with Commissioner of Agriculture Newman in a campaign for larger crops and the raising of more live stock in Kentucky. The idea is to put an agricultural expert in every county in the state to advise the farmers as to the best methods of obtaining results. If a farmer made $1,500 in 1911, he is to be guaranteed at least that amount of profit under the new system. If he clears more than that amount, he is to be entitled to the extra sum. The movement means larger crops in the future, with a more general prosperity. Railroads also are assisting with the project.

CANADIAN BANK MERGER

Ottawa.—It is reported that objections are to be made to the treasury board against the pending merger of the Royal Bank of Canada and the Traders Bank, which has been unanimously approved by the stockholders of both banks. The matter will not come before the treasury board for approval for two weeks. The objections which have not been formally made, are said to emanate from Toronto individuals and are not regarded seriously in official circles.

WILLIAM T. FENTON ON FINANCIAL AND BUSINESS SITUATION

William T. Fenton, vice-president of the National Bank of the Republic, says that there recently has been a decided revival of business and an active demand for money. The minimum rate prevailing to-day is about 5 per cent. There has been a good demand at from 5 to 6 per cent. Business in every direction seems to be expanding. Apparently there is a shortage of labor. The mills are all running to full capacity, and the general outlook is very favorable.

Thomas S. Gates was chosen president of the Philadelphia Trust Company, and elected a director of that institution at a meeting last week. He becomes the administrative head October 1st. CAPITAL ONE MILLION DOLLARS

The Joliet News of July 25th says: "Joliet is the financial Mecca of the United States. Ever since the incorporation of the Woodruff Trust Company the money centers of the country have been in a whirl, and the 'big guns' continue to crowd telegraph wires and the mails with inquiries for information.

"Representatives of great banking institutions and of great capitalistic investment groups from far and near have beaten tracks to Joliet to learn about the first farm loan bank in America. Editors not only of financial magazines, but also of great laymen's journals have contributed their requests to the mail bag of the Woodruff Trust Company. There seems to be no end of the seekers for information. Every day another inquirer jumps off a train and hurries to the Woodruff Trust Company. Every day the telegraph and post increases the pile of correspondence.

"Joliet is known in every nook and corner of the financial United States. It seems that every big financier in the country is contemplating the organization of an institution similar to the Joliet farm loan bank. While the Woodruffs expected to excite great interest when they sprung this financial wonder, they did not perhaps count on such tremendous activity among their brethren elsewhere. But the interest grew so rapidly and so great that both President George Woodruff and his brother Fred canceled their contemplated Alaskan trip in order to confer with European bankers, and therefore will leave in a few weeks for London for a conference. They will submit their plan and legal documents for criticism and suggestion. About September 1st they will return to America."

New Moline Bank

The directors of the Commercial Savings Bank, Moline, which is to open its doors for business about September 1st, met on Thursday of last week and elected the following officers: president, John Weckel; vice-president, John Schmidt; cashier, R. M. Johnson.

Bank of Galesburg Has New Building

The Bank of Galesburg building which is nearing completion is one of the most ornate structures in that part of the state. The new banking rooms will resemble a palace and are finished in Vermont white marble. The same marble work is used on the upper floors and the different offices and suites are more elaborately finished than anything in Galesburg. There are two passenger elevators in front of the building and a freight elevator will add to the equipment. The second floor apartments are all rented and there is a good demand for suites on the other floors of the building. It will probably be three weeks before the interior is ready for occupancy. When the building is complete the bank people will have an informal opening or reception at which time the general public will be shown through the building.

Quincy Bank to Build

The Illinois State Bank at Quincy expects to erect a new building in the near future which will be modern in every respect. Purchase of property for this purpose has already been made.

Bank Closed by Run

Johnson & Co.'s bank at Annapolis, Ill., closed last week. The deposits amounted to $50,000. When a run on the bank started, Roscoe Kennan, cashier, saw that they could not meet the demands and closed the doors. President Joseph Johnson is absent. The bank was supposed to be prosperous. It carried big contracts for the Ohio Oil Company. A new bank is being organized and this seemed to discourage Johnson & Co.

Henry Peterson has been appointed cashier of the Farmers Bank of North Henderson. C. C. Craig, president of the Bank of Galesburg, is also president of this institution and has shown his excellent judgment in making his selection of one so well and favorably known to the business men of this vicinity as well as to the business men of surrounding territory in Mercer county.

The Peoples Bank at Palmyra now occupy their new brick building on the south side of East State Street. The structure is a very neat one and adds much to the town.

Henry Speckman, 60, prominent in banking circles of Chester since 1875, and president of the Bank of Chester, died Tuesday.

H. L. Black, president of the Hapgood Plow Company and the First Trust and Savings Bank of Alton, has received a telegram announcing that his son, Wilmot Black, 21 years old, was killed in an accident at Dole, in the Alpine Province of Jura, France. The young man had finished his first year at Yale this summer and had started about June 1st to tour Europe by motor cycle.

Organization for a new bank at Camden will be completed soon.

GETS DAILY BALANCE QUICKLY

The Second National Bank of Cooperstown, New York, recently purchased an adding machine which enables them to take old and new balances in an unusual way. The machine is really two machines under one keyboard, each operating independently of the other. The old balances are accumulated on one set of adding wheels and the new balances on the other set, both from the same keyboard at the same time. A shuttle carriage automatically moves the balance sheet back and forth so that the old balance is printed in one column and the new balance alongside, both balances added at once, and each limited only by the capacity of the keyboard. The machine, built by the Burroughs Adding Machine Company, is, of course, adapted to all regular work and the special features gives it a very wide range of work.

The Bank of Keysport, Ill., has changed hands. It has been sold to the Merchants State Bank of Centralia, who have taken possession. E. S. Ackerman, the cashier, will remain at the bank for a short while, after which he will go to Centralia to take a position with the Merchants State.

Indiana

Work has been begun preparatory to the erection of a new addition to the Indiana National Bank building of Indianapolis, which, it is estimated, will involve an expenditure of approximately $100,000. The building improvements, according to Frank D. Stalnaker, president of the bank, are necessitated by the recent consolidation of the Indiana National Bank and the Capital National Bank. Plans for the addition have been prepared. The new addition is to conform in practically every detail to the architecture and general construction of the present one-story Bedford stone building, which is of classic design. Through a recent deal the banking institution acquired an additional tract with a twenty-five foot frontage adjoining on the south on Pennsylvania Street and an irregular shaped site with a frontage of fifty-five feet, six inches, on Virginia Avenue. The deeds for the purchase of the property have not been recorded, but the bank officials say that the purchase has been made through Volney T. Malott, who controlled both sites, at a consideration near $100,000. Mr. Malott is chairman of the board of directors of the banking firm. The plans provide for extensive heating, ventilating and telephone systems. The building is to be heated with steam and washed air for ventilation.

The Hamilton National Bank at Fort Wayne has announced that it will soon begin the erection of a twelve-story building at Main and Calhoun streets. The bank has just acquired the last section of a piece of property there. The highest building in the city at the present time is nine stories.

The comptroller of currency has issued a charter to the Citizens National Bank of Mulberry, Ind., a new banking institution with $50,000 capital. James M. Sims will be president and George H. Miller cashier.

WEST VIRGINIA BANKER PASSES THROUGH CHICAGO

Oscar C. Wilt, vice-president and cashier of the First National Bank of Salem, West Virginia, passed through Chicago on Thursday of this week en route to Denver, where he will attend the twenty-seventh biennial convention of the Supreme Lodge, Knights of Pythias. Mr. Wilt said that business conditions are satisfactory in West Virginia, and that the prospects for crops are very favorable. He also said that the mining and manufacturing interests are running full time.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

WISCONSIN

The mid-summer lethargy in Milwaukee banking affairs was enlivened on Saturday, July 27th, by the announcement of the purchase of the good will and business of the Milwaukee National Bank, one of the oldest institutions in the state, by the First National. The consolidation means that the deposits of the First National which were $19,601,238 at the time of the last statement on June 14th, will be increased by an even $3,000,000. It also means that the bank has taken the fifth step in a little more than a year to place itself at the head of Milwaukee financial institutions. In February, 1911, the bank absorbed the Milwaukee and Fidelity Trust Companies into a subsidiary company known as the First Savings and Trust Company, and followed up its move with an increase of $500,000 in capital. A few months later property was purchased and plans formulated for the sixteen-story building, now in course of construction. Last week the capital was increased from $2,500,000 to $3,000,000, the announcement of which was followed three days later by the announcement of the purchase of the Milwaukee National. The material assets of the older institution, consisting of $700,000 in cash and $3,000,000 in securities were quietly transferred Sunday afternoon under police guard to the First National building, after which the combined staffs of the two banks put in the hardest day and night of their lives over the ponderous task of assimilation. Things were in such shape Monday morning, however, that the combined business of the two institutions was transacted smoothly from the purchasing bank without a hitch.

History of Milwaukee National

The Milwaukee National is one of the oldest banks in the state, being established under the name of the State Bank of Wisconsin in 1853. In 1865 the institution was reorganized under the national bank law as the Milwaukee National Bank of Wisconsin, with a capital stock of $250,000. Charles T. Bradley, pioneer shoe merchant, was its first president, with J. H. Inbusch vice-president, and T. L. Baker, cashier. The bank continued in the same building occupied by its predecessor and has retained its original quarters throughout its history, in the old limestone block at Michigan and East Water Street. In the first year of its existence the bank's deposits were $306,000. These increased in the first fifteen years to $1,318,000. In 1893 after the financial panic the capital stock was increased to $450,000, at which figure it has remained. President George W. Strohmeyer became head of the institution a number of years ago, succeeding J. H. Inbusch. Other officers are: Vice-presidents, L. M. Alexander, Carl Penschorn; cashier, William Filter; assistant cashiers, J. F. Strohmeyer, B. V. Dela Hunt; directors, George W. Strohmeyer, L. M. Alexander, Carl Penschorn, J. F. W. Inbusch, Ferdinand Meinecke, William Filter and John F. Strohmeyer.

First National Officers

Officers of the First National are: President, Fred Vogel, Jr.; vice-presidents, William Bigelow, F. T. Goll; cashier, Henry Kloes; assistant cashiers, Oscar Kasten, A. W. Bogk, E. J. Hughes; directors, Walter Alexander, Charles Allis, John I. Beggs, William Bigelow, Robert Camp, D. C. Green, Howard Greene, Nathan Glicksman, F. T. Goll, A. K. Hamilton, H. August Luedke, Stuart H. Markham, George P. Mayer, George P. Miller, Ludington Patton, William Woods Plankinton, Charles F. Pfister, A. O. Trostel, E. A. Uhrig, and Fred Vogel, Jr.

Will Retain Milwaukee National Officers

According to the official statement of the consolidation all officers and employees of the Milwaukee National will be retained by the purchasing bank. Although Mr. Strohmeyer has an office at the First National Bank, his duties as manager of the Milwaukee clearing house, which office he has held for several years, require a large portion of his time at the clearing house headquarters in the old Milwaukee National Bank building, where they will probably remain until the new First National Bank Building is completed.

Andrew J. Frame, veteran banker of Waukesha, opines that big crops and not national politics control the general prosperity of the country.

legislation, yet, if the Lord gives us big crops, he is more powerful to bring about prosperity than adverse legislation is to tear it down," said Mr. Frame. "Honest differences between the republican and democratic parties are very slight. The tariff alone to a certain extent is a bone of contention. But it also is a bone of contention in so-called free trade countries, England and Germany, and always will be in all probability. You may hammer a sound body and bruise it materially, but if, as in the case of the United States, it is wonderfully sound and prosperous, it takes much bruising to turn the tide of progress backward. I don't think politicians will be able to turn the tide, and the Lord is with us."

Recuperate in G. D. Bartlett's New Car

Secretary George D. Bartlett of the W. B. A. and the hardworking members of the Milwaukee bankers committee who entertained the 500 guests at the state convention just closed are seeking recuperation in Mr. Bartlett's new KisselKar, presented to him last week by members as a token of their appreciation of his efforts in behalf of the association. When it comes time to crank the car, however, it is rumored that the occupants are too prone to "let George do it."

Wisconsin National Bank Directory

And now that the excitement is all over delegates to the big annual convention are finding time to peruse and admire at their leisure the handsome little blue leather-bound state bank directory issued as a souvenir by the Wisconsin National Bank, and compiled by Walter Kasten, assistant cashier.

Wisconsin Notes

F. C. Langfeldt, a banker of Durant, Ia., is reported to have purchased the controlling interest in the Citizens State National Bank of Stoughton.

The $165,000 Racine County courthouse bonds, bearing 4 per cent interest, proved unattractive bait to bidders, only two bids having been received so far. Under the circumstances the county board at a special meeting will take emergency measures to raise the interest to 4½.

Stockholders of the First National Bank on Wednesday voted to increase the bank's capitalization from $2,500,000 to $3,000,000, making it the heaviest capitalized institution in the city. This is the second increase in the bank's capital in eighteen months, a $500,000 increase having been voted in February, 1911, at the time the bank took over the Milwaukee and Fidelity Trust Companies. The new stock will be held for the present stockholders at 180 until August 24, after which it will be placed on the general market.

A. Uhrlaub, vice-president of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, has returned from his vacation spent in Germany, where he had the interesting experience of making a pleasure voyage in one of the Zeppelin air balloons.

SECOND ANNUAL AGRICULTURAL CONFERENCE

The second annual conference of the committees on agricultural development and education of state bankers' associations will be held next week, August 7th and 8th, in Minneapolis and St. Paul. The first day's session will meet at the Hotel Radisson in Minneapolis at 10 A. M., and the second day's conference will meet at the St. Paul Hotel in St. Paul at the same hour. Chairman Joseph Chapman, Jr., and Secretary Charles R. Frost have prepared a very attractive program with a list of prominent speakers on the special subjects which will go before the conference. The delegates will be entertained by the bankers of Minneapolis and St. Paul on the evening of the first day at the Lafayette Club, Lake Minnetonka, one of the most beautiful lakes in the country. In the morning of August 7th there will be addresses on "The Better Farming Association of North Dakota," by Thomas Cooper of Fargo; "The German School System," by Edward A. Rumely of La Porte, Indiana; "Agriculture in the South," by Dr. Andrew M. Soule, president Georgia College of Agriculture, and "Vocational Training" by the Hon. Carroll S. Page, United States senator from Vermont. After a general discussion the conference will adjourn until two o'clock. In the afternoon there will be talks on "The Minnesota Agricultural High School," by Prof. John Monroe, Cokato (Minn.) associated high schools; "Co-operation Between the State and the United States Government in Agricultural Extension Work," by Dean A. F. Woods of the Minnesota Agricultural College, St. Paul; "Dry Farming," by John T. Burns, secretary International Dry Farming Congress, Lethbridge, Alberta; "Farming in Missouri," by S.

M. Jordan, manager Pettis County Bureau of Agriculture, Sedalia, Mo.; "Our Work," by Prof. L. D. Harvey of the Stout Institute, Menominee, Wis.; and the "Modern Up-to-date Boys' School," by Prof. Raymond Rioridan, superintendent Interlaken School, Rolling Prairie, Ind. On the morning of the second day Prof. Edwin G. Cooley, former superintendent of city schools in Chicago, will talk on vocational training in Europe; E. M. Phillips, assistant superintendent of public instruction for Minnesota, will deliver an address on the consolidated rural school, and the Hon. James J. Hill of the Great Northern Railway, St. Paul, will entertain the bankers with a talk on agriculture. In the afternoon there will be an address on the "Attitude of Congress Toward Agricultural Development," by the Hon. L. B. Hanna, member of congress from North Dakota and a member of the house committee on agriculture, after which reports from the chairmen of the various state committees on agricultural development and education will be heard. Addresses also will be made by Miss Frances P. Lapham on "Problems of the Farm Home;" C. B. Waldron, North Dakota Agricultural College, on "The Relation of the Educational Agencies to Present Day Rural Problems;" and by A. Y. Storms, College of Agriculture, Ames, Ia. A silver loving-cup, offered by the president of the conference, will be presented to the committee accomplishing the best results to date. After the election of officers and the appointment of committees the conference will adjourn. Up to date the following states have appointed standing committees on agricultural development and education: these committees composing the second annual conference: Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Florida, Indiana, Iowa, Idaho, Illinois, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, New Jersey, Nebraska, New York, North Carolina, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Virginia, Washington, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, Aug. 1.—The near approach of the crop moving period has caused a better demand for credits during the past week or ten days and interest rates show a tendency to harden. Several of the leading institutions are pretty well loaned up but still find a pressing demand from borrowers. The banks maintain a strong reserve position, however, and no inconvenience is anticipated when the call for funds becomes more urgent. The requirements for crop moving purposes are expected to be unusually heavy this year, as the outlook promises a very heavy yield of small grain. Earlier in the season sentiment was decidedly depressed by the poor outlook for winter wheat, but ideal weather has brought the crops forward in an amazing manner, and much acreage at one time thought to be practically worthless, has been reclaimed and will make a fair yield.

After the long months of 4 to 4½ per cent discounts the temptation to put out funds at the prevailing rates of 4¾ to 5 per cent is very strong. City borrowers are the best clients at the advanced rates, but there is also a strong demand from country sources. Numerous firms that have not been in the market for funds for a year or more are inquiring for goodly sums. This is reflecting in continued heavy bank clearings, and is emphasizing the fact that general business is picking up. The total clearings continue to run well over those of a year ago. With the near approach of September the banks also will face some maturities which will further strengthen their position. The demand for call funds is not pressing at the moment and rates are reasonable. The chances, however, favor higher rates in the near future.

Good crop prospects are being reflected in a cheerful sentiment in the wholesale district and sales are more satisfactory than were expected sixty days ago. There has been an increased business booked for fall delivery, despite the lateness of the season, and numerous enlargements on earlier orders have been placed.

New Reorganization Plan of the Wabash

St. Louis bankers are much interested in the new reorganization plan of the Wabash Railroad, as many of the securities of this company are held here for investment. Under the new plan being worked out by the Bondholders Committee, it is thought that the assessment on the preferred stock will be much smaller than the $40 per share figured on under the original reorganization plan. The original plan met considerable opposition in banking as well as official sources, as the Missouri Pacific Railroad, being one of the largest holders of Wabash securities, would be compelled to make a larger outlay than desired while the company is in need of its revenues to finance its own indebtedness. With a smaller assessment it is declared also will come an untangling of the financial affairs of the Wheeling and Lake Erie from the Wabash, and a tentative plan in this direction is expected to be submitted to Judge Elmer B. Adams of the United States District Court in the near future for his approval.

Several of the members of the Wabash Protective Committee are now in Europe, and Chairman Winslow S. Pierce expects to join them before their return. On his return, it is said, some definite action may be looked for in Wabash affairs, though in the opinion of many the receivership may continue for a year. It is known that some of the committee are desirous of bringing the Wabash out of the hands of a receiver by August, 1913, the date on which the $10,000,000 certificates mature.

Prefer Public Service Corporation Bonds

St. Louis bond dealers express the belief that gilt-edged railroad bonds are destined to sell lower, as the public continues to show a decided preference for the higher-rate and better known public service corporation issues. They say that every indication points to a continued and pronounced increase in the production of gold, with a resultant rise in the cost of living, and a demand for higher rate yields on the part of those dependent upon this form of "incomes" for their subsistence, financially speaking. This may well indicate a further contraction in prices for the gilt-edged railroad bonds yielding a small return, and a further preference for the less well-known, but none the less substantial, smaller railroad bonds and well-established and prosperous public service corporation securities which meet the requirements of the conservative investment banking firm and pay from 5 to 6 per cent.

ACTUAL value received from their connection with us has increased our accounts from other banks 50% in two years. We therefore invite the business of others with the assurance of mutual satisfaction.

Law Suit

National Bank of Commerce Defendant in

The National Bank of Commerce of St. Louis has been made part defendant in another suit growing out of the $400,000 bond issue of the Holiday-Klotz Land and Lumber Company. The Holiday-Klotz Company and the Wayne Iron and Lumber Company are the plaintiffs. The court is asked to declare the issue void. It is stated that May 6, 1907, officers of the Holiday-Klotz Company executed on behalf of the company, and with stockholders and directors of the company, a deed of trust on lands in Wayne and Butler counties, in Missouri, securing $400,000 bonds. It is averred that prior to the bond issue the National Bank of Commerce caused J. W. Perry, an officer of the bank, to become a stockholder of the Holiday-Klotz Company, a member of its board of directors, and secretary of the company, and caused the bonds to be taken from the company and deposited with the bank as security for obligations of other persons. The Wayne Iron and Lumber Company, January 9, 1909, bought the land covered by the bonds, it is declared. The circuit court of Wayne county, August 15, 1910, appointed John G. Settle trustee in place of the Bankers Trust Company, named originally, and he advertised the land for sale, it is stated. It is now declared that the bond issue was illegal and the court is asked to order the defendants to deliver the bonds in court for cancellation. Settle is made defendant in the case, as are also William Cowan, Charles W. Hayes, David H. Glass, William S. Glass, Charles D. Rodgers, Elwyn R. Locke and Samuel M. Locke, who it is stated issued the bonds. Five other suits growing out of the issue of bonds are pending in the circuit court. An injunction was issued in one of the suits, stopping the sale of the bonds pending the litigation.

GUARANTY TRUST COMPANY ISSUES NEW BOND BOOKLET

The Guaranty Trust Company of New York has compiled data relating to the more important issues of short term securities and has published it in the form of a very attractive and convenient booklet. The compilation is most complete as regards railroad, industrial, and public utility securities. Brief descriptions of the larger issues are also given, as well as a chronological list of maturities. The book is a revised edition brought down to June, 1912, of a similar publication issued by this company in 1911, for which there was large demand. The Guaranty Trust Company will be glad to send this booklet to investors who are interested in short term notes and bonds.

PITTSBURGH CHAPTER NEWS

The following invitation has been sent to the delegates who will attend the tenth annual convention of the American Institute of Banking to be held at Salt Lake City, August 21st, 22d and 23d:

"Pittsburgh Chapter extends a very cordial invitation to all delegates attending the convention at Salt Lake City, to stop over in the Smoky City and be entertained by the chapter. A good time is guaranteed to all."

(Signed) H. E. HEBRANK,
Pres. Pittsburgh Chapter A. I. B.

At the present time, the above invitation has met with good results, and plans are under way for the entertainment of a large delegation. It has been arranged to bring the eastern boys over the Pennsylvania Railroad and a stop at Pittsburgh has been scheduled. They will arrive Friday evening, August 16th, at 7 o'clock, and will be met at the depot by the Pittsburgh Chapter boys who will join in showing the guests around the city. Autos will take them on visits to the steel mills and residential sections, and later a trip to the Hippodrome at Forbes Field. The closing event of the night will be a big dinner at the Country Club. These plans are subject to slight change but will be strenuous enough to keep all on the go for the short time they will be in Pittsburgh.

Saturday, August 3d, at West View Park, will occur the first annual picnic and outing of the chapter. One of the events on the program will be a ball game with the Credit Mens Association.

Findlay.—The City Banking Company will increase its capital from $60,000 to $100,000. P. W. Ewing has been elected president.

Editorial Comment

WHAT IS THE MATTER WITH OUR COURTS?

A great deal of criticism is directed nowadays against the judiciary of our country and against the present administration of justice. Some of it, perhaps, is just, while some of it is unjust. Great dissatisfaction often is expressed at decisions which are rendered which are said to be inequitable. Some of the more radical advocate as a remedy for this the recall of judges and of judicial decisions. Another source of complaint is the great delay incident to securing the determination of a controversy, while others contend that litigants with a good cause of action often are thrown out of court on what commonly is known as a "technicality."

It is quite obvious that some of the decisions rendered by our judges will be considered as unjust, this on account of the fact that incompetent men sometimes will be elected to office. Then, again, a judge may be administering the law as he understands it, and, in fact, as the law really is; very frequently the trouble is not with the judge, but with the law itself. Quite often laws are declared to be unconstitutional as infringing upon certain of those inalienable rights guaranteed to the people of the United States by the constitution. Surely in a case of this kind the judge is not to be blamed. Why not get at the source of the trouble and amend the law? Of course, if a judge is guilty of malfeasance, he always can be impeached.

Delay in the law is another prolific source of discontent. While it is true that this is necessary to a limited extent as an incident of the vast amount of litigation conducted in our courts, many believe that the difficulty in securing a decision is greater than it ought to be under the circumstances. It is believed that justice would be subserved much better if certain classes of cases were given precedence over others. For instance, considerable time often elapses between the indictment for a crime and the ultimate carrying into effect of the sentence of the law. This necessarily has a pernicious influence. People would be less likely to commit crimes if they knew that but a short interval would elapse between apprehension, conviction and sentence. Swift and adequate punishment can be the only safe deterrent for crime.

One hears a great deal about the "technical" side of the law. No doubt there is some foundation for this, but nevertheless it is true that this sometimes is due to a misapprehension as to what the law really is. It is a well recognized fact that many of these so-called technicalities occur in the pleadings of a case. A great many of the states still use the common-law system of pleadings. It is thought by many that if the rules relating to this branch of the law were codified, much of the difficulty and vexation experienced would be obviated. Then, again, the trouble often may be attributed to the lawyer who is retained. Perhaps he doesn't use the proper care in preparing his client's case. The whole question is occupying the attention of both bench and bar, and is the subject of investigation by the press and numerous state bar associations. It is to be hoped that the ultimate result of their efforts will insure to the people a free, quick and impartial administration of justice as guaranteed in the constitution.

ONE FUNCTION OF A TRUST COMPANY

The rule against perpetuities had its origin in the old common law of England. Such is the law to-day, except in so far as it has been modified by statute. Briefly stated, the rule is that one cannot postpone the absolute vesting of an estate for a longer period than a life or lives in being and twenty-one years thereafter, plus the period of gestation. The wisdom of such a rule readily is apparent, for if such were not the case a testator would be enabled to control by will his property indefinitely. The only exception to this doctrine is in the case of charitable trusts. A statement of the rule naturally suggests the query as to the method employed in handing down large estates from generation to generation. The most common way, and no doubt the most reliable, is the creation of a trust for the longest period allowed by the law. The second method is to depend upon the decendants to follow the policy of their forefathers and ultimately to convey the property again in trust. In this connection trust companies play a very important part. They are much better equipped to discharge the duties of such a relation than are individuals. They are backed by a large amount of capital, are under the supervision of the state, and represent the combined experience and judgment of a number of men, whereas an individual has but his own skill upon which to rely. Then, again, their existence is perpetual. There never has been an instance where a "bona-fide" trust company has betrayed the confidence reposed in it. It is believed that they will exercise an important influence in the years to come.

CLEARING THE SIDEWALKS

Erectors of new buildings in Chicago should note what now is going on in New York, where the city ruthlessly is cutting away every projection of whatever nature beyond the building line. Even the beautiful marble steps and entrance way at "26 Broadway" has been chopped away as if the billion-dollar Standard Oil Company belonged to the common herd. In New York all the handsome entrances are being cut away from downtown office buildings to widen the sidewalks in a way which emphasizes the congestion of foot traffic in the financial district. Everyone knows that this condition is caused by the multiplication of skyscrapers, to which there seems to be no limit either in number or height. At lunch hour and after 5 p. m., when many buildings empty almost simultaneously, the principal downtown thoroughfares become badly congested, and the relief afforded by clearing the sidewalks of all obstructions up to the wall line is the only relief in sight. How long would the "special permit" stairways and sidewalk bay windows of Chicago last if such a crusade for law observance should start here? In no city in the world has there been such toleration of the land-grabbing propensities of landlords and store owners. A few are renters of public space direct from the city, but ninety per cent of the offenders secured their unjust advantage by the "influence" of doubtful aldermen in the city council. Incidentally, the justice of compelling the various building owners to cut away their fronts at their own expense is highly questionable. The city having allowed the erection of these obstructions ought at least to share an expense which is entirely for public advantage and which would never have been incurred had earlier officials been alive to the consequences of their shortsightedness. The situation should cause an awakening in Chicago, where even basement lifts and endless freight stairways, in places, cut off two-thirds of the sidewalk space. The sooner the work is begun the less the hardships to be imposed.

A NEW PRESIDENT ELECTED

At a recent meeting of the Board of Directors of Bank of Atkins, Arkansas, J. M. Barker was elected president to succeed the late Col. E. A. Darr, deceased. Mr. Barker has been cashier of the bank for seventeen years (since its organization.) The present capital is $50,000, surplus $10,000. Ira Darr was elected vice-president to succeed the late Dr. J. J. Fletcher Farrell

J. Fletcher Farrell, vice-president of the Fort Dearborn National, recently has returned from a month's vacation spent in Missouri, his home state. Mr. Farrell visited Paris, his old home, and Columbia and Jefferson City. He reports having had a fine time, and says that he gained eleven pounds while away. The general business situation in Missouri is good. Although the crops will be a little later this year than usual, prospects concerning them are very favorable. People down there are optimistic as to the outlook.

CHARGES NO INTEREST

Fort Worth, Texas.—The First State Bank Trust Company at Cuero is receiving requests daily from farmers in that section for loans to purchase fertilizer and other means of enriching the soil. The bank announced recently that it would loan money to progressive planters without interest and the lenient terms of the institution have met with the approval of all the business men and farmers here. The object of the bank is to promote the agricultural advantages of DeWitt county and it will assist in every movement that makes for the upbuilding of the community.

President B. F. Harris of the Illinois Bankers Association has written a letter to the Chicago Economist to try to put that publication right on the question of state supervision. Mr. Harris wrote:

Editor Economist: I note your figures in the last issue of the Economist, with reference to bank supervision, and indicating the situation with reference to private bankers in this state. In reading over those figures one uninformed would get the impression that the bulk or practically all of the country banking business in the state is carried on by private bankers. As I understand it, Mr. Crampton gave you some of the figures on which your statement is based, some of which figures had been compiled for me, but in digesting them for my own purpose I used figures that show the entire banking position a little more clearly. For instance, I find that there are 319 towns of less than 500 population that have only one bank. 30 per cent, or 94 of these banks are state or national banks, and 225 are privates. This indicates very clearly that this 30 per cent was glad, of its own volition, and able to organize a state or national bank, with a capital of not less than $25,000, which disproves the contention of many private bankers that a small community ought to be permitted to organize with five or ten thousand capital.

Some of these private bankers have criticized me by saying that "we understand your special policy has been to build up agriculture in the country communities, and yet you are now desiring to injure those communities by raising the requirements in banking and calling for a minimum capital of $25,000, which will and it is evidently your purpose to, close up the small banks and help the larger cities."

My answer to this has been that no one is more interested than am I in building up farming communities, and the best way to accomplish this is to get co-operation among the progressive and responsible farmers and land-owners in this movement. That the smallest community, made up of such people, that really needs banking facilities, can easily get from five to fifty of its farmers and country merchants to raise a capital of $25,000. It is banking, under such conditions as these, in small communities, that exercises a splendid influence and financial support to the community and brings such bank much business that might otherwise be inclined to go to the larger towns.

There are quite a number of country banks in Pennsylvania, organized under both state and national charter, and nearly all of these banks have from sixty to two hundred and twenty-five stockholders each. Selfishness is at the bottom of it, and the trouble is that some of our bankers want to do a very much larger volume of business than they are entitled to, or should be permitted to do, on a small capital, and they refuse to recognize the doctrine that the state and federal courts have expounded, viz., that banking has such a public aspect as to bring it under proper state regulation.

In the votes which I received from the private banker members I was glad to note that the population of the town had apparently little to do with the attitude of the banker with reference to supervision. Our figures show that 25 towns having a population of 500 or less have two banks, which is an indication that there is enough business to justify at least one good bank. If there is enough business there to justify two banks of a proper capitalization the competition between the two small banks would lead to unsafe methods, indicating that one good bank would therefore be better than two weak ones.

In one-bank towns of a thousand or more population there are as many or several times as many organized as unorganized banks. In view of these figures and much information that I have otherwise gained, directly from the banker himself, I am convinced that there is no foundation, in fact, for opposition to bank supervision in this state other than that growing out of purely selfish reasons, and the opportunity to do under unsupervised banking the things that should not be done under any system of banking that is calculated to be of real service to the community.

Resents Recent Attacks on Representative Government

There is one thought which during the last thirty years has burned itself into the consciousness of the average American citizen, namely, that he is badly governed in the law making department of his government, both in civic and state affairs; that he is badly governed as relates to the executive department as well, but not so flagrantly as in the legislative branch. Moreover, of late he has been led to realize that he has reason to complain of the judicial service he is receiving.

Are these complaints just and if so to what extent, and wherein lies the remedy?

There are three motives which might induce a desirable man to go to the legislature—a patriotic desire to do good, the honor the office might bring, and the hope of pecuniary reward. The pecuniary reward a legislator receives, whether in state or national service, is negligible. If he is a man of good education (and no man of inferior education should be considered eligible to make laws), and of fair social standing, the pay will not support him. It is an interruption to his business—a session or two of congress will break up any man's business; the pay he receives will leave him no surplus, and he will come out poorer than when he went in. Therefore, for an honest man, there is no hope of pecuniary reward. The honor and distinction which are left to the holder of such an office are not much greater than the slender pay he receives. As to congress the honor is sufficient to induce many a man to accept the office, but it is doubtful if the distinction of being called a member of either house of the state legislature proves tempting. The reputation of being an alderman is nothing—in many cases it arouses suspicion.

The candidate for the state legislature, therefore, if he be a prudent as well as an honest man, must decide whether he has private resources to fall back upon to help him live while he is dedicating the best part of his time to the public service.

This consideration affords an explanation of the fact that our legislatures are filled with incompetent men, needy adventurers seeking corruptly to fill their pockets, and embrace but a small percentage of men who are really desirable.

There are three great questions awaiting solution by congress in the near future: The Tariff, the Trusts, and the Currency. Although these matters are pressing and are federal questions, yet they have been cast into the shade at this time of national elections by the greater interest shown in matters with which congress has little or nothing to do.

But the questions which have been projected, apparently out of place at this time, are not federal matters. They relate to the government of the states, and to the status of their legislatures; they involve an entire change in our system of government. They are popularly known as the Initiative, Referendum and Recall.

We have enjoyed for many years a constitutional government. Hear what Webster says:

"Nothing is more deceptive or more dangerous than the pretense of a desire to simplify government. The simplest governments are despotisms. The spirit of liberty * * * demands checks. * * * It does not trust the amiable weakness of human nature, and therefore will not permit power to overstep its prescribed limits, though benevolence, good intent, and patriotic purpose come along with it."

Critics, both at home and abroad, have given

Judge Sidney Corning Eastman, quoting texts from Lincoln and Hamilton, defends American institutions—legislative, judicial and executive.

¶ The independence of the judges is equally requisite to guard the Constitution and the rights of individuals from the effects of those ill humors, which the arts of designing men, or the influence of particular conjunctures, sometimes disseminate among the peoples themselves, and which, though they speedily give place to better information and more deliberate reflections, have a tendency in the meantime to occasion dangerous innovations in the government and serious oppressions of the minor party in the community. — Alexander Hamilton.

¶ A majority held in restraint by constitutional checks and limitations and always changing easily with deliberate changes of popular opinion and sentiment, is the only true sovereign of a free people. Whoever rejects it does of necessity fly to anarchy or despotism. — Abraham Lincoln.

praise to our system, yet we are now told that it is fundamentally wrong and we must change it at once for a new theory; we are asked to abolish our representative government and place the law making directly with the electorate, a proposition of the greatest gravity because it is dealing with the fundamentals of government, that is, the making of laws. This idea of pure democracy is not new, but is an old and exploded one.

The pessimistic feeling which at times assails us, comes from viewing at close range these glaring evils, and we fail to get the wider vision which is afforded sometimes to critics from abroad.

Bryce, that great writer, in his American Commonwealth, luminous for its common sense (Vol. II, p. 240), says:

"At last a point was reached at which the evils aroused the public conscience and were felt to be injuring the whole community. Human intelligence, by a sort of natural law, chooses the path of least resistance, and instead of trying to root out an evil altogether, often seeks to discover some expedient which will get around the evil and avoid its worst consequences. So in this instance the voters instead of destroying the Machine or setting it right by ejecting the professionals and making a party organization truly represent the whole party and the principles the party stands for, resorted to the plan of creating statutory primaries, that is to say, of duplicating elections by holding a party election to choose candidates as preliminary to the general election for choosing officials. * * * And now they have begun to supersede the legislature by taking to themselves the direct power of law making through the institution of the Referendum and the Initiative, these being in their essence an effort to get rid, not only of the evils incident to the selfishness of legislatures and their amenability to improper influences, but also of party itself, as a force which divides the people and prevents them from taking the shortest way to accomplish their will."

This restlessness and desire for change is due largely to certain glaring and admitted defects in the composition of our legislative chambers; it is to get rid of these defects that we are asked to make these radical changes.

What are the defects? Are they remediable? Are the proposed remedies satisfactory?

The people of the United States are mistrustful of their law-makers, of their representatives in the legislatures of the states and also, to a less extent, of their representatives at Washington.

There is, indeed, less occasion for mistrust now than there was thirty years ago.

During the last thirty years we have improved by preventing the more glaring frauds in the electoral machinery, in the ballot, in the purchasing of votes, and in the jobbing of franchises by both municipal and state authorities. The government of large cities, bad as it is at present, is much better than it was. The character of the common councils of some of our cities has been revolutionized. The selling of franchises has now become comparatively rare, because dangerous.

This modern talk of the initiative, referendum and recall is traceable to the general dissatisfaction; they are proposed as the remedy—in fact a remedy of despair!

Suppose a young man fresh from college, filled with enthusiasm for public service as a life work, were to ask a middle-aged friend for advice. Do you not think he would be asked whether he had "in presenti" or "in futuro" a reasonable competence? And if the reply were in the negative, would he not be advised to stay out because he would be embarking in a career of poverty? He would be unable to support a family or provide for the future out of the salary of a legislator, and would always be confronted with the loss of office after years of public service, without profession or business to fall back upon to earn his bread.

A young lawyer, perhaps, may suffer less than others from a few years in the legislature. A young business man is urged to work hard, put his soul into his business, let nothing divert him if he would succeed. How can he take a quarter of his time away from home and business and during the remaining three quarters have his mind filled with public questions? Has it come to this, that we must look for a class of men of independent means, not necessarily of wealth, if we wish to improve our legislative branch? It would seem so. And can we induce those citizens who, in addition to possessing the moral and intellectual qualifications, are possessed of sufficient means, to go into public life? Do we offer that honor and distinction which invite others in some parts of the world?

Now it is this lack of confidence which is generally felt in our legislatures, that has produced this restless turning around and hunting for a remedy. To the people who are so sluggish, so indifferent to their public duties that they will not or cannot select worthy men to make their laws, they turn and say, "Vote directly for your own laws." Some marvelous transformation is expected to take place, almost equivalent to a change of heart at a religious revival! The voter is expected to read over carefully and inwardly to digest several hundred pages of proposed statutes and then solemnly and carefully register his opinion by his ballot.

In Oregon, the home of the attacks on representative government, the people voted down in 1908 a referendum to increase the pay of legislators from $120 to $400 per annum.

A law should be the most carefully drawn instrument that the mind of man can produce! A lawyer may spend hours, days or even months, in mastering a statute in order to advise a client. Is it not evident that not only the compounding of such an instrument, as well as its adoption, should be left in charge of those who may be assumed to put some study into the matter? Yes, you may say, but is it not already demonstrated that the people are justly disappointed in the prevail-

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

Business in all lines has revived greatly within the past week throughout the Central West, due primarily to the splendid crop of wheat that is beginning to find its way to the markets. This business revival finds expression in increasing deposits and the back flow of money from the farms into the banks. The corn crop will be large and there is no doubt that a great deal of stock will be fattened this fall and winter. This promises to be the first really prosperous year that parts of Oklahoma and Kansas have known for three years and bankers are correspondingly happy at the outlook. Banks report sound conditions generally, and while they have not enjoyed a large degree of activity during the past spring and summer months, this condition is yielding to brisk demand for money at fair rates and a steady increase in deposits.

Texas Agricultural Committee Meets

The first meeting of the Texas bankers' committee on agriculture was held at College Station, Corpus Christi, the morning of July 29th. President H. R. Eldridge of the Texas Bankers Association, P. L. Downs of Temple, J. Baldrige and Joe Hirsch constitute the committee. Prof. Youngblood of the state experiment station, J. L. Quicksall of the United States department of agriculture, Ed. R. Kone, commissioner of agriculture, and others interested in the development of the agricultural resources of Texas were present and outlined much practical work to be undertaken by the Texas Bankers Association. This is part of the general program of the American Bankers Association for developing farm resources and adding to the general agricultural prosperity of the nation.

Suggested Reform of Oklahoma Banking Laws

The scope of the suggested reform in Oklahoma banking laws was enlarged last week to include the organization and management of not only the guaranty fund but the department of banking as well. This movement was proposed by the state bankers section of the Oklahoma Bankers Association which met in Oklahoma City July 30th. The general recommendation is to be for the abolition of the state banking board as now constituted, and allow state bankers participation in naming the state bank commissioner, as well as the examiners. The state treasurer would be treasurer of the banking department under the new idea. The governor would nominate the bank commissioner and that selection to be ratified by the state bankers, or let the state bankers nominate and the governor approve. The commissioner is to have ten years' actual banking experience, five of which must be immediately prior to his appointment. The same or a similar rule, the bankers believe, should be observed in naming examiners, and they should have at least five years' practical banking experience. All matters of the department shall be under the direct supervision of the state bank commissioner, without ratification by an advisory board being necessary. It is understood that the commissioner desires more authority in his department, and in the issuance of charters to new banks in particular. One idea is to give him unquestioned authority in matters of charters and his decision to be final.

State Bank for Omaha

For many years Omaha has had no state bank, and within the past ten days steps have been taken to remedy this deficiency by the organization of the Omaha State Bank. Albert S. White, who has been most active in the organization, will be vice-president, and its cashier will be one of the state bank examiners. The new institution has been organized under the state guaranty law and will start business with a capitalization of $300,000. Some of Omaha's most prominent business men and bankers are in its directory and among its officials. The stock in the new bank has been sold for $125 a share, $100 being for capital and $25 for a surplus fund. The bank will occupy the new Keeline building, Seventeenth and Harney streets, when completed, October 1st, and hereafter this building will be known as the Omaha State Bank building.

Panhandle Bankers to Meet in August

The program for the Panhandle Bankers Association at Plainview, Texas, August 13th and 14th, has been announced. The convention will convene at the Schick Opera House and the first session will open with an address of welcome by Mayor J. L. Dorsett, and the response will be given by R. A. Underwood, assistant cashier of the Tulia Bank and Trust Company. In addition to routine business the following addresses will be given during the convention: "How Trust Companies Can Add to the Development of West Texas," by R. L. McCaulley, of Sweetwater; "The Good of the Order," by R. H. Collier, president of the American State Bank at McLean; "Pioneer Days," by R. D. Gage, vice-president of the First National at Fort Worth; "Results of Past Year, Outlook for Future," by J. C. Paul, president of the Panhandle Bank, at Panhandle; "A Kansas Blue Sky Law for Texas," by B. L. Gill, state commissioner of insurance and banking. Under the head of "Shop Talk" there will be a general discussion of banking methods. The social features will include a roof garden party on the Ware Hotel, auto rides, inspection of irrigation wells and a barbecue lunch. The officers of the association are:

Heavy Kaffir Harvest

As a result of the drouth of 1911, in which thousands of head of stock were marketed at a loss by the farmers of Oklahoma, the bankers of that state co-operated to persuade the farmers to plant more kaffir, which is one of the best dry weather feed products known. So well does kaffir resist drouth that the farmers who had kaffir last year brought their stock through the season and made money. Practically all of the bankers of Oklahoma are making it a condition for farmers to plant kaffir before getting bank loans. The result will be a heavy feed harvest in Oklahoma this fall. An example of the bankers' activity in this direction is the First National of Seiling, in Dewey county. The cashier of that bank mailed circulars to the farmers of Dewey county and announced that prizes would be given by the bank for the best yields and displays of kaffir. After the prizes are awarded the bank will consolidate the exhibits and send them to the state fair to show what Dewey county can do. Additional prizes will be given by the same bank for yields of other hardy crops which always produce well in western Oklahoma. These will find their way to the state fair and will help to stimulate the growing of crops which develop in wet times or dry times. Many banks in Kansas have followed this same line of effort to help the farmers in their communities. The result is being shown in the effective co-operation of farmers and bankers such as never was known before.

"Blue Sky" Law

A remarkable number of inquiries have been received by Bank Commissioner J. N. Dolley of Kansas, asking all manner of questions concerning the operation of the famous "Blue Sky" law which he first suggested, then wrote, and finally had passed by the last Kansas legislature. According to the tone of these letters it is evident that this law is to be presented to several other state legislatures soon. Naturally Mr. Dolley is very proud of his law and is immensely gratified at the success of its operation. Speaking of the law recently Mr. Dolley said:

"It has been said that the people do not need a guardian to supervise their investments, but I want to say that a large per cent of them do need a guardian, especially in matters of this kind. On the other hand bankers are subject to the very strictest supervision. Almost every state in the Union has a banking department to regulate and supervise the banks. Why should the banks be regulated and supervised any more than the stock-selling company? History and statistics show that the loss through banks to the public is but a drop in the bucket compared with the money which is lost through investment in worthless stocks and bonds. At the time Kansas' 'blue sky' law went into effect there were between four and six millions of dollars annually being taken from Kansas which was absolutely lost to the investor as well as to the state of Kansas. Postmaster-General Hitchcock, after careful investigation, estimates that there is $300,000,000 annually lost by the investing public of the United States. This money was being taken by the promoter from our state to the headquarters of his company, a large per cent of it going to New York and the East, and 98 per cent of it was either borrowed from the banker or taken from his deposits.

"This law has already saved the people of this state more money than it takes to run our entire state government during the time which it has been in operation. I can show you one instance where a certain company was selling its securities in Kansas at the time this law went into effect at the rate of about $300,000 per month, having some thirty salesmen in the state. After making a careful investigation of this proposition, the company was refused permission to do further business in the state and it has since proved itself unworthy of the confidence of the public."

Banker Commits Suicide

Robert Thornburrow, a very wealthy land owner and president of the State Bank of Bancroft, Kan., committed suicide last week. It is believed that worry over the arrest of the cashier of the bank, J. C. McGuire, on a charge of defaulting, was the cause of the deed. Cashier McGuire was arrested July 13th on a warrant sworn out by State Bank Commissioner J. N. Dolley after a shortage of $1,000 had been found. President Thornburrow seemed to have taken a deep interest in the arrest of his cashier and seemed to grieve over the criticism of the bank commissioner because the bank officials did not keep closer watch on the bank's condition.

Central West Notes

J. D. Suggs of San Angelo, Texas, who is a director and heavy stockholder in a large number of banks in Texas and Oklahoma, has begun the erection of a five-story building at Chickasha, Okla., in which will be the permanent home of the First National of Chickasha, which is one of Mr. Sugg's favorite institutions.

Paul Swingle, who tried to kill Thaddeus Carver of Pratt, Kan., on May 15th last, has been adjudged insane and has been sent to the Kansas asylum for the criminally insane at Lansing. Mr. Carver is one of the best known bankers in Kansas and is very wealthy. For several months he has been annoyed by young Swingle, and on May 15th Swingle called Mr. Carver to the door of his home and fired a revolver in his face. Fortunately the shot went wild, and Swingle escaped. On June 5th a second attempt on Carver's life was made by Swingle and this time he was arrested.

The following officers were elected by the Continental Trust Company of Waco, Texas, at its stockholders' meeting last week: President, Judge Sam R. Scott; vice-presidents, W. E. Johnson, C. B. Reynolds, W. L. Saye, T. A. Caulfield; secretary, J. W. Dodson; treasurer, T. J. Primm; directors, Sam Sanger, M. Kendrick, J. R. Collier, W. E. Colgin, S. P. Ross, J. T. Smith, J. J. Dean, Dr. N. A. Olive.

A. B. Harvey, for many years a banker and merchant of Muscotah, Kan., died last week in his seventy-third year.

Senator L. P. King has retired as president of the Winfield State Bank of Winfield, Kan., and M. B. Light, former cashier, has been advanced to the presidency. Lewis Boys, who has been engaged in the banking business at Grenola, Kan., has taken the position formerly held by Mr. Light.

J. N. Dolley, state bank commissioner of Kansas, has announced that hereafter his department will be under civil service. Although Mr. Dolley is perhaps the most active politician in Kansas he declares that politics is a game that should be played outside of a business office. He says that he will refuse to appoint any employee in his department because of political friends or political pull.

B. L. Gill, commissioner of insurance and banking of Texas, is in Spokane, Wash., where he went to attend the annual convention of the National Association of Insurance Commissioners.

The Brazoria County State Bank of Angleton, Texas, has filed an amendment increasing its capital stock from $10,000 to $25,000.

Within the next ten days the city of Dallas, Texas, will place on the market about $1,000,000 in municipal bonds bearing 4½ per cent.

The following reserve agents for state banks were approved by the banking department of Texas: For the Centerville State Bank, the Guaranty State Bank and Trust Company of Dallas; for the Eagle Lake State Bank, the First National of Eagle Lake; for the Ballinger State Bank and Trust Company of Ballinger, the Guaranty State Bank and Trust Company of Dallas; for the Farmers and Merchants State Bank of Teague, the National Bank of Commerce of Houston; for the First State Bank of Tomball, the Guaranty State Bank and Trust Company of Dallas; for the Guaranty State Bank of Timpson, the National Bank of Commerce of Houston; for the State Bank of Sipe Springs, the Guaranty State Bank and Trust Company of Dallas; for the Spring State Bank of Spring, the National Bank of Commerce of Houston.

B. C. Howard of Kansas City has filed a suit in the federal court at Guthrie, Okla., asking for the appointment of a receiver for the Oklahoma State Bank of Sayre, Okla., and general accounting. Howard alleges that he is owner of $6,000 worth of stock but that he never received returns from the money invested. He charges in his petition that O. P. Jones, president, and A. G. Caldwell, a director, practiced fraud in closing up the affairs of the bank, which was liquidated some time ago.

A new bank to have a capital stock of $10,000 is being organized in Hollister, Mo. Those interested in the venture are erecting a new building which will be the bank's home.

The Paducah State Bank of Paducah, Texas, has been nationalized and hereafter it will be known as the First National Bank of Paducah. No change in the official roster has been made.

J. M. Johnson, who has had extensive banking experience in Illinois and Oklahoma, has opened an office in Oklahoma City where he will deal in school and municipal bonds and also mortgages and warrants.

NEW YORK

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Crop reports have moved E. W. Decker, president of the Northwestern National, to make predictions. He says that Minneapolis will be on the business map of the United States in capital letters this fall. "The whole country will hear about us," he added. "The city never had a greater chance to move itself into a new high place in commercial and financial importance, and it is going to do it." With indications for the greatest grain crop that has ever been raised and with little possibility of anything to happen to it, a basis is offered for what Mr. Decker says. He continued: "The bank deposits of Minneapolis will reach a new high total this fall and will run away over the former high at $106,000,000, probably touching the highest point in October. The bank clearings of 1912 will again pass the billion-dollar line, and in all probability will go well above the $1,145,000,000 which is now the record.

"The former record total of 156,000,000 bushels for Minneapolis grain receipts will be passed in the 1912 crop year. Manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers of Minneapolis will do the largest total volume of business ever done, as result of the 1912 harvest, and this will be felt this fall and in the early part of 1913. There will be a car shortage, and it may be of very serious proportions.

"The whole northwest is about to get the biggest return in quantity and in money value that it ever received from a crop, and there will be genuine prosperity. Unfavorable developments may yet come and it is possible for damage to result, but we believe that it is now too late for anything to occur that could materially change the situation and that no matter what now happens the country will have a good big crop."

New Minneapolis Bank

With $200,000 capital and $50,000 surplus, the latest of the Minneapolis banks has announced its coming opening Sept. 1st, the Commercial National. Application has been made for a charter and the organizers are to meet in a week to elect officers. Guy C. Landis, once cashier of the Flour City National, may be made cashier and vice-president. The bank is to fill a vacancy in the North of Hennepin wholesale and commission district. Among the organizers are: F. E. Kenaston, president of the Minneapolis Threshing Machine Company; Frank E. Holton, former cashier of the Northwestern National Bank; Isaac Lincoln, president of the First State Bank, Aberdeen, S. D.; S. J. Mealey, president of the State Bank of Monticello, Minn., and R. W. Akin, president of the First National Bank of Harvey, N. D., and also cashier of the First State Bank of Anoka, are among the incorporators. Others are J. S. Porteous of the Lumber Exchange Company, S. H. Bowman, S. E. Forest, H. F. Schultz, C. D. Lougee, A. J. Hogan and Guy C. Landis.

Farmers and Mechanics Savings to Pay 4% Interest

The Farmers and Mechanics Savings Bank has announced an increase in its interest rate from 3½ per cent to 4 per cent to take effect Jan. 1st on money deposited in the quarter beginning October 1st. Treasurer N. F. Hawley says:

"This is a mutual savings bank without stock or stockholders. Consequently, the assets and profits really belong to the depositors. Therefore, when a sufficient surplus is earned and the net profits of the bank warrant it, the depositors are entitled to an increase of the dividends or interest. In fact, it might be an injustice to the present depositors not to give them a larger proportion of the profits, which their money is earning.

"I regard this bank, with its more than 60,000 depositors, as a public and educational institution, whose principal business is to encourage the people of the city to acquire habits of thrift and saving and of accumulating money against a rainy day. The absolute safety of the principal of the depositor, of course, is the first consideration. After that the trustees of the bank should see that he receives the highest rate of interest warranted by safe banking methods.

"It is the purpose of the trustees to pay only such a rate of interest as is consistent with absolute safety, and to do so only during such time as the profits will justify. They are of the opinion, however, that the condition of the bank warrants the payment of 4 per cent to depositors and that they will still be able to add to the surplus of the bank."

A. A. Crane

Says A. A. Crane, vice-president of the Minneapolis First National: "Just let us have a few more days of this sort of weather and the farmers will be paying up all the money they have borrowed and putting a surplus in the bank. Much more of it will be spent for the things that go to make life happy on the farm."

At Wisconsin Convention

Bankers at the Wisconsin convention were: J. A. Latta, vice-president of the Northwestern National; Stanley Bezoier, assistant cashier Security National; E. L. Mattson, cashier Scandinavian American National; P. J. Lee-man, assistant cashier First National; George B. Lane, commercial paper.

Predicts Large Crop

M. P. Shumaker, president of the Bank of Billings; E. R. Shepherd, president of the Merchants National; Colonel A. L. Babcock, president of the Yellowstone; Chris Yegen, banker and general merchant of Billings; W. A. Selvidge, wholesale hardware dealer, have been visiting Chicago and the twin cities to look into the prospective for railroad development and for the increase of product outlet. "We are to have double the crop of last year," said Mr. Selvidge, "as double the acreage has been broken. We have 22,000 acres of sugar

New Bank at La Crescent

The La Crescent State Bank has been formed at La Crescent, Minn., with $10,000 capital. It principally will be a farmers' bank. A $3,000 building is to be erected. The city is across the river from La Crosse. At the election J. W. Welch was made president, Allan Cameron vice-president, and L. L. Atkinson, cashier. The board of directors is made of the following: A. Lilly, Allan Cameron, J. W. Welch, and J. H. Garber, New Albin. Mr. Garber, who is a banker in New Albin, was one of the prime movers in the organization of the new bank.

Among the New Banks

The Plum City State Bank, Wis., is incorporated with $10,000 capital. Incorporators are: J. G. Erickson, Albert Ingli, Julius Lewis, Jacob Hofmeister, Ben Fox, Geo. Gfall, M. Cotter, T. A. Terry, C. N. Freligh, Aug. Schwedir, Jacob Schnekloth, Math Giller, Sr.; Chas. Schnekloth, Karl Kramer, Jno. Plath, Sr.; Henry Suter, Theo Suter, J. S. Swanson, Thos Spiss, Wm. Hopham, J. E. Britton, Peter Krings, C. W. Britton, Louis Hofacker, all of Wisconsin, and Roy Quimby, of Minneapolis.

The Peoples State of North Mankato, Minn., has been organized. The capital is $15,000. John Struck, cashier of the State at Conger, Minn., is to be cashier.

The State Bank at Curtis, Clark county, Wis., has been authorized with $10,000 capital. F. W. Laabs is president and Glenn Reibsa-men is cashier.

Growth in Dairy Farming

Dairy farmers of Minnesota received the great total of $24,714,235.64 for butter fat in 1910, an increase of 33 1-3 per cent in two years. In a bulletin by Joel G. Winkjer, state dairy and food commissioner, the figures are set forth as attesting the remarkable growth of a great industry that has made Minnesota famous. In 1908 the fact that the money received by farmers of the state for butter fat had mounted to $18,500,000, coupled with the prediction that the $20,000,000 total would be reached within eighteen months thereafter, was considered a wonderful reflection of the growth of dairy farming. With the total as shown in the report, only slightly under $25,000,000 for 1910, the increase is found to have exceeded all expectation. More than 800 creameries are embraced in the report. They stand for about 80,000 farmers and 800,000 dairy cows.

Crop Money

Regarding crop money, E. W. Decker says: "While I have no doubt there will be money enough to move the crops the demand will be exceedingly large and rates will range strong from between 5 and 6 per cent. This will place loans back at normal, where they have not been for a year or so. We shall soon get money from the rye and barley crop, which is nearly all harvested. In three weeks the deposits of Minneapolis banks will begin to increase. The money to move the first crop will be furnished largely by the country banks, while the receipts from rye and barley will enable us to furnish the money to move the wheat, oats and flax crops, especially that portion of them to be harvested in the Dakotas."

Capital Doubled

J. J. Flanagan, president of the Stock Yards National, South St. Paul, announces the doubling of the bank's capital to $100,000 has been authorized. The surplus will provide the new funds. The bank will build.

John L. Proctor Made National Bank Examiner

John L. Proctor, formerly of the First National clerical force in Minneapolis, later special accountant for the department of justice heading from Washington, has been appointed national bank examiner. This appointment is the result of a new policy of providing additional examiners.

Mr. Proctor is about thirty years of age and has had some years of banking experience. He had various clerical positions with the Nicollet National Bank of Minneapolis, and the Minneapolis First National from 1898 to 1907. From April to December, 1907, he acted as assistant to the national bank examiner from the Pittsburg district and after that up to April, 1909, was employed as assistant and auditor to the receiver of the Farmers and Drovers' National Bank of Waynesburg, Pa. Since 1909, Mr. Proctor has been a special accountant in the department of justice, in which position he has made special examinations of investigations of criminal violations of the national banking act.

Banking Notes

A 50 per cent payment has been made to depositors of the Henderson State Bank of Washington, S. D., which closed its doors a few months ago. It is hoped to pay the remainder by fall.

The State Bank of South Shore, S. D. has been closed temporarily on account of the suicide of R. H. Williams, cashier, who was found to have been an embezzler. The bank is little affected.

The First State Bank of Makoti, N. D., is chartered. Aug. Peterson, R. W. Akin, L. E. Linder, Geo. Krueger and others.

D. E. Coffey, cashier of the Gregory County State Bank, Fairfax, S. D., stopped in Sioux City Tuesday on his way home from Mitchell, South Dakota.

Kenneth Clark, president of the Merchants' National, has been elected first vice-president of the Wilder Charities, St. Paul, to succeed the late George C. Power, president of the Second National. The board passed resolutions on Mr. Power's death.

A. M. Knight, sixty-nine years old, in 1874 founder of the Bank of McLeod at Glencoe, Minn., manager of the bank for twenty years, died at Sisseton, S. D., where he was in business.

Plans are under way for reorganizing the Bank of Commerce, Winnebago, Minn., which recently suspended, with good prospects of success.

Fred Kron was elected vice-president of the Mankato State Bank, succeeding the late Frank Fowler.

ONE BY FRED W. ELLSWORTH

Following is a pretty good one by F. W. Ellsworth of New York, who has been telling it at a number of bankers' conventions. If you've heard F. W. speak it, pass on:

This is a story about Zeno. Zeno was a colored man who had a savings account in a bank in a southern city years ago, before the days of modern banking laws. One day the bank failed and Zeno was naturally very much perturbed (he didn't know it by that name, but the effect was just the same). He hung around the door of the bank without any real notion of why he was doing it, but simply to be near his money. The receiver one day, as he came out of the door, asked Zeno why he stayed so close to the bank all the time.

"Kaze I'ze got some money in dat 'ar bank an' ah wants to git it."

"Well," replied the receiver, "don't you know that the bank has to be thoroughly examined before any of the depositors can get their money?"

"Dat's all right," said Zeno, "but ah jes' nacherally wants mah money."

"Of course you do," responded the receiver, "but you know that you can't get it until everything is straightened up. You know that banks have failed before. This isn't the first time that a bank has busted."

"Shore ah knows dat; I'ze heard tell o' banks bustin' before dis, but dis here am de fust time dat a bank has ever busted right squah in mah face." (Laugh here.)

The examination of the bank went on and ultimately the receiver announced that the depositors would be paid off and in alphabetical order. Unfortunately some mistake had been made in the figuring and when they got down to the W's the money gave out and Zeno lost his savings.

This experience, however, did not entirely discourage him, for after several months he had managed to save up some more money, and he took it over to another bank, where he was known, and told the cashier he would like to open up a savings account. The cashier was agreeable, and said, "All right, Zeno, we will be glad to open an account for you."

"Zeno nothin'," said the darkey, "mah name aint Zeno no more, mah name's Aaron."

J. C. Russell, cashier of the State Bank of Penalosa, Kan., has gone on a month's vacation to the Atlantic coast.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane, Wash.—Bankers of Spokane and of Washington generally are getting behind the agricultural education movement in the state and are seeking the co-operation of H. B. Dewey, state superintendent of education. W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National Bank, and a member of the national committee on agricultural education, is stirring up enthusiasm in the movement, and George P. Wiley, cashier of the Waterville Savings Bank, is also doing good work along the same lines. In reply to a recent request from Wiley for an outline of the means of co-operation between bankers and the department of education Superintendent Dewey points out the following:

1. Aid in securing the passage of the Smith-Lever bill now pending in congress providing for government aid in establishing demonstration farms throughout the country.

2. Aid in securing the passage of the Page bill, providing for aid for normal schools and colleges preparing persons for special work as instructors in agriculture, manual arts, household economics and extension work, etc.

3. Aid in establishment and maintenance of many demonstration farms in this state under supervision of the state college. Several of these farms have been established in different parts of the state, but there ought to be a hundred or several hundred. The persons in charge of the demonstration farms should co-operate with the public schools in securing and directing school and home gardens and in assisting teachers of agriculture.

4. The entrance requirements of the higher institutions of learning in this state should be so modified that any student who has completed four years' work in agriculture or manual arts or commercial branches may have full recognition given for such work, provided the total credits for industrial work do not exceed four credits in all.

5. The state department should have at least two special rural school supervisors, who should know rural life and be in sympathy with boys and girls; understand scientific farming and the best means of teaching it; know every section of the state; work for consolidation of schools; assist in rural supervision and organizing contests.

6. The status of the county superintendent is exceedingly unsatisfactory in this state. He draws a lower salary than those he supervises, and is limited to two years' service. The removal of the two-term limit by adopting the constitutional amendment next November will help. Increase his salary. Provide a system of effective rural school supervision. Have a board of education select the county superintendent, as in the case of the city superintendents.

7. Oppose any effort to establish separate agricultural high schools. Every high school should offer courses in agriculture as in languages, science, history or mathematics.

Emphasizing the need of special rural school supervisors Superintendent Dewey suggests that the bankers secure immediately the services of one or two men for this work. Two years ago $10,000 was asked of the legislature for rural school extension and only $1,750 was appropriated, which is the only appropriation ever made directly for rural school extension. That money was used for preparing plans and specifications for one, two, three and four room school houses, with or without manual training annex, and plans for a separate manual training and domestic science building.

The recommendations will doubtless be taken up at a meeting of the executive committee of the Washington State Bankers Association in the near future.

TO ADOPT GROUP SYSTEM

San Francisco, July 29.—At a special meeting of the executive council of the California Bankers Association a plan of operation was adopted for inaugurating in California the "group system" of banks, which is now in effect in many other states. The council arranged for the maintenance of headquarters for the convenience of California bankers who attend the convention of the American Bankers Association at Detroit in September. A special excursion to the convention has been arranged, leaving San Francisco August 31st via Canadian Pacific Railway, stops being made en route at various resorts, including Glacier, Field, Lake Louise and Banf.

The California Bankers Association comprises nearly all of the principal banking institutions in the state, fifteen banks having joined during the last two months. The report of the protective committee showed that since the annual convention held at Long Beach last May there have been reported eighteen criminal cases in which member banks have been defrauded. In connection with these nine persons have already been apprehended, six of whom are awaiting trial, three having been convicted and sentenced.

LOS ANGELES PLANS MUNICIPAL BANKS

Los Angeles, Cal.—The Los Angeles charter revision commission is considering innovations for the proposed new charter that will give the instrument a claim upon the attention of the country.

Among other things, it is proposed to incorporate provisions for ownership and operation by the city of banks, dairies, cheese factories, undertaking establishments, pawn shops, theatres, with sufficient additional latitude to permit almost all other pursuits and transactions for the promotion of the public health, morals, education and welfare, or for the amusement, recreation and entertainment or benefit of the people.

The plan is to adopt the commission form of government. Seven commissioners are to be elected, not to any specific positions, but to be assigned after their election to the heads of the various departments by the mayor, who is to be selected by the seven from among themselves after they are elected.

MISSISSIPPI NEEDS A NEW BANKING LAW

Mississippi papers are citing recent bank failures as the best evidence of the need of better banking laws. Five state bank failures have occurred since the adjournment of the legislative session at which a bill providing an adequate system of supervision and inspection of banking institutions was defeated.

Under existing statutes the state offers insufficient protection against wild-cat banking. The only semblance of supervision is the statute requiring the filing of statements with the auditor of public accounts, not exceeding four times per year, but the auditor has no means of ascertaining the accuracy of the statements filed. Each of the five banks that have passed into the hands of receivers during the past few months had filed statements with the auditor, only a few weeks prior to closing their doors, purporting to show that they were in solvent condition. The defeat of the state banking bill in the legislature was largely due to jealousy between members who had framed bills on the subject.

RAILROAD FOR EDMONTON

Edmonton, Alta., July 25.—Forty engineering crews, consisting of 800 men with teams and pack horses, will be sent into the field at once to make preliminary surveys for the Northern Territorial Railway Company's line from Edmonton to tide water at Fort Churchill on Hudson's Bay. This is to be part of a system of 1,450 miles, from the Hudson's Bay country to Port Essington on the Pacific coast, connecting Edmonton with Lac La Biche, Fort McMurray and Lake Athabasca. H. G. H. Neville, C. E., chief engineer for the company, which is financed by a British syndicate and capitalized at $40,000,000, has covered every portion of the proposed route and is fully satisfied with the engineering problems presented in the construction of the system. The route thus is described in the charter granted by the Dominion government, which gives bonding powers amounting to $40,000 a mile:

"From a point at or near Fort Churchill or Fort Nelson on the Hudson's Bay, thence westerly to a point on the north side of Wollaston, in the province of Saskatchewan, thence westerly to a point at or near the south shore of Lake Athabasca, in the province of Alberta, thence westerly and north of the Peace River block, thence southwesterly by the nearest possible route through the Rocky Mountains to a point on the Pacific coast at or near Port Essington, at or near the Portland Canal, and from a point on the said railway near the crossing of the Athabasca River, in the province of Alberta, southerly to a point at or near Fort McMurray, thence southerly to a point at or near Lac La Biche, thence by the most feasible route to the city of Edmonton."

Plans are under way to begin grading work early next season, when the laying of rails also will be carried on, and in two years, according to present calculations, the line is to be in operation from Edmonton to the shore of Lake Athabasca, opening to commercial development the vast mineral and timber wealth of Alberta's farthest north. The company then will proceed with the construction of the line in the province of Saskatchewan. The Edmonton cut-off will be built later. The line from Lake Athabasca westerly will tap the rich agricultural resources of the newest north, continuing thence to the Pacific coast. The Northern Territorial Railway Company will operate a line of steamships from its Hudson's Bay terminal to a British port. Engineers in the employ of the corporation have made a study of the construction of the ice-breakers in the Baltic and now are working on designs of vessels capable of meeting the abnormal conditions which prevail in the bay. They also will superintend the building of the fleet. The completion of the railroad means the opening of a vast empire, which only a few years ago was regarded as a barren waste and useful only as a hunting ground for the fur-trader and the sportsman. The railway will criss-cross the northern part of the province of Alberta with development lines and shift its center of gravity and of population many miles northward, and with the development of the resources of the Athabasca country there will be created populous towns and cities and the establishment of manufactories on the rim of the Arctic Circle, reclaiming a veritable wilderness to the uses of man. Another important outlet for the north country is a system projected by the Alberta, Peace River and Eastern Railway Company, capitalized at $10,000,000 under a charter granted by the Dominion government in 1910. H. Muskett King, president of the corporation, now on the way to London to confer with British capitalists interested in the enterprise, said in the course of an interview while in Edmonton:

"I am greatly impressed with the country and its possibilities. I have spent a month looking it over and it is all and much more than I was told about it. The railroad is going through."

The route for which the charter was granted begins at the international boundary, southeast of Pincher Creek, Alta., and runs thence to Pincher Creek thence northerly and west of Pigeon Lake, west of Edmonton, and thence to the heart of the Peace River country, and from there directly east to a point on Hudson's Bay, also westward from Fort McMurray to Peace River landing and to the Pacific coast. The present charter is a combination of routes previously chartered under the Dominion and provincial governments. Charters for practically the same route, with the exception of the easterly portion, from the Peace River country to Hudson's Bay, are held by the Canadian Northern and the Alberta Pacific companies, which, however, have not done any of the construction work called for under their charters. The provincial government of Alberta already has guaranteed the bonds covering that portion of the line of the Alberta, Peace River and Eastern Railway between Pincher Creek and a point west of Edmonton. Premier Sifton, when seen at the government building to-day, expressed the opinion that 600 more miles of railway will be in operation at the opening of the next session of the legislature than when the last session was prorogued. This estimate, he added, does not include the mileage on the main lines of the transcontinental roads, now building westward, which may be completed and in readiness for freight and passenger traffic in the meantime. Premier Sifton would not say where the lines will run. However, he intimated that they will traverse undeveloped country, saying also that numerous new towns will dot the map. The additional mileage is composed solely of lines for which the province of Alberta guaranteed bonds in the acts passed by the last legislature.

WILMINGTON TRUST COMPANY

Wilmington, Del.—Having completed its consolidation with the National Bank of Wilmington and Brandywine and the First National Bank, the Wilmington Trust Company has reorganized by electing George S. Capelle, chairman of the board of directors; James P. Winchester, president, succeeding T. Coleman du Pont, who resigned; Caleb M. Sherward, vice-president; Henry Bush, secretary, succeeding Harlan G. Scott, resigned.

B. M. Chattell

Bertram M. Chattell, cashier of the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, died on Saturday of last week at his residence at 4932 Lake Avenue. Mr. Chattell was known internationally as a keen judge of financial values. He was educated in Chicago public schools, and at the old Chicago University. In June, 1882, he entered the employ of the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank in the lowest position in the institution. He had worked at higher positions, but decided to learn the banking business, and wanted to start at the bottom. His determination and his faithful service soon gained him promotion. Within a few years he was advanced to assistant cashier, and in 1902 was made cashier. He has since held that position. Mr. Chattell was a member of the Union League, University, South Shore Country, North Shore, Germania, and the Calumet Country Clubs.

NEW HEAD OF NEVADA BANKS

San Francisco, July 30.—It is reported here that George Winfield, the Nevada mining man who recently was offered and who refused a United States senatorship to succeed the late Senator Nixon, will accept the presidency of the four banks of which Senator Nixon was the chief executive. The banks are in Winnemucca, Carson and Tonopah. Winfield is at present head of the Consolidated Mining Company of Goldfield and the Nevada Hills Mining Company. He also is president of the John S. Cook Bank of Goldfield.

BANK RECEIVER PLANS DIVIDEND

Carson City, Nev.—Another dividend of 10 cents on the dollar will be declared in a short time by Frank Wildes, receiver for the State Bank and Trust Co., as a result of the settlement of the litigation against the directors for the lump sum of $75,000. The litigation against the directors was one of the most expensive matters in connection with the liquidation of the debts of the defunct company. Receiver Wildes states that he believes with this stumbling block out of the way that the dividends will follow each other quite rapidly and that the affairs of the defunct institution will be wound up in a satisfactory manner.

Accounts of Iowa banks invited. Reserve agents for national banks

The Guaranty State Bank and Trust Company of Dallas, Texas, has increased its capital stock from $400,000 to $600,000. The stock was sold at 120, having been oversubscribed by the stockholders of the bank. The increase was made necessary by expansion of business.

Des Moines, August 1.—The Iowa Bankers Association is going to join actively in a movement started by the booster organizations of Des Moines for an Iowa Crop Service which purposes to spend $300,000 in aiding and improving the crop output of Iowa. The Greater Des Moines committee and the Commercial Club have taken active charge of the proposed bureau. Prof. P. G. Holden, noted seed corn expert and defeated candidate for governor at the republican primaries, has been put in charge of the service. A provisional committee has been named and P. W. Hall, secretary of the Iowa Bankers Association, is chairman of this provisional committee. The backers of the movement have been promised certain amounts of money from the National Crop Bureau, the railroads and others interested in crop development contingent upon the amount that will be secured in Iowa. Secretary Hall will urge upon Iowa bankers the importance of joining enthusiastically. He will send out letters showing how scientific co-operation of the sort proposed in Iowa has added to the wealth of other states in a marvelous manner. Secretary Hall is alive to the subject of adding to Iowa's wealth via the farm route. It is proposed to spend $3,000 in each county in Iowa. This will be used in sending experts into the various communities to take active charge of the crop planting and harvesting. The various schools will be aided in teaching agricultural methods and it is thought that beyond a doubt, the results will be seen when Iowa begins to reap the benefits of her tremendous crop outputs in the fall. So far as this year is concerned, the crop prospects in Iowa are magnificent. It is predicted that every record will be broken and bankers are optimistic in their predictions that Iowa is going to have the best fall and winter in the history of the state.

Will Attend Agricultural Conference

In the meantime the agriculture committee of the I. B. A. is planning to attend the annual conference on agriculture at Minneapolis, August 7th and 8th. This committee consists of C. H. McNider of Mason City, chairman; P. W. Hall, Des Moines; J. L. Edwards, Burlington; J. A. Dunlap, Keokuk; C. A. Larson, New Hampton. Prof. Holden will be urged to accompany the Iowa delegation and the work of the Iowa Crop Service will be studied and inquired about as compared to what Minnesota and other states have done.

Large Purchase of Bank Stock

Announcement has been made in Des Moines of the purchase of more than 2,000 shares of the Iowa Loan and Trust Company by G. B. Hippee. There are 5,000 shares issued, and Mr. Hippee and Mr. Simon Casady, president of the Central State Bank, now control the institution. It is understood that the price was near the half million mark. Mr. Hippee has been negotiating with eastern stockholders for some time past. The Iowa Loan and Trust is capitalized at $500,000 with a surplus of $700,000 and the stock is quoted at $240 per share. The company engages in a general banking business as well as in the investment in mortgages and the dealing in bonds, and it has deposits of over $2,000,000. The company was organized in 1872 and has made a splendid growth. George M. Hippee, father of the purchaser of the stock, was at one time connected in an official way with the institution.

Increase in State Tax Levy

Iowa's new tax law, which places a flat rate on moneys and credits, is held responsible for an increase in the state levy this year of .1 mill. The executive council in fixing the tax rate put the state levy at 3.4 mills instead of 3.3 mills as formerly. The members declared that the revenues of the state have fallen off $73,000 under the new moneys and credits law and that the .1 mill increase will bring in $73,120, thus making up for the amount lost under the new system of taxing. The total taxable value of Iowa property is given at $724,208,579, as against an actual value of $2,864,832,316. The executive council deliberated long over the railroad assessments but finally ended by increasing this source of revenue only $100,000 on all roads.

Promote New Railroad

Avery Bush, well known banker at Osage, has started the ball rolling for a new railroad between Mason City and Osage with a donation of $1,000. The solicitors secured $5,000 in a short time and it is anticipated that the entire fund will be secured shortly. There are some live wires at both Mason City and Osage and they are bent upon securing the improvement.

Another Bank for Des Moines

According to all reports Des Moines is to have another bank and possibly two. The G. B. Hippee-H. H. Polk interests, it is said, contemplate establishing a bank on the second floor of the new twelve-story building which they are constructing at Sixth and Mulberry streets, Des Moines. Mr. Polk when asked about the proposition stated that such a project is under consideration. The other projected bank is to be installed, according to reports, in the new Silverberg & Lince Story block now being erected at Fifth and Walnut. This second bank is in a more intangible state than the Hippee-Polk proposed institution.

Rapid Progress on Bank Buildings

Work is progressing rapidly on the three new bank buildings that are in course of preparation in Des Moines. The Central State and the new Mechanics Savings across from it are running a race with the Central State likely to be finished first, possibly by the first of September. The Mechanics expects to be in its new home by October first. The new Iowa Trust and Savings building in East Des Moines is also being pushed along at a rate that insures its occupancy before snow flies. President MacKinnon of the Mechanics is announcing a sort of "kitchenette" establishment in the basement where the employees may retire on cold winter days to prepare a meal that will save them going out into the cold. There will also be a gymnasium and shower bath arrangement. These improvements are new for banks but Mr. MacKinnon believes they will be popular adjuncts.

Forgers Busy

The dull summer months seem to be having no deterrent effect upon the forgers who are roaming about Iowa. Secretary P. W. Hall has received more than the ordinary number of complaints about petty forgeries in the state—and some that are not petty. Last week a check was found in the Citizens National of Des Moines for $750, passed by one W. H. Harter upon the First National at Rock Rapids. It had safely passed through two or three banks without detection and had been cashed in a town in Kansas. A man named C. H. Dunn has also been reaping a big harvest in the smaller towns of the state. It was reported to Secretary Hall that Mr. Dunn was successful in cashing checks for $125 each at Red Oak, Malvern and Shenandoah. Mr. Dunn was a traveling man who had been making these towns. He was discharged. Mr. Hall was notified, and called upon the various banks where he was known with spurious checks before completing his territory.

Iowa Banks Prosperous

Bank deposits of Iowa banks have increased $28,931,971.87 in the period from May 29, 1911, to June 29, 1912. The net increase in the number of banks is thirty-two.

Iowa Bank Changes Management

J. S. Hermesen succeeds B. G. Ensign as president of the State Bank of Neola, Iowa, and James Shaff has been appointed cashier to succeed Mr. Hermesen, who formerly occupied that position. Mr. Shaff came from Underwood, where he was cashier of the Underwood Savings Bank.

Iowa Banking Notes

Black Hawk county bankers are taking an active part in the Bull Moose party proceedings in Iowa. At the state Bull Moose convention held at Des Moines last week, Emmons, Johnson, president of the Waterloo Savings and the Johnson & Leavitt Trust Company, was named presidential elector for the third district. L. H. Paulger of the Security National of Cedar Falls was made third district committeeman. It is said that there were many bankers among the delegates who assembled at the Coliseum to cheer for the Bull Moose.

John Elliott, cashier of the Commercial Savings, Des Moines, is the happy father of his first offspring—a handsome daughter born last week. A. L. Hagerm, president of the bank, is the new arrival's grandpa.

The comptroller of the currency has approved the organization of the National Bank of Milton at Milton, Iowa. The capital stock is $50,000. The organizers are H. C. Tyler, H. C. Hill, E. E. Hoskins and S. F. McConnell. The new institution succeeds the Farmers and Merchants.

The Cerro Gordo State at Clear Lake has increased its capital stock to $50,000.

Rev. E. T. Gruwell, one of the well known Methodist ministers of the state, is resigning his pastorate to engage in the banking business in Montana. He is at present a stockholder in banks at Hampton and Union.

The Gilman Savings has filed articles with the secretary of state. The capital stock is $15,000. C. H. Seager is president; J. A. Ward, vice-president; W. W. Immler, cashier.

Henry Koehler, Jr., formerly a banker at Davenport, died in the East and was buried at Davenport. He was in business at St. Louis at the time of his death.

Emil C. Johnson, clerk of the Iowa Trust and Savings at Des Moines, died in the Methodist hospital of appendicitis one day last week. Young Johnson was only 18 years of age and gave promise of being a good banker.

J. T. Jenkins, head of the Swaledale Savings Bank, has been critically ill in a hospital at St. Paul and at this writing is in a critical condition.

A new bank at Crawfordsville is to be organized soon, according to reports, to consolidate with the First Savings. Henry Crooks and Harvey Barnes are active in the new institution.

The Bank of Percival has changed its name to the Percival Bank.

W. J. McChesney, president of the First National and of the Farmers Loan and Trust at Iowa City, has resigned as secretary of the University of Iowa. He remains as treasurer, however. Mr. McChesney found that business affairs demanded his entire time.

By JOHN J. BIDDISON.

The decision of Circuit Judge Rice holding invalid the criminal clause in the state banking law passed in 1909 has caused a furore in South Dakota, his ruling arising from the quashing of indictments found against officials of the Meade County Bank, recently failed. As a result of this ruling, State's Attorney Claude C. Gray, of Sturgis, S. D., has announced his intention of appealing to the supreme court for a reversal. In this connection, he says:

"Owing to the far reaching effect of the decision and its extremely important bearing upon the standing of every state bank in the state of South Dakota, notwithstanding the fact that it places the burden and expense upon Meade county to obtain a final decision, I feel it to be my duty and an obligation which I owe to the 2,300 depositors of the Meade County Bank, and all the depositors in state banks throughout the state generally, to obtain the judgment of the supreme court.

"If the decision of Judge Rice is sustained, it renders absolutely void every criminal provision in the banking act of 1909, which contains the only criminal provisions against illegal and unlawful banking in this state. Not only does it invalidate those criminal statutes, but it renders void dozens of criminal statutes enacted as parts of civil laws respecting various rights and providing for punishment for many wrongs, both public and private.

"The decision is one of the most far reaching that has been rendered in South Dakota for many years. Its effect is to permit the unscrupulous banker to play with the confidence of the public and go unpunished.

"No stone will be left unturned to have the Rice decision reversed."

South Dakota Banks

The South Dakota state bank examiner's report shows that the total amount of money on deposit in the banks of the state for the quarter ending June 14th is $3,182,245.58 less than on deposit at the end of the quarter ending April 18th.

This increase is explained by the fact that right now is the season between the spending of money for the year's expenses and the getting in of the proceeds of the coming crop.

That bank deposits will take a decided boost in the next three months is undoubted, as South Dakota is facing the greatest year she ever saw, unless too abundant rains spoil the excellent showing for small grain. Even now much of it is out of harm's way and a few days of wind and hot sun will dry out the grain from the effects of the recent heavy rain.

The greatest decrease in the profits over the preceding quarter is shown in the deposits of the state banks. Here the decrease alone amounts to $1,219,372.43. Of this amount the decrease under the heading, deposits subject to check, is $975,452.15.

That the condition of the national banks is shown to be improved is manifested by the reports which show that the United States deposits for this quarter exceed those of the past quarter by $3,400.72. The total decrease of liabilities of this quarter over last is $1,149,193.59. The total decrease of the liabilities is $2,159,126.48.

Undivided Profits Subject to Taxation

The undivided profits of banks in Rapid City, S. D., are to be made subject to taxation, according to a decision reached by the county board of commissioners there. By this ruling, the four banks of the town will pay taxes on about $400,000 of property that hitherto has escaped levy. The First National and the Pennington County banks are the principal ones to feel the effect of the commission's action. They will pay the tax under protest and appeal to the state board of equalization. Rapid City is said to be the only town in the state where that practice is followed.

Banker Receives Medal

Walter H. Kupfer, assistant cashier of a bank at Dallas, S. D., has just received from the government a bronze medal in commemoration of his service in the Philippines.

Minister to Be a Banker

From the ministry to the banking business is the jump contemplated by Rev. E. T. Gruell, superintendent of the Cedar Rapids district of the Methodist Episcopal church of Iowa, according to a prevalent rumor that the Rev. Mr. Gruell has not yet seen fit to deny. It is reported that he will hand in his resignation at the next session of the annual conference, in September, and go into business in a Montana town.

New Building

Work has been started on a new building for the First National Bank of Hartington, Neb., a two-story pressed brick structure, the upper floor of which will be occupied by the Masonic Lodge.

He was interested in political affairs, having served his city as mayor for several terms and his county as a representative in the general assembly, and was reputed to be worth $500,000.

ing method of leaving such matters in the hands of representatives? Very true, but will the proposed remedy better the condition? Will it not rather make it worse? In sickness we employ experts; if they fail to do well we do not abandon them for the blacksmith or the horse doctor, but call in other experts whom we hope will prove more skilful.

All the important transactions requiring skill are placed in the hands of experts; why does not this follow in regard to such matters as the adoption or rejection of proposed laws?

We must change our careless attitude toward our legislators and get better ones. There is no royal road to good government, just as there is none to learning. There is a certain amount of political activity which we must all exercise, because our government is based on general suffrage, and we must arouse ourselves if we wish not merely to better things, but to keep them from growing worse!

To escape from the party boss the party primary has been devised. Anything to eliminate the boss, was the cry. It would seem that any change from him must be for the better.

We have had it a few years in Chicago and its friends are not now so confident. Instead of the office seeking the man, which, by the way, is something of a joke, any man can run in the primary. In our judicial nominations we would prefer the boss. The boss and his lieutenants were limited in number; they were known, could be entreated, warned or threatened not to give the judicial nomination to so and so. Leading lawyers could and did protest. The bosses wanted a ticket which would win, and they were told that some candidates were ineligible, and they often took note. Now at a recent primary, for illustration, take one of the party tickets; there were about forty self-selected candidates—most of them "to fortune and to fame unknown"—many of them too well known to inspire confidence. It was an embarrassing thing for a lawyer of this party to pick out the nine or ten from the bunch for his selection, and how much more difficult for the average voter to whom the names were entirely unknown!

The primary entails an enormous expense on the candidate who goes in to win. There is no party back of him at this time. Circulars, letters, placards, bands of music, halls for his speeches, traveling expenses, press notices, etc., swell up a large bill. For a prominent office in a statewide primary a barrel of money is necessary.

The boss can be, and many times has been, beaten and ruined by the activity of indignant citizens who combine together. He thrives on the sloth of the voter. But we cannot get along without party leaders; let us see to it that they are worthy.

Oberholzer on the Referendum, p. 506, says: "The conclusions of Woodrow Wilson are those of other candid and qualified students of the subjects." He adds:

"The vote upon most measures submitted to the ballot is usually very light; there is not much popular discussion, and the referendum by no means creates that quick interest in affairs which its originators had hoped to see it excite. It has dulled the sense of responsibility among legislators without, in fact, quickening the people to the exercise of any real control in affairs. * * * Where it (the initiative) has been employed it has not promised either progress or enlightenment, leading rather to doubtful experiments and to reactionary displays of prejudice than to really useful legislation. * * * A government must have organs; it cannot act inorganically by masses. It must have a law-making body; it can no more make law through its voters than it can make law through its newspapers."

Another new idea is the recall. In legislative matters it is hardly worth while. The legislator is in for so short a time that he can be marked for slaughter at the next election. You can hardly shorten his term by a recall. There is an objection to the recall that it puts a man on trial before a jury which cannot, if it would, hear the evidence: it may throw him out of office and disgrace him when his sole misdeed is that there has been a temporary swing of the political pendulum away from the party that elected him.

As to judicial offices it is hardly worth while to point out that it sometimes becomes the highest duty of a judge to disappoint popular desires; he is then to be disgraced by a removal and notice served on his successor that to hold that office the judge must keep his ear to the ground to catch the rumble of popular favor! If there be any method more ingenious for debasing the judiciary it has not yet been called to public attention. It may be that improvements will obtain for the practical work of impeachment of all officials; the present method of impeachment seems clumsy and inoperative.

This may look like a pessimistic view to take of our public affairs, and may seem to show a lack of sympathy for the remedies which of late have been offered by many men who are apparently in earnest and are asking support because of their good intentions. It cannot be helped. A reformer gone wrong in his views may do more mischief to his country by his bad advice than the professional grafter. The Boss Tweed of politics finally will come to grief but meantime the community has lost millions by his stealings. The injudicious reformer is hard to combat because we recognize his good intentions and he arouses our sympathy, but he may undermine the foundations of the government before he is through!

Oberholzer on the Referendum, p. 500, says: "It was Rousseau who desired to simplify government and legislate by an unchecked convention, in order to bring the state back to a condition as near as possible to that ideal original form in which the citizens met together under an oak tree and made their own laws. John Adams and other patriots in this country successfully combatted such theories in the American states and organized a government of checks and balances. We in America, however, have so organized the state that the people as a mass do not draft their own laws, or generally adopt them. They do not in a body execute or administer the laws; nor again do they interpret them and adjust conflicting interests in the courts of justice. All these functions adhere to representatives whom the people themselves elect, or who are chosen at second hand by agents directly elected by the people."

There is a ray of light to be found in the practical good which voluntary societies have done and are doing in checking up unworthy representatives, exposing their misdeeds and not only suggesting better men but working for them. I refer again to such bodies as the Municipal Voters League and the Legislative Voters League. Such societies furnish an example of what may be done. They are a rallying point for the well disposed and they do the work for the individual voter which he is incapable of doing singly. It is certainly incumbent on every voter to strengthen the power of organizations of this character. They are disinterested in their labors and their good advice has produced great results.

We have shown how it has been made impossible for the poor man to go into legislative work. The result of our inability to enlist the man of means is presented in a recent valuable work entitled "Life of Alexander Hamilton," by Francis Scott Oliver, an Englishman. He says Hamilton was justly accused of being an aristocrat, and adds:

"As a matter of logic the democratic argument is conclusive; as a matter of history it is nonsense. The principle of aristocracy in a popular government is a very practical device for making use of the upper classes. We use ours while the Americans waste theirs. Titles and primogeniture may be absurd, but the fact remains that the wealthier classes in Britain recognize a public duty attaching to their position while in the United States they do not. The tradition of great English families, and of those whose ambition is to become great, is service to the state in peace and war. The tradition of great families in the Republic as yet, in the nature of things, is less defined; but so far as may be judged by a foreigner, it seems for the most part unconcerned with the duties of government, and is tending more and more toward the acquisition of commercial influence upon a scale such as the world has never before seen. The public spirit of a wealthy citizen is measured by huge donations rather than by loyal service. They appear to entertain a cockney confidence that every obligation can be discharged by the signing of a cheque. The conspicuous virtue in the one case is honor, in the other enterprise and industry; but if in a purely practical spirit we endeavor to compute the advantage to the state, everything is on the side of Britain, from the government of a parish to the councils of the nation."

Certainly we have not, as he says, the benefit of the public service of the best and most intelligent of our citizens. How can we acquire it? We sadly, imperatively need it. By reason of our parsimony we keep out the services of the worthy but poor men, and we do not make official position attractive to the man of means who is otherwise qualified. In process of time, when the people are awakened to the necessity, we may conclude to give pecuniary reward for our legislators sufficient to enable a poor man to undertake the work. In the meantime can we not stimulate the patriotism of those able to endure the burden, to go into public life? As the offices are filled by better men the positions will be regarded with more respect and there will follow a greater willingness to assume the task.

We have as a people made no organized effort to improve the character of our representatives. We have contented ourselves with denunciation. To accept the conclusion of many critics that the legislator is hopelessly incorrigible is to admit the failure of democratic government. We cannot afford to make any such admission. Is it not better to resolve solemnly that we will address ourselves to curing this acknowledged evil by attacking it directly, than to embark on these hazardous experiments that are so repugnant to our settled convictions of conserving our constitutional safeguards and restrictions?

Oberholzer on the Referendum, p. 504, says: "The Portland Oregonian, a leading newspaper of the state, at first favorable to the new system of law-making, said in 1908:

"That both initiative and referendum within proper limits might be useful was the belief of large numbers who joined in voting for their adoption, yet who did not foresee that they would fall into the hands of faddists, sophists, schemers, doctrinaires of all sorts, who would appeal to them against representative government and methods of ordinary legislation. They were adopted under the impression that they were to be the medicine of the constitution cautiously administered when occasion might require; not its daily bread. * * * They encourage every group of hobbyists, every lot of people burning with whimsical notions, to propose initiative measures or to interpose objections through referendum appeals. They have the effect practically of abolishing constitution and laws altogether; or, at least, of keeping people who would defend the stability and orderly progress of society always on guard, always under arms for their defense."

Why cannot we reorganize the personnel of our legislatures; why cannot we bend our energies to urging better talent to accept such offices; why cannot we broaden the area of available candidates by offering greater rewards both of pay and honor, instead of reducing the acknowledged low grade we now have by diminishing the duties and responsibilities of the position?

May we not, can we not lend a hand? Do we not see that grave peril awaits? Shall we not do something to arouse ourselves and our neighbors to our public duties? Can we not encourage those among us who have the means and the leisure, to consider that public service will be sweeter in its reward than the heaping up of wealth? Can we not help to denounce the local grafter and push him aside, not for a time, but forever?

We need good and wise men at the front. We must not be disheartened. The words of that great English friend of our country, found in the preface of his work on The Commonwealth, should give us encouragement. He calls ours The Land of the Future. He says:

"A hundred times in writing this book have I been disheartened by the facts I was stating. A hundred times has the recollection of the abounding strength and vitality of the nation chased away the tremors."

With warnings from many directions coming through the air, we must not, we cannot, we shall not allow incompetent seamen to drive our great Ship of State against the icebergs!

BANK NOTE 500 YEARS OLD

Philadelphia, Pa., July 31.—The subtreasury here has just received with an application for redemption a Chinese bank note, which is more than 500 years old. The note was issued during the Ming dynasty, in the reign of the Emperor Tai Tsee, who occupied the throne from 1368 until 1399. Its value is one kwan, or a string of cash.

CROSS BILLION DOLLAR LINE

Exportations of manufactures in the fiscal year just ended more than justified the estimate of the Bureau of Statistics, Department of Commerce and Labor, that the total value would in 1912 for the first time cross the billion dollar line. That bureau, which has just completed its figures showing the exportation of manufactures, states the total value of manufactures exported in the fiscal year at $1,021,753,918, of which $674,302,903 was the value of manufactures ready for consumption and $347,451,015 that of manufactures for further use in manufacturing.

This does not include foodstuffs which have undergone a process of preparation or manufacture, since the bureau groups articles of that class under the general heading of "food stuffs" exported. This 1,022 million dollars' worth of manufactures exported in the fiscal year 1912 is more than double that of 1903, three times that of 1898, four times that of 1896, five times as great as in 1894, practically six times as great as in 1890, and ten times as great as in 1876, the value of manufactures exported in a single year never having reached as much as 100 million dollars until the year 1873. Comparing 1912 with 1902, a decade earlier, the totals are: manufactures ready for consumption, in 1912 674 million dollars, against 322 million in 1902; manufactures for further use in manufacturing, in 1912, 347 million dollars, against 132 million in 1902; total manufactures exported, in 1912, 1,022 million dollars, against 454 million in 1902, having thus increased about 125 per cent during the decade.

Old and New Balances At the Same Operation

It is now possible to add Old Balances and New Balances at the same time on the same machine, each to the full capacity of the adding machine keyboard.

Old Balances can be added in one column and New Balances in another, the carriage on the machine automatically shifting back and forth to bring the sheet into proper position for each item.

The shifting of the carriage sets the machine to add, first Old Balances then New Balances, each in its proper column and each column adding on a separate set of adding wheels.

When all balances, Old and New, have been entered on the sheet, totals are taken in the usual way, each under its proper column, just as easily as if only one column had been added.

At the same time, this machine gives information of much value in addition to the balances—new accounts, withdrawals, overdrafts, net balances, etc.—all at the same operation.

This illustrates only one of the possibilities of Burroughs Duplex Shuttle Carriage Machines. It will do at least a dozen equally as wonderful things on bank figure work.

One of our men can show you the most interesting features on this machine in about 30 minutes. May we tell one of them to stop in and see you?

HANDING IT TO F. O. WATTS

Nashville, July 31.—When F. O. Watts picked up his belongings, including Mrs. Watts and the family, to take train for his future field of operations in St. Louis, he was handed a set of beautifully engrossed resolutions, passed by the Nashville clearing house association. They hated to lose Mr. Watts and said so. Society didn't like to give up Mrs. Watts but had to. Among other things, the clearing house resolutions said: "We realize that in his departure we all lose a friend, and this association loses a member deeply interested in its welfare and its work, whose calm discrimination and wise counsel have been invaluable to us, and whose public spirit has been of signal service to this city and this state." This is no mere figure of speech, but the exact truth.

WILSON'S KEYNOTE TARIFF CUT

Seagirt, N. J., July 25.—Woodrow Wilson makes uniform downward revision of the tariff the central issue in his speech of acceptance, which virtually was completed to-day, according to information received here. Those who are close to the governor expect he will not discriminate in favor of any special interest or any locality. The South and West will be treated alike. The commercial interests of those and all other sections will be included in the demand for abolition of high duties.

the farmer, and how his interests have been neglected in an educational way.

OUR American farmer has nearly $40,000,000,000 invested in his business. He produces $25,000,000 of new wealth every day. He uses hundreds of millions of dollars of bank credit every crop season.

BUT, by reason of our antiquated banking system, the farmer bears the burden of dear money. He pays more for credit than the farmer of any other great commercial nation. The lowest money rates in this country are paid by speculators in the financial centers; the highest rates are paid by the farmer.

THE higher the rate for agricultural capital, the higher the cost of production, the higher the prices of agricultural products and the higher the cost of living. The farmer and the buyer of the farmer's products will both gain by a reform of our banking system.

DOWN in the Southwest "the custom is" in the country banks to advance the farmer but $50 at a time, for which he gives his note for $65, due in six months. They don't call it "interest," and it isn't. It's usury. Plain unadulterated usury of 5 per cent a month. A Chicago or New York loan shark who would charge such rates would be arrested and locked up.

LET our coming conference take up the financial as well as the educational end of the farmer issue and we shall begin to have more comfortable times at once.

A LOT of New York and eastern bankers went through Chicago on Tuesday—New York Central and Chicago and Northwestern lines—on their way to the Detroit convention, but headed west. The month or so before the convention will be spent in exploring the big national parks and in visiting points of interest in Canada and in the coast states. They've got the habit.

IN harmony with the great weight of authority the supreme court of North Dakota, in the very recent case of Pickett vs. Baird (133 N. W. 1026), holds that a bank transmitting a check direct to the drawee bank for collection is negligent.

"IRVING NATIONAL BANK" has been voted on as the new title line for Lewis E. Pierson's big New York bank. Through consolidations its name had become almost as long as that of an English lord. Now it's back to the simple life.

J. FLETCHER FERRELL was going to play golf right up to the last minute of his vacation—August 1st—but the bracing Chicago atmosphere was so bracing after Paris (Mo.) that he was back "on the job" bright and early Wednesday. Two years in Chicago has made him as big a "booster" as anybody.

OKLAHOMA is hoping for rain to fill out the corn crop. Other grains all harvested. Good crops will save a serious situation.

AFTER all, W. F. Hurley will not require those rooms at the Ponchartrain, which he was going to reclaim at muzzle of the musket, for the Detroit convention. After a brief career with the Republic he has resigned.

HE hurt the feelings of the good Colonel Farnsworth and of the hotel committee and has had Col. George H. Russell railing at THE CHICAGO BANKER ever since "for publishing the Hurley declaration of war," which it didn't do. Several New York papers did publish it to get even with 11 Pine Street. The attack was not in the least justified and should be forgotten as a mere episode.

IT wasn't because of this open letter that Mr. Hurley resigned, but for the purpose of engaging in business on his own account.

THEY'RE booming your Uncle John L. Hamilton of Hoopston for the vice-presidency on the Bull Moose ticket with the Colonel. But how can you vote for John without including Theodore?

JOHN C. F. MERRILL has been elected secretary of the Chicago Board of Trade to succeed G. F. Stone, deceased. Formerly Mr. Merrill was its president.

MEMBERS of Illinois Bankers Association are not satisfied with the present plan of allowing the hotels in the annual convention town to fix the dates for the event. It works inequitably. It lengthens the term of some presidents and shortens those of others. Some of them get wearing the presidential (Halliday) pin to two A. B. A. conventions and others to none.

NELSON H. GREENE, member of both Illinois and A. B. A. executive councils, has filed with the secretary an amendment to the constitution providing that state convention dates shall be fixed by the executive council, as they are in other states, and that they shall come not later than ten days before the A. B. A. dates.

THE full amendment reads, after striking out all of section 1, article 5, as follows: "Annual conventions of this association shall be held provided said annual conventions are held, at least ten days prior to the annual conventions of the American Bankers Association. It shall be the duty of the executive council to issue the call for the annual conventions. The secretary shall give each member not less than two weeks' written notice of said annual convention."

SECRETARY HARRISON of Oklahoma has a sense of humor entitled to recognition by his fellow craftsmen in the secretarial line. After threatening to prefer charges at Detroit against George D. Bartlett for exceeding the (secretarial) speed limit on his new touring car, he goes on to say:

"SECRETARY BARTLETT has just been presented by the 700 and more banks which constitute the membership of the Wisconsin association, with a handsome seven-passenger Kissell touring car. Bartlett has been keeping his name in the headlines for some time past until he has become the envy of the other secretaries who can only perform their functions in a calm and unattractive manner, and here he comes with a trophy worthy of the chase. How can the other secretaries ever hold up their heads again?"

STRIKING his gait again Mr. Harrison continues: "Well, the game has only started. Hall of Iowa is reported to have ordered an underslung special make for the purpose of catching forgers who hide in the big corn belt, to be paid for by the Iowa association. Hughes of Nebraska has made requisition on the executive committee for a big red devil capable of capturing the Wymore gang. Bowman of Kansas wants a limousine to entertain the feminine section of the K. B. A., and Keyser of 'Old Missouri' is reported to be circulating a petition for a high power machine that can beat Fred Farnsworth's A. B. A. Special."

"M. L. RIDDLE of Austin, press representative of Secretary Hoopes, and good looking, is working up a deal to trade advertising in the Texas Bankers Record for a two-seated runabout which can cross the Lone Star commonwealth in twenty-four hours and get enough ads. to pay for itself. Hoopes has an auto so somebody else is entitled to this one. (The extra seat is spoken for.) Mrs.

Brown, the Michigan secretary, rises to demand an electric coupe equal to any on Woodward Avenue. Even from far off Ohio come whispers of conspiracy. 'It's rank,' says Rankin, 'to think that the oldest and handsomest of the secretaries should not have been the first to be presented with an auto.'" Mr. Harrison pays his respects to Frost and Macfadden and then says that Bartlett, "when presented with the car, asked, 'Who is going to buy the gas?' and somebody softly replied, 'Let George do it.'"

CHAIRMAN JOSEPH CHAPMAN, JR., of the "Conference" has written Secretary W. G. Edens of the Illinois committee, on the report that but one delegate is going up from this great state next week as follows:

"IF your committee only sends one man they are going to get lost. We have seven or eight coming from Kansas, five from Nebraska, fifteen from South Dakota, eight from North Dakota, six or seven from Wisconsin and seven or eight from Iowa. Urge your committee to get busy, and if they can't come, send some one in their place."

TRULY this is the most interesting and profitable of the whole year's sequence of bankers' meetings. Last year's conference revolutionized the work of the state bankers associations and gave the good old A. B. A. its first real live issue in ten years. Next week's meeting will be followed by important results.

GEORGE B. CALDWELL again has been forced to disclaim any rivalry on the part of the new investment organization toward the A. B. A. It ought not to be necessary but it is, and this time he is very emphatic. The new association has discovered a field of its own and intends to occupy it. CASHIER.

H. E. Otte, vice-president of the National City Bank of Chicago, is out of the city on his vacation, which will be spent in Michigan.

MILWAUKEE CONVENTION SOUVENIRS

Convention favors were handed out with a generous hand at Milwaukee and included a little Wisconsin bank directory for 1912 with the compliments of the Wisconsin National, as well as an envelope opener. Marshall and Ilsley made a hit with their individual drinking cups, while George Bartlett's screw driver was received very favorably. The First National's lead pencils were the most artistic ever handed out.

EDWIN C. BAUR

Edwin C. Baur, of the Fort Dearborn National of Chicago, will attend the national convention of the American Institute of Banking to be held in Salt Lake City, August 21st to 23d, as a representative of that institution.

DEPOSITORS GET DIVIDEND

Superintendent George C. Van Tuyl, Jr., of the New York state banking department, directed this week payment of a second dividend of 15 per cent, amounting to $28,081, to the creditors of the State Savings Bank, New York City, which was closed on December 1, 1911, following the arrest of the teller, John Pucci, for defalcation. The bank had 1,100 depositors. The total amount of its assets was $153,937, and there is an aggregate of uncollected assets valued at $92,366. The total amount of claims filed against the institution was $180,061. The first dividend was paid on March 30th, when $25,935 was distributed.

At Detroit

Col. Frederick E. Farnsworth has issued a tentative program for the Detroit convention which will convene in that city on Monday, September 9th. Headquarters will be at the Hotel Ponchartrain and the sessions at the Detroit opera house. Notice is given that the hours indicated on the program will be adhered to strictly. The executive council, vice-presidents and honored guests are invited to take their seats on the platform. The first formal session will occur on Tuesday morning at 10 A. M. and will be called to order by President William Livingstone. Addresses of welcome will be delivered by the Hon. Chase S. Osborn, governor of Michigan; W. B. Thompson, mayor of Detroit; George H. Russell, president of the clearing house, and Homer Warren, president of the board of commerce. Those who will respond to these addresses of welcome have not been selected yet. Next will come the annual address of President William Livingstone, who will be followed by the annual reports of the various secretaries and chairmen of committees, including the report on amendments to the constitution by Chairman Arthur Reynolds of the council. So far as the main portion of the program is concerned, Tuesday and Friday, the two days devoted to the sessions of the A. B. A. proper, the list of speakers is not yet ready for announcement. The programs for the sections practically are completed.

The trust company section will make a very strong showing at its session on Wednesday and Thursday mornings. Among the speakers secured by President F. H. Fries and Secretary Babcock for this section are George M. Reynolds of Chicago, who will speak on the money trust inquiry, being the first banker of the United States so publicly to tackle this mooted subject; Oliver C. Fuller of Milwaukee on a proposed model trust company law; Henry M. Bates, dean of the University of Michigan on "Some Unscheduled Liabilities;" Breckenridge Jones of St. Louis, without whom no trust company program is complete, will speak on the achievements of the trust company section during the past fifteen years. Mr. Jones gets the credit for having discovered the opportunity for this section and with playing a large part in bringing it up to its present high state of perfection. Other speakers will be F. H. Goff of Cleveland and L. H. Dinkins of New Orleans.

The savings bank section will present a very strong list of speakers at their session on Wednesday and Thursday mornings. President Alfred L. Aiken will call the section to order and preside. Chairman J. F. Sartori will report for the executive committee and E. J. McWilliam will read his report as secretary. N. F. Hawley of Minneapolis will speak on school savings banks, and the Hon. Frank H. Hitchcock on "The Postal Savings Bank and the Banks." Edward Chamberlain of Texas, who has been traveling in Europe for the past six months investigating the loan banks, will deliver an address on that subject. John J. Pullpyn of New York will talk on the savings bank and the community. Other speakers will

CHICAGO

Joseph Chapman Jr. is in the class with Christopher Columbus as a discoverer. Christopher discovered a new continent but he did it only once—never repeated. Chapman began early and has kept it up. He discovers new issues—new problems—for bankers and has done as much as any man alive to disarm public prejudice against the banker. The chapters of the A. I. B., the money order system and traveler's check of the A. B. A., and the agricultural and educational movement now spread to thirty states are the fruits of his brain.

George B. Caldwell saw the need of an organization for investment bankers. He went to it and this week saw the new association properly set upon its feet in New York. His metal will be tested the first year of its life but those who know his ability and energy predict his success and wish him good luck.

Edwin L. Wagner

Edwin L. Wagner, president of the National Produce Bank of Chicago, recently has returned from a trip through Yellowstone Park and the West.

COLONIAL TRUST OFFICERS IN EUROPE

Landon Cabell Rose and Jacob Mortenson, president and vice-president respectively of the Colonial Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, are in Europe. They are expected back in Chicago in about two or three weeks.

L. A. GODDARD ON FINANCIAL SITUATION

L. A. Goddard, president of the State Bank of Chicago, in speaking on the general financial situation, says:

"I believe there is nothing to cause unrest. Bank deposits are keeping up fairly well, and the demand for money is quite active, with good rates prevailing. I think that this will continue through the fall. The West has very large crops and the indications are that they will be moved promptly, which will call for lots of money. The banks, however, are prepared for this. I do not believe that there will be any surprises up here. I believe that bankers generally understand the situation and have conditions thoroughly in hand."

HARRIS TRUST OFFICERS AWAY

E. P. Smith, secretary of the Harris Trust and Savings, is in Europe. J. S. Broeksmit, cashier of the same institution, who has been abroad, is expected back about Monday of next week.

CHICAGO BANKERS FAVOR CHANGING SIZE OF MONEY

Chicago bankers as a whole seem to be in favor of Secretary MacVeagh's proposal to reduce the size of the paper money of the United States. The present bills measure seven and one-fourth by three inches; it is proposed to reduce them to six by two and one-half inches. Confusion resulting from stacking the new bills with the present ones appears to be the only objection to the plan. It is said that the government will save $1,100,000 per annum if the new size is adopted.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

GEORGE and F. W. WOODRUFF, Joliet, left Sunday for a month in Europe to study the land-bank and farm-loan systems first handed. They want their new banking venture, which will cater to farmers, to be up-to-date when it starts.

ON their return to New York, September 7th, they will join one of the Banker Specials for Detroit and join the Illinois crowd in time for the A. B. A. meeting.

J. F. SARTORI, head of the big Security in Los Angeles, will be back in New York from Europe at the same date and will come on to Detroit.

MR. SARTORI, who is chairman of the executive committee of the savings bank section, sailed for an automobile tour of Europe with his family immediately after the Briarcliff meeting of the council. He and another Los Angeles patriot have a unique contest on hand.

MR. SARTORI is to take with him his Big Six Winton, use it and bring it back, in an expense contest with the other man who is to buy a European car over there and sell it before his return at the end of the season. All outlay to be carefully kept. Mr. Sartori takes his own chauffeur along, and his rival hires one in Europe.

DOWN state reports are that Col. Aisthorpe's friends are to be real busy while Geo. Woodruff is in Europe. The chairmanship will be in good hands whichever gets it.

FRRIENDS of Frank T. Joyner are busy with the executive council map, finding out his chances for the secretaryship of the Illinois association. With Mr. Joyner's acquaintance and former membership in the council it ought to be easy to figure it out.

COL. FUNK, on the progressive ticket for governor, will pick up a few votes from Dunne, whenever the voter remembers the reign in the Chicago city hall, of Margaret Haley, Cornelia De Bey and Louis F. Post. Hard to forget!

REALLY, with Deneen, Dunne, and Funk to choose from, Illinois is quite certain to get an honest, high-minded executive. They differ chiefly in availability.

GEORGE F. ORDE and family have spent the past six weeks on the coast of Maine but now are back in Minneapolis. Mr. Orde is on the Chicago-Detroit transportation committee and says the Twin-Cities can fill one car.

LUTHER DRAKE and Victor B. Caldwell of Omaha will be at a table with Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Van Vechten. Wm. A. Health, Chicago, has a table for four. Hurry up and get on the list.

SECRETARY J. W. HOOPES of Texas and president of the secretaries section, A. B. A., will go over to Detroit with the St. Louis bankers and come back with the Chicago delegates. He says the convention com-E. J. and MRS. CURTIN of Decorah, Ia., have been doing the Yellowstone. They, with Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Carpenter of Monticello, will have a "four" table at the banquet on wheels.

N. E. and MRS. FRANKLIN of Deadwood will be accompanied to Detroit by the beautiful Miss Franklin who was so greatly admired at Briarcliff.

SOUTHWESTERN BANKER has a very interesting paragraph about R. T. Forbes, head of the big First National at St. Joseph, Mo., and who formerly was president of a big Chicago bank.

"R. T. FORBES," says the S. B., "president of the Commerce Club and president of the First National Bank, is tireless in his efforts to improve conditions on the farm. When 160 members of the Commerce Club visited Trenton last month, Mr. Forbes made a timely address urging the county court of Grundy county to regularly employ an expert with the title of county superintendent of agriculture. The fire of his eloquence brought quick results. Grundy county has carried out his suggestions. It is now up to Buchanan county to follow suit in the good work."

WISCONSIN has joined the progressives in the A. B. A. In this issue will be found a communication from A. J. Frame, whose disposition to say fiery things hasn't been modified by a Horlick's diet. He quotes the result of the A. B. A. members' meeting at the Milwaukee convention and we don't blame him.

WISCONSIN has had the very ablest representatives her bankers could find on the executive council. Yet during Mr. Frame's term he was given no committee or commission representation. Neither was John J. Sherman until Chairman Arthur Reynolds was elected. He immediately gave Mr. Sherman an important committee appointment. It only was justice.

THE committee on amendments will be busy at Detroit, and it might be well if the convention should ask this committee to present a full draft for a new constitution entirely. There are many good men on the committee but Mr. Frame and others could be added.

HERE'S the Fort Dearborn line-up for the dinner at the Banquet on Wheels: Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Tilden, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson N. Lampert, Mr. and Mrs. J. Fletcher Farrell and two not named. They draw a "double-four."

MINNEAPOLIS and St. Paul will have their own car which will be "hitched on" at Chicago. Geo. F. Orde of the First National, Minneapolis, or Charles R. Frost, secretary M. B. A., can fix up reservations for those who will come from that point.

W. H. PRATT, Jr., has been elected president of the enlarged Brule National at Chamberlain, S. D. The Bank of Chamberlain has been taken over and E. E. Dye, A. G. Hill and H. I. Lawrence elected directors.

THE new vice-president of the Brule is H. I. Lawrence and the cashier is Geo. F. Pitzer. The enlarged Brule National will continue to occupy its present quarters. C. B. Mills of Clinton, Ia., was president of the bank.

AUGUST 19th and 20th are the dates set for the Colorado convention at Pueblo. The formal invitations are out for the bear-meat barbecue.

THE closing of three St. Louis hotels—the Southern, Beers' and Pechman's—is attributed by the brewers to the dry Sunday enforced by the present blue laws. Business men are to appoint a committee to report on the matter.

ST. PAUL

The Agricultural Conference

MINNEAPOLIS

Minneapolis, August 8th.—A two-days' session of the second annual conference of the committees on agricultural development and education, representing the state bankers associations in twenty-four states, has just been concluded in the Twin Cities. The sessions of the first day were held in the assembly hall of the Radisson Hotel in Minneapolis, and those of the second day were held in the assembly hall of the St. Paul Hotel in St. Paul. Following up the custom of last year, Chairman Joseph Chapman, Jr., practically impounded the delegates and there were no absentees from any of the four sessions held. In both places adjournments were taken for luncheon, which was served with the compliments of the clearing house associations of the two cities, after which the delegates went back for further participation in the program. A large entertainment was held at the Lafayette Club on the shores of beautiful Lake Wnetonka on Wednesday evening, all of the delegates present and nearly all of the bankers of both cities being present. There were several very prominent delegates present, including George M. Reynolds of Chicago, who is deeply interested in the work and who is serving as a substitute for W. G. Edens, who is absent in the West and who sent the following telegram, which was read to the delegates present and the sentiments loudly applauded:

Denver, Colo., Aug. 6, 1912.

Hon. Joseph Chapman, Jr., President Conference of Agricultural Development and Educational Committees, Hotel Radisson, Minneapolis, Minn.

I regret exceedingly that the twenty-seventh biennial session of the Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias, of which I am a member, convening here to-day, prevents my attendance at your important conference. In my humble opinion the bankers of the United States, and particularly of the state and national organizations, never have engaged in a more patriotic or unselfish work than is embraced in the splendid program provided for the conference of the Committees on Agricultural Development and Education, nor calculated to bring more substantial benefits for the welfare of the nation. Illinois bankers, under the direction of their talented president, B. F. Harris, already have committed themselves to this great work.

WILLIAM G. EDENS, Secretary,
Committee on Agricultural and Vocational Education, Illinois Bankers Association.

Chairman Arthur Reynolds of the Big Council could not resist the temptation of spending a day or two in the Northwest, and came up from Des Moines with E. J. Curtin, P. W. Hall, C. H. McNider and other Iowa bankers. He listened attentively throughout the sessions to every discussion, and as is his custom, treated the whole matter seriously. Arthur Rodgers of this city, a popular clubman and large lumber operator, was appointed chairman of a special committee on entertainment to show G. M. Reynolds over the two cities, and the record

Second annual meeting breaks all records for similar occasions in interest, attendance, work done and in the high character of those engaged in the program. George M. Reynolds gives it his earnest personal indorsement, also from a banking standpoint. Founder and Chairman Joseph Chapman, Jr., believes in the absolute success of the movement. Educators all highly pleased has it that every bank in both Minneapolis and St. Paul was visited in a "big six" touring car which kept close up to the speed limit at all times. So far as the program provided is concerned, it probably is the best ever presented to a similar conference, or to a conference on any other topic in this country. The men present represented every branch of educational employment, and included railroad presidents, college professors and distinguished educators like Edwin G. Cooley, formerly head of the Chicago schools and for several years a student of the educational methods of Europe, about which he talked most interestingly to those present. Other features of the program were talks by the Hon. Carroll S. Page, United States senator from Vermont, Prof. John Monroe, of Cokato, Minn., who talked on agricultural high schools in that state; also by Dean A. F. Woods of the Minnesota Agricultural College, St. Paul, and by the Hon. L. B. Hanna, member of congress from North Dakota and James J. Hill of the Great Northern Railway, St. Paul.

At this year's conference, as at that of last year, John Monroe, head master of the agricultural high school at Cokato, Minnesota, was one of the most engaging and interesting of all the speakers. His remarks, in part, of course, covered ground familiar to many of his hearers, but, like the others, he was addressing the larger audience sure to be reached by the proceedings book, which circulated by the thousand last year. In part he said:

Prior to the last few years, the high school system of the United States was practically uniform, but, under the leadership of such organizations as this, school men have been pulled out of their rut and forced to assume the responsibility of meeting the educational problem in a common-sense way. Diversification is creeping into the system. We now have two distinct types of high schools coming into existence. We might call one the commercial-industrial and the other the agricultural. Each of them retains, primarily, the backbone of the old uniform type; but, together with this they possess a diversification of curriculum, which fits them to the communities in which they are placed. Our discussion deals with the agricultural type.

The agricultural high school is best developed within an urban-rural community, because the population, conditions and ideals of such a community are best adapted for its maintenance. It would not be well to introduce a distinctly agricultural high school into such cities as Milwaukee, or even Racine or La Crosse. These cities might well maintain a course in agriculture, but to maintain a distinctly agricultural school all conditions must be such that the community can be easily unified. A town with a population of say up to 2,000, with a good agricultural community surrounding it, should by all economic rights maintain a high school distinctly agricultural.

Minnesota has been attempting to develop the agricultural high school. Under the Putman and Lee-Benson acts a system of schools is being built up that will soon be the pride of the state.

The Putman act appropriates $2,500 toward any high school that will maintain efficient courses in domestic economy, manual training and agriculture. This $2,500 is given provided the local school expends $1,250. If it expends less than that, it receives $2 for every dollar expended. There is another feature connected with the Putman act that is valuable. Under this provision, the central school will receive $150 for every rural district associated with it for the maintenance of the courses mentioned. The district must levy a tax of at least two mills upon its assessed valuation for the maintenance of such work. The law also provides a fifty dollar appropriation toward the rural district treasury which can be used for any purpose determined by the rural board. The central school board and one school board member from each of the rural districts make up the managing board for the expenditure of the fund created by the act. The Lee-Benson aid consists of $1,000 appropriated by the state toward schools which will maintain either domestic economy or manual training and agriculture. The associated feature does not apply to this act, unfortunately. It is to be hoped that the $150 and the $50 appropriation will be extended to cover the Lee-Benson schools during the session of the next legislature.

An explanation of the working out of the associated feature of the Putman act can be best given by a detailed description of the work in one of the schools.

The Cokato school has made the associated feature the basis for its organization. Thirteen rural districts have combined with the central school to maintain the industrial work. A territory of some seventy-five square miles is now taxing itself 2½ mills to maintain a fund which will support the work. With an assessed valuation of $750,000, this gives the managing board $2,100 from the thirteen districts. This added to $4,200 given by the state and the $650 appropriated toward the different district treasuries gives a working fund that amply supports the work.

The old high school organization maintains three instructors and the associated schools have added three more. These, together with the special teachers employed at mid-year to handle the extra work that is taken up, make a high school force of ten teachers, which handles the work very efficiently.

The central district furnishes the room, the janitor work and the fuel. After receiving Putman aid, the Cokato district doubled the capacity of the school building to make room for the new courses. Eliminating the state aid, the financial burden upon the associated districts and central district is about equal, and each receives an equal share of benefits of the school.

A unique school has been developed. Much of the old-line material has been eliminated from the courses of study. Latin and Greek have been thrown aside, higher algebra and solid geometry have been relegated to the past. English has been changed from the old-time analytical material to expressional English. From end to end of the English course, the aim is to give the pupils opportunity to think for and to express themselves. Swedish and German have taken the place of Latin. We have a very pronounced Finnish community north of town. We aim to introduce in the near future a course in Finnish. Why not? Every argument that applies to Latin applies to modern languages, and why not teach such modern languages as are best fitted to the community in which the school is placed?

Civics is taught from the standpoint of local government, and thence developed towards national and world-wide organizations showing the relation of the latter to the former. Town, village, school district, county and state offices are maintained within the classes, and all official business is conducted using the ordinary legal and official papers used by officers in actual practice. Mock trials are conducted. Debates and discussions are allowed at all points in this class work. Another subject of great importance to a high school of this type is economics, coupled with commercial law. We are now working upon a text-book which will combine salient features of civics, commercial law and farm business for our classes. We are introducing a year's applied mathematics following the algebra and plane geometry. This work embodies any problem that might arise in the handling of the community work. It may be in machinery, surveying, construction or shipping. Physics and chemistry are given a practical trend, using the bearing of the theoretical phases of these subjects upon many of our agricultural, commercial and industrial problems. Indeed, every one of the older courses maintained have been modified to meet our conditions.

Besides the regular courses, we have correlated with them courses in agriculture, manual training and domestic economy. Our botany is agriculturalized wholly. This is followed by an intense course in general agronomy. The junior year covers animal husbandry, and the senior year is given over to farm business and community improvement. Every pupil is required to take the agricultural botany. After that the courses are elected.

Every boy is required to take at least one year in carpentry and one year in iron work before he graduates, and every girl one year in cooking and one year in sewing. After that the advanced work is elective. It is not to be understood that these courses are distinct from the old-line material; they are correlated throughout. There is no attempt to build up distinct courses that are ironclad. The only thing that we require throughout the course, and that for only three years, is English. We deal with the individuals, discovering their tendencies, their abilities, and then guiding them, by counselling with them, and their parents, into the courses that fit them for the work they intend to pursue. Moreover, it is not necessary, any longer, to give a pupil a certain set course in order to fit him for a certain set course in a university or college. We are now compelling our universities and colleges to recognize the fact that the only thing they should require is sixteen credits of solid work. Even classical Harvard has adopted that plan during the past year. It is now recognized that there is as much mental development and cultural value in agriculture, manual training and domestic economy as there is in Latin or the old mathematics.

Besides the regular high school course of nine months, which is being given to some 110 pupils, we maintain a short course from Thanksgiving to March. This was introduced to supply the demand for an education of a great number of young men and young women who had dropped out of our schools throughout the grades. No educational qualification is required for admission. The first year we had seventy-five pupils; the next year about ninety, and this year somewhere about the same number. These young men and young women range in age from 13 to 40 years. Some of them could not even speak the English language; some of them could not spell the simplest word; quite a few of them could not compute the simplest problem, and we devised our courses to reach them exactly as they were. We gave them such subjects as practical arithmetic, composition, spelling, reading, writing, civics, commercial law, farm accounts, agriculture, manual training and domestic economy. Every one of these subjects was modified to fit the class that the instructor was handling. If it was necessary to have a-b-c language, they received it; if it was necessary to give a heavy course in commercial law we gave it. It was not a case of forcing pupils out of the school because they could not fit the courses; but it was a case of reaching out into the community, getting the pupils, and then modifying the courses to fit them.

Many of these pupils came back for the second year's work; some of them drifted over into the regular high school. Last year quite a few of them came back for the third year short course and some of them have signed up for the fourth year of the work. These pupils drove all the way from one to nine miles every day. They arrived at the central building at 10:30 and left at 3:15 in the afternoon. This gave them the opportunity to do the chores at home and yet to receive work that would be of benefit to them during the rest of the day which otherwise would have been spent in idleness. I wish that you could have seen some of the changes that this work made upon the pupils with whom we came in contact.

Perhaps it would be interesting to describe to you some of our special work. Take the sewing, for instance. Here the girls enter the classroom with their own goods for the garments that they need, and, with the aid of the instructor and each other, take their own measurements, draft or modify their patterns, cut out the garments and make them. We make everything from a gingham apron to a silk dress. Very little model work is given.

Short Term Securities

Investment bonds and notes issued to mature in from one to five years are favored by many investors as yielding a somewhat better income than long time obligations.

Such securities, particularly of the larger issues, also usually command a ready market and are not subject to extreme fluctuations in price.

Our recent booklet, "Short Term Securities," met with so favorable a reception that we have been prompted to issue a second edition. This contains brief descriptions of current issues, brought down to June, 1912. We will furnish copies on request.

Accounts of banks and bankers received upon favorable terms

Thoroughly equipped to handle all business pertaining to banking, and invites the accounts of banks, corporations, firms and individuals

There are girls who have taken our courses who do all the home sewing. In fact, the work that they turn out is so useful that it has been almost impossible to get enough of it together to put up an exhibit at the state or at the local fair. If we exhibit we have to use garments that have been worn.

From seven states represented last year the conference grew in one year to twenty-four states. Last year the banker and educators who came to address the bankers made up the personnel of the conference. This year the field of education from university to common school sent in its undelimited men and women and the character of the gathering reflected the scope of influence of the conference of last year and the awakening effect. Men from the department of agriculture at Washington and from the agricultural and vocational schools of many states were present as listeners.

Miss Caroline L. Sumner and Miss Isabel B. Cressler, co-principals of the Elmhurst School for Girls, located near Connerville, Ind., where horticulture is taught, attended the conference. Mrs. C. C. Craig, Galesburg, Ill.; Mrs. Peter Shiras, Ottawa, Kan.; Mrs. F. L. Caley, Omaha, and Miss Jennie Parsons, St. Paul, sat among the women when the conference opened, and a number of local teachers were present. N. E. Chapman of the St. Anthony Park experiment station; C. G. Selvig of the experiment station at Crookston, Minn.; B. L. Merrill, superintendent of schools at Hutchinson; C. S. Sedfield of the agricultural department, Washington; J. R. Kiethley, Washington; H. M. Wilcox, assistant superintendent of Hennepin county schools; J. E. Painter, superintendent of manual training in the Minneapolis schools; Joseph Jorgens, principal of South high school, and B. M. Giles of the University of Wisconsin, were among the men present, not delegated or on the program, but interested in the conference.

Joe Hirsch of Corpus Christi, Texas, chairman of the Texas bankers agricultural committee; John P. Schmidt, Lewistown, Mont.; S. M. Jensen, Sedalia, Mo.; F. J. Hartman, Tulsa, Okla.; L. K. Stubbs, West Chester, Pa.; George E. Allen, New York; Robert T. Woodside, South Carolina; President H. M. Malott of the Kansas Bankers Association, and E. R. Moses, Great Bend, Kan., came in together. Former President, E. J. Curtin of the Iowa State Bankers Association, came up from Decorah; also Secretary P. W. Hall of Des Moines. President B. F. Harris of the Illinois Bankers Association is here from Champaign. W. W. Bowman of Topeka, Kan., who spoke at the dinner following the conference last year, and George Guernsey of Independence, Kan., are on the list.

When Chairman Joseph Chapman, Jr., had rapped for order, he said that the conference was the most democratic gathering that could be found, that it has no formal organization, no treasury, no politics, no ax to grind, and only one purpose to follow, which, he said, is to work so that the coming generation may be brought up to be something more than consumers.

"We do not pretend to be educators nor do we in any way want to interfere or attempt to tell the educators their business. But we do know that the system is wrong which gives so much money for the frills and not enough to the practical things, that it is that very largely that is the matter with the country today, and we want to change it.

"To say that the executive committee of the conference is pleased at the growth of the committees is to put it mildly. The growth has been astonishing. It only goes to prove that the basis on which we are working is fundamentally true, that many people realized it all along and now that we are at it, there is an awakening of interest all along the line."

Some of the delegates were delayed by the rain from reaching the hall at the opening hour, yet, when the conference opened, in addition to those already named, there were in the hall prominent bankers, including the following: Knute Anderson, Eau Claire, Wis.; T. S. Beneker, Fessenden, N. D.; W. S. Hill, Mitchell, S. D.; C. H. McNider, Mason City, Iowa; Edwin G. Cooley, Chicago; S. E. Bradt, De Kalb, Ill., chairman of the good roads committee of the Illinois Bankers association; Peter Shiras, Ottawa, Kan.; N. F. Hawley, Minneapolis; George A. Du Toit, Chaska; E. H. Williams, Allegan, Mich.; C. J. Monroe, South Haven, Mich.; W. S. MacFadden, Fargo; George A. McFarland, Valley City; W. C. McDowell, Marion, N. Reynolds, Chicago; Arthur Reynolds, Des Moines, and many other distinguished bankers dropped in at the sessions and indorsed by their presence and by kindly word of approval all that was being done.

The program was long and it was 7:30 P. M. on Thursday before adjournment was in sight. There were nine hours of solid work each day.

A big compliment was paid the founder of the conference, Joseph Chapman, Jr., when the convention, at the motion of Charles H. McNider of Iowa, re-elected him for another year. The same high compliment included Secretary Charles R. Frost.

The clearing houses of Kansas City, Mo., and Kansas City, Kan., wanted the conference for next year and sentiment seemed to be favorable to "passing it around" and not allowing the Twin Cities to have a monopoly of all the good things. The executive committee will be enlarged to include all the states in attendance. Notes, comment and extracts from the talks in next week's CHICAGO BANKER.

be John H. Sturgiss of Boston and F. H. Nichols of Fitchburg, Mass.

The clearing house section will hold its sessions on Wednesday and Thursday mornings also. President Charles A. Ruggles of Boston will preside and James T. Keena of Detroit will deliver the address of welcome. Sol Wexler of New Orleans will make the response. The first thing of importance on the program will be a discussion of the numerical system, led by C. R. McKay of Chicago, chairman of the numerical committee; Joseph T. Talbert of New York and formerly of Chicago, will talk on the functions of a modern clearing house. At the Thursday morning session a discussion of the collection of country checks through the clearing house will be led by Jerome Thralls of Kansas City. Discussion of uniform clearing house reports and bank transactions will be led by Frank Green, editor of "Bradstreets." There will be the usual routine reports of committees and officers of the section.

The state secretaries section will hold its meeting on Wednesday and Thursday mornings, and will present probably the longest list of addresses offered by any other section. Mrs. H. M. Brown, secretary of the Michigan Bankers Association, will welcome the secretaries to Detroit, and S. B. Rankin, dean of the order and secretary of the Ohio Bankers Association, will respond. Next will come the address of President J. W. Hoopes of Austin and the report of the secretary-treasurer, F. M. Mayfield of Nashville. There will be two addresses by distinguished "outsiders." F. W. Ellsworth of the New York Guaranty Trust Company will talk on bank publicity and Judge O. E. Dunlap of Waxahachie, Texas, on "The Boys Behind the Guns."

Two of the most important addresses on the program are those of Charles R. Frost, secretary of the Minnesota association, and Haynes McFadden of the Georgia Bankers Association. Mr. Frost will attempt to answer the question, "Is it advisable for an association to endorse and receive special prices on bank equipment?" This is a very warm issue among the up-to-date secretaries, many of them taking the stand that the purchasing department of all associations should be abolished. Mr. McFadden will attempt to demonstrate a plan to eliminate conflicting convention dates. Having been a newspaper man for a number of years, he will be able to point out to his brother secretaries the evils that follow in the wake of conflicting dates. He will show them how they rob themselves of competent speakers, of outside visitors and of space in the financial publications by holding from three to five conventions the same week. Secretary W. C. Macfadden of North Dakota will speak on "Welfare Production Activities," and William B. Hughes of the Nebraska association will talk on protective service. All of the secretaries present will be given an opportunity to engage in the discussions.

The program this year makes a slight departure from former years by having all of the sections meet on two consecutive mornings and giving all of the members an opportunity to participate in the magnificent list of entertainments furnished by the Detroit bankers, who have provided everything from golf tournaments and baseball, and from luncheons and receptions for the ladies to steamer rides and smokers for the men. There will be something doing all of the time. Secretary Farnsworth thinks he will be able to issue the list of speakers for the principal sessions of the convention proper in a few days.

A. C. Trumbo

Arthur C. Trumbo, president of the Trans-Mississippi Commercial Congress, will speak at the LaSalle Hotel luncheon of the Chicago Association of Commerce, on Thursday, August 14th. He has invited W. G. Edens to speak at the Salt Lake meeting of the congress August 27th. Mr. Trumbo is a banker at Muskogee, Okla.

PROMINENT SOUTHERN ILLINOIS BANKER VISITS CHICAGO

P. M. Johnston, president of the Fayette County Bank, St. Elmo, Ill., called on Chicago banking acquaintances this week. Mr. Johnston has been very prominently engaged in railroad construction work in Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Illinois, Texas and Louisiana. He reports good crops in southern Illinois, and says that hay is fine, corn fair, and oats good. Mr. Johnston is well known in Illinois banking circles.

Chicago, Ill.—The Kedzie Trust and Savings Bank has been organized with $200,000 capital. M. C. Schiff, Herman B. Schiff and Isaac Schiff are interested.

BIG POTATO CROP IN MISSOURI

The Missouri potato crop for this year is a big one. It is probable that the yield will be more than double that of last year, when the entire state grew but 983,000 bushels, or an average of only 35 bushels per acre. The Orrick district, in Ray county, has grown a crop estimated at 1,200 carloads, more than 50 trainloads. Most of these potatoes have sold at from 46c to 50c per bushel in the cars. The yield will be about 200 bushels per acre. One grower who three years ago bought 95 acres of land at $130 per acre has since grown $23,000 worth of potatoes on this tract, the profit equaling the purchase price. Good potato land in the Orrick district is now selling at from $150 to $200 per acre and rents at $10 per acre, cash.

BANK CREDITORS GET DIVIDEND

Portland.—Attorneys for State Bank Examiner Wright have secured in circuit court an order authorizing Mr. Wright to pay a dividend of 45 per cent on the claims presented by creditors of the American Bank and Trust Company, between June 22d and July 30th. Mr. Wright last week paid a dividend of 45 per cent to the main body of creditors and has still enough money on hand to pay the same to the supplemental list of claimants. This second disbursement will be small as compared with the first. Date of payment is set for August 15th.

NEW YORK SAVINGS BANKS

Albany, N. Y.—George C. Van Tuyl, Jr., superintendent of the state banking department, has issued a statement of the condition of the savings banks of the state for the year ending July 1st, which showed that there had been a large increase in the aggregate of their resources. The total resources on July 1st, last, were $1,827,502,287, as compared with $1,750,859,001 on July 1, 1911. The amount due to depositors on July 1st was $1,660,564,190 and other liabilities were $778,842. Other statistics are: Number of open accounts, 3,029,679; accounts opened, 539,761; accounts closed, 471,141; amount deposited during the year, $422,920,290; amount withdrawn during the year, $414,041,134; expense account for six months, $2,534,957.

HOPES TO REIMBURSE THE BANK

Los Angeles.—In the case of Earl Standard, formerly bookkeeper of the American National Bank of Pomona, who is under indictment charged with embezzling $150,000 of the bank's funds, the federal court has consented to put the hearing over until September 16th. Between now and that time, Colonel Johnson stated, Standard hopes to make property arrangements whereby the bank would be reimbursed for all of its losses.

Atlantic City, August 7.—J. Haines Lippincott has been elected vice-president of the Atlantic City National Bank. The bank has declared a quarterly dividend of 10 per cent and added $25,000 to surplus, making total surplus $450,000.

A charter has been issued to the First National Bank of Plant City, Fla., capital $500,000.

CAPITAL ONE MILLION DOLLARS

By C. C. Burford

That the largest and best oats crop ever raised in Illinois has been cut and partially thrashed is the universal consensus of opinion downstate. Yields of as high as eighty-five bushels per acre have been recorded and the quality and the weight of the crop this year have both been highly satisfactory. The price has not suited, of course, and farmers who have been used to high prices for grain for many years do not take lower prices very kindly. Many farmers say that they expect to store their entire oats crop this year, but with the high price of lumber it is to be doubted if farmers without large crib room will want to build cribs and to store many oats. Wheat has also been a large crop and there have been some very satisfactory yields. Oats straw will be especially abundant and hay will be plentiful and cheap. The year has been especially favorable for garden raising and the cost of living has been cut in the country and smaller towns where the people raise garden produce on their own premises.

The corn crop is causing farmers and bankers many anxious moments and with a period of November weather in August the farmer is naturally somewhat concerned about the safety of the crop. Corn is late and backward and a late fall with delayed frosts will be needed for the proper maturing of the crop. The season in general has been rather unfavorable to the corn crop as there has been comparatively little warm weather. Hot weather is needed for the success of the farmer and while uncomfortable for humanity it is just what is needed on the farm. Several weeks of warm weather with no frosts will be needed to place the corn out of danger. With a large crop of corn safely gathered, the year 1912 will go down in crop history as a year of enormous yields.

Lateer Buys Ludlow Bank

W. J. Lateer, president of the Paxton State Bank and a member of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association, has purchased the Ludlow Bank, in northern Champaign county, from Fred Collison, the latter being president of the First National of Rantoul, president of the First National of Thomasboro and vice-president of the Illinois Title and Trust Company of Champaign. The Ludlow Bank will be under the supervision of Mr. Lateer's son and this bank, with the Paxton State Bank, will be operated in a certain way together as they are in the same territory and only six miles apart.

Utilities Company Increases Stock

Certifying to an increase in capital stock from $330,000 to $6,000,000, the Central Illinois Public Service Company has paved the way for further control of the lighting, heating and power plants in this state. The number of directors of the concern, which, it is said, plans the taking over of the majority of the utilities plants in central Illinois, was increased from five to six. The principal plant of the company is located at Mattoon.

It has been rumored that this corporation is planning for the merger of many coal mines throughout central Illinois. The corporation is supposed to be backing Francis J. Peabody of Chicago, who has secure options on practically all the mines around Springfield. There have been persistent rumors all summer in central Illinois that a large mining corporation was being formed. Mr. Peabody states, however, that his investments are of a personal nature.

Sells $5 Bill for $1,000

A. D. Millhouse, living in Jackson county near Murphysboro, has the distinction of possessing the first $5 bill issued by the United States treasury. It is No. 1, series A, issued in March, 1862, and after a close examination by bank officials at Murphysboro has been declared to be the original. Millhouse secured the bill from his father many years ago, the latter coming into possession of it during the Civil War. The present owner has several times been offered large sums for the bill, and it is now reported that he has received an offer of $1,000 and will accept this for the old bill.

Harris on Progressive Ticket

B. F. Harris, vice-president of the First National of Champaign and president of the Illinois Bankers Association, has been named a candidate for trustee of the University of Illinois on the National Progressive ticket. Mr. Harris is well qualified to serve and if elected would care for the interests of the state university in a business like manner.

Banker Aids Zoo Officials

J. A. Berminghaus, cashier of the Central National Bank of St. Louis, came to the rescue of the officials of the St. Louis Zoological Garden, Sunday, when employees of an express company refused to accept a check in payment for two Zebras that reached St. Louis Sunday. He arranged matters, but how is not being divulged.

The animals, a bull and a cow, were taken from the express office to Forest Park in the animal ambulance. There was no room for them, so the llama and the kangaroo had to double up while the Zebras got the former's

To Improve Rural Life

The second annual meeting of the Illinois Federation for Country Life Progress held at DeKalb, was a decided success and many points which are being urged by banker-farmers were discussed. The results of the conference were highly satisfactory to all the delegates.

The resolutions adopted asked the University of Illinois to hold a conference of rural social workers similar to those held in some other states.

Strongly approving the movement of the Illinois bankers in creating sentiment and securing legislation for better schools, better roads and better conditions in the homes and in general country life improvement.

Recommending that as much attention be given to the study of household science as to the other features of farm improvement.

That all persons in sympathy with this, the work of the federation, do all in their power to make the country school more of a community center.

Recommending the establishment in every normal school, of a department for the training of country teachers for social leadership.

Surely the above resolutions are timely and will meet the enthusiastic approval of banker-farmers in Illinois who have caught a vision of improved rural conditions throughout the state.

New Bank at Medora

The entire stock of the Farmers State Bank of Medora, amounting to $25,000, was subscribed at a mass meeting of citizens. The bank will open September 1st. The village of Medora, in Macoupin county, boasts a population of only about 450, but enjoys the distinction of having two banks. The Bank of Medora, an older institution, has been in existence thirty-five years. Leslie Craig of Monroe, Louisiana, will be cashier of the new bank.

Springfield Correspondence

The Bank of Taylor Springs has opened for business. L. V. Hill of Hillsboro is president of the new institution. The new bank is a "private," but anticipates organizing under the national banking law in the near future. A new building will be erected after business is fully established.

Bank Gives Books to Friends

Bank of Sadorus is handing out to its patrons two books entitled "The Reports of the Farmers Institutes for 1911" and the "Year Book of the Household Science." Both books are handsomely bound.

Bank Celebrates Forty-first Anniversary

Will County National Bank was forty-one years old on August 4th. Henry Fish was its organizer and first president, and for many years after its organization owned a majority of the stock. He signed the first issue of United States national bank notes. After the resignation of Mr. Fish, Calvin Knowlton became president, and Mr. Fish's interest was sold to J. A. Henry, who subsequently became president of the bank.

Illinois Banking Notes

J. A. Corbett, president of the Citizens National of Decatur, has been named president of the Decatur Chamber of Commerce.

E. N. Raynor, of the firm of Raynor & Babb, successful private bankers of Homer, Champaign county, died recently at his home in Champaign. He had been retired from active business for several years.

C. R. Miller, cashier of the First National of Kankakee, with his wife and son, spent their vacation taking an automobile trip to Starved Rock and vicinity.

There has been filed in the office of Circuit Clerk J. G. Whitson of Pontiac, two releases to mortgages of large proportions. The mortgages were given by the Central Union Telephone Company to cover the issuing of bonds by the company. One was for $3,000,000, dated July 1, 1896, running to the Illinois Trust and Savings Bank, of Chicago, and the other was for $6,000,000, dated December 17, 1910, running to the Old Colony Trust Company of Chicago.

R. A. Peters, formerly cashier of the Stewardson Bank, Shelby county, has accepted the position of assistant cashier of the Merchants and Farmers Bank of Sullivan.

J. F. Keshner, cashier of the First National of Edwardsville, has returned from a vacation spent in the North. He is well tanned up and looking very much improved after his two-weeks' outing. His wife and family will remain a short time longer.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

WISCONSIN

Milwaukee banks were well represented on the excursion of eighty members of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association to Michigan last week as guests of F. C. Reynolds, vice-president and general traffic manager of the Pere Marquette line. The special boat bearing the Milwaukee business men left the dock at eight o'clock Wednesday night, reaching Ludington at six Thursday morning. Breakfast at Ludington was followed by a trip up the shore to Manistee where lunch was served and several of the larger lumber and salt plants visited. The guests returned to Ludington in the afternoon and departed for Milwaukee at night, arriving here at seven Friday morning. The banker contingent included E. A. Reddeman, Germania National; J. E. Jones, Marshall & Ilsley; E. H. Williams, Marine National; Walter Kasten, Wisconsin National and W. L. Cheney, Second Ward Savings.

Protest Against Assessment

Both the Marshall & Ilsley Bank and the Second Ward Savings Bank have entered protests before the board of review against assessments on the new buildings being erected by them. A valuation of $60,000 was placed on the building of the former now in course of construction on East Water Street. The bank, through its attorney, Robert McMynn, holds that it owns the building, that it is exempt from taxation under the statute which allows a bank occupying its own building to deduct the assessment on the building from the as-essment on its capital stock. No exemption is claimed on the $94,000 property valuation. The Second Ward Savings Bank bases its protest on the same grounds. According to Tax Commissioner Louis A. Arnold's interpretation of the statute, the deduction does not apply until the buildings are occupied. Both cases will probably be taken into the courts, the board of review having no power to change the assessments under the circumstances. The Merchants and Manufacturers Bank, which is also constructing a new building on West Water Street, has entered no protest on its assessment.

BANKERS TO AID AGRICULTURE

Louisville, Ky., August 8.—Announcement is made here that James K. Waller, of Morganfield, president of the Kentucky Bankers Association, has decided to bring before the convention of that organization in Louisville this fall the question of forming an organiza-

It was suggested that the plan now being carried out by the Texas Industrial Congress, an organization of bankers, be followed in Kentucky. Prof. F. Mutchler of Western Kentucky State Normal School of Bowling Green will address the bankers' meeting here on the subject. He will outline what has been accomplished through the efforts of bankers in other states, especially in Texas and Alabama.

—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, Aug. 8.—There has been a definite hardening in money rates the past week, in response to an increasing demand for accommodations from mercantile sources. Bankers notice this with extreme satisfaction, and say that it indicates that this territory is doing a larger volume of business than a year ago, when the spirit of optimism now prevailing in business circles was conspicuously absent. In this section this hopeful feeling is largely the result of the crop outlook, which has seldom been more favorable than at present, despite a late start, following the wet, cool spring. The past month has been almost ideal for the development of corn and for the harvest of winter wheat, and threshing returns on the latter show some really remarkable yields. In certain sections of the state, where early reports indicated a large percentage of winter-killing, the recovery in the wheat crop has been almost a miracle. This is attested to by the increased and enlarged buying orders that have been coming in to mercantile houses in the past two weeks, from the afflicted territory. The farming public are inclined to look on the hopeful side of things, and prepare for improved conditions after the election. This is having a far-reaching influence on the city's trade and business sentiment. Big business is inclined to ignore the tariff bugaboo, although some manufacturers are holding back in a small way until the policy of the contending political parties becomes more thoroughly understood. Were it not for this, bankers assert that the country would be almost on a business boom, as the fundamentals underlying our financial and commercial structure seldom have been so sound immediately in advance of an election, and especially one which promises to be the culmination of the most active campaign since 1896.

Optimism Prevails

In the big wholesale district the most cheerful feeling prevails. The activity in the shoe trade is suggestive of this. The volume of business handled by these great manufacturing concerns is increasing constantly, and the leading firms report a future business sufficient to carry their plants at capacity throughout the fall. Collections are fairly satisfactory, and with the demand for funds sufficient to hold rates around 5 to 5½ per cent, the banks are pretty well loaned up. There has been a strong disposition shown by leading institutions to convert securities—especially short term issues—into cash. This has given the loaning institutions considerable more funds, besides making a more active demand for commercial paper of various maturities. Call money continues fairly plentiful, and at reasonable rates, considering the better demands in the time loan market, but the demand for this class of funds is not pressing at the moment. More money is lending at the higher rates than has been the case for several months.

New Bond Officer Mississippi Valley Trust

Felix T. Hughes has been chosen bond officer of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company and assumed his duties on the first of August. Up to that time he had been connected with the bond house of McCoy & Co., Chicago, for the last five years. A native of Mount Pleasant, Ia., Mr. Hughes went to Chicago in 1901 and was graduated from the University of Chicago in 1906. His first business connection was with the Webb Speed Indicator Company as Chicago manager, and prior to his association with McCoy & Co. he served for a year as sales manager of the Hamilton Automobile Company. Mr. Hughes has a wife and two children who will join him in St. Louis October 1st. As bond officer of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company he succeeds James H. Grover, who resigned last March.

Mechanics-American National Reports Conditions

The Mechanics-American National Bank of St. Louis, reports the following: General business conditions in and about St. Louis are continuing the improvement noted last month. The situation in the shoe trade is suggestive of this betterment. This industry has within late years grown to enormous proportions. The volume of business handled by the great manufacturing concerns whose headquarters are in this city is constantly increasing, and the business on the whole is to-day very strong indeed. Some of the largest manufacturers report a very satisfactory fall business with sufficient orders to keep busy their plants running "at capacity." Some have suffered slightly from labor difficulties, but the interference from that cause has not been important or much of a detriment. Owing to its location in a section which is dependent largely upon agricultural pursuits, St. Louis is very greatly affected by crop conditions. The prospects now favor a materially increased yield of all crops, although it is too early to speak with full assurance on this point. It is recognized, however, that the situation is highly satisfactory and that unless some unlooked for disaster should be encountered the production of grain in this vicinity will be sufficiently above last year to add materially to the wealth of the people in this territory.

SMALLEST WHEAT CROP IN 36 YEARS

Lansing, Mich., August 7.—The monthly crop report as issued from the secretary of state's office to-day says that with one exception the yield of wheat in Michigan will be the smallest in the past 36 years. The report says the average yield in the state will not be over 11 bushels per acre.

The estimated yield of rye in the state will not be over 13 bushels per acre; oats are expected to yield 31 bushels per acre and potatoes are reported far better than last year, indications that there will be 85 per cent of a full crop. Beans are about the same in condition as last year at this time, while sugar beets are a trifle lower.

Fruit correspondents very generally report prospects good for winter varieties of apples in orchards that have been sprayed and otherwise properly cared for; the outlook for the early varieties is not so promising. The United States census of 1910 gives 228,313 acres of bearing apple orchards in Michigan, figuring 33 trees to an acre. This is about 41,000 acres less than was given in the state census of 1904. The prospect for an average crop in the state and upper peninsula is 64, in the southern and central counties 62, and in the northern counties 5. One year ago the prospect was 41 in the state, 42 in the southern counties, 28 in the central counties, 40 in the northern counties and 71 in the upper peninsula. The prospect for an average crop of peaches in the Michigan fruit belt is 18 per cent and in the state, 11. One year ago the prospect was 84 and 75 respectively.

The Texas banking department has authorized the Central Texas Exchange National Bank of Waco as reserve agent for the Bartlett State Bank of Bartlett.

ARBA PERRY OFF TO WESTERN CONVENTION

Arba Perry, representing the Colonial Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, left the city on Monday of this week for St. Louis. Mr. Perry expects to attend the convention of the Nebraska Bankers Association to be held in Omaha August 26th and 27th. He also contemplates going up to Kalispel, Montana, to attend that of the bankers of that state to be held August 23d and 24th, and that of the Colorado bankers to be held in Pueblo August 19th and 20th.

INDIANA NATIONAL ADOPTS NUMERICAL SYSTEM

The Indiana National of Indianapolis has bought eleven Burroughs Transit Machines and will handle all its transit business by the system worked out by the American Bankers Association. Investigation convinced the Indiana National that the numerical system has come to stay and that it will save money in handling transit business. The bank always has been progressive, and its officials have watched the numerical system with considerable interest ever since it was adopted by the A. B. A.

HONESDALE NATIONAL BANK

The Honesdale National Bank, Honesdale, Pa., has issued a booklet giving a full and connected history of the bank from its organization 75 years ago to the present time. In the past 35 years the deposits of the bank have increased from $276,173 to $1,421,318. Total dividends that have been paid by this bank since its organization in 1836 have amounted to $1,982,000. The bank was nationalized in 1864.

Wyoming Convention

Cheyenne, Wyo., August 8.—The convention of the Wyoming Bankers Association has just concluded a two-days' session at this place. A very attractive program was provided for the occasion by Secretary Van Deusen. Charles A. Lory, president of the Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, delivered an address on "One-sided Education." "Early Banking Methods" was the subject chosen by Clement Chase, editor of the "Western Banker." Mr. Chase illustrated his talk with a display of early currency. M. R. Collins, president of the Douglas National Bank, talked on the general subject of collections, while T. S. Taliaferro, Jr., president of the Green River State Bank, and F. F. Johnson, cashier of the Boise (Ida.) City National Bank, respectively talked on our natural resources and costs and credit accounting. O. T. Eastman, assistant cashier of the First National of Omaha, made an informal talk on getting business, which largely was an illustrated one. He had on hand a large assortment of newspaper ads, as well as all kinds of souvenirs, bulletins, circular and multigraph letters, street car cards, etc. His collection was acquired from time to time during the past three years. E. R. Gurney, vice-president of the First National of Fremont, Neb., and chairman of the federal legislative committee of the American Bankers Association, made an informal talk on the subject of "Losses."

BANK TO INCREASE CAPITAL

Buffalo, August 6.—Stockholders of the Columbia National Bank of Buffalo will meet September 3d to vote an increase in the capital stock from $2,000,000 to $2,500,000 through the sale of 5,000 shares of new stock at $300 per share, thereby also increasing the surplus account by $1,000,000, or from $1,200,000 to $2,200,000.

In the past ten years the bank's total resources have increased from $1,500,000 to over $17,000,000. With the proposed increase in capital and surplus and the estimated earnings for the next four months, the bank will have a total capital and surplus account of about $5,000,000, the largest of any bank in the state outside of New York City. The directors have also voted to increase the dividend from 12 per cent to 15 per cent, effective when the increased capital has been paid in. Since 1909 the market price of the stock has advanced from 350 to 600, or 250 points.

BANK OPENS FOREIGN DEPARTMENT

The Corn Exchange Bank, the largest of the New York state institutions, and which operates twenty-eight branches, located in various parts of the city, has opened a foreign exchange department. The bank proposes to buy and sell foreign exchange and foreign currency and to issue travelers' letters of credit available in all parts of the world.

BUILDING A BANK

and equipping it is a very important proposition. The Bankers' Engineering Company, 504 Monadnock Block, Chicago, will mail free to interested bankers a pamphlet containing valuable suggestions relating to Bank Buildings and Interior Equipment Work.

Editorial Comment

CRITICISM ON BANK CREDIT SYSTEMS

From one of Chicago's largest banks comes a criticism of credit department work which every man in such departments should read. The writer is widely known for his work and for his efforts to reform the present systems. On this subject he says:

This is an era of reform movements. Everybody is reforming except the credit association. This organization is not lacking in initiative; its members are progressive and it seems peculiar that they have not been up and doing ere this. Its field is fruitful and ought to be cultivated by intensive and extensive methods. Its manner of procedure is crude. For instance, in the matter of obtaining information on names offered by commercial paper brokers. The broker offers the paper to five or six banks in Chicago, who immediately institute investigation by writing to the various banks furnished as references. These banks receive the five or six inquiry letters on the name in question and send a duplicate letter to each of the inquiring banks in Chicago. Why not a clearing house for this information? It would simplify matters considerably if the brokers would take the names they have to offer in this market to the clearing house, have the paper investigated and submit the results to the buying banks. A crusade against the promiscuous investigation of names by minor country banks, who merely make a hobby of it, should also be inaugurated. The worst offenders along this line are those who buy the least paper in the open market. They make veritable pests of themselves, forgetting no doubt that while they have ample time to indulge in this craze, the larger banks are not so fortunately situated. When these leads peter out they might take up the subject of statements. At the present time there is no systematic method of procuring detailed figures of borrowing customers. Each bank has a form of its own. With the extension of our credit department feature in the banks, the information received for filing is dissected more carefully, especially in the matter of statements. It is easy enough to analyze a statement, but many difficulties arise when attempts to compare them from year to year are made owing to the inconsistencies of the makers of the statements. They should be educated as to the requirements of the banks in this respect. They should be encouraged, or, rather, it should be insisted upon, that they list their assets at what in their opinion is an exact, safe and conservative value. At the present time, the general custom is to place a full value on the assets and, on the liability side, insert a "conservance fund" in the form of "Reserve for Bad Debts," "Reserve for Depreciation," etc. In analyzing statements, one cannot, of course, consider these reserve accounts as a debt, and as they are inclined to fluctuate greatly, where systematic analyzing is attempted, they create considerable confusion. Treasury stock should not appear on a statement submitted to a bank, as it represents no actual property.

Thus it will be seen that there is important work to be done by one of the divisions of the A. B. A. Its committee on "forms" might help some. The new Investment Banker Association might find this a good field in which to make an early showing. The writer quoted above can be depended upon to "help out" if one of these divisions will take up the work.

PROTECTING THE DEPOSITOR

Questions of deposit guaranty or deposit insurance continue to agitate the banking world. Whichever form of guaranty shall prevail will come in answer to a public demand, if the system prove to be economical and a benefit to the people. There are features of the guaranty plan as in operation in the Southwest which are objectionable to most of those who have given the matter close attention. The Wisconsin plan would seem to be an advance upon that adopted in Oklahoma and Texas, yet at the Milwaukee convention sentiment was in such an unclarified condition that no decision representing the concrete will of those present could be arrived at. For this reason, chiefly, the matter went over for further consideration. Public sentiment in Wisconsin is at such a state of development, however, that it is not unlikely that the state legislature will attempt to give relief in the matter, inviting, of course, the co-operation of the bankers of the state. While these forward movements are engaging the attention of the bankers in adjoining and other states, Illinois has a problem to solve at the Peoria convention as to whether or not the depositor is entitled to state supervision and inspection as a matter of right. If in those states where private banking has been abolished they still feel the need of deposit guaranty, mutual or otherwise, it is pretty good evidence that the depositor in Illinois is not getting nearly all that is considered equitable in other states. A careful canvass of individual banks in Illinois shows that a large majority of the organized bankers believe in absolute state supervision, and that almost half of the private bankers who have taken an interest in the matter believe the same way. Ultimately the matter may go by default at Peoria, just as did the old constitution at Springfield, when the issue becomes public and the real reasons for contending against supervision must be stated openly and in public. About supervision in Illinois Chairman Daves of the committee says: "The aim of the committee is not to hamper private bankers, for there are many reputable men so engaged, but to bring every private banker under the state law, so that he will be financially responsible to his depositors and amenable to the state laws if he violates his charter. In brief, we want to check forever the practice of irresponsible persons, with no assets, putting the sign 'bank' over their doors and receiving deposits for which they cannot be called to account." Thus it will be seen Wisconsin, while ahead of Illinois in having abolished private banks first, has no advantage in high-minded determination to protect the depositor.

REFORM OF LEGAL PROCEDURE

A great deal of agitation recently has been started in this country in regard to the methods employed by the courts in their administration of justice. Much has been said in regard to the delay and "red tape" necessary to be gone through in order to obtain decisions. It even has been intimated in some cases that some of the judges charged with the administration of the law are incompetent, and occasionally, inimical to the people who placed them in their offices; that the decisions rendered frequently subvert justice rather than subserve it. While criticisms of this nature always must be taken with a grain of qualification, nevertheless it is true that there is something radically wrong with our legal system. Courts of to-day are too prone to adhere to anciently established rules and theories. The common law of England, up to the time of the settlement of Jamestown, prevails in the United States to-day, except in so far as it has been abrogated and modified by legislative enactment. It is quite obvious that what might have been suitable for the needs of the people living in the seventeenth century and prior to that time will prove totally inadequate for the present day. Courts are very loath to depart from these ancient customs. Indeed, it is a common expression among lawyers that anything in derogation of the common law will be very strictly construed. The simplest and at the same time the most expeditious way of combating this difficulty is the adoption of a code relating to pleading, such as exists in New York. Perhaps it is no exaggeration to say that a very large proportion of the difficulty ordinarily experienced in the conduct of litigation may be attributed to technical defects in pleading. If the rules relating to this branch of the law were made simple and were codified, there would be very little chance to go wrong on them. It is very rarely that one hears of a judge who is false to his office, and in the majority of cases they are well qualified to act in such a capacity, having served apprenticeships at the bar before donning their judicial robes. But, however competent or honest a judge may be, he is in duty bound to administer the law as it exists, and not in the way he or someone else thinks it ought to be. The same is true in the case of jurors, who, not being versed in legal matters, have the layman's idea as to the case on which they are sitting as jurors—and very often this opinion is the more consistent with justice. However, by their oaths they are bound to decide that case in accordance with the law as laid down to them by the court, and the evidence adduced. If the law is antiquated, or faulty or defective, it necessarily follows that their verdict will not be a just one. Recently much time and space have been devoted to the so-called "fellow-servant" doctrine. Under this theory of the law, a jury might conscientiously and honestly believe that a servant was entitled to damages as a compensation for injuries sustained while in the employ of the master, even though such injuries were caused through the negligence of a fellow-servant. But, if they were true to their oaths, they would be in duty bound to follow the instruction of the court that "if they believed from the evidence that the injuries in question were caused by the negligence of a fellow-servant, and that such negligence was the proximate cause of said injuries, then they should find the defendant not guilty." This harsh doctrine has led to the enactment of workmen's compensation acts in a number of states. The only way to remedy the situation is to get at the fundamental cause of the trouble—the law itself—and to amend it in such a way as best to serve the needs of the people of this modern twentieth century.

From Nebraska

C. Hildreth of Franklin, Nebraska, was in Minneapolis this week to attend the Second Annual Conference of the Committees on Agricultural Development and Education of the State Bankers Associations. About thirty states are expected to be represented. Mr. Hildreth is chairman of the work in Nebraska.

NATIONAL CITY (CHICAGO) BANK LETTER

General business has not been much disturbed by the developments of the presidential campaign. Some manufacturers are holding back in order to learn what change, if any, will be made in the tariff and if the anti-trust law is to be amended. This influence, however, is extremely limited, and it may be said that, taking conditions as a whole, there is little reason to fear real unsettlement to general trade. The one great essential for continued revival is the production of good crops, and it looks as if the country would fare well in this respect. Advices reaching this bank from the crop sections show that in most parts of the spring wheat territory conditions are very promising. The total yield of wheat will be, therefore, if no disasters are encountered, satisfactory. The same may be said of corn, although the critical period for that crop is not yet passed. The smaller grains are also showing up well and the rather steady decline in grain prices shows that those who have carefully studied conditions are looking forward to an abundant harvest. It is also clear that the foreign markets will bid a fair price for whatever surplus we have to offer. Present conditions point, therefore, to continued prosperity for the farming classes.

KANSAS CROP CONDITIONS

It is expected that this year Kansas will produce the largest corn crop on record, due to abundant rain recently experienced. The wheat crop also will be very large. Large yields have been reported. One farmer living near Horton produced a total of over 2,700 bushels on seventy-eight acres, or an average of thirty-five bushels to the acre; yields of forty, forty-two, forty-three and forty-six bushels per acre also have been made. The best crop so far is that of O. G. Wilson, living just south of Horton, who has produced fifty bushels to the acre, while the smallest production is twenty-six bushels per acre. One of the difficulties with which the farmers are forced to contend is the securing of help. It is said that never before in the history of the state has there been so much work for the threshermen. There are sixteen counties in the seventh congressional district which are in the million-bushel class this year, their total yield being 34,102,015. At one dollar per bushel, which it is believed will be the average price, the value of the wheat crop will exceed the total mineral production of the state of Colorado. The sixteen counties comprise but half of the seventh congressional district. It is said that several of the other counties have produced close to a million bushels. The production of the seventh district this year is nearly forty million bushels, or about one-half of the entire output of Kansas. When one considers that the wheat crop represents but a small portion of the agricultural resources of Kansas, the wealth of this great state can be better imagined. Corn, oats, alfalfa, fruit, feed crops and broom corn contribute in a large measure to the state's wealth. It is said that the wheat yield of this group of Kansas counties represents an output of two hundred bushels for every man, woman and child within the boundaries of the group. This great prosperity of the state naturally is reflected in increased bank deposits. The splendid showing of Kansas ought to silence to a very large extent, at least, the assertions that the United States is lagging behind the other nations of the world in agricultural matters.

Maysville, Ky.—The Bank of Sardis has closed its doors and gone into voluntary liquidation. It was a state bank, with $15,000 capital. No one loses a dollar by its closure, which was caused by lack of business.

George B. Caldwell "Keynotes" Investment Bankers Association

As chairman of the organization committee, it seems proper that I should present to you what may be regarded as the "prospectus," out of which something of a concrete character may be here adopted. I have recognized a lack of co-operation among investment banking houses, the value of a better acquaintance, and some benefits that organization might bring to us in the way of the discussion of subjects in which we are most deeply interested, the need for a greater publicity, which the magnitude, likewise the dignity of our business merits, and which unorganized we cannot hope to secure. Most people, and many bankers outside of the large cities, are unaware of the large amount of capital now employed in this branch of banking and few realize that annually new forms of secured credits aggregating $1,500,000,000, or $125,000,000 per month, are analyzed, approved, created and distributed by the banking houses of this country that may be classified as investment bankers. This, in itself, is no small responsibility, especially as the form of credit in which we deal usually extends over a period of from five to fifty years, and must, therefore, not only be safeguarded for the present, but until the date of maturity. As now carried on, the bulk of this business is done by less than two thousand banking houses, though the number is annually increasing.

Corporate financing of the past decade reflects a rapid rate of commercial progress in the United States. The Boston News Bureau estimates the requirements for the first half of 1912 for railroads and industrial companies $1,557,146,000, a gain of 26.6 per cent over the corresponding period of 1911, and this does not include about $400,000,000 raised by states, cities, towns and other public and quasi public corporations. These figures lend a suggestive conception of the stupendous volume of funds required to finance the nation's day-to-day activities in the form of credit largely handled by the investment banker.

The recent report of the comptroller of the currency shows that our national banks alone hold over $1,000,000,000 in bonds purchased for investments other than government bonds, while our state banks and trust companies hold over $2,500,000,000 and our insurance companies nearly $5,000,000,000, taking no account of those held by private banks, trust estates or individuals, which are undoubtedly a great deal more.

Twenty years ago this business was carried on almost entirely by a dozen banking houses in New York, Boston and Philadelphia, while to-day it is conducted by bankers from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Lakes to the Gulf. To-day, no one section of our country is wholly independent, for there are few large bond issues absorbed locally. The East is selling to the West and the West to the East, and in addition our international banking houses are developing a large foreign market for our securities, much as we do for other surplus products of our factories and of our farms. I recall these facts at this time to illustrate not only our responsibility, but the value and important position investment banking has assumed in the last few years in our world of business and finance, and also to impress upon you the further fact that the call for the organization of this branch of banking came not as an inspiration, but as an evolution. I am also of the opinion that only in proportion as this meeting shall develop into a real national force and be supported by men of the highest type of integrity, energy and experience, will

Big New York meeting hears of origin, plans and difficulties of the new organization. The field is large and the need urgent for some directing and controlling power in the security field if Blue Sky laws are not to become epidemic our foundations be well laid, the dignity and character of our profession be improved and our success assured.

Recognizing that this city was the cradle of investment banking, that most of our cities have grown great by finding a market for their credit at your hands, that our public necessities have, by your aid, your money and your intelligence, been more easily financed, whereby the benefits are now enjoyed by even the smallest hamlet, it seemed both fitting and proper that we hold this, our first meeting, in New York, where your advice and your assistance would be most available. If you agree with me that no great national force is born in response to the will of an individual, nor to the brilliancy of an idea, nor to the genius of a plan, but because of a vital necessity found to exist sufficiently strong to impel business men to forget competition, to obliterate sectional lines and to even forego selfish gain in their desire for its creation, then we have a basis for working together, and one on which I hope to see this association founded, and which I know will work for the best interests of all concerned. Having enlisted in this cause without personal ambition or ulterior motive, believing in the benefits of organization in any work involving so large an amount of capital and so many people, I am pleased to see so large a representation here to-day and to have the opportunity to state to you the history of this movement. * * *

Now, as to our purpose I have no desire to specialize at this time, preferring to leave that to the future deliberations of this body. Sufficient it is for me to say that one particular activity from which we could reasonably hope for good results would be the securing of greater uniformity in state laws governing the issuance of municipal securities; likewise the standardization of the laws of the various states creating public service commissions and the issuing of public service securities. We must deal to-day with many conditions where states make municipal bonds tax-exempt, no two of which are alike; also many laws governing the issuing of special assessment bonds, drainage bonds, levee and reclamation bonds, road bonds issued by districts, municipal and irrigation bonds, and various conditions regarding the debt limit and power to levy and collect taxes, which now are at great variance. Then, we have to-day the conflict of the laws of the states that have created public service commissions.

There are very important questions yet unsettled, and until settled the development of our public utilities must vary as the laws vary. No one in this day denies the value to the investing public of investigation and regulation of our great public utilities and it is to be hoped that this subject may receive such attention as will prevent over-capitalization and inflation, but it is a question whether any commission's powers should go beyond the protection of the public, as has been attempted in the Falls River gas works' case. There is to-day a conflict of the laws of the states and those of the federal government regarding conservation and control of water powers and until settled the development of hydro-electric properties will be greatly retarded. There is also the question of a federal corporation law; at present, business initiative is greatly hampered by the multiplicity of laws governing interstate corporations. Federal law, providing for national incorporation, making interstate corporations subject to uniform requirements with annual reports to be accompanied by a sworn statement, subject to investigation by a federal bureau, it is suggested would greatly improve the quality of our industrial securities and avoid much expense and confusion.

In this age of change of public sentiment and progress and in laying the foundations for the great volume of credit that must certainly follow, too much care cannot be given matters of a legislative character, because with a surplus of ideas there will be a surplus of laws, some of which will of necessity require amendment or repeal. There are also many questions of an academic character that I believe we can from time to time discuss among ourselves, such as the standardization of mortgages for gas and electric properties, street and steam railroads, likewise the value of serial mortgages versus sinking fund mortgages on industrial properties and the character and growth of real estate and building bonds; the question of listed versus unlisted bonds—that is, whether more of our unlisted bonds should not be listed—for the year 1910 only about 35 per cent and in 1911 about 44 per cent of new issued were listed. And finally the matter of the distribution of our securities; what can be done, if anything, to lessen our advertising and selling expenses and make our public offerings entirely reliable and more attractive?

We could, in my judgment, maintain in the office of the secretary a statistical library, which in time would grow to be of much value to our membership on the principle that the more knowledge one has the farther one can see into the future. We might also issue periodically a bulletin on proposed legislation, giving recent court decisions and decisions of public service commissions affecting stocks and bonds issued and about to be issued. Likewise keep our members and the public better informed as to the amount of money lost by investors in bond issues put out either by our own members or by those not members, hoping to correct present abuses and reduce losses to a minimum; likewise to aid in the detection of fraud and lend support to the prosecution of criminals found creating and selling worthless securities. It has been urged by some that the office of the secretary of this association would be the proper place for the deposit by each member, upon purchasing a new issue of municipal bonds, of a full set of legal papers together with copy of legal opinion. This will tend to improve the standing and marketability of municipal bonds, especially those of the smaller municipalities.

The practice to-day of large banks and investment houses underwriting new securities that are later distributed through the smaller houses is certainly a growing custom, but a work that banks and investment houses must carry on with a great deal of care, or the bankers in the large cities at least will become so largely classed as promoters that suspicion will attach to them and prove harmful to the general investment business, as well as discredit sound banking. The rapid concentra-

When E. F. Swinney, president of the First National of Kansas City, entered his office on Wednesday of last week, a great mass of American Beauty roses reminded him that it was his birthday. Not that he had forgotten this important personal event, but he had set aside the afternoon for its celebration, when, with a bunch of close friends he went to the Kansas City Country Club for the annual Swinney birthday golf tournament that has been played for several years. Several years ago Mr. Swinney was presented with a beautiful silver loving-cup by his friends, and it has been the custom to engrave the name of the winner of the birthday golf tournament on this token. This year the honor went to W. F. Fible of the Houston, Fible Company, financial brokers. After the golf came a memorable club dinner. No one professes to know just how old Mr. Swinney is and he will not tell.

Increased Bank Capital

Announcement has been made of an increase in the capitalization of the Drovers National Bank of Kansas City from $300,000 to $500,000. Although this institution was organized in 1909 to help take care of the financial business at the Kansas City stock yards, it has been only within the past eighteen months that the bank's business has grown with almost sensational rapidity. At the beginning of this period the bank came under new management and from that time on things began to happen. The bank declared its first dividend and its business increased in all departments. Its banking rooms were enlarged and steps are being taken to equip an additional banking room just south of the bank at Sixteenth and Genesee streets. There will be no change in the directorate of the institution and the increased capitalization will be distributed among the stockholders.

Will Make Final Payment

It is announced by W. T. Kemper, president of the Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City, which, as trustee, is collecting the amounts due depositors of the failed All Night and Day Bank of Kansas City, that the final payment of 25 per cent will be paid depositors October 1st next. The depositors already have been paid 75 per cent of their accounts. The All Night and Day Bank of Kansas City was closed last December, several months after it had been absorbed by the American Union Trust Company.

First National of St. Joseph

A strong note of optimism characterizes the last trade letter issued by the First National of St. Joseph, Mo. It says that a year ago it would be hard to believe that the change which has taken place during the last twelve months could occur. "At that time the country was in a pessimistic mood and business men concerned themselves very little over the news which promised well for the future," says the letter. "The one fundamental situation to which all business men must pay heed at every season of the year, but particularly at this time, is the condition of the crops. One statement regarding 1912 crops is safe and dependable and that is the farm output of 1912 for the United States will exceed all previous records in volume and value. One crop or the other may suffer from weather or pests between now and its harvest, but crops taken as a whole will be unusually large. The crop situation is highly satisfactory except that there is not sufficient labor to harvest the crops and not enough cars to haul them. Present high prices will induce growers to market crops early and a car shortage entailing a loss of millions to the farmers may occur. Only a considerable falling off in prices of food stuffs which would hold grain on the farms can prevent congestion in the West and Southwest.

Clearing House Organization for Oklahoma

The state bankers section of the Oklahoma Bankers Association met in Oklahoma City last week in special session to consider proposed changes in the Oklahoma state banking laws relating chiefly to the bank guaranty law and the operation of the state banking board. While there was much discussion of various changes no definite program was adopted. There had been some talk of splitting off from the national bankers and forming an entirely separate association, but it was decided to continue the state bankers section as now constituted, and retain the same officers, with the addition of the new executive committee. The officers are: President, George W. Piersol, Oklahoma City; vice-president, B. R. Brundage, Tishomingo; secretary, E. A. Patrick, Chandler; treasurer, H. S. McCauley, Sapulpa. One important decision of the Oklahoma state bankers was the creation of a clearing house organization which shall handle all matters of business which come up within the association, including proposed legislation. Under the plan proposed, a stockholder in each state bank shall take stock in the new organization and each bank shall have one vote in its management. The details will be left in the hands of an executive committee composed of seven bankers who shall be appointed by the president. This plan is one of the steps in a reorganization scheme proposed by a special committee appointed to work out the details.

Receives Threatening Letter

An attempt has been made to blackmail Fred Coe, cashier of the Bank of Creighton, a small town near Harrisonville, Mo., and situated about forty miles from Kansas City. A few days ago Coe received a letter demanding that unless $4,500 were put into an envelope and left in a designated spot, the bank cashier and his family would be killed. The letter was signed "White Cap." Coe informed the authorities and a dummy envelope was placed in the place designated. Although a dozen men were hidden near by, some one got the dummy letter and took it away without leaving a trace. Now Coe is afraid he will be killed and his home is guarded constantly.

Oklahoma State Banks in Fine Condition

According to State Bank Commissioner Lankford, the state banks of Oklahoma are in 50 per cent better condition than they were in the early part of 1911. In his address before the state bankers section of the Oklahoma Bankers Association last week he said: "The tendency has been toward a decided determination to clean up and keep clearly within the law." He deplored the weakness of the Oklahoma laws with reference to the penalties for the violation of the state banking laws. He believes that an embezzler should be sentenced for from twenty to fifty years in the penitentiary. He also believes it should be made a felony to circulate any false report concerning the solvency of any banking institution. "I believe the bankers of this state should adopt a resolution urging the passage of a 'blue sky law' similar to that of Kansas," continued Commissioner Lankford. "The people of the state would owe you a debt of gratitude and besides you would be conserving your interests by this action. The fraudulent stock companies have fleeced the people of this state out of millions of dollars the past few years and quite a number of these companies have been driven out of Oklahoma by the banking department within the last year and a half."

Released From Leavenworth

After serving thirty-six months of a five-year sentence in the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan., Noah R. Marker, one of about a dozen Indiana bankers who were indicted in 1909 for violating the national banking laws, was released on parole last week. Marker was cashier of the First National of Tipton, Ind., and in complicity with his brother, William H. Marker, was charged with embezzling more than $100,000 from that institution. Two charges, one of 86 counts, were found against him, while William Marker was charged with getting away with large sums. Immedi-

It is alleged that he took $60,000 with him on the trip. Since his incarceration Marker has been employed in the warden's office and has been one of the most trusted prisoners at the institution. For the last two years he has been acting as the warden's private secretary. He has been allowed many privileges and has spent much of his time roaming about the reservation when not employed. William Marker is at present employed in the chief clerk's office but probably will be released at the next session of the parole board.

Central West Notes

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Central Texas Exchange Trust Company of Waco last week the following officers were elected: president, R. R. Spencer; active vice-president, F. E. The older Nuehaus is a director in the Union National Bank and Bankers Trust Company of Houston and with his son he will engage in the business of handling municipal and state bonds and other high-grade securities.

W. R. Allen, formerly cashier of a bank at Paris, Texas, convicted of violating the national banking laws and sentenced to five years in the federal prison at Leavenworth, was released on parole last week.

After several years of work detectives have captured the last of the famous Wymore, Nebraska, gang of bank robbers. They are charged specifically with the robbery of the Taft (Kan.) State Bank, December 3, 1910.

Arthur A. Croxton, president of the City National Bank of Nocona, Texas, died at his home in that city last week.

A new bank of Oklahoma is the Farmers State Bank of Waukomis which has a capital stock of $15,000. The incorporators are A. P. Wilcox, E. A. Pendarvis of Enid; and Louis W. Green of Hunter.

W. B. Harrison of Enid, Okla., secretary of the Oklahoma State Bankers Association, has gone to New York on a business trip.

FOURTH NATIONAL ON TRADE IMPROVEMENT

The Fourth National Bank of New York has made a canvass of the views of representative business men, to learn the extent of the improvement in trade. In its August 1st circular it says:

This canvass covered the greater part of the United States. It took in most of the important manufacturing and retail centers, and the inquiries specifically asked (1) how general business conditions to-day compare with those existing at the same time last year; (2) to what extent the presidential campaign is likely to unsettle general trade; and (3) what is the strongest factor in the business and financial outlook.

The replies show that business is much better to-day than it was last year. The gains noted range from 10 per cent to 20 per cent or more, and from everywhere special attention is called to the fact that people are much more optimistic now than they were last year, when labor was only partially employed, and when the preliminary struggle for the presidential nominations was before the country. One merchant in Cleveland describes conditions as "infinitely ahead of last year." From one of the greatest dry goods concerns in the West comes the assurance that its customers, with very few exceptions, report generally improved conditions. From St. Paul there is assurance that the business outlook was never more encouraging, and that the situation has vastly improved. In Salt Lake City the outlook is said to be much better, because of the bountiful crops and the higher prices obtained for lead and copper.

An important interest in Tennessee reports that sales and collections have greatly improved, and that labor is profitably employed. In Denver, business conditions are said to be highly encouraging, and the volume materially ahead of what it was last year. In Arkansas "financial conditions are good, general trade fair, and the crop prospects satisfactory." St. Louis shows up better than a year ago, and the excellent crop outlook is creating an optimistic feeling there. Such reports are typical of those received from other sections, and with the exception of one or two cities where business suffered severely from the floods of a few months ago, the story is one of increased activity and greater confidence. From all directions comes the assurance that better times are ahead, and that people are feeling more hopeful about the future.

It is evident, at the same time, that notwithstanding this improvement, many are disposed to proceed slowly, and not to engage in speculation. There is no disposition to overtrade, and the tendency of most merchants seems still to be to buy only such merchandise as a quick market requires. The small merchant is reported to be carrying abnormally low stocks, in an effort to avoid mishaps and to make certain of his market before committing himself at all heavily. Advices from many cities indicate an excellent fall business, and it is plain that some large advance orders are being received.

To sum up, the feeling is that business is not going to be disturbed by politics; nor, if the crops turn out well, is it going to be held back by the usual vicissitudes of a presidential campaign. Mercantile interests generally are in a sound condition, and because of the thorough-going liquidation that has taken place in all lines there are to-day very few weak spots.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

With a $10,000,000 gain in bank clearings for July, Minneapolis closed the seventh successive month of 1912 to show increases over 1911, and with the total figures so far in the year $569,632,782.14, compared with $542,589,713.69, the total increase over a year ago is now $27,043,068.45. The seven months compare as follows:

	1912.	1911.
January	85,699,581.99	$85,684,404.74
February	77,712,657.11	70,861,772.47
March	82,949,599.18	82,628,645.99
April	83,375,251.76	76,360,750.73
May	79,758,194.89	77,455,968.43
June	78,244,505.76	77,658,216.71
July	81,872,991.45	71,939,954.62

Totals $569,632,782.14 $542,589,713.69

The state of Minnesota has closed the most active fiscal year in its history. Total receipts for the period amounted to $15,805,302.71, and the disbursements $16,321,065.41—making total transactions aggregating more than $32,000,000 for the year. The big total is double that of ten years ago, which was $16,170,000 in 1903.

State Auditor Samuel G. Iverson declares that although current balances are lower than those a year ago, the state is in a healthy financial condition. The revenue fund balance this year is $89,713.63, as compared with $443,576.49 at the end of 1911.

"Big expenditures in the form of state aid to higher education," said Auditor Iverson, "and other demands this fall will produce the usual lean period in state finances late in the year. This stringency might be avoided by the proposed change increasing the railroad taxes from 4 to 5 per cent and making those taxes payable twice a year, and in that way save the state many thousands of dollars interest on loans floated to tide it over the lean periods. The provision for semiannual payment of railroad taxes will doubtless be ratified by the people, a constitutional amendment being required to alter the present system."

H. W. Parker

H. W. Parker, cashier of the Merchants National, has been appointed chairman of the membership committee of the National Association of Credit Men. R. A. Durkee, St. Paul, is another member, T. H. Green of Minneapolis, H. A. Sedgwick, Duluth, and H. M. Obendorfer, Milwaukee.

Twenty-five Years with Northwestern National

Joseph Chapman, Jr., looking backward the other day twenty-five years was startled to see himself a messenger boy again in the Northwestern National. He made a far cry when he did it, for he is now vice-president of the bank, and provocator of many movements in the banking line. Speaking slowly Mr. Chapman told his interviewer: "You bet I started at the bottom. There wasn't anything lower than I was. I took orders from the janitor, got the mail, licked stamps and swept the sidewalk."

In Honor of the Conference

Preparatory to the educational and agricultural convention of the bankers this week the Northwestern National had the bank building washed outside and redecorated and lightened up inside, and had the Northwestern Bank building adjoining, a Lake Superior sandstone affair, scrubbed with wire brushes until it harked back twenty-five years ago when it and Joseph Chapman started in business.

Trust Funds Invested in Securities

State permanent trust funds, amounting to $19,180,788, are invested in securities, says State Treasurer W. J. Smith in his fiscal year report just made. In the year just ended $2,029,371 has been invested and $765,940 has been paid back from former loans. In the closing year $3,551,040 was spent for school purposes, of which $1,531,700 came from the revenue fund and $2,019,340 from the general school fund.

Great Growth of State Bank Business

The combined capital and surplus of Minnesota state banks almost equal total deposits in 1897. For the first year periods Superintendent Kelsey S. Chase has prepared a comparative summary. Many figures of the report will be displayed in the banking department exhibit at the state fair in September. A map will show the capital and deposits in every county. Overdrafts have not grown in the comparison as rapidly as loans and the total surplus has grown more rapidly than capital. Both, according to the superintendent, indicating better banking methods.

Following is the comparative statement for five-year periods from 1897 to 1912:

	1912.	1907.
Number of banks	747	466
Loans and discounts	$110,900,638	$65,229,366
Deposits	123,866,907	73,655,715
Overdrafts	336,384	351,047
Capital	14,392,800	10,686,600
Surplus	4,028,593	3,096,267
	1902.	1897.
Number of banks	238	145

Leave August 20th for Salt Lake Meeting

Eleven members of the banking chapters in the Twin Cities will represent the clerks August 20th at Salt Lake. They will leave August 18th in a special car, joining the easterners at Omaha. Among the Minneapolis men are J. G. Maclean, credit man of the Security National, F. J. Mulcahy of the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company, E. C. Phinney of the Northwestern National, and L. F. Ainsworth of the First National. George L. Allen of New York City, who is educational director of the institute, spent Tuesday in Minneapolis and was entertained by the officers of the Minne-

Minneapolis Trust

The board of tax equalization has under advisement the protest of the Minneapolis Trust Company that it should be taxed under the new state money and credits law instead of by the old law affecting banking corporations. The trust company obtained a favorable decision in the district court and it is now before the supreme court. The city assessor assessed the company this year under the old law at $550,508, on which the tax amounts to $16,515. The trust company's petition places its taxable holdings at $1,001,078, under the new money credit law, the tax amounting to $3,003. Pending a decision from the supreme court, City Assessor Fort has not seen fit to change his method of assessing the company's property in accordance with the decision of the Hennepin county court in the former case. The Minneapolis Trust Company, which does not do a banking business in the generally accepted sense, is the only financial concern in Minneapolis that can claim benefit under the new money and credits law.

Minnesota Notes

Threshing of grain has begun in Minnesota and the Northwestern National has its lobby decorated with sheaves showing head and height.

The contract for the state Bank building at Edgerton, Minn., has been awarded to the Twin City Construction Company.

The Peoples State of North Mankato, Minn., has capitalized at $15,000. Officers are: O. W. Walker, president; N. A. Door, vice-president, and John C. Struck, cashier. These and Ned Rist, F. E. Jefferson, E. Roust and C. E. Ball are the directors.

CLOSE CONNECTICUT BANK

Danielson, Conn., August 6.—The Windham County Savings Bank was enjoined to-day from paying out or receiving money by Bank Commissioners Norris S. Lippitt and Fred P. Holt, who came here Monday and began an examination of the bank's books. Nothing official is given out, but it is understood that a discrepancy of $18,000 has been found in the bank's accounts.

The coming of the commissioners was entirely unexpected. Soon after they began their examination an apparent discrepancy, it is said, was found and it was decided best by them to close the bank's doors until a complete examination of the books had been made. Commissioner Lippitt said that the depositors need have no fear of the outcome.

The bank was incorporated in 1864, and once before was closed temporarily. The president is John A. Paine and the treasurer C. C. Young. The amount of deposits is given at $850,000.

Center Point, Ia.—The Linn County Savings Bank has increased its capital from $10,000 to $20,000.

OFFICE HOLDERS IN AMERICAN BANKERS ASSOCIATION

To Editor THE CHICAGO BANKER: Under the above caption in several banking journals of November, 1911, there appeared a trenchant criticism by E. L. Johnson of Waterloo, Iowa. Also statements as to usurpation of offices in the American Bankers Association, by a few to the exclusion of the many.

At the last session of the American Bankers Association at New Orleans, C. H. McNider of the First National Bank of Mason City, Iowa, offered a resolution to correct in part the wrongs of some members holding three years on the executive council—one as chairman—then vice-president—then president—then three years ex-officio member of the executive council, including several committee appointments at the same time.

This resolution was threshed out on the floor of the convention, and when a vote was taken, the insiders could not, or would not, discern the difference between 227 affirmative votes to 165 against, until noses were counted. The resolution was lost, as a two-thirds vote is required to amend the constitution. However, the result indicated the "handwriting on the wall," and to make partial amends, the last council meeting at Briarcliff approved of the following:

"Resolved, That the following amendment to the constitution be adopted, effective in 1913: That the last paragraph of Section 2 of Article III of the constitution of the American Bankers Association be amended by prefixing thereto the following:

"During the period of one association year after his term shall have expired, the chairman of the executive council shall not be eligible for election by the association to any other office."

This amendment clearly does not go far enough; therefore I offer the following as a partial correction. This has the unanimous approval of the American Bankers Association members of the Wisconsin Bankers Association at the late session.

Amendment to Constitution of the American Bankers Association, Offered by Andrew J. Frame

Whereas, the executive council of the American Bankers Association, through excess of membership, has become unwieldy and also unnecessarily expensive, thus aiding in expenditures aggregating $197,000 for 1910-11—which equals the total receipts; and

Whereas, certain officials and committeemen have been continued in various positions to the extent that ten men have held over 150 of those honors in the past ten years, and that most of the members of the executive council have been absolutely excluded from participating therein; therefore be it

Resolved, That Article III of Section 2, Subdivision (c), referring to members of the executive council, which reads as follows: "The following shall be members ex-officio: the president of the association; the first vice-president; ex-presidents for three years after the expiration of their terms of office as president; the president, first vice-presidents and chairman of the executive committee of trust companies, savings banks and clearing house sections; the chairman of the executive council of the American Institute of Banking, and the president of the organization of secretaries of the State Bankers Association, known as the state secretaries section," shall be amended by eliminating therefrom the words "ex-presidents for three years after the expiration of their terms of office as president."

Resolved, That there be added to Article IV of Section 6—after subdivisions 1, 2, 3 and 4, the following: "(5) No delegate representing a member of the association shall be entitled to hold more than one committee appointment at the same time."

As to continuing committees year after year, in Article IV of Section 6, under Section (2) in tenth line—after the words "be continued for a similar period" insert the following, "except after three years' continuous service, such committee shall be continued only by unanimous consent of those voting thereon."

These do not cover the whole ground, but will be a step toward equity. As I close at this session my three years on the council, no man can charge me with personal motives in the matter. I seek only to correct, as far as possible, palpable wrongs. No matter how capable the men may be who have served heretofore, the point is still well taken that among 12,000 bankers, official honors should not be monopolized by the few. Will the American Bankers Association suspend business if the change is effected? The handwriting is on the wall—227 to 165—therefore, pass the honors around.

A. J. FRAME.

P. S. If you see fit to publish this, do so, and if you wish I will stand sponsor as its author. I go out of the council at the next session, so I am at liberty to speak without being charged with personal motives. With kind regards and best wishes, I remain, very cordially yours,

PROMINENT MISSOURI BANKER VISITS CHICAGO

J. G. Schneider, vice-president of the German-American National Bank, St. Joseph, Mo., stopped off in Chicago this week on his way to Massachusetts. He reports everything in north-west Missouri and surrounding territory as extremely prosperous. Crop prospects are very favorable and never were better. Mr. Schneider is quite a prominent Missouri banker, having been engaged in the banking business for a number of years. He says people in that section of the country are very optimistic as to the outlook.

Reports collected annually by the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, showing the crop outlook, have been a feature of the newspaper's activities for years. This year's report indicates that the showing of last year will be exceeded by 25 per cent. With the exception of damage to fruit in some sections of the west side by the recent rains, bumper crops are forecast. Chief Grain Inspector C. J. Holst, of the public service commission, is quoted as predicting 38,000,000 bushels of wheat for Washington. Other grain and the fruit crops in all sections are expected to make fine showing. Some damage to hay in Skagit county is reported, but the same count promises an oats yield of 150 bushels to the acre. Even with damage to hay last year's record will be broken.

8 PER CENT DIVIDEND

San Francisco.—An additional dividend of 8 per cent will be paid by W. R. Williams, state superintendent of banks, to the depositors of the Bank of Shasta County in the next week or ten days, the dividend being made possible by the action of the supreme court in approving an offer of $20,000 in settlement of the liability of four stockholders of the bank. This group of stockholders, three of whom were directors, owned 166 shares of stock, and their proffered settlement was on the basis of approximately $120 per share. The court rejected the offer of another group of stockholders, representing 381 shares, to settle for $50 per share.

BANK AFFAIRS SOON SETTLED

Napoleon, Ohio, August 6.—That the affairs of the Citizens State Bank will soon be settled and the depositors receive 100 cents on the dollar is the belief expressed here. At a meeting in which 60 per cent of the depositors was represented the four surviving directors as individuals offered to buy up the outstanding claims at face value within 30 days; all agreed to the proposal. Since the bank's assignment in December, 1908, Assignee Donovan has paid 70 per cent of the claims against the bank. The remainder amounts to $120,000. There is little doubt that the proposition will be accepted by all depositors.

BANK LOANS EXPAND

The 7,372 national banks (with resources of nearly ten billion dollars) have just made their reports to the government. Some of the big figures are worth noting. The deposits are nearly 6,000 millions. The loans are nearly 6,000 millions. The cash is nearly 1,000 millions. Business is better than a year ago. Business men need more credit and more means of payment with which to do business. The banks have supplied this demand by an increase of 350 millions in loans, creating 350 millions in new deposits.

George R. Baker, assistant cashier of the National Bank of Commerce, St. Louis, recently has returned from the Ohio bankers convention. He reports the sessions as well attended, and says he had a good time.

OREGON'S "BLUE SKY LAW"

Support of the new bill, known as the "blue sky law," to be placed before the people at the coming election appears to be growing, the Portland Chamber of Commerce and the Portland Realty Board having recently filed arguments in favor of it. It is pointed out that the purpose of the bill is to protect the public from unscrupulous promoters and to foster and encourage legitimate enterprises by making it impossible for dishonest corporations to exist. It is proposed to place the handling of all State corporation business in the hands of a separate department, the cost of which will be about $12,000. The present cost of running corporation business is about $7,000. As revenue under the new law will amount about $20,000, it is estimated there will be a saving to the State of about $15,000 and a saving to the people of not less than $1,000,000 now thrown away on worthless securities.

California

California bankers, and those of the Pacific Northwest states, have changed their itinerary and will arrive in Chicago at 7 A. M. on Sunday morning, Sept. 8th, over the C. & N. W. from Minneapolis. They hope to join the Twin City bankers on their way down to Chicago and will make the daylight run from Chicago over to Detroit as a part of the Chicago special. They will arrive in St. Paul at 1:40 P. M. Saturday, Sept. 7th, and leave there for Chicago at seven o'clock in the evening.

CHICAGO VISITORS

W. R. Marriett, vice-president of the Capron Bank; J. W. Crawford, Dixon National Bank; Charles W. Boyden, cashier Farmers State Bank, Sheffield, and B. W. Mead, cashier State Trust and Savings Bank, Peoria, are Illinois bankers who called on Chicago banking acquaintances the past week. J. B. Green, secretary of the Gary Trust and Savings Bank, and T. W. Yates, cashier of the Commercial Bank and Trust Company, Laurel, Miss., also were in the city.

INDIANA BANKER FREED

Noah P. Marker, formerly cashier of the First National Bank of Tipton, Indiana, who was convicted of having embezzled large sums of money from that institution, has been released from the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan., on a "good behavior" parole. He has served three years of a five-year sentence.

Tacoma

Pursuant to the action taken by the recent convention of the Washington Bankers Association an energetic canvass is now being made among the various bankers of the state that are members in the American Bankers Association in order to secure the 39 new members, so as to entitle Washington to an additional member of the Executive Council, thus making the election of W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National Bank, Spokane, definite and sure. The present membership of 261 lacks but 39 of the number necessary to give the additional member in the executive council. These new members must be secured prior to August 31, 1912. Membership in the American Bankers Association for banks whose capital and surplus is under $100,000 is $10 a year, but applications received now will give a membership up to and including September 1, 1913, for one year's dues, thus gaining practically two months. It is earnestly hoped that the Washington State bankers will patriotically fill up the applications so as to make up the desired number and thereby double the state's representation in the most important financial organization in the world.

very satisfactory comparison with both preceding years, the total aggregating $13,977,582.825, an increase of 7.4 per cent as compared with the same week last year and of 5.2 per cent compared with the corresponding week in 1910. Every section into which the statement is divided shows more or less improvement over last year, and all a considerable gain as compared with two years ago, and New York City reports a substantial increase over the total of both years, although speculative activity was on a much reduced scale. A considerable volume of business in commercial and industrial lines is indicated by the satisfactory returns from the majority of the leading cities in the New England states, Boston, Providence, Hartford, Worcester, Springfield, Fall River and Portland being among those reporting good gains over both preceding years.

The majority of the large cities in the United States now report more or less gain over both years, notably Boston, the increase at that point reflected in part the revival of activity in the textile industry, and at Pittsburgh expansion in the iron and steel lines, while broadening in other departments results in a better showing by Chicago, Minneapolis, St. Louis, Cincinnati, Cleveland and San Francisco.

Philadelphia

The August circular of the Franklin National takes a favorable view of general trade conditions, but says the labor situation is of more importance to the business world than the question of who is to be president.

The Commercial Trust Company of Philadelphia has added John Cadwalader, E. W. Clark, Howard S. Graham and Clement B. Newbold to its board of directors as representatives of the Trust Company of North America, which was recently merged into the Commercial Trust Company. Charles P. Lineaweaver has been elected secretary and trust officer of the company.

Three new assistant cashiers have been elected by the Farmers and Mechanics Bank of Philadelphia as follows: E. T. Stotesbury Lewis, G. H. Miller and John Schlagle.

CHICAGO CHAPTER, A. I. B.

By OTTO J. KRAMPIKOWSKY.

Chicago Chapter held its annual outing on Saturday, August 3d, at High Lake, Ill. The weather was slightly cool. There was swimming, boat riding, races, dancing, and a baseball game. Everybody seemed to be in the best of spirits and enjoying the outing. Coffee was served free, and nearly everybody had brought their lunch along. However, there were quite a number who, laboring under the impression that lunch could be obtained out there, did not take any lunch along with them. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Briggs, who had foreseen this, took enough lunch with them for two score or more, and all those who did not have their lunch with them, were heartily entertained by Arthur Briggs, paying teller of the First National, who is somewhat of a philanthropist. The baseball game was played between the Continental team and the Money Order and Postal Savings team, being won by the Continental team, with a score of 18 to 7, being altogether a one-sided affair. The outing as a whole was a splendid success, thanks to Herman E. Ellefson, chairman of the entertainment committee.

The Security State Bank of Benedict, N. D., has opened for business. Officers: J. Tofflemire, president; F. S. Tofflemire, vice-president; J. A. Morris, cashier.

tion of capital in holding companies controlling public utilities, thus centralizing management, has to date been helpful to the investor and to the consumer, but the business is growing so large and so fast as to bring with it many problems for our solution, the correct disposal of which is of much concern and of common interest to investment bankers and to the public as well as to all commercial bankers.

The true value of corporate property is given as about $60,000,000,000 as against 15,000,000,000 in 1900, while we annually refund bonds amounting to $500,000,000. The charge upon business is now very large and if business becomes depressed it must in the very nature of things grow less profitable. Otherwise, we will invite a law similar to the "British Companies Act," whereby many corporations will be able to issue securities direct to the investing public, and the business of investment banking be somewhat reduced. It is already a fact that to-day first-class underwriting houses are meeting with more than ordinary difficulties in securing new issues of the proper quality. However, it is a tribute to the character of high-grade American bond houses that the same inflexible standards govern their purchases of securities irrespective of the state of the bond market.

Declining high-grade bond values have for years constituted a world-wide phenomenon. In the necessary competition for public funds, the railroads have been hard pressed by the public service corporations, by the manufacturing industrials and by the newer municipalities, the credit of which precludes the sale of bonds on a low interest basis. The result has very naturally been a universal increase of interest rates; and the readjustment process has been upward to the rates which industrials are willing to pay for capital, and not down toward the once common 4 per cent return on railroad bonds, a return more honored now in the breach than in the observance. Many bond authorities deplore the present tendency toward higher yields; they say it smacks of a too liberal construction of the laws and ethics of wise investment—that nowadays the investor considers the rate first, then the bond itself. However that may be, it is useless to deny that high-priced capital is a condition, not a theory, and that so far as we may judge from the present and the past, the hitherto avored corporate borrowers will be constrained to concede more and more to the insistent demand of the great investing body. Our railroads particularly face the problem of a falling freight rate and rising interest rate.

During the past two years we have been sending large amounts of capital to Europe and Canada, yet our railroads are unable to secure capital at home in large amounts, for the long period needed for financing necessary improvements, at rates they can afford to pay. Some have borrowed abroad, while many others are at a standstill. In sharp contrast to our situation is the extensive railroad building now being carried on in Canada under the fostering influence of a liberal government policy. It is my opinion that public sentiment in our own country has become so prejudiced against our railroads and their past management that we are sufferers from our efforts to readjust our methods on what we allege are more conservative lines. Is there any assurance that this same period of reaction will not attach to other forms of corporation financing?

In fact, is it not already here? And should not bankers associations, chambers of commerce, manufacturers associations, etc., unite for the protection of our industries, which can best be secured, it seems to me, by a campaign of honest publicity and a broader education of our great army of voters, who periodically are used to create this adverse sentiment until the truth is made to appeal to them. Is it not time for us to recognize the value and importance of public sentiment and lend a hand to support markets for our securities at home and abroad, at least when public sentiment runs against us?

It is my judgment that the time has come when the business interests of this country are entitled to a hearing. We have recently witnessed the organization of the chamber of commerce of the United States of America, and it promises to be of great service and to do much good. Through such an association we can, if organized, expect to receive and to extend some support. Through a greater organization they expect to deal with business problems from a scientific standpoint. Why should not we do so? Unless through one central body we declare our ideas as a unit and express with a common voice the demands for legislation helpful to our business, how shall we get it? The mass of people to-day looks upon the present situation not only without fear, but with hopefulness. There is, however, a better understanding of finance, and of credits, a new basis for financing, and there is going to be a finer scientific attitude toward public affairs, a deeper desire for truth, a far more sensitive feeling toward human rights and a higher standard of integrity in all business affairs. There will be no destruction of things good, or confiscation of property. But there is a demand that the security for our bond and stock issues should improve and if we form this organization we shall be better prepared to take our share of the responsibility, which progress will require, and we will, I believe, be able to reap that reward which attaches to the legitimate promotion of America's industries.

This is the spirit of modern banking—whether commercial or investment—and is offered to you by your organization committee as a broad basis upon which to build the Investment Bankers Association of America.

During last month eighty-seven new accounts were opened in the Indianapolis postal savings banks. There was on deposit at the close of the month $81,548. Since the bank opened 1,488 accounts have been started, and during that period 674 accounts were closed. Of this number seventy-five were closed in 10 months.

Accounts of Iowa banks invited. Reserve agents for national banks

The Bank of Keosauqua, Ill., has changed hands. It has been sold to the Merchants State Bank of Centralia, who have taken possession. E. S. Ackerman, the cashier, will remain at the bank for a short while, after which he will go to Centralia to take a position with the Merchants State.

Des Moines, August 7.—The movement for better crops in Iowa was given a lively launching at a state convention held in Des Moines Thursday of last week. It was a gathering called by the commercial interests of Des Moines and by Percy W. Hall, secretary of the Iowa Bankers Association. In order to secure the services of P. G. Holden as expert in charge, it was necessary to make a quick decision and those back of the movement called the convention forthwith. Charles T. Shade of Rock Rapids, president of the Iowa Bankers Association, was on the scene and took an active part in the deliberations. The organization became a certainty. The following officers were named: president, P. G. Holden, Ames; vice-president, R. P. Holton, Des Moines; secretary, G. E. Stayner of Ames; treasurer, P. W. Hall, Des Moines. Directors: C. F. Curtis, Ames; C. E. Bradley, Atlantic. C. H. McNider, Mason City; W. W. Marsh, Waterloo; R. W. Young, Buffalo Center; Fred E. Bissell, Dubuque; G. S. Allen, Mount Airy.

Objects of the Association

The objects of the association as outlined by the committee on resolutions are briefly detailed as follows: First—Improve the economic conditions of the state; second—Increase the soil productivity; third—Better the rural school conditions; fourth—Create social centers in rural districts; fifth—Improve the moral tone of the state; sixth—Promote county organizations for crop improvement.

As was explained last week, the movement is to be endorsed and pushed in all possible ways by the Iowa Bankers Association. It is in keeping with the recently adopted ideas of crop betterment as a means of adding to Iowa's wealth. An effort will be made to secure $300,000. This will be divided up so that each county will receive $3,000. There will be crop experts sent into each county of the state. There was a furor started at the convention when the charge was made that the movement was an advertising scheme by a Chicago mail order concern. However, the consensus of opinion seemed to be that "tainted" money, like water, is purified by circulation, and it was decided to take all money available and offered irrespective of source.

For Repeal of Statute

It is quite evident that the present Iowa statute putting a straight five mill levy on moneys and credits is going to be an "issue" before the coming session of the legislature. The law, it will be remembered, was passed by the last legislature upon the showing that the law formerly on the books was driving capital out of Iowa. Bankers for the most part favored the present law. However, in some of the counties the word has gone out that there will be a big fight made for the repeal of the statute when the Solons meet. The contention of the opponents of the present law is that it was designed to bring much hidden money out into the open and that it has failed of its purpose. Last week, it was shown that the revenue from the moneys and credits had fallen off to such an extent that the levy was raised .1 of a mill, although $29,000,000 increase was shown in the amount for assessment. This is being used as an argument that the law is proving an expense to the average taxpayer who is not as well able to bear it as the capitalist whom the new law assists. The reports from six counties show an assessment of money and credits and bank corporation stock less than that of the previous year. These are Scott, Taylor, Warren, Cerro Gordo, Jefferson and Dickinson.

Bank Clearings Show Big Gain

Des Moines bank clearings continue to show a flattering gain. In the month of July, the clearings totaled $19,007,665.63, while for the same month last year, they totaled $16,026,575.29. This is an increase of $2,981,090.34, which Des Moines bankers consider eminently satisfactory. The clearings for the closing week in July showed an increase of $307,673.45 over the clearings for the corresponding week last year.

C. H. McNider

C. H. McNider, the popular Mason City banker, is winning prominence by having some big trees on his farm near that city doctored by tree surgeons. The trees have been decaying within the bark. Mr. McNider has had the experts bore holes in the trees, treat the fungus to a dose of corrosive sublimate, then fill the hole with cement coated with tar to keep out the water. He believes that some of the trees which might otherwise die of old age will now last several years.

Establish Postal Savings in Des Moines

Four postal savings banks have now been established in Des Moines by Postmaster L. C. Kurtz. The central station at the downtown postoffice is showing up with deposits of $35,348 and 650 depositors. The new East Des Moines station has $206 in deposits, the new Highland Park station $20 and the new University Place station $4. All classes of people are represented in central station depositors, but the foreign element which is working in the mines surrounding the city is predominant.

Death of Mrs. McHenry of Denison Mourned

Denison, Iowa, has been mourning the death of Mrs. Mary McHenry, wife of President W. P. McHenry, of the First National Bank. Mrs. McHenry died of paralysis at the banker's summer home at Arnold's Park, where she has been spending the summer. As the stock in the First National is owned by the McHenry family, Mrs. McHenry was vice-president of the institution for many years. The deceased has been prominent in Iowa. She was past national president of the Woman's Relief Corps and was prominent in W. C. T. U. circles. She made a specialty of fancy stock raising and has taken many prizes at the Iowa state fair. All business houses at Denison were closed during the funeral, which was largely attended.

Private Bank Fails

Another private bank has gone "broke" in Iowa and the three owners of the Pilot Mound Bank at Pilot Mound have filed bankruptcy schedules in the federal courts at Des Moines. The institution owes its depositors $61,792.86 and lists collectable notes of $49,400 to partially offset this amount. The total assets are given at $63,812.73 and the liabilities at $73,959.85. W. P. Linn lists his assets at $21.34 and his liabilities at $12,522.22; R. A. Linn lists his assets at $5,781.70 and his liabilities at $7,785.85. The third owner, A. Lundblad, lists his assets at $20.800 and his liabilities at $47,546.80.

It is announced that S. L. Moore and J. H. Herman have organized a new bank at Pilot Mound to be known as the Pilot Mound Savings, although articles have not been filed. Mr. Moore will be president and Mr. Herman vice-president. The new bank commences operations at once.

Appointed State Bank Examiner

Announcement has been made of the appointment of J. M. Hockett of Des Moines as state bank examiner. Mr. Hockett was some years ago a clerk in the Century Savings, Des Moines, and later was cashier of a bank at Le Grande. He accepted a position as credit man for a big Des Moines furniture house and is now engaged in ascertaining whether the state and savings banks of Iowa are properly conducting their business.

Iowa Banking Notes

Charles D. Waterbury, a banker from Dayton, Iowa, was brought to Des Moines for hospital treatment some days ago. However, the treatment availed him nothing, and he died Sunday of last week. The remains were taken to Dayton for interment the following day.

George B. Hippee, who recently acquired a controlling interest in the Iowa Loan and Trust Company of Des Moines, along with Simon Casady of the Central State Bank, has been elected president of the institution succeeding Walter E. Coffin. Mr. Casady was chosen director to succeed Mr. Coffin.

It is stated that a sixth story will be added to the new Teachout building in East Des Moines which is to be occupied by the Iowa Trust and Savings Bank. The applications for rooms in the building by professional men has been so heavy that the original plan of a five-story structure is likely to be abrogated.

Secretary W. C. Hayward has turned over to State Treasurer Morrow $37,476 as automobile taxes collected in July. The amount was not to be turned over until August 15th but there was demand for the money to be used in road building this fall. The total amount of automobile taxes collected this year is estimated to be $170,000.

Mrs. Lucille Dearborn, daughter of W. H. Anderson, well known western Iowa banker, died last week at Red Oak and her remains were taken to Glenwood for burial.

The Cherokee County State at Cherokee has been reincorporated and has a capital stock of $30,000. The incorporators include, H. H. Lamoreaux, J. W. Bryant, Walter Rasmus and others.

The directors of the First National at Corning have chosen former vice-president Ralph Newcomb as president of the institution to succeed F. N. Widner who recently sold his interest in the institution.

Mills B. Aldredge, paying teller at the Valley National, Des Moines, has resigned to become auditor for the American Life Insurance Company of this city.

The Hudson Savings has increased its capital stock from $15,000 to $50,000.

Mrs. D. B. Miller, wife of the assistant cashier of the First National of Shenandoah, died recently at her home in that city. She was prominent in social circles and will be sadly missed.

The Linn County Savings of Cedar Rapids has increased its capital stock from $20,000 to $30,000.

Work has been started on the new building which the German Savings is erecting at Gilbertville.

F. J. Eighmey, president of the First National at Waterloo, gave a banquet to the employees of the institution and their ladies at the Ellis Hotel in that city as an evidence of appreciation. The affair was much enjoyed.

C. B. McKanna, a banker living at Burlington, Wis., has entered a herd of Jersey cows for the Iowa State Fair.

Articles of incorporation have been filed by the Farmers Savings at Langdon with a capital stock of $10,000. Officers are E. D. Chamberlain, of Spencer, president; F. W. Bernhagen, of Spencer, vice-president; C. Atkinson, of Langdon, cashier.

O. A. Wilson, who purported to be a detective and displayed a big badge to prove it, forged a check on the Baxter State at Quarry for a small amount. Reports indicate that he made similar attempts at other towns but without appreciable success.

The Farmers State at Rudd has filed articles with the secretary of state. The capital stock is $25,000. L. W. Reed is president; Ken E. Penny, cashier.

By JOHN J. BIDDISON

A new bank of the savings order is to be established in Morningside, the largest suburb of Sioux City, which includes within its confines nearly 8,000 people and has within the last few years built up a considerable trading center near Peters Park. A name for the new institution will be chosen at a meeting of stockholders to be held within a few days. The organization is now in only a tentative state, and the amount of capital to be invested is not determined. John Scott, Jr., for twenty years identified with the Northwestern National Bank and president for the period preceding the sale of his interests in it, is a promoter. Among the other stockholders will be Geo. E. Ward, C. J. Milligan, J. G. Shumaker, Frederick W. Lowr and E. C. Peters, all substantial business men and residents of the suburb. The bank will be established in a business block now being constructed. It will be the first in Morningside.

Brule National Enlarged

During the past week the Bank of Chamberlain, Chamberlain, S. D., was consolidated with the Brule National Bank of that place, and the Bank of Chamberlain will be liquidated. W. H. Pratt, Jr., was the principal figure in the consolidation, and will be president of the Brule National. A. G. Hill and E. E. Dye, formerly of the Bank of Chamberlain, will conduct the farm loan business formerly operated by the two banks, and will be directors in the Brule National, but will not be active in the management. The two assistant cashiers of the Bank of Chamberlain will serve in like capacities with the Brule National Bank, and Geo. F. Pilger, formerly assistant cashier of that bank, will be the new cashier. This gives the Brule National nearly $500,000 deposits, and makes it the largest bank in that country.

New South Dakota Bank

Articles of incorporation for the Farmers State Bank of Kranzburg, Codington county, South Dakota, have been filed with the secretary of state at Pierre, S. D. The bank is to have a capital stock of $10,000. The incorporators are John A. Ries, of Kranzburg, and Henry M. Hanten, Chas. M. Kranz, Nick J. Steichen and F. J. Lamme, of Watertown, S. D.

Held Up for 50 Cents

While passing a dark corner on the West Side last Wednesday night, Ford Wheeler, of the First National, and another young man friend were held up at the point of a pistol that may or may not have been loaded, and the pair were ordered to "fork over" 50 cents apiece to a mysterious stranger behind a black mask. The robber went through their pockets, picked out the desired amount and sent them on their way, allowing them to retain their watches and surplus money and even a diamond stud. The victims decided that they were the victims of a joke and not of a real honest-to-goodness robbery, and did not report it to the police.

Among the Visiting Bankers

The following bankers were in Sioux City the past week: W. S. Short, president of the Northwestern State Bank, Orange City, Iowa; W. H. Pratt, Jr., president Brule National, Chamberlain, S. D.; Melvin Royer, cashier of the First National, Fonda, Iowa; Herman Fortin, cashier of the Farmers Bank, Salix, Iowa; John R. Welch, president First State Bank, Mapleton, Iowa; W. R. Mathewson, vice-president First National, Walthill, Nebraska.

PEOPLES STOCK YARDS STATE INCREASES CAPITAL

The stockholders of the Peoples Stock Yards State Bank, 47th Street and Ashland Avenue, Chicago, have voted to increase the capital of the bank from $300,000 to $500,000. The increase is to be paid in by August 15th, at which time the bank will have a capital of $500,000 and surplus of $50,000. This bank is one of the largest, most successful and progressive outside of the loop. Its affairs are under the constant supervision of a responsible board of directors, men of wealth and years of successful business experience in that neighborhood. It serves a very large territory south and west of the Stock Yards and numbers among its savings depositors thousands of the foreign born residents of that section. Its deposits of about $3,600,000 are constantly increasing and it was for this reason and in further recognition of the rightful demand of depositors for maximum protection that the directors recommended this increase. The officers are: R. J. Schlesinger, president; Wm. J. Rathje, vice-president; H. C. Laycock, cashier; John A. Nylin, assistant cashier. Directors: Edward Morris, J. A. Spoor, Arthur Meeker, H. E. Germany's Co-operative Credit System for Farmers

Second paper giving details of the famous Raiffeisen plan for furnishing cheap credit to land workers

Washington, August 7.—The investigation of the German co-operative credit systems which is being made by Ambassador Leishman at Berlin in connection with President Taft's effort to introduce co-operative credit into this country for the benefit of the American farmer is divided into three parts: an investigation of the Raiffeisen system of rural banks, of the Schulze-Delitzsch system of popular urban banks, and of the Landschaften and Ritterschaften mortgage bond associations, which are the medium of securing the farmer the money necessary for the permanent improvement of his land.

Germany is the birthplace of co-operative credit. Necessity was the mother of its invention. In the first half of the last century the German farmer found himself in the grasp of the money lender. The great transition in industrial conditions which was then going on throughout the world made it essential that the farmer be given some means of securing cheaper and quicker credit if he was to successfully meet competition in the commercial world. The excessive demands of the usurers, a heavy burden always on the farmer, became increasingly hard for him to bear, as the financial fabric of the commercial world progressed to its complex perfection and modern finance furnished to other classes an auxiliary machine, which placed the farmer under a great disadvantage. Improved systems of credit gave the merchant's dollar a multiplied strength. The farmer's dollar remained a dead weight—worth a dollar and no more. He possessed it and for what he needed he spent a part of it and kept the balance idle, dead. The merchant's dollar was being deposited and withdrawn in a dozen transactions in as many hours, doing the work of a dozen dollars.

As David Lubin, American delegate to the Institute of Agriculture at Rome, expressed it in a lecture before the Southern Commercial Congress, improved credit rendered the merchant's dollar dynamic. The farmer's dollar remained static. The farmer's dollar was electricity unharnessed—possessing the potential force, but not harnessed so that the owner could secure the benefit of that force. The merchant's dollar was electricity applied in the power house. The force which in the farmer's dollar was dormant was awakened by hitching it to a machine. If the farmer was to become the peer of the merchant in the commercial world he must have some such machine.

This problem became apparent to Frederick William Raiffeisen, Burgomaster of Weyerbusch in Germany. He set about planning a machine which would give the farmer quicker and cheaper credit. As the basis for his plan he accepted the principle that what the farmer was denied as an individual he could secure by co-operation. The individual farmer might be too small to command extended credit facilities at good terms, but a community of farmers combined would represent a strength with whom any lender would be glad to deal. As a constitution for such co-operative bodies he laid down three maxims:

First of all, the members of the combine must hold themselves liable to an unlimited extent for the transactions of the society; second, the society must operate only in a limited field, so that every member would be a neighbor of every other member. This reduced the chances of squandered loans; for, every member being responsible for what every other member borrowed from the society and having his eye upon his expenditures, it was improbable that Herr Fritz would in silence contemplate any extravagant habits of his neighbor, Herr Heinrich. Lastly, that the management of the society's business be done at a minimum cost, most of the managers giving their services gratis. This would, of course, reduce the cost to the farmers and bring them cheaper credit.

Briefly stated, this is the simple basis of the Raiffeisen system of rural credit, which has spread practically to every country in Europe and which has done more than all else to release the European farmer from the grasp of the money lender and to enable him to make the dollar which he used to hoard in a sock an active help to him every hour of the day.

Fearing speculative control of the banks, and desiring to extend the benefits of his system to the poorest who might ask aid, Herr Raiffeisen refused to allow the banks to be established with a foundation capital secured by selling shares of capital stock. He argued that a rural bank which offered as security the holdings of every member of it could do business without any foundation capital. To secure a working capital for his banks he offered four sources of income: One, deposits on current account; two, savings deposits; three, loans from other banks or from private individuals; and, four, the reserve fund made of earnings of past years. Since the system was first inaugurated a law has been passed in Germany requiring all co-operative banks to have a foundation capital. To comply with the law the Raiffeisen banks sold shares of capital stock, but limited their value to a nominal amount, and, to prevent any control of the bank, restricted the right of individuals to hold large quantities of the stock.

The most remarkable fact which has developed with regard to these banks is that of the working capital which they use to finance the farmers and members, 88.8 per cent is furnished by the farmers themselves or by the local depositing public. This, at least, is the percentage of their share of the working capital supplied to all of these banks in Germany in 1909. In other words, the farmer has the money to finance his own business if only he can get the machine to place that money in active operation. Another remarkable fact, shown by the statistics of that year, is that these banks in Germany did their business with a capital which amounted to only 3.8 per cent of their total funds. Savings deposits form the great bulk of their working capital. These are accepted from members and non-members alike. Deposits on current account, however, are accepted from members only.

It can easily be imagined that the management of the Raiffeisen banks is a very simple matter. Generally, only one person is a salaried employee—the secretary, who does the actual executive work. The basis of management for the banks is the general meeting of the members. At these meetings there are selected a council of supervision and a committee of management. The meeting, the council, and the committee take care of all the administrative work. This gives the banks a very economical administration. In 1909 the average cost of management in Germany was about $153.12.

The banks finance the farmers through two sorts of loans—loans on current account and loans for fixed periods. The loans on current account form about a third of the total of loans, and there is at this time a strong tendency to extend the practice of loans on current account, as this is the most convenient form for the borrowing members and is similar to the loans of banks in cities to mercantile houses. Security is given for the loans in the form of mortgages, by the deposits of stock or other security, by finding sureties, or, sometimes, by mere promise. Money not employed in loans is used for deposit with the central co-operative banks, which will be described at another time, or in general banking operations with third parties.

The Raiffeisen banks were not organized for profit and, consequently, none of the profits is distributed in the form of dividends. Some of the money is expended in the furtherance of public utility projects, but for the most part the profits are carried over into the reserve funds, and the exceeding prosperity of the banks in past years, with the profits constantly swelling the reserve funds, is making the Raiffeisen banks a strong financial power at the back of the German farmer.

NATIONAL BANKS ORGANIZATION

Washington.—During the month of July, 1912, 25 applications to organize national banks were received. Of the applications pending, 18 were approved and four rejected. In the same month, 16 banks, with total capital of $4,510,000, were authorized to begin business, of which number seven, with capital of $210,000, had individual capital of less than $50,000, and nine with capital of $4,300,000, individual capital of $50,000 or over.

On July 31, 1912, the total number of national banks organized was 10,235, of which 2,835 had discontinued business, leaving in existence 7,400 banks, with authorized capital of $1,054,350,435, and circulation outstanding, secured by bonds, $721,620,148. The total amount of national bank circulation outstanding was $744,905,941, of which $23,282,793 was covered by lawful money of a like amount deposited with the treasurer of the United States on account of liquidating and insolvent national banks and associations which had reduced their circulation.

NEW BANK EXAMINERS

Washington.—L. P. Hosmer of Montgomery, Ala., has been appointed a national bank examiner and will be assigned to the district now in charge of J. R. Stevens, comprising the state of Alabama, four banks in Mississippi and the New Orleans banks, which are examined jointly with another examiner. Mr. Stevens is to become clearing house examiner for New Orleans. Mr. Hosmer was for more than five years with the Selma National Bank, Selma, Ala., and for three years has been a state bank examiner in Alabama.

Roscoe J. C. Dorsey of Washington, D. C., also has been appointed a national bank examiner. Mr. Dorsey is at present the examiner of building and loan associations in the District of Columbia, acting under authority of the comptroller of the currency.

Indiana

Richmond.—A million dollar combination was formed here when the stockholders of the Miami Valley Securities Company decided to consolidate with the Columbus Securities Company of Indianapolis. When the final articles of the combine are filed the corporation will have a capital of over $2,000,000, it is said. The Miami Valley company will be known as the Columbus Securities Company. The stock of the Miami company was taken share for share with the Columbus company and 7 per cent coupon dividend checks were given.

Indianapolis.—Harry L. Arnold, chief clerk in the bank department in the office of the auditor of state, has issued a call for a meeting of the state bank examiners to be held at the auditor's office August 9th. He said the purpose of the call was to have a general discussion of banking conditions throughout the state, and to consider suggestions as to how the examinations might be made more valuable to the banks. The examiners now employed are James C. Fletcher, of Knox; R. C. Houston, of Frankfort; Henry Hoch, of Rockport; W. M. Whitson, of Scottsburg; Arthur Craven, of this city), and W. C. Thomas, of Logansport.

EDMONTON NEWS

Edmonton, Alta.—Sir Montague Allan of Montreal, president of the Merchants Bank of Canada and vice-president of the Allan Royal Mail Line, announced in Edmonton that two of the branch banks to be established at nine points in western Canada will be opened in this city within thirty days, saying also that the company is building two steamships, each of 18,000 tons and capable of 18 knots an hour. They will be the largest liners entering the harbor at Montreal. One of the steamers will be named the Calgarian in honor of the city of Calgary, the other being called the Alsatian, in recognition of the French people who came to Canada from Alsace. Sir Montague, who was accompanied on the western trip by J. W. Blackwell, the vice-president of the bank, and Thomas Long of Toronto, a director, expressed himself as surprised and gratified over the development in central Alberta, more especially with the progress made in mixed farming, which, he said, is the only sound basis for building up successful and profitable agriculture.

Increase in Bank Clearings

Bank clearings in Edmonton for July amount to $17,254,171, as compared with $8,950,813 for the same month a year ago. The customs revenue was $110,581, as against $47,565; building permits, $1,494,330, as against $474,909; stamp sales, $12,629, against $9,455. The municipality reports that with the exception of the telephone system, which had a deficit of $2,500, the civic utilities show substantial increases over June, 1911, as follows: Street railways, $2,600; electric light branch, $4,600; water works, $1,300; markets, $53. The civic assets are credited as follows in the various departments: Engineering, $38,000; health, $76,178; electric light, $279,639; stores and works, $267,387; police $53,279; waterworks, net, $888,798; power plant, $1,229,886; street railway, $1,120,000; market, $88,900; fire department, $204,172; gas, $1,500; architects, $8,437; parks, $18,784.

Predicts Bumper Crops

T. M. Turnbull, manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce; H. H. Richards, manager of the Northern Crown Bank, F. C. Murray, and George H. Gowan, manager of the Credit Foncier, were among those on the Edmonton Business Men's excursion to eighty-four cities, towns and villages in central Alberta, July 22d to 29th. The party, which traveled in a special train, covered 2,022 miles on the tour, visiting the farming and milling districts, coal fields and railway construction camps. H. Milton Martin, president of the Edmonton Board of Trade, Alderman Gustave H. May and J. G. Tipton and J. E. Brown, manager of Revillon Wholesale, Ltd., were the spokesmen of the party. The purpose of the trip was to get acquainted with the business men in the various communities and look over the grain and general farming situation before the work of harvesting and shipping begins. James W. Shaw of Chicago, editor of the National Land and Irrigation Journal, who accompanied the party, says he never saw crops in better condition anywhere and he predicted that record yields will result. The wholesale merchants report increased activity in all lines, saying also that collections are good.

Capital Invested in Canada

Senator Rufus H. Pope who was in Edmonton recently returning to Ottawa from a tour of Western Canada, said in an interview here that the financiers of Great Britain will soon have to find an outlet for accumulated interest on capital invested in Canada, adding that he knows of no reason why the western provinces will suffer from any lack of money to promote legitimate enterprises. The impression made by Premier Borden in England, he continued, has had the most reassuring effect upon the loaning classes and its influence will be of a lasting character so far as Canada securities are concerned.

Alberta Interurban

Directors of the Alberta Interurban Railway Company, which holds a federal charter to build lines in various parts of this province, have approved plans for the first section of the system. C. S. Drummond, vice-president of the company, who is in Edmonton with K. J. C. Zinck, chief engineer, says that heavy oil engines will be used to transport freight and passengers in the rural districts. The line will be operated in conjunction with the three transcontinental systems traversing the province of Alberta.

$500,000 Trust Company Organized

Five hundred thousand dollars is the capitalization of the British Trusts, Limited, organized in Edmonton and incorporated in Alberta to do a general trust business. The stock is in 5,000 shares, 1,000 preference and 4,000 ordinary, each of a par value of $100. The directors are: Edgerton W. Day, founder of Daysland; James K. Cornwall, member of the provincial parliament and president of the Northern Transportation Company; Charles W. Cross, attorney-general of Alberta; J. F. McMillan, Robert Tegler and P. E. Lessard, member of the provincial parliament, Edmonton; R. H. Pope, Ottawa, and Dr. H. G. Mac-Kid of Calgary.

Will Irrigate 400,000 Acres

W. J. Challis of London, Eng., where he is secretary of the Western Canada Land Company, the Southern Alberta Land Company and the Canadian Wheat Lands, Ltd., is in Edmonton from a visit to the southern part of the province, where 400,000 acres of land will be put under irrigation in a short time. He said in an interview that conditions in England, with vexatious labor problems and an over-supply of workmen, insure a permanent immigration to western Canada.

Big Future for Edmonton

F. Wright, a financier and underwriter of London, England, has come to Edmonton to invest several hundred thousand dollars in business sites. He believes the capital of Alberta will surpass all inland cities in western Canada in a few years, saying also that the future of the city as an important commercial and converting center is assured.

$1,000,000 of English Capital

Real estate purchases have just been closed by George H. W. Pearson of Glasgow, Scotland, brother of Lord Cowdray, head of the Pearson Contracting Company, which will ultimately result in the investment of $1,000,000 of English capital in Edmonton. Mr. Pearson is planning to erect a number of business buildings on his newly acquired holdings, which cost in the neighborhood of $500,000.

LAKE COMMERCE INCREASES

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.—The total freight movement through the canals at Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan and Ontario, for the month of July, 1912, was 10,781,304 short tons, against 8,545,819 tons for the corresponding period last year, or an increase of 26 per cent. The increase was due principally to the eastbound movement of iron ore and wheat.

PRIVATE BANK LEGISLATION

"Though there are many private banks as safe as any bank with state supervision, unless their affairs are open to inspection, there is no assurance that they will not be insolvent some time." This opinion was expressed by State Superintendent of Banks F. E. Baxter of Ohio in favoring the proposed amendment of the constitutional convention which, if passed, would prevent the private banking institutions not under state inspection from using the words "bank, banker or banking" in connection with their business.

Mr. Baxter's remarks came in answer to the assertion that there had been so few failures among private banks in the last 50 years that the amendment was unnecessary. He admitted that the passing of the amendment would work a hardship on well-conducted private banks, but said that the people on the other hand would be protected from unsafe institutions.

About half of the 225 private banks in the state are already in sympathy with the state department and send in reports of their financial condition. The department of banks, according to Mr. Baxter, will make no fight for or against the amendment. At a meeting of representatives of private banks of the state in Columbus recently it was decided to take steps toward the carrying out of an active organized campaign against the constitutional amendment. It was declared that the amendment would be discriminatory without protecting the interests of the public.

"ROOSEVELT to get what he wants at this convention," says the Daily News. At the other one he got what was coming to him.

THE average income of many a married man, says the Chicago News, is about 2 A. M.; makes the high cost of living harder to bear.

"I AM going to vote for Taft," said a prominent Chicago republican the other day, "unless it seems to be necessary to vote for Wilson to defeat Roosevelt." He isn't the only one either.

AGRICULTURE is still the most important industry in the country and will continue to be so till the end of time. It is therefore encouraging to note the changes which are operating for the betterment of the farmer's life.

THERE is much less subsidizing of vessels by foreign governments than our subsidy shouters represent, and in most of the subsidy projects the interests of shippers and of the government are protected as they never are in any subsidy bill that has been pressed in our congress for many years.

IT IS right that bank notes should be smaller—they buy less than they did.

FRANK D. BRUNDAGE, New York, writing from Marquette, says: "Copper and iron mining business booming with plenty of work for all who want it." Reads like good times!

WHAT the Illinois delegation to the Minneapolis conference lacked in numbers, they made up in weight. As samples there were George M. Reynolds and J. F. Thompson of the Merchants Loan, each weighing about two-fifty, and B. F. Harris, the "bull-mooser," who had been hobnobbing with T. R. himself. No, Farmer Joe, the Illinois delegation was not "lost."

TALK about T. R. having it all his own way at the Coliseum; he wasn't in it for a minute with Geo. B. Caldwell at the Waldorf, where he bull-moosed a new Investment Bankers Association, as a reminder that the Briarcliff steam roller didn't hurt a little bit.

PROF. EDWIN G. COOLEY was one of the surprises of the Minneapolis conference. He disagreed slightly with many of the speakers, but based his remarks upon a two-years' investigation of the industrial schools of Europe made at the invitation of the Chicago Commercial Club.

PROF. COOLEY believes that continuation schools like they have in Germany afford the true solution of the American educational question. He believes that the fundamental defect in the American public school is that it drops the boy on an average at fourteen years of age.

PRESIDENT HOWARD ELLIOTT of the Northern Pacific was one of the most interesting and convincing speakers brought forth by the conference program. He made it pretty plain that in his opinion farms are paying better income on the investment than railroads are at the present time and under present conditions.

F. M. JORDAN of Sedalia, Mo., made a number of short talks at the Minneapolis conference, and probably the best one which he made was in his earnest invitation to bring the meeting next year to Kansas City. He backed up his remarks by filing formal invitations from the clearing houses of both Kansas City, Kan., and Kansas City, Mo.

DR. EDWARD A. RUMELY, one of the leading manufacturers of the United States and generally alluded to as one of America's best educated men, made a wonderful hit by describing the methods and attainments of his new school for boys on a seven-hundred-acre farm at Interlocken, Ind.

DR. RUMELY is putting in force ideas which he acquired while undergoing his own educational processes in Germany.

JOE HIRSCH, chairman of the agricultural committee of the Texas Bankers Association, and hailing from Corpus Christi, made one of the individual hits of the conference. He made a humorous address at the banquet given at the Lafayette Club and was very loudly applauded.

ALMOST at the close of the second day's conference in St. Paul, when Chairman Chapman was using the gavel on nearly every speaker at the end of about three minutes, Mr. Hirsch was called upon to speak for Texas. He stepped quickly forward to the speaker's desk, and just as quickly picked up the chairman's gavel and put it in his inside pocket. He began by saying, "Now, if some kind gentleman will please lock the door, I can finish in about fifteen minutes," and he took up all of the fifteen minutes which he filled very interestingly.

PRESIDENT ANDREW M. SOULE of the Georgia School of Agriculture was another of the hits of the conference, and the agricultural committee of the A. B. A. decided promptly to try to get him on the program at Detroit. On this list of preferred speakers were placed the names of Edwin G. Cooley of Chicago, and George D. Vincent, president of the University of Minnesota. If the agricultural committee can have its way these three gentlemen will speak at the session which is devoted to agricultural topics.

ILLINOIS, which at first seemed likely to be in default so far as a delegation was concerned, showed up finally with a good list of heavyweights. Among those present from Illinois were George M. Reynolds of the Continental and Commercial National; J. Fred Thompson of the Merchants Loan and Trust; B. F. Harris of Champaign; Captain C. C. Craig of Galesburg; C. R. Pendarvis of Media and S. E. Bradt of DeKalb.

IOWA, which has a habit of counting everybody an Iowan who was born in or ever lived in the state, figured up not less than twenty persons present. Of course they included such men as Messrs. Reynolds, Chapman, Thompson and Prof. Cooley, who at one time was a school superintendent in that state.

ON the regular list, however, Iowa had a splendid delegation of strong men, headed by Chairman Charles H. McNider of Mason City and seconded by Ex-president E. J. Curtin of Decorah and Arthur Reynolds of Des Moines. Secretary Hall was present, and as usual was quite active in doing everything he could to help along the movement of the proceedings.

DEAN WOODS of the Minnesota Agricultural College was the only speaker openly to tackle the labor problem, so far as it applies to farm effort. He handled his subject cleanly and effectively, as he does invariably. At the conclusion of his talk he took up the subject of rural health conditions and methods for stamping out epidemics among the live stock.

PRESIDENT ELLIOTT of the Northern Pacific told the bankers that statistics gathered by the railroads show that it will require every freight car in the United States to move the grain crop this year, and that if both shippers and consignees would load and unload the cars promptly it would extend their usefulness on his own railroad not less than 25,000 car-days.

BANKERS who were present in Minneapolis took a great deal of interest in two particular farms out on Minnetonka Lake. One belongs to George F. Orde of the First National and the other to Joseph Chapman, Jr., of the Northwestern National. A great many funny and interesting stories were told about the efforts of these two gentlemen to become prosperous farmers.

MINNETONKA LAKE has a coastline of three hundred miles. A few years ago land out that way was selling for $100 an acre; now it is worth from $1,000 to $1,500. Practically every foot of shoreline for the three hundred miles is taken up for residence purposes or for actual farming.

THE shoreline at one time contained a great number of summer hotels. These have disappeared almost entirely. Two beautiful country clubs have locations on the lake and are connected with Minneapolis and St. Paul, twenty-five miles away, by a splendid boulevard system. The two cities have taken over for park purposes the chain of lakes and surrounding hills covering a part of this distance, making Minneapolis and St. Paul two of the most beautiful and attractive cities for residence purposes in the United States.

GOVERNOR WILSON'S TALK PLEASES

"After dullness and stagnation in the stock market the early part of the week, the effect of the excellent crop news which caused the sharp decline in the grain markets made itself felt, and it only needed the utterances of the democratic candidate for president to start a general upward movement in prices. While the market retained to a great extent its professional tone, it showed some signs of broadening out, and the rise was quite general throughout the list" is the top paragraph in the current Ware & Leland market letter. Sentiment seems to be drifting toward the New Jersey man.

FRANK A. VANDERLIP BACK

Frank A. Vanderlip, president of the National City Bank, New York, returned Saturday last on the Lusitania after an absence abroad of about a month. He said that what interested him chiefly on the other side was the evidence of business activity in England. He declared that England was doing more business to-day in all branches than it has done for a great many years. Activity was particularly marked in the weaving industry. The shipbuilding industry was also working at capacity and turning out more tonnage, Mr. Vanderlip said, than all the other shipbuilding countries.

Concerning the labor situation in England, Mr. Vanderlip said that industries were not affected, and that in fact there was less labor unrest at the present time than there has been since records have been kept. There is very little market for American securities abroad, Mr. Vanderlip said. He considered that this situation was best explained by the fact that the European countries are enjoying a period of great business activity and that financiers are not anxious, therefore, to turn their attention to foreign securities.

Bank Supervision in Illinois

Editor CHICAGO BANKER: I note a loud discussion in Illinois over the question of state and private bank regulation. In the light of history the question is not a debatable one, because history conclusively proves the great value to the people, as a whole, under sound and conservative laws regulating banks, together with state supervision, examinations, etc. Even the conservative banker is bettered and prosperity steadied by weeding out insolvents in the incipient stage, instead of allowing them to dissipate good assets year after year in plunging methods after they are insolvent, as is usually the case in state or private banks not under proper regulation.

As proof of this statement, permit me to quote from an address of mine on this subject delivered before the American Bankers Association in New York City in 1904. In a statement as to claims filed, percentage of dividends paid to depositors and amounts still due, for a period of about forty years, Ex-Comptroller Ridgely made this pungent statement. "From the last date to which complete figures are available, it will be seen that while only 6½ per cent of the number of national banks in existence failed during this time, 17 6-10 per cent of the other banks in existence failed. And while the national banks paid to their creditors 75 per cent in dividends, the state and other banks paid only 45 per cent." The record of the private banks was the lowest of all. Forty years is a fair criterion on which to base facts, and these facts show 5 to 1 in favor of good regulation.

Again. I was a member of the committee of bankers to draw a bill, some twelve years ago, to regulate and supervise banking in Wisconsin. This bill allowed only state regulated banks along with national banks to do business in Wisconsin. Private banking was barred. The politicians and private bankers killed the bill under the referendum to the people, the slaughterers calling it "a bankers' bill." Later it was resurrected and passed, and for nine years has been upon the statute books of Wisconsin. What is the result? Not a state bank which was under this law has closed its doors that has not paid 100 cents on the $1 to every depositor. It has been erroneously stated that $55,000 was lost through one state bank failure, but that was closed by the commissioner on examination when the law went into effect; therefore, to date the record is a clear one.

After giving this subject a world-wide study, I challenge any man to disprove the statement, that as far as losses to depositors are concerned in proportion to business done, the national banking system—with its banks operating under the beneficent national bank act—is the safest the world ever has known. Further, that whereas, outside of a few old eastern states, many states of the Union, fifty years ago, were practically without good laws regulating banking, the result being that wild-cat banking brought great distress to the masses. But as state after state has adopted good laws regulating the business (to-day nearly all the states have good laws), banking and business generally are becoming more stable under the benign influence of these better laws. There are a few states still in the slough of despond. The great state of Illinois, to her shame, is one of them.

Is it not time to throw off the yoke and pass good laws to stop wild-cat banking in Illinois? It is the clear duty of the state to compel all banks to put up ample capital, according to location, as a guaranty fund, before the doors are opened to take the funds of innocent depositors; to compel limitations on loans to any one person or firm; to compel the accumulation of a surplus fund out of earnings, and all losses charged off before dividends are made; also to compel examinations to see that the laws are enforced. Good banks will court such regulations and the plunger ought to have the brakes put on him in the interest of public safety. If we limit bank failures, we ameliorate panic conditions. The benefits to the public at large are too transparent to bandy with pirates. I have for years wondered when the great state of Illinois would throw off the yoke and advance with her sister states in the onward march toward greater stability.

B. F. Harris, president of the Illinois Bankers Association and the forces behind him, are doing a beneficent work in their efforts to bring much needed results.

Are these citations, drawn from the lamps of experience, not conclusive as to the needs in Illinois? If they are, then stand by your guns till the victory is won. Get into good company. No law absolutely can prevent an occasional failure, because it is human to err, but we can materially better former conditions.

Andrew J. Frame.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

MISSOURI bankers will leave for Detroit this year over the Wabash, starting from St. Louis at 9 p. m. on Saturday, September 7th. They will arrive in Detroit at 9 p. m. on Sunday. Applications for reservations should be made to Secretary W. F. Keyser at Sedalia.

KANSAS CITY and Kansas bankers will start from Kansas City over the Santa Fe at 7:15 p. m. Saturday, September 7th, and will arrive in Detroit at 1:30 p. m. on Sunday. Those wishing to use this train should apply to Secretary W. W. Bowman at Topeka.

FROM either of these secretaries folders and full information may be had concerning the itinerary of the two trains. Bankers of the entire Southwest are invited to make use of them and will be welcomed by the bankers of Kansas and Missouri.

A SPECIAL train which will start from Los Angeles, Cal., and pick up the Northwestern bankers in Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, etc., has changed its itinerary so that it will arrive in St. Paul at 1:40 p. m. on Saturday, September 7th. Many of the St. Paul and Minneapolis bankers will join the coast bankers and will arrive in Chicago on Sunday morning in plenty of time to get aboard the big Chicago train de luxe for Detroit.

THE "banquet-on-wheels" idea for the special train from Chicago to Detroit has met with great favor among the bankers. Eighty table reservations have been made already, and the first seating naturally will be limited to ninety seats. So far as possible, tables are being made up by two's and four's to accommodate those who are going. Bankers in making reservations will save much correspondence by telling whether or not they will be accompanied by members of their families, and also with whom they prefer to be seated.

THE Pullman cars to be used are open Pullmans, and three seats will be sold to a section, to leave as much room as possible for hand baggage and other conveniences of travel. An attempt will be made to put on all of the cars necessary to haul everybody on one train.

THE train will leave at 10 a. m. over the Michigan Central and a "banquet on wheels" will be served in three diners coupled up in the center of the train, service beginning at twelve o'clock. Not everyone can be seated at the first table. Table reservations will be given out in the order of application. Those writing in for table seats will please be specific and give the names of all those for whom the seats are wanted. This will help to avoid duplication and will facilitate the making up of the train directory, which will be printed as a part of the souvenirs of the trip.

SUPERINTENDENT SWEET of the dining car service of the New York Central Lines has given this "banquet on wheels" his personal attention, and has constructed a bill of fare which is a work of art along culinary lines.

WEST of Chicago, in the past ten years, new banks have increased 61 per cent. Population 54 per cent.

EAST of Chicago, in the past ten years, new banks have increased 15 per cent. Population 12½ per cent.

¶ If your business is increasing the new business of your bank, your field (the field of new accounts) is in the territory covered like a blanket by THE CHICAGO BANKER. The rest is obvious.

RESERVATIONS are being made for bankers all the way from New Orleans to California; up the coast all through the Northwest. Those wishing to go on this train can secure reservations by addressing any member of the transportation committee, or any bank in the city of Chicago. The earlier reservations are made, the easier it will be to provide adequate and comfortable accommodation for everybody concerned.

MISSISSIPPI VALLEY TRUST has sent out the August issue of its house organ, "Service." It is illustrated cleverly and contains many valuable articles relating to trust company business. It has one very interesting article on an address made by President Breckenridge Jones before the Missouri Bankers Association twenty years ago. Many of the prophecies made by Mr. Jones have been more than fulfilled.

NATIONAL BANK OF POTEAU, (Okla.) has begun the publication of a neat paper entitled "National Bank News." It deals largely in personals relating to the customers of the bank, and ought to be popular on that account. A number of articles instructing depositors in the use of checks and in the methods of the savings bank side of the institution are contained in its pages.

TWENTY-TWO of Chicago's big railroads are closing their freight stations at 1:00 p. m. all of the Saturday afternoons during August.

DURING the eleventh annual state convention of the Colorado bankers at Pueblo on August 19th and 20th, open house will be kept by the First National of that city. All bankers are invited.

SECRETARY WILLIAM B. HARRISON of the Oklahoma Bankers Association has been making an eastern and Canadian tour as a part of his vacation. During the stop-over in Chicago he was not able to permit himself to say that he saw anything on his travels which comes up to Oklahoma in the way of promises for prosperity and good times.

SAVINGS UNION BANK AND TRUST COMPANY of San Francisco on its fiftieth anniversary has sent out a beautiful booklet commemorative of its half century of existence. The bank was organized in 1862 when San Francisco was a very small city, and many of its principal streets unpaved. To-day it has assets of over thirty-six millions, and occupies one of the handsomest bank buildings in the United States.

THE book contains a great many fine engravings illustrating the modern appliances of the new building, and has portraits of all the former presidents of the institution. The officers at the present time are John S. Drum, president; C. D. Greenwood, C. O. G. Miller and R. M. Welch are vice-presidents; R. B. Burmeister is cashier.

GUARANTY TRUST COMPANY of New York has issued a second edition of its booklet on "Short-Term Securities." This is one of the most valuable documents of its size ever issued by a bank, and can be had for the asking. It classifies securities into various headings, gives the name of the issue, rate, date due, form and describes the security in detail. In reality, it is a whole credit department in a very small space, so far as short-term securities are concerned.

INVESTOR'S MAGAZINE, published by S. W. Straus & Co of Chicago, in its current issue contains an article by E. D. Hulbert, vice-president of the Merchants Loan and Trust Company, on "True Currency Reform." This is the third of a series of articles specially written for this magazine.

D. ARTHUR BOWMAN & CO. of St. Louis are sending out a mid-year investment bulletin which contains a very attractive list of bonds yielding good returns to the investor. Bowman & Co. will forward copies upon request.

HARRIS, WINTHROP & CO. of 15 Wall Street, New York, have issued a folder on "The Common Sense of 5 Per Cent Bonds." Every bond-issuing authority should have a copy of this before fixing the rate.

Banking Conditions in Wyoming

President Henry B. Henderson in his annual address at the Cheyenne convention tells of the great progress made in his state. Agricultural progress greatest of all. Oil industry growing

The address of the president of the association generally is regarded as a review of business during the period of time covered by his term of office and, in a measure, is along certain stereotyped lines. Pardon me if I depart somewhat from the usual form. I am hopeful that this convention will, as its predecessors have done, take up the discussion of the line of progress and from its deliberations there may come to the state and her people a greater degree of happiness and prosperity than we have ever experienced before. I do not purpose to cast a backward glance except wherein I can point to something that indicates progress, and in this you will pardon my inability to notice all the things that have appealed to you as moving toward an advance in our position. It seems but proper that the association should be congratulated upon its strong membership, the number of persons who have honored us with their attendance upon this meeting, the co-operation of members in the work of its officers and legislative committee. We have progressed in the profession of banking. We know more about the business and our customer's business than ever before. This is progress in the right direction. By reason of close application to the conservative rules of business, we have not only become better equipped to handle the business entrusted to our care but we have become better stockmen, better farmers and better citizens.

There has been progress in our state in the development of all the resources in which we abound. Our greatest growth has been in the science of tillage of the soil. The hand of man has wrought wonders in the subduing of the land and from every section of the state there has been developed the industry of agriculture. Possibly we have not taken into account this great boon to our prosperity. Have we realized its value? Do we really appreciate the wonderfully productive powers of this God given land? A state with less productive lands could not recuperate from the blight of the drought and the storms of the winter. We could not rise from these conditions were it not for the courage of a brave and heroic people who have applied the hand of industry to the productive lands of our state.

There are those of us who recall when a few tons of native hay was the chief agricultural crop, but to-day the splendid fields of cultivated hay, grain and vegetables represent a wealth of many million dollars. Yes, the annual return from this source exceeds the annual receipts from the stock industry which now takes a secondary place. And the possibilities have not been reached. With a flourishing agriculture coupled with prudent stock raising and the yet large area of free range there is promise of progress not heretofore attained. We have developed a humane nature. Our hearts have ached because of the suffering to the cattle, sheep and horses, and the great loss to the owners that severe storms inflict. There have been losses, not the result of neglect to provide food, but because of the blizzard, which, while temporary, is an element against which no stockman can successfully contend unless his stock is properly sheltered. Necessity has and is doing much for the stability and promotion of the stock industry of our state. There is more grain grown, more hay harvested, more ground being cultivated, more water being spread than ever before. All this is progress. No difference how sad or unfortunate the experience it is the evolution of things, and from this time forward the banker in a measure becomes a member of the directorate of the stockgrower and farmer. He advises the stockman to provide shelter, feed and care for his animals, to endeavor to get net returns out of fifty per cent of the number of head heretofore owned and ranged on the open prairie equal to that of the present time. This is real progress. The prediction is made that we will in five years have greater numbers of cattle, horses, sheep and swine than we have ever had and net results will be greatly augmented over the present system; but some one else will wish to talk upon this subject, so I'll not exhaust it.

After many years of prospecting, there has come the production of oil in large quantities. A new industry has developed since we last met and it promises to be state-wide and eclipse the great output of Pennsylvania. When this convention next assembles in this city we will point with as much pride as Casper now does, to the large refineries and the great producing oil wells, possibly within the city limits. There are other resources of the state yet to be developed. Strange as it may seem, each period of development has been brought in just when we need a certain product to add to our prosperity.

There will soon come the manufacturing period, and the wool of the sheep will be commercialized in our own state, the slaughtering of animals for food supply will be at our railroad centers, the manufacture of asbestos cloth will necessitate the erection of crematories by the laundries, the puddling furnaces and steel mills will require men who will be consumers of our food supplies, and in every direction we may cast the present or the prophetic eye there is promise of progress.

Some of us have thought our development a slow process, but it is really phenomenal, physical conditions considered. Now that the wheels of progress are in motion we may expect them to revolve more rapidly, and our wildest visions of the possibilities within this state will fail to have reached what will be actually realized. In legislation we have progressed. Your legislative committee seconded by your efforts and influence was remarkably successful in securing desirable laws and stifling legislation that would have been a menace to the conservative, constructive growth of business in the state. The governor approved all the bills recommended by the committee and passed by the legislature. Among which were the bill providing for "Deposits in Trust," "Deposits in Two Names," "Derogatory Statements Against Banks," "Repeal of Taxation of Mortgages," "Renewal of Chattel Mortgages," and the bill prescribing a "Uniform Chattel Mortgage" and providing for its recording and the fee therefor.

The bank was not and could not be taxed upon its mortgages, but the individual money lender could. It was nothing to the bank to have such legislation repealed, but in the interests of the state, and in justice to the borrower the measure was pressed through the legislative body and approved by his excellency. A vicious measure was passed by the legislature, but through the combined efforts of the association members we were able to show the governor why it should be vetoed and he acted accordingly. This is progress in its true sense.

In some manner the law relating to taxation of bank stocks was overlooked by your committee. Neither the governor nor his advisors noticed its undesirability. So we have a tax regulation that is unjust, unwise and unfair, and for which there is a popular demand for repeal. The banker will play fair and why some enthusiast member of the legislature should do him and the business he represents such an injustice cannot be satisfactorily explained. This law is not referred to for the purpose of denoting progress but for the purpose of fixing in your mind the necessity of eternal vigilance in legislative affairs. Possibly we may rise to a keener appreciation of our duty relative to all proposed legislation, the levying of taxes and the wise, prudent and economic expenditure of the large sums we contribute annually to the public treasuries.

We have had no bank failures, another indication of progress; the banker is growing more conservative, the old order of things is at an end.

In numbers of banks, their deposits, and aggregate resources, we have had a steady, healthy business growth. Whether the bank be large or small it is the one institution in the community which centralizes all business and gives to the public a clearing house where hay, grain and stock is finally evolved into dollars and cents.

This association at its convention held in 1910 passed two resolutions which at that time seemed to anticipate future needs, one of which has become nation-wide in importance. I refer to our recommendations relating to the sale of stocks and bonds issued by corporations upon proposed development of irrigation and mining enterprises. The other recommendation related to undesirable live stock loans. These resolutions have given us position and class among banking associations.

What wise policy will we initiate at this meeting? It is for you to determine.

I promised to speak only of progress, but if I seem to digress a moment you will see I am greatly interested in the things that make for a greater state. This I can only refer to in a negative way. We spend more than half a million dollars per annum for educational purposes. What are we getting out of it? What are we educating our boys and girls for? 1000 many schools in the state teach agriculture, horticulture, manual training, the trades of the artisan, the breeding and rearing of live stock, domestic science? Yes, we have these branches at the university, but how many high school or eighth grade students ever see the inside of a college or university? If we are going to make of this a great state we must begin right, educate the children right, not follow the old school curriculum of fifty or one hundred years ago, but progress. Better teach the child something that will enable him to get the greatest results from physical effort, than to teach him the writings of Virgil, Homer and others, and this, too, will be progress.

Our efficient secretary has performed a splendid service and from him we will learn much of the detail work of the association.

We are fortunate in having speakers who are specialists and they will give us talks that will enable us to grasp new ideas, and when we again take up the active duties of our respective banks it will be with the purpose of becoming a greater factor in the progress and prosperity of the state.

RECEIVER FOR MORTGAGE COMPANY MAKES REPORT

Francis P. Pace, receiver for the defunct Mortgage Company of America, formerly known as Bankers Guaranty Trust Company, and Union Trust and Fidelity Company, reports that there is outstanding in capital stock $405,830, of which $196,500 is preferred and $209,330 common. It is his opinion that other liabilities of the company will not exceed $5,000. To take care of this the company holds notes given for capital stock in the amount of $224,443; real estate mortgage notes, $24,400; chattel mortgage notes, $7,842.25. Miscellaneous items amount to about $12,000 and accounts receivable to approximately $4,000. The deficit appears to be from $110,000 to $120,000, which, from an examination of the books, seems to have been used in office expenses, including agents' commissions on sales of stock. The receiver declines to make any positive statement as to the value of the assets, as he thinks it probable that the payment of some of the notes will be contested.

INVESTMENT BANKERS ORGANIZE

The Investment Bankers Association of America was formed in New York on August 8th. A constitution and by-laws were adopted, after which officers and a board of governors were elected as follows: George B. Caldwell, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial Trust, Chicago, president; A. B. Leach of A. B. Leach & Co., New York, first vice-president; Frank W. Rollins, president E. H. Rollins & Sons, Boston, second vice-president; William R. Compton, president William R. Compton Company, St. Louis, third vice-president; Lewis B. Franklin, vice-president Guaranty Trust Company, New York, fourth vice-president; Warren S. Hayden of Hayden, Miller & Co., Cleveland, fifth vice-president; Frederick R. Fenton, sales manager, Devitt, Tremble & Co., Chicago, secretary, and C. T. Williams, manager of investments, Fidelity Trust Company, Baltimore, treasurer. The board of governors elected is as follows: George Garr Henry, partner, William Salmon & Co.; Erastus W. Bulkley, member of firm of Spencer, Trask & Co.; Harold B. Clark, member of firm of White, Weld & Co., and Allen G. Hoyt, member of firm of N. W. Halsey & Co., all of New York; Charles H. Schweppe, manager Chicago office of Lee, Higginson & Co.; W. M. L. Wright Investment Company, Kansas City, Mo.; C. Edgar Elliott, member of firm of Jos. T. Elliott & Sons, Indianapolis; A. C. Foster of the Causey, Foster Company, Denver, and Herbert Witherspoon, vice-president of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, Spokane. The proceedings closed with a banquet at the Waldorf in the evening. The meeting was attended by the representatives of about two hundred bond houses, among them being some of the largest and most important in the country. Great interest was manifested in the new organization, and the New York press as well as financial publications all over the country have been strong in their praise of the new association founded on such conservative lines. Those who are engaged in the business of buying and selling investment securities for their own account, are eligible to membership, and the firm, individual or corporation making application must have a capital of at least $50,000. The first convention of the new association will be held sometime this fall—probably in November—the time and place to be announced later by the board of governors. The Chicago Association of Commerce sent a letter inviting the convention to this city.

Mr. Fenton, the new secretary, is busy getting ready stationery, membership blanks, etc. The office of the association will be in Chicago, and until such time as the new address is announced, communications should be addressed to the secretary, First National Bank Building.

Short Term Securities

Investment bonds and notes issued to mature in from one to five years are favored by many investors as yielding a somewhat better income than long time obligations.

Such securities, particularly of the larger issues, also usually command a ready market and are not subject to extreme fluctuations in price.

Our recent booklet, "Short Term Securities," met with so favorable a reception that we have been prompted to issue a second edition. This contains brief descriptions of current issues, brought down to June, 1912. We will furnish copies on request.

Accounts of banks and bankers received upon favorable terms

Thoroughly equipped to handle all business pertaining to banking, and invites the accounts of banks, corporations, firms and individuals

Prosperous Year Predicted by Continental and Commercial National

The great Continental and Commercial National, of Chicago, from investigations made by its thousands of correspondents has compiled its annual crop and business report with most gratifying results. The accuracy with which the institution has covered the field is indicated by the closeness with which it approaches the government's figures.

A total crop of 660,000,000 bushels wheat is indicated, 20,000,000 bushels less than the government figures, while the estimate on corn is only 11,000,000 bushels out of the way at 2,800,000,000 bushels. The estimate on oats is 1,200,000,000 bushels, or 7,000,000 bushels less than the government's August figures. Other estimates also generally approximate the official figures. Rye is placed at 38,300,000 bushels; barley, 200,000,000 bushels; potatoes, 360,000,000 bushels, and the cotton crop at 13,100,000 bales. In its estimate on hay it is much below the government's estimate—60,000,000 tons, compared to the official estimate of 73,000,000 tons.

Crops Gain 30 Per Cent

In summing up agricultural conditions the report says:

"A volume of agricultural products, 30 per cent larger than last year, will return to the farming community the most profitable results of a decade. The industries of the country have been feeling the stimulus of the prosperity of the tiller of the soil, and the ample supply of the needs of the people. The only prosperity is that which comes from the agricultural production, and that is assured."

A hopeful view of the general business outlook is taken. In this regard the report says in part:

"Considerable material progress has been made in the business world toward a complete recovery from the depression, resulting from the slowing down process made necessary in 1910 by the too rapid expansion in our industrial and commercial activity, undue speculation in land and the tying up of too much liquid capital in projects in process of development and not sufficiently seasoned to make their securities readily convertible. In some instances, this progress toward a recovery has not only reached normal but has extended con-

Reports from more than ten thousand banks show results close to those obtained by the government. Growth of industries and money market situation put down as satisfactory siderably beyond that. In others the condition of trade and business shows a full recovery. In a few words, however, we are still below normal, owing to peculiar conditions in those particular lines of human endeavor.

Money Market Is Satisfactory

"Money continues plentiful, and the agricultural outlook of the country is satisfactory, with a promise of a production considerable in excess of that of last year. Our foreign commerce which a year ago reflected a complete reversal of the previous year's tendency continues in our favor, with the result that there is a larger trade balance to the credit of this country growing out of our international trade, than that of a year ago. This probably will be greatly augmented by our exports of cotton and grain. The cotton crop, despite the floods early in the season in the Mississippi valley, is promising, and the price will be a more favorable factor in our export trade than last year. The volume promises to be sufficiently large to justify the assurance of our ability to protect our gold should that become necessary.

"During the last year the more friendly attitude of European bankers and investors toward our securities, was turned to good account, and as a result of our large credit balances abroad, our bankers were enabled to extend assistance to bankers both at Berlin and London."

Revival in Steel Industry

A remarkable revival in the steel industry was found to have taken place, which, it is predicted, will be the greatest stimulus to general business activity. The steel industry being regarded as the truest business barometer, a revival in all lines of business is forecast. Railroads have been enormous buyers of all kinds of steel products, and the demand has been of such an urgent kind that a premium has been placed on products for early delivery. As the result of these conditions, better prices have obtained, and as an indication of the permanency of present conditions it is stated there has been no falling off in the buying as the result of advanced values.

A drawback is found to be the scarcity of labor, especially skilled labor, at the leading industrial centers of the country. The big harvests have called for an unusually large number of laborers, and as a general proposition the laboring class has found no lack of employment. The steel mills especially are experiencing great difficulty in getting a sufficient number of men.

A serious car shortage this coming year is foreseen, the necessity for moving enormous crops, with the brilliant prospects for a revival of general business, promising to result in congestion, especially as many of the railroads have not been able to keep their equipment up to the standard called for by a period of commercial activity.

An increase in the buying power of the country at large is seen. Allowing for the depreciation in prices for farm products in general the value of the crops this year is placed at $617,000,000 greater than last year. Of this amount, $365,000,000 comes from the ten leading cereal and produce crops.

Bankers Grow More Optimistic

Turning to the banking situation the report says:

"The banker finds a situation a little more satisfactory than that which existed a year ago. The fact that the banks at the interior, and in fact all through the country, are well loaned up indicates firmer rates in the coming months. The developments early in July, growing out of the financing of our midyear disbursements and the requirements of foreign bankers, rather clearly indicate that the ease in the money market is largely superficial and that the situation may change over night and a decidedly firmer market develop. While there is nothing in the situation to suggest an acute stringency, a much healthier monetary condition is likely to ensue.

"Were this country fortified with a more elastic and scientific banking and currency system the burden of financing the harvest would be inconsequential. But unfortunately our currency fails to expand and contract with actual business and commercial requirements; hence it is necessary to adjust our banking affairs and accumulate our surplus reserves preparatory to meeting the autumn demand of the agricultural sections. This invariably results in a period of superficial ease just prior to the demand of the harvests becoming insistent."

MASKED MEN ROB A BANK

Pittsburgh

Expanding trade and industry at home and the business activity in Britain and Germany are factors in the American money market, according to the Peoples National Bank of Pittsburgh. Referring to the situation in the Pittsburgh district, the bank in its current monthly circular says:

"Aside from the seasonal lull, commercial affairs in the Pittsburgh district continue satisfactory. The steel and electrical companies are better supplied with orders than at any previous time in more than two years. In the steel trade there has been a moderate but general recovery in price. This, together with the reduced percentage of overhead costs resulting from the employment of practically full producing capacity, has increased the percentage of profits. The improvement is demonstrated in the quarterly report just issued by the United States Steel Corporation, which may be accepted as reflecting from the standpoint of financial results the better condition of most of the manufacturing interests of this district.

"While Pittsburgh is geographically removed from the great Western and Southern agricultural belts, there is probably no section of the country more vitally interested in a favorable outturn of the crops. The industries of this district supply the steel for all farm implements; the cars for the movement of grain and other commodities; the air brakes for the control of cars; the rails and track supplies for the maintenance of way; the structural material for bridges, etc.; the pipe for water, oil and gas extensions; the material for new buildings, including fireproofing, plate glass, window glass, nails, etc.; the glass tableware, lamps, electrical appliances for mines, mills and homes, besides innumerable other products of utility and comfort used on the farm and in the city. All of these varied Pittsburgh industries feel encouraged as a result of the favorable crop reports of the past month, indicating a yield of wheat in excess of last year's and a production of corn, hay and oats equal to the largest crops of any previous year.

The following California bankers anticipate attending the Detroit convention of the American Bankers Association to be held the week of September 9th: A. E. Edwards, First National, Pasadena; W. D. Longyear (and party), Security Trust and Savings, Los Angeles; James K. Lynch, vice-president First National of San Francisco; W. A. Bonyng, Commercial National, San Francisco; C. F. Moody; E. M. Barber, San Diego Savings Bank; George P. Edwards, proprietor "Coast Banker," and F. H. Colburn, secretary of the California Bankers Association. A number of the foregoing will be accompanied by their wives.

POSSIBILITY OF CAR SHORTAGE

W. A. Garrett, chairman of the General Managers Association of Chicago, has sent out a communication to industrial traffic managers and commercial organizations in which he expresses the belief that a car shortage is imminent this fall unless consignors and consignees co-operate to the fullest extent with the railroads. During the four months beginning about October 1st car shortages are extremely likely to occur. This is on account of the fact that this is the crop-moving season. It is expected that this year the crops will be unusually large; hence the cause for anxiety. Mr. Garrett believes that matters will be expedited greatly if all the lumber, coal, cement and other freight is moved within the next few weeks instead of saving it for the crop-moving period; if all cars delivered are loaded and unloaded as quickly as is practicable and all cars are loaded to as near their capacity as possible, such a contingency may be averted.

ALL ABOARD FOR SALT LAKE CITY!

By W. W. WALTON

Arrangements have been completed for the "Chicago Special" leaving Chicago Sunday morning, August 18th, enroute for the A. I. B. convention to be held at Salt Lake City, August 21st, 22d and 23d. Reservations have been made for the Chicago delegates and those arriving from the East which will exceed over two hundred delegates, also for about fifteen or twenty ladies, wives of some of the delegates who will accompany them. The special will be made up of nine Pullmans, two diners, one baggage car and one club car, and will leave Chicago at 10 A. M. via C. M. & St. P. Ry. for Omaha, from Omaha to Denver via C. B. & Q. Ry., and from Denver to Salt Lake City via Denver & Rio Grande, arriving at Salt Lake City Wednesday morning at seven o'clock.

At Omaha the delegates will be joined by delegates from the Minneapolis, St. Paul, Duluth and Eau Claire Chapters, who will run a special car from the "Twin Cities." The St. Louis and Omaha delegates will also join the eastern delegation at this point. From Denver the train will be run as two sections over the mountains, when it will again be run as one train into Salt Lake City.

The C. M. & St. P. Ry will serve table d'hôte meals to the delegates at reasonable prices and they have agreed to permit the diners to run through to Salt Lake City, and the officials of that road are doing much for the comfort of the delegates while enroute.

The delegates also greatly appreciate the courtesy of the Cable Piano Company for having furnished them with one of their high grade pianos to be used in the club car during this trip, which will do much toward augmenting the pleasure of the boys during their three days' journey.

George A. Jackson, chairman of the transportation committee, is to be congratulated upon the complete arrangements which have been made for the comfort and pleasure of the boys enroute, as it has only been through his untiring efforts that such a splendid trip has been arranged for.

Chicago Chapter will have open house and will entertain all incoming delegates Saturday and Sunday up to the time of the departure of the "Special," headquarters having been established at the Hotel La Salle. Saturday evening Chicago Chapter will give a banquet in honor of its visitors at the Hotel La Salle.

Harry S. Smale, of the Continental and Commercial National Bank of Chicago who has been president of Chicago Chapter for the past year, has been endorsed by the chapter for the office of secretary of the Associated Chapters.

By C. C. Burford

Tamaroa, in Perry county, is to have a new bank to be known as the Farmers State Bank, a permit having been given for its organization by the state auditor of public accounts to J. P. Haley, F. C. Springer, A. H. Evans and Z. Hampleman. The bank will be capitalized at $25,000. This will be the third bank for Tamaroa, the other two being the First National and the Citizens Banking House. Tamaroa is a growing town in southern Illinois.

Railroads Teach Employees Economy

The Illinois Central Railroad Company issues to its employees a monthly bulletin of general instructions, and in the August number there appeared an article telling them of the value of bank accounts and giving some preliminary instructions in the methods of opening bank accounts. Illustrations are given of checks, pass book pages, canceled checks, deposit slips, and other bank stationery. The railroad company also tells the employee how to deposit a certain portion of his monthly pay check and explains to him something of the dignity and worth of the man who has a bank account. As an object lesson in thrift there could be no better work done than is now being attempted by the Illinois Central people and bankers will strongly endorse their policy.

Wabash Permitted Large Loan

The receivers of the Wabash railroad have been allowed by Judge Francis M. Wright, sitting in the federal court at Danville, to issue receivers' certificates for the purpose of borrowing $2,500,000. This amount will be spent in constructing a double track over the main line, improving and enlarging terminals, shops and yards and in purchasing additional locomotives and cars. The receivers state that the increased business on the road has made it imperative that the roadbed and equipment be placed in the best of condition. The petition has been under consideration by Judge Wright for over a month.

One Thousand Auto Licenses Issued Weekly

The Illinois secretary of state is issuing automobile licenses at the rate of 1,000 a week and already 60,000 have been issued this year. It is estimated that there are over 200,000 automobiles in the state and hence there are many delinquents who must act quickly in the matter of securing state licenses or else incur trouble and expense. The prosperity of the state is reflected in the large number of cars operated and the idea that a panic will follow the use of automobiles is held by but very few bankers at the present time. However, it is believed that certain lines of other business suffer because of the motor car, especially piano manufacturers and other makers of articles commonly called luxuries. Retail clothing merchants complain that sales are off from those of a few years ago, but how much is dependent upon automobiles is problematical. Possibly the use of the more or less rough and ready clothing of the autoists may hurt to some extent the business of the clothier, tailor and haberdasher.

Death of Sterling Banker

Charles E. Windom, vice-president of the State Bank of Sterling, died suddenly while on a lake boat enroute home from Petoskey Sunday night, August 11th. Death was due to apoplexy. Mr. Windom was prominently identified with the business interests of Sterling and was well and favorably known there.

Commerce Building Being Erected

The Commerce Building being erected at the University of Illinois is being pushed rapidly to completion and the best of facilities for the teaching of such subjects as banking, insurance, the consular service, industry as reflected in corporations, railroads and manufacturing establishments, and all branches of theoretical and practical economics. The commerce department at the University of Illinois has made rapid strides under the leadership of Dean David Kinley.

Northwestern University has also a complete department of commerce and has the work so organized that the bachelor's degree in commerce is awarded to students.

Farmers to Study Agriculture

There will be more farmers' institute meetings in Illinois this fall than ever before. There is to be a central Illinois farmers institute in Paris October 15th, 16th and 17th; a southern Illinois institute in Cairo November 19th, 20th and 21st, and the annual state institute at Sterling February 18th, 19th and 20th, 1913. Besides these state meetings there are already planned local and county meetings for 254 towns, covering 422 days. There will be 134 one-day, 148 two-day and 135 three-day meetings. The state institute has assigned 65 speakers and instructors who are scheduled to deliver 847 addresses. Besides these the college of agriculture and experiment station authorities will assign two speakers to each county institute, which, it is estimated, will bring the total number of addresses to 1,647.

Conservation of natural resources is the watchword now among farmers and bankers in Illinois, and the study of real agriculture is demanding attention as never before. Farmers' institutes are rapidly improving in char-

Manito Banker Married

Samuel J. Marshall, assistant cashier of the Peoples Bank of Manito, recently was married to Miss Emma A. Patzer. Mr. Marshall is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Marshall. His father is one of the best known business men in Mason county. The son has been connected with the Peoples Bank for the past six years. The bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Patzer, and has resided in Delavan for many years.

New Cashier for Herscher Bank

Joseph Peterson recently was elected cashier of the Citizens State Bank of Herscher to succeed Ed. W. Berger, resigned. Mr. Peterson has been assistant cashier of the institution for the past year. The bank was reluctant to part with Mr. Herscher. He expects to spend his time the next year in travel.

Bank Changes Its Name

Bank of Schuyler hereafter will be known as the Rushville State Bank. Business will be conducted in the same manner as heretofore, and there will be no change in the management. Ever since its organization the bank has been under state supervision and inspection, but there was nothing in the former name to indicate that it was a state institution. People in other towns thought that it was a private institution. There can be no room for doubt under the new title.

Bank Takes Over Assets

Depositors of the Union National Bank have been notified that the Union State Savings Bank and Trust Company has acquired the assets of the former institution and assumed its liabilities. The deposits have been transferred to the new institution. J. H. Bennison is president of the new bank; W. H. Lyman and W. W. Calhoun are vice-presidents and H. W. Flint is cashier.

Bank to Have New Building

National Bank of Decatur has decided that its new building will be exclusively a bank building.

It originally was proposed to have a ten-story office structure, but this plan has been given up. It is expected that the contract for the new building will be let in the near future, as soon as all arrangements have been definitely agreed upon. The board of directors contemplate visiting other cities to inspect bank buildings before finally deciding as to just what kind of a building the new structure shall be.

Illinois Notes

The proposition to bond the city of Sterling for $25,000 to build a public hospital was carried by a large vote.

The First National of DeLand, Piatt county, has installed a bulletin board upon which market prices of grain and live stock will be furnished daily as they are received from Chicago. A good feature is this idea and one which can be used very profitably by banks in a strictly agricultural region.

The Avery Company of Peoria has been selling a large block of its stock recently in Chicago and elsewhere. This company is doing a colossal business in the manufacture of farm machinery and agricultural and commercial motors. Their auto truck is well known and their traction engines are also used extensively. The Harris family of Champaign use an Avery traction engine to plow with on their large farms. This plow was run last spring twenty-four hours of the day with changes of men and a much larger amount of ground was turned under than could possibly have been done with horse labor. In this way advantage can be taken of good weather conditions.

The board of review of Ogle county, in session at Oregon, has unearthed and assessed mortgages amounting to almost one million of dollars which had never been taxed. Some idea of the wealth of village and country people can be gathered from this item.

J. Seaman, president of the hardware company bearing his name, recently was elected vice-president of the Bradford National Bank of Greenville, Ill., to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of J. M. Daniels. Judge William H. Dawdy was elected a director to fill the vacancy on the board created by the resignation of Mr. Daniels, who has been elected vice-president and a director of the State Bank of Hoiles and Sons.

C. O. R. Stabeck, cashier of the Farmers Bank of Davis, has resigned his position as cashier to accept a position with the Gold-Stabeck Land and Credit Company of Minneapolis.

Belleville Savings Bank contemplates the erection in the near future of a stone and brick bank building which will cost $50,000.

Herbert Cooney, assistant cashier of the State Bank of Woodstock, is spending his vacation this year in the West. He will make an extended stay at Yellowstone Park.

The farmers of South Fork Township are contemplating the organization of a new bank to be located at Kincaid.

Edward F. Ackermann of Carlyle, has accepted a position as assistant cashier of the Merchants State Bank of Centralia. Mr. Ackermann has had wide experience in banking matters, and will be a valuable addition to the Merchants State.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

WISCONSIN

Recent action of the Milwaukee clearing house in forcing the new Union Bank of Milwaukee to close at 12 o'clock Saturdays has aroused District Attorney Winfred C. Zabel into a bitter arraignment of the Saturday noon closing policy of banks.

"There should be some provision for the workingmen who are paid at the end of the week's work," said Mr. Zabel. "When the men are paid at 5 or 6 o'clock the banks are closed and they are forced to cash their checks at saloons or business houses. The practice results in a rich harvest for the saloon keepers—and for district court on Monday morning. It is also taken advantage of by check forgers, for the proprietors are unable to verify in the Saturday night rush, the status of deposits on which checks are drawn. The fact that many workingmen gathered at the Union Bank last Saturday night, only to find that the rulings of the clearing house prevented the directors carrying out their advertised promise to keep open Saturday night, showed that the proposed innovation was appreciated.

"New York, Chicago, and other cities have banks which are open all the time and are a great benefit to workingmen, and I would like to see a twenty-four hour institution of this kind opened in Milwaukee."

Installing Vault in Marshall & Ilesley Bank Building

A score of men with two ten-horse teams are engaged in installing the Bethlehem steel vault in the new building of the Marshall &

Ilesley Bank on East Water Street, north of Wisconsin, this week. The vault will be 16 by 29 feet, inside measurement, with a height of 7 feet. The steel will be encased in a 9 inch concrete wall, the weight of the whole being about 210 tons. The doors, each weighing 28 tons, will swing on crane hinges. The interior will be divided into two compartments, one for the safety deposits and one for coin.

The huge strong box is equipped with the last word in burglar alarms and protective devices, even to wells designed to catch and bear out of harm's way the cracksmen's "soup" if he avoided all other safeguards and reached that crucial stage in his procedure. The Marshall & Ilesley Bank is the first in the state to install this highly developed form of vault and the Continental Commercial Bank of Chicago is the only one in Illinois with one of this description.

Lauds German Banks

In a letter from Berlin, Germany, Secretary William George Bruce of the Milwaukee Merchants and Manufacturers Association lauds the practices of German banks as responsible for a large measure of that country's prosperity.

"The banks here are far in advance of American banks in the extent to which they facilitate manufacturing and commerce," writes Mr. Bruce. "If, for instance, a foreign firm ordered a bill of goods from an American manufacturer, and demanded three months' credit, the manufacturer, unless the customer is an old one, might hesitate to involve himself to this extent. But the German banks make a practice of guaranteeing such accounts of reliable firms, or buying them outright on a commission basis. The American system of banking does not permit the acceptance of collaterals of this nature and hence limits the credit possibilities."

Celebrates Sixtieth Anniversary

With the dignity and conservatism that has characterized its activities since founding, the Old National Bank of Oskosh this week celebrated its sixtieth anniversary. It was fifty-five years ago that Vice-President Charles Schriber entered the service of the bank, then only five years old, and to-day Mr. Schriber remains the last of what he affectionately terms "the old guard." Scores of people took advantage of the unique anniversary offer of President Edgar P. Sawyer to add one dollar to every new savings deposit started on August 10th, the date of the anniversary, many of the "depositors" being children in arms. Louis Schriber is cashier of the institution and J. P. Fitch and F. A. LaBudde assistant cashiers. The bank is capitalized at $300,000 with deposits amounting to $2,676,189.03 at the time of the June statement.

Barley Crop Damaged by Rain

Wisconsin stands in danger of losing its reputation as one of the large barley producing states this year if the present heavy rainfall continues, according to Secretary H. A.

"All growing crops have been damaged more or less by the heavy rainfall of the past week," says Mr. Plumb. "but the barley has suffered most of all. The soaking it has received has in many sections of the state colored the kernels and swollen them to abnormal size, greatly decreasing their value for malting purposes. In 1911 Wisconsin produced 13 per cent of the total barley crop of the United States, or 20,910,000 bushels, ranking third in importance among the barley growing states."

According to reports to the Milwaukee County School of Agriculture grain crops in southern and central Wisconsin are seriously damaged. Much of the uncut oats is badly lodged and that which is in the shock is turning black. Corn, clover and alfalfa are doing well, seeming not to have been affected by the rains.

That his wife lives in Waukesha and his parents in Oskosh, Wis., is the claim made by William J. Renk, arrested in Kansas City this week on charges of forgery. The information is included in what purports to be a sworn confession by the defendant.

DEKALB BANKER AT COUNTRY LIFE CONFERENCE

S. E. Bradt, vice-president of the First National of DeKalb and chairman of the good roads committee of the Illinois Bankers Association, recently was elected a member of the executive committee at the second annual country life conference recently held in that city. Mr. Bradt discussed good roads at the conference and outlined a plan which will be recommended by the bankers for state aid in the building of highways.

NEBRASKA CONVENTION

Nebraska bankers will hold their convention this year in Omaha, August 26th and 27th. Secretary William B. Hughes has prepared a very attractive program for the occasion. The bankers will be called to order the first day at 10:30 A. M. by President Frank McGiverin. After the invocation Victor B. Caldwell, president of the Omaha Clearing House Association, will deliver the address of welcome, and will be followed by the response and annual address of President McGiverin. Reports then will be heard from Secretary Hughes, Treasurer J. C. French and Henry W. Yates, chairman of the executive council, after which committees will be appointed, resolutions adopted and nominations made. C. W. Pugsley of the department of agricultural extension and farm management, University of Nebraska, will deliver an address on agricultural development topics.

In the afternoon the committee on state bank depository bonds will make its report. George M. Mangold, cashier Mangold and Glandt Bank, Bennington, will talk on handling the customers of a bank. C. G. Hulbert, cashier of the Merchants Bank of Utica, will deliver an address on the "State Bank Guaranty Law," and T. L. Mathews, cashier of the Fremont Savings Bank, will talk on the relation of the banker to society.

Tuesday morning Chairman J. P. A. Black will make a report for the protective committee, and Chairman Carson Hildreth and C. F. McGrew respectively will report for the agricultural education and agricultural development committees. P. L. Hall, president of the Central National Bank of Lincoln, will deliver an address entitled "The Record."

In the afternoon the group presidents will make their reports, after which Detective Burns of New York will talk on the protection of banks, and will be followed by Henry W. Yates, president of the Nebraska National Bank, Omaha, who will talk on separate reserve associations based upon the report of the Aldrich monetary commission. After the election and installation of officers the convention will adjourn.

The full list of entertainments to be provided for the occasion has not been arranged as yet. On the evening of the first day there will be an Ak Sar Ben initiation, and on Tuesday evening a dinner will be tendered the delegates. The name of the toastmaster has not been decided upon as yet. Responses will be made by J. A. S. Pollard, who will talk on soil culture, and D. R. Forgan, who will talk on the National Reserve Association of the United States.

GOOD CROP CONDITIONS IN DAKOTAS

George F. Orde, vice-president of the First National of Minneapolis, says that indications from the Dakotas are that they now will have some favorable weather for the harvesting of crops. He believes that another ten days will secure the most bountiful crop they have had in several years. Estimates are made that Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Montana will have in the neighborhood of four hundred million bushels of wheat, not counting the other grains, which also are very bountiful.

HEIRS REPAY BANK CREDITORS

Cleveland, O.—Through the voluntary offer of the heirs of Aaron Wilcox and Zenas S. Wilson, who conducted the Lake County Bank at Painesville, O., when it failed twenty years ago, creditors of the bank will be paid $83,000 next Thursday.

The bank's affairs were wound up in 1893, the creditors' claims being adjudged settled by the payment of 80 cents on the dollar. The actual remaining indebtedness was $38,000.

The heirs announce that they have decided "the square thing to do would be to pay the $38,000, with 3 per cent interest." The total is $83,000. The heirs are Mrs. Peter Hitchcock of Cleveland, Mrs. C. E. Page and Mrs. Normal Snell of Painesville, O.; and Miss Eliza Wilcox, Mrs. C. E. Doolittle and C. S. Wilcox of Hamilton, Ont.

PLANS TO INCREASE CAPITAL

Stockholders of the Bank of Nova Scotia have been notified of a proposed increase in the capital stock of the bank from $4,000,000 to $5,000,000 by the issuance of 10,000 new shares at 240, thereby also increasing the surplus account. This account now stands at $7,500,000, and the increase will bring it up to $8,900,000. Stockholders have six months in which to subscribe for the new stock. The bank pays dividends at the rate of 14 per cent annually and its stock is quoted at about 256.

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, August 15.—Firm money rates have prevailed here during the past week or ten days and the demand from all sources continues excellent. The banks are quoting a range of rates from 5 to 6 per cent, with considerable money going at the major end of the range. Shipments of currency to the interior are normal for this season of the year, but are gradually increasing, especially to the Southwest. The situation with country banks presents considerable variety, as in some sections they are borrowing liberally, while elsewhere rural bankers are purchasing commercial paper through this market. The city demand is better than for some time, and general offerings of commercial bills are ample to keep busy all available funds for that purpose and to enable lenders to pick and choose. On the whole the outlook from a banking viewpoint is better in St. Louis right now than has been the case for many months. Renewed activity among manufacturers and jobbers is manifest on all sides, and these gentlemen have appeared as borrowers, some of whom have taken little or nothing for two years or more. Political fears are being daily minimized, and confidence in big crops becoming more fixed. While there has been a little too much rain in some areas, little actual damage has been reported, and as in 99 cases out of 100 water helps rather than hurts agriculture, not much apprehension is felt. Wholesalers say that country buying indicates a lively fall and winter business. Early orders have been in numerous cases increased, and the number of country merchants here now is greater than at any like period in a decade. One thing assured is the fodder crop throughout the Middle and Southwest, and it was lack of feed for farm animals in that region last season that proved one of the most detrimental factors. Corn is prospering, though experts concede that the fall must be a late one to bear out the present promise. In any event, however, the crop will be up toward the ten year average. Small crops, including fruits and roots, are flourishing like the proverbial green bay tree, and in that department the cost of living next winter is likely to be well under last season. Reserves here are high, and every preparation has been made to handle the crop movement. Heads of banks which make a specialty of crop financing, say their institutions are ready to cope with any situation which may arise.

Will Travel De Luxe

According to a pamphlet just gotten out by W. F. Keyser, secretary of the Missouri Bankers Association, Kansas and Missouri bankers attending the Detroit convention of the American Bankers Association will travel in great luxury and comfort. The transportation committees of the Missouri and Kansas Associations have arranged for two official trains for their members and friends, one to be run from Kansas City and the other from St. Louis. These trains will be composed of the latest compartment observation sleepers, ten-compartment sleepers, twelve-section drawing-room sleepers, dining cars and composite or club cars. Diners will be coupled on at proper points, and these diners will be supplied with rare dainties. Each train will be accompanied by representatives of the railroad passenger department. In fact nothing in the way of detail calculated to make bankers happy while traveling has been overlooked. The Missouri committee consists of W. L. Buechle, Kansas City; J. A. Lewis, St. Louis; F. T. Hodgdon, Hannibal. The Kansas committeemen are: M. H. Malott, Abilene; W. J. Bailey, Atchison; and W. W. Bowman, Topeka.

Farmers Want Higher Prices

At the annual convention of the Farmers Educational and Co-operative Union of America, held here this week, the almost unanimous sentiment among the delegates was that higher prices should prevail for products of farms, while the cost of manufactured articles and imported goods should be lowered considerably. Speakers dwelt upon the high cost of living, but viewed philosophically the extravagant rates being paid for cereals, fruits, vegetables and live stock. One speaker advocated the organization of a sort of farmers' trust to lift prices, and incidentally combat the middleman. It was brought out very clearly that the selling agent is getting more than his just due. The farmer must toil and sweat and run the risk of failure, and then when his crop is ready to ship to market the board of trade reduces the price by manipulation. So, also, the commission merchant schemes to pay the producer little and extorts from the consumer enormous prices. The delegates seemed to resent this state of affairs, especially as the agriculturist is blamed for the high living cost. Other topics discussed were the relations of farmer and banker; diversified farming; better rural mail facilities and public schools.

Opposed to Single Tax

Considerable opposition to the proposed single tax amendment, to be voted on in the November election, is developing here and throughout the state. Elmer B. Sanford of Kansas City, secretary of the Antisingle Tax Association of Kansas City, has been in St. Louis all week working with the Real Estate Exchange and other factors arrayed against the passage of the amendment. Mr. Sanford believes there is a possibility of the amendment being adopted, not because of its popularity, but because of the apathy of those opposed to it, and the energy of its advocates.

B. F. Edwards Named as Trustee

B. F. Edwards, president of the National Bank of Commerce of St. Louis, has been named trustee for the holders of the new $200,000,000 bond issue of the St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern Railway Company, according to the mortgage filed yesterday with the local recorder of deeds. The Union Trust Company of New York is named as the other trustee. The new bonds were recently voted by the stockholders to retire all obligations of the railroad and to provide about $60,000,000 capital for needed improvements. The bonds are to run for forty years from July 1, 1912, and bear not over 6 per cent interest.

MACVEAGH CAUSES REFORM

Washington.—Government discrimination in designating national banks as depositories for federal funds is gradually being corrected under a change of policy by Secretary MacVeagh, who is increasing the number of depositories without augmenting the aggregate of the government's deposits. This is being done especially in small cities. In towns with only two banks the secretary is dividing the government deposits between them, to avoid discrimination. In the larger cities the advantages enjoyed by the depositories are regarded as negligible.

Secretary MacVeagh also has just designated as government depositories a large number of nondepository national banks with which the department of justice and the postoffice department have been depositing funds for many years. It was only recently discovered by the attorney-general and postmaster-general that nondepository banks were being used by their departments.

CLOSES BIG LOAN CONCERN

San Francisco, August 9.—State Building and Loan Commissioner John S. Walker announced to-day that he had taken charge of the affairs of the Continental Building and Loan Association, one of the largest institutions of the kind on the coast. He served notice on the directors that he had found the association insolvent a shortage of about $318,000 having been uncovered. He also charged that mismanagement had caused the shortage.

The directors at first refused to surrender control on the ground that the state building and loan laws are unconstitutional. Walker telephoned to the attorney-general and five policemen appeared. The directors offered no further protest.

Indianapolis

The auditor of state, chief clerk of the bank department in the office of the auditor, and the state bank examiners, who closed a conference on banking conditions throughout the state to-day, were unable to agree as to the advisability of recommending that the next general assembly enact a law creating a charter board, to be composed of the governor, auditor and treasurer of state, to pass on the advisability of charters for banks in territories already supplied with banking facilities. Unless an agreement is reached between now and the time the general assembly meets no such recommendation will be made.

In lieu of such board the examiners will file reports from their various districts on conditions wherever it is sought to establish additional banking facilities, and the department will be guided by the reports. The purpose of Harry B. Arnold, clerk of the department, who advanced the theory of the charter board, was to prevent the establishment of additional banks where the territory is now well provided for. In this he sought to have the state banking department operated similarly to the national bank department of the United States government.

In the matter of trust companies, it was the opinion that the law as now drawn would prevent trust companies forming branch concerns. It was also decided to recommend that the next general assembly enact a law requiring trust companies to report on call as banks now do.

To facilitate the work of the examiners, all banks will shortly receive a circular letter from the department, requesting that all certificates of deposit be arranged in numerical order preceding the next visit of the examiners. Should any certificates be mutilated in the arrangement, they shall be kept, the department will require, until checked by the examiners.

It was decided that examiners should reconcile all bonds on deposit in Washington, D. C., for postal savings securities when the examination of a postal savings depository is made. This is to prevent the records of the bank misleading the examiners as to the actual value of bonds on deposit. Under the present system, a depository has been known to send bonds to Washington to the value, say, of $3,000. When the receipt was received from the government the bank would ask to exchange or transfer the bonds, and the government would make the transfer, but not take up the certificate for the original deposit, while issuing a new deposit for the bonds sent in lieu of the first set. This would make the records of the bank appear as if the bank had $6,000 on deposit, when it had only $3,000.

The examiners were instructed to reconcile all public depository balances with the balances as shown by the books of the public official making the deposit.

Boone, Neb.—Edward Mansfield has been elected president of the State Bank. F. E. Mansfield is vice-president and A. A. Dondorf cashier. The capital has been increased from $6,240 to $15,000.

Editorial Comment

PRIVATE BANKING IN IOWA

The Iowa bankers and the Iowa public owe a debt of gratitude to ex-President E. J. Curtin, for putting the great Iowa Bankers Association on record for bank supervision as he did at the Cedar Rapids convention. Iowa and Illinois are in similar bad odor for laxity of banking laws, but in each state a start toward universal supervision has been made. B. F. Harris put the ball in motion at the Cairo convention two years ago, and we now have the Dawes committee plan as a result. Iowa only is one year behind and yet may catch up owing to the superenergy of her state association when aroused. Following is a letter received by THE CHICAGO BANKER from S. X. Way, at Watertown, South Dakota, containing severe comment on last week's private bank (total) failure in Iowa. Mr. Way says:

A news item from Iowa says, "Private Bank Failed; Will Not Reopen." This is not a new story in Iowa, but it is rather a surprising one in this day and age from so enlightened a people as inhabit Iowa.

Iowa is one of the few spots in the world where one can get into the banking business on less capital than it takes to start a peanut vender in business. No, that isn't a joke. At least, if you had hundreds of old friends and neighbors denying themselves the necessities of life, keeping their children out of college, cutting off music lessons from innocent little girls, seeing homes sold under mortgages, and watching mothers who had once earned a competency driven back to the washtub to spend their last years because a private banker in Iowa speculated on the depositors' money and lost, you can't see the funny side.

What if he had won? He would have continued an honored citizen, a private banker, continued to speculate on their (the depositors') money, and when deposits grew bigger and neighbors grew older and there was more grief to be sown broadcast, have failed.

A private banker is a human being. He speculates on the depositors' money. If he wins, does the depositor share the profit? No. The depositor gets his money back.

Don't lay all the blame on the banker. The Iowa lawmakers, who lack the courage to force all banks under state or national supervision, are entitled to their share of the blame.

A recipe to start a private bank in Iowa would read something like this:

Rent a building (of course, being a banker, no one expects rent in advance). Order furniture (slow order—at least ninety days in making). The great demand for the bank (from within) compels starting at once.

Have a sign painted, four gilt letters, cash outlay$ 7.00
Letter heads, envelopes, cards..... 3.50

Total cash required$10.50

A peanut vender must pay rent or license, buy a roaster and one gallon of gasoline at an outlay of more than $100.

Moral: If you live in Iowa and are short on cash, start a private bank. If long on cash (say enough to start a peanuttery) start several banks.

This is no reflection on many honored, substantial private bankers in Iowa. But the system is abominable, and this late news item tends to call it once more to mind.

In this day of progressive legislation no state, much less Iowa, can afford to tolerate them. South Dakota has reason to be proud of her fine banking laws. Iowa can well profit by South Dakota's example.

The very same letter might be applied to Illinois. Conditions and laxity are the same in both states and for similar reasons—lack of public-spirited moral courage.

BASIS OF RIGHT TO REGULATE ENTERPRISES OF A PUBLIC NATURE

It follows as a natural consequence that if a sovereign power gives to an association of individuals certain rights and privileges not accorded to the community as a whole, the recipients of such benefits ought to be subject to the supervision and control of that agency which gives them this unusual power. A corporation, organized from an association of natural persons, derives its right to existence solely from the state. As a result the state has the power of visitation. The right of the corporation longer to exist, or the determination of whether or not that which holds itself out to the public as a corporation is in fact such, are matters exclusively within the province of the state government, and can be brought in issue only by the state by means of a "quo warranto" proceeding. This power of regulation and inspection naturally is the more important when relating to enterprises affected with a public nature, such as banking, railway companies, gas companies, etc. It repeatedly has been held by our courts that the business of banking is one of a public nature; it is created to serve the public, and as a consequence the public ought to have something to say as to the manner in which it shall be conducted. Of course, in the case of a banking corporation it naturally is under the supervision and inspection of the state, as a natural result of having derived its right to existence from the state. The difficulty lies in the case of one person or more who desire to form a banking firm, and who in order to accomplish their object have simply to hold themselves out to the public as such, complying with no regulations prescribed by the public, to whom they intend to cater, nor by the government. It is this state of affairs which has led to the recent agitation advocating the incorporation of firms doing a private banking business, rendering them subject to periodical examinations. Practically all of the states of the Union have such a law on their statute books, with the exception of about four, Illinois and Iowa being numbered among the tardy ones. It is to be hoped that the report of the special committee appointed by President B. F. Harris of the Illinois Bankers Association will result in having enacted a law which will thoroughly cope with this grave situation. The great state of Illinois cannot afford to lag behind its sister states in a matter so vitally affecting the interests of its citizens.

GOVERNOR WILSON'S ACCEPTANCE

Woodrow Wilson's speech accepting the democratic nomination for the presidency has excited considerable comment, some of which is complimentary, while some is partisan. It is said that he is not specific as to just what he intends to accomplish if elected; that he deals with general principles rather than with specific matters. He believes that the establishment of right and justice is the paramount issue of to-day, and not the success of any particular party. In regard to the tariff question he declares himself for a tariff simply for revenue purposes, and not for the benefit of large manufacturers. He is for a downward revision, believing that high protection facilitates the formation of trusts and monopolies. He also favors the development and improvement of internal waterways, believing them to be national investments, and the building of a mercantile marine, but not with bounties. One of the principal criticisms directed against the acceptance is its lack of incisiveness; it is contended that the governor is vague as to what he proposes to do. He has said that he does not consider the platform of the party a program. He advocates the remedy of some of the existent evils of to-day, but believes that any efforts in that behalf should be undertaken with conservatism and good judg-

It is especially desirable, owing to the unprecedented volume of grain business in prospect, that those having no facilities for direct service in Minneapolis should arrange a connection at once. This bank has an unexcelled system for the prompt presentation and collection of grain drafts and other bill of lading paper and invites correspondence with those desiring the best of service.

The whole speech is tempered with the element of progressiveness, and is indicative of that calm judgment and conservatism so essential in one who would guide the destinies of a great nation. The battleship issue was left out because now before congress, and no attempt was made to pose the executive department as the whole government.

PUBLIC SALE OF BERKSHIRES

Probably the largest sale of pedigreed pigs ever held in this country will take place on William George's Brookline farm at Aurora, Ill., on Monday, August 19th. A booklet of thirty pages has been issued describing the pedigreed Berkshires which are to be offered for sale, each individual having a headline and descriptive text devoted to him much as if he were an important individual in the financial world. An advertisement for this sale will be found in another part of this paper. It is the expectation that many banker-farmers will be present in an effort to bring into their own neighborhood some of Mr. George's fancy stock that the breed of hogs may be improved in the various localities in the state. "The Berkshire World and Corn Belt Stockman," published at Springfield, devotes considerable space, both pictorial and text, to this great Berkshire sale, which it estimates to be one of the most important ever held in this country. It describes Mr. George as "one-half banker, one-half lawyer, one-half manufacturer and one-half farmer." He is president of the Old Second National Bank of Aurora, and an ex-president of the Illinois Bankers Association. He has been president of the Illinois Cattle Breeders Association and vice-president of the American Breeders Association. He was the organizer of the Welsh Pony and Cob Society of America. Mr. George has taken a deep interest in the almost nationwide movement on the part of bankers for the improvement of agriculture and he hopes to see as many banker-farmers as possible at his Brookline farm on Monday, where they will be highly entertained and well cared for. Mr. George is almost as well known as a successful raiser of Herefords, Short Horns and Jersey cattle as he is in the Berkshire hog world. Any banker who will attend the Brookline sale on Monday will be well repaid.

EDUCATIONAL CONFERENCE

The educational conference called by President B. F. Harris, of Champaign, met on Wednesday of this week at the Leland Hotel in Springfield. The object of the conference was to supplement the present public educational work in Illinois communities by a model law to provide for a system of agricultural, industrial and vocational schools. Representatives of a number of industrial enterprises throughout the state were present. President Harris expects to appoint a committee for the purpose of drafting a proposed bill to be presented to the legislature. The conference authorized the following statement:

"The need for vocational training in all lines for the youth is recognized as necessary in justice to those who cannot be interested or greatly benefited under the existing system, to those whose elementary education is cut short by hardships at home and to industrial development generally.

"Various methods are suggested for meeting the situation by law. The public and the active groups which compose it and mold public opinion are asked to withhold judgment until the measure which the conference plans to support can be fully presented and the reasons for the various provisions and suggestions—many of which may seem new—have been explained and the reasons for their adoption by Illinois given by those who have given months and years of study to this question."

It is believed that state aid is essential to the carrying out of such a project.

F. F. Johnson on Cost and Credit Accounting

The Boise expert tells the bankers at Cheyenne how to divide the sheep from the goats when it comes to balances. An interesting and instructive address

It is not my purpose to enter into an elaborate system of arriving at the cost of banking in its various departments, or an extensive system of credit information. What I am going to attempt is to convince you, if possible, that a little time spent in determining a part of the cost of working an account is well repaid by the results attained; also, that a simple system of credit files is a most valuable asset of any institution. Taking up cost accounting: Some of you are doubtless now giving time to determining costs, and you are as conversant as I am with the methods and the benefits to be derived. Some (and this is more often the case in the smaller banks) have given but little attention to this important branch of banking, believing it required an elaborate system that is too expensive to be justified by the benefits that can be attained in the smaller institutions.

I do not blame the banker for hesitating to install a cost accounting system, after having studied the elaborate systems in many of our larger banks, or having read the publications on the subject written by many of the men that have been in charge of such work. I am not going to discuss in detail any method, but only such parts as are simple and practical for all banks, large or small, hoping to make some converts. The work of cost accounting, having once begun, can be extended as each banker thinks advisable for his institution. It is a very simple matter to use voucher checks in payment of all expense items, and keep a voucher register, showing the proper segregations. Such a system will show you the various expenditures and entail but little labor.

In most banks, the overhead charge is a fixed amount within a large increase or decrease of accounts, or deposits; the clerical force is often the same. The interest rate practically is fixed and there is a constant demand for loans most of the year. In cases of this kind, the gross profit on the account, less the cost of checks, stationery, and cost of collection absorbed, is all one needs to ascertain whether the account is a desirable one.

The foundation of both your cost and your credit accounting will be a card, or some similar record, which shows the average balance for each month, the highest and lowest loan for the same period.

We will take for example John Jones' account; he is a retail merchant, deposits no items on interior points that require time and expense to collect. His account shows an average balance in bank for the past year of $600.00. Your actual reserve has fluctuated but little and is normally 30 per cent, of which 20 per cent is in bank balances, drawing 2 per cent to 3 per cent per annum. This is practically an idle 25 per cent of the account based on 8 per cent earning capacity, and is sufficiently close for our purpose. However, if you wish to be more accurate, you should ascertain the average idle reserve for each month and figure accordingly.

John Jones' account shows a profit of $28.50.

John Brown is a produce dealer, and his card shows the same balance, checks drawn, etc.; but we find that he deposits one hundred items per month on out-of-town points, amounting to $2,000.00; and the time required to collect these will average three days, making a float of $6,000.00 for one day, or an average of $200.00, which is not available for loaning. John Brown's account shows a profit of $9.50.

The loss of time and cost of collecting these out-of-town items in John Brown's account is ascertained by the analysis sheet. The form we use is adopted by many banks, but we have added a place for the number of transit items which, as you see, is a direct expense to this account. In both of these accounts, we have charged back all exchange charged to us on items we have collected. We have made no charge for overhead or clerical expense, assuming that we could not reduce either even with the elimination of quite a number of accounts.

Now we will take both of these accounts and assuming that they both have good credit at the bank and can borrow as occasion arises, they figure they can get along with a smaller balance, and reduce it to $300.00. John Jones' account shows a profit of $10.50.

John Brown's account will show a loss of $8.50. You still are willing to handle Jones' account, but how about Brown's?

Brown is a loyal customer of the bank, and a good business man. For that very reason, you need have no hesitancy in calling him in and showing him his card and analysis sheet. He is fair and realizes that the bank should no more work his account at a loss, than that he should sell his produce to a friend at less than cost. There is little danger of his going to your competitor as he realizes that when the time comes (which always does sooner or later) that the banks can not meet all the demands on them for loans, and you have to decide whether you will curtail the credit of Jones or Brown, you can not do otherwise than call in Brown's loan, as his account has been of no value to you. He may say that he has the money in active use, and it will entail a loss on his part to keep a larger bank balance. As his credit is good, increase his loan the $300.00 with the understanding that he will maintain the average of $600.00.

John Smith is a small green grocer, keeps an account that is always on the ragged edge; you believe that he is honest, industrious and solvent, and you allow his account to be overdrawn a small amount at times. His credit balance averages $200.00; his average overdrafts, $100.00; his checks, the same as Jones and Brown, with no out-of-town items. What does his account show? It shows a loss of $1.50.

Now let us study the overdraft part of the account; the card shows in red ink the largest overdraft in any one month. You will find that if he was obliged to give notes to keep his account good at all times, he must borrow an average of $200.00, and increase his average balance that amount, or to $300.00, which will earn $18.00; expense, $7.50; gross profit, $11.50; aside from this he pays you $16.00 interest on the $200.00 loan as against $8.00 interest on the overdraft. Look at the difference: profit and interest $19.50, as against a loss of $1.50. Who can justify the allowing of overdrafts in the face of these figures, aside from the fact that it is bad practice for other reasons?

By having eliminated overhead and direct clerical expense, I do not wish to infer that this should not be taken into consideration at all. The banker should consider his expense of doing business the same as the merchant.

The necessity of figuring the cost and earning power of the account is much more important in the case of banks carrying balances with you, as the items in transit are usually large and the item of interest paid on a fictitious balance is considerable. A study of such an account will often show where it can be made much more valuable without working any hardship on your correspondent.

I am going to give you an actual example of a bank, carrying an account with the Boise City National Bank, of Boise, Idaho. The analysis sheet for February showed a loss for the month of $10.07. There was no charge made for handling the transit items, as we were not keeping a record of the number at that time. The loss, however, was great enough to require attention. A study of this account revealed the fact that they were sending us items that required four days to collect, and that they could just as well send most of them direct. We took the matter up with them and the result was a profit of $2.45. Who can say that a little work in cost accounting will not be well repaid in the face of such a result?

Now a few words concerning credit accounting: The most valuable record in the bank to my thinking is the individual liability ledger. This should be kept in a form that will give exact information as to the date of payment of notes, amount owing as payer, also as guarantor on any date. This shows you whether the customer is prompt in meeting his obligations, when his needs are the largest and when the least, also whether he has the endorsement habit.

We supplement this with statements and credit reports. There is no difficulty in procuring a signed statement from the customer the first time he asks for credit, and follow this by taking statements from time to time, and entering them on the comparison sheet. This gives you valuable information as to whether the customer is gaining, or going behind. We check these with the Mercantile and Credit Men's Association reports. All of this data is properly filed.

We will now return to John Jones' card, which already has his average balance for each month in the year. From the individual liability ledger, we enter his highest and lowest borrowing each month, and on the reverse side a summary of the information in the credit file. This shows first that Jones is entitled to more credit than he ever has asked; also, that his borrowings begin in November and are cleaned up, one-third in February, another third in April and the balance in June.

John Brown's card shows him entitled to the same credit as Jones; but his borrowing is from March to August, being the highest in May and June. Your bank has lowest deposits at that time and the heaviest demands, and Brown's borrowings coming when your demands are the greatest, is another reason why this account is not as valuable as Jones', who borrows when your demands are the least. In this instance, the credit and cost accounting work together to the same end; namely, the knowledge of the time of the borrowings of your customer enables you to work to the end of the balancing of your business over the year. A steady demand at local rates will earn more than a heavy demand for six months, and large idle reserves the remaining six months.

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

"There is not a flaw in the outlook for the Central West," said President J. D. Dominick, of the Traders National, Kansas City, to a representative of THE CHICAGO BANKER. "The rains have been abundant and timely. During the wheat harvest and threshing season the weather was ideal. When that crop was out of the way the rains came to mature the corn. The supply of all kinds of food stuffs for stock is plentiful and in addition to having splendid crops for direct marketing, the farmers of this part of the country will have the best opportunity in years to feed stock next fall and winter. Naturally the bankers are watching conditions closely. So far as I can learn no part of this territory has suffered for lack of sufficient moisture. The demand for money for fall business is good, with satisfactory rates, and I believe I am safe in saying that banking conditions are normal. We have weathered the disasters of several years of poor crops. The failures have been few. Merchants did splendidly under somewhat discouraging conditions. But they have come through in good shape. The Central West is smiling to-day."

Nebraska Guaranty Law

An interesting and authoritative discussion of the workings of the Nebraska guaranty law is contained in a letter sent out by V. B. Caldwell, vice-president of the United States National of Omaha in response to an inquiry of a banker of Seattle. Part of this letter follows: "The guaranty law in this state seems not to have changed prior conditions. The national banks in the state cannot trace any appreciable loss of business to the guaranty law and up to the present time the law has not been in any way detrimental to the general banking business. Personally, I am opposed to such a law. The law has not been in operation long enough to really test its efficacy. One reason for its apparent success here is that banking conditions in this state are unusually sound and that banking ability throughout the state is far above the average. Before the depository law we had an excellent state banking law and had then, and have now, a most excellent department. That the measure has not operated to the disadvantage of legitimate banking is almost entirely due to the efficacy of the state banking board, good banking laws, close supervision and the general excellent feeling prevailing between the state banks and the state banking department. The department has never in any way been mixed up in politics or used its influence to discriminate between state and national banks. Operating under these almost ideal conditions it will be a long time before a really valuable opinion can be expressed as to the results of the law. It has not served here as a cloak for speculative or impractical bankers, a condition due to the banking department. The law imposes an unjust and burdensome expense upon good bankers. Theoretically and in principle it is absolutely unjust. In this state it is not working out to the disadvantage of general banking conditions because of the care exercised by the state banking board and because of the intelligence and generally high character of the state bankers. This looks like a wishy-washy opinion, but I believe it fairly represents the conditions here—a bad law, but in its practical application working out better than any of its opponents anticipated."

Arthur E. Stilwell Resigns

The long expected resignation of Arthur E. Stilwell as president and director of the United States and Mexican Trust Company of Kansas City and New York was announced last week. Ill health, with which he has been suffering for some time, was given by Mr. Stilwell as the reason for his resignation. He contemplates a long trip in Europe. E. Quincy Smith, first vice-president, was elected to succeed Mr. Stilwell. In connection with this news is a petition filed in the federal courts of Kansas, Missouri and Oklahoma by the United States and Mexican Trust Company asking for the sale of the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient Railroad. According to the petition, the United States and Mexican Trust Company is trustee for the first mortgages on the railroad to the amount of $24,538,000. The trust company says it believes the railway company will not be able to meet its obligations and asks permission of the courts to foreclose.

George W. Post Retires from Active Business

On account of failing health George W. Post, for forty years a banker and capitalist of York county, Neb., has decided to retire from active business and has disposed of his financial holdings to C. A. McCloud and stockholders of the Farmers National Bank of York, Neb. Mr. Post was heavily interested in the Farmers National of York, the First National of York, the First Trust Company of York, the First National of Bradshaw, the First National of Benedict, Neb.; Farmers and Traders Bank of Waco, Neb.; the Bank of Lushton, Neb.; the Blue River Bank of McCool, Neb., and the Bank of Thayer of Thayer, Neb. The two banks of York will consolidate as the First National Bank of York, making it one of the strongest financial institutions in Nebraska. The capital, surplus and undivided profits will be $350,000. All of the old officers of the First National will remain with the new organization except Mr. Post. C. A. McCloud will be the new president. The new bank building now in the course of construction by the Farmers National will be occupied by the consolidated institution. The career of Mr. Post and his wife is one of the interesting prairie romances of the West. Coming to Nebraska forty years ago without other capital than youth and determination, they became identified with every important development in their part of Nebraska. Mr. Post is to-day one of the largest land owners in his part of the state.

Will Investigate Rural Credit Systems of Europe

Agriculturalists and bankers of the Central West are becoming deeply interested in the rural credit systems of Europe which are said to have done so much to aid financially the farm producers abroad. Readers of THE CHICAGO BANKER are doubtless familiar with what are termed the Raiffeisen, Shultze, Delitzsch and German Landshaften methods. The theory of all is that if a group of persons combined to furnish a collective guarantee the group may obtain money at lower rates of interest than they could individually. The advantages of the banks organized under these various heads are found in bringing to the agricultural communities the credit facilities which are enjoyed by advanced commercialism, their advocates say. The special benefits are found in mutuality of interest and complete co-operation which brings together the commune or parish under each separate bank and impresses the advantage of the unity of endeavor which characterizes the district working under each of these systems. A special commission of seventeen members will leave for Europe next May and spend about two months in the study of these systems and the advisability of recommending them as a solution of the rural financial problems of the United States. The members of the commission have been appointed by the Southern Commercial Congress and their names follow: Harvie Jordan, chairman, Atlanta, Ga.; J. C. Haas, Montgomery, Ala.; C. R. Breckenridge, Fort Smith, Ark.; J. J. Vernon, Gainesville, Fla.; J. W. Newman, Frankfort, Ky.; Harry McEnery, New Orleans, La.; Harry S. F. F. JOHNSON ON COST AND CREDIT ACCOUNTING

I am not going into the analysis of statements and the conclusions to be drawn from the complication on the two sides of the cards. If you will take the trouble to procure the information for your institution, you will find that with your knowledge of local conditions, the study of the relation of accounts to those conditions is most interesting.

While on the subject of credit accounting, let me mention two important matters. In loaning to corporations, it is very necessary to know that the officers signing the notes have proper authority, and we have a form of resolution for that purpose. It also is necessary, when loaning against collateral security, either to have the proper form of collateral note, or preferably a collateral agreement.

The Boise City National Bank is indebted to Mr. Martindale, president of the Chemical National Bank, of New York City, for much valuable information when we recently revised our firm and corporation statement blank. Our live-stock blank we worked out from our experience with such accounts in years past. We shall be only too glad to mail a set of the blanks we use to any banker requesting the same.

The subject of credits and the necessity of procuring and keeping credit information has been under discussion at bankers' conventions and group meetings for many years. Giving attention to the costs of banking, although more recent, now is attracting the attention of bankers very generally.

Chas. C. Staiti delivered a valuable and interesting address on the subject of, "What it Costs to Conduct the Business of Banking," before the Louisiana bankers convention at their meeting in 1911. I have found that our correspondents in the larger cities are ever willing to give information and assistance to us if desired.

Do not let me give the impression from the foregoing that it always is advisable to eliminate the account which shows a loss. The progressive banker always is desirous of increasing the number of his depositors, if for no other reason than that a satisfied depositor is the best business getter a bank can have. On the other hand, we all have accounts that never will be of any value to the bank until the customer has been educated as to the cost of working accounts. In the majority of such cases, the presentation of the actual figures will convince him of the desirability of making the account of value to the banker.

As I stated in the beginning, I have not attempted in this paper to go into a lengthy discussion of the details of cost and credit accounting, but rather by a few simple examples, to convince some of you at least that the results will warrant the labor entailed, thereby hoping to arouse interest in the subject. Once begun, you will find the study and application of the subject to your individual needs most interesting; and in the opinion of a rapidly increasing number of bankers, profitable.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

F. A. Samels, cashier of the Dakota County State Bank of Lakeville, Minn., will start a bank at Lake Street and Bloomington Avenue, Minneapolis, where he recently leased property for 99 years. This is one of the outlying business districts of the city and it is without banking facilities at this time. St. Paul traffic to Minneapolis and traffic from Minneapolis to St. Paul, goes past the corner and there has been considerable building up in a business way in the past few years. Mr. Samels has not yet decided upon the name of the bank or the capitalization but it will probably be a $50,000 state bank.

Bank Stock Well Up

St. Paul has had a strong market this past week for bank stocks, and in Minneapolis, where advances were noted a week ago, there have been still further advances this past week. The second advance carried Security National up five points more to $450 a share, First National held steady at $285, Northwestern National was higher by one point at $284, and someone thought well enough of Scandinavian-American National to bid $136 for it, which is $4 more than the former high bid.

Money Rates Higher

Money rates are higher. J. S. Pomeroy, cashier of the Security National, Minneapolis, said that he expects some further slight advance later on but no high rates. Five and a half to 6 per cent are current figures heard, with the usual lower rates for the very choice paper.

Signs of Prosperity

St. Paul, which is a labor supply center of importance, is concerned over the demand for men and scarcity of those seeking work. J. H. Wilson, in charge of the state free employment bureau, says the men are not to be had. Meanwhile, both St. Paul and Minneapolis are filled with talk of coming car shortage, coming scarcity of coal, and coming rush of grain that is going to swamp the markets.

"I think these things will come but they are prosperity signs," said E. W. Decker, president of the Northwestern National. Of the general outlook for money, President F. A. Chamberlain of the Security National, Minneapolis, and President D. S. Culver of the National German-American, St. Paul, are of the opinion that there will be money enough to go around without any unreasonably high rates and the First National, Minneapolis, makes the same report, although Vice-President George F. Orde says the first evidences of a strong money demand are already at hand and rates are certain to hold very firm.

Did Not Elect Successor to George C. Power

That the Second National, St. Paul, would name a successor to the late president, George C. Power, was the expectation when the directors met Wednesday last, and that P. M. Kerst, former state bank examiner, would be the man was rumor. The directors adjourned without action.

Will Speak at A. B. A. Convention

President George E. Vincent of the University of Minnesota will be a principal speaker at the American Bankers convention in Detroit, August 9th to 14th, if President William Livingstone of the association can bring it about, for not only has Mr. Livingstone written asking Dr. Vincent to come but he has also written letters to prominent Minneapolis and St. Paul bankers who know Dr. Vincent, asking that they talk to him personally and urge that he arrange his plans so that he can attend.

H. M. Rubey Escapes from Burning Launch

It remained for H. M. Rubey, a banker from Macon, Mo., who is spending his ninth summer vacation at Lake Minnetonka, near Minneapolis, to furnish some banking news of the week, for Mr. Rubey was asleep in his $10,000 launch when fire broke out and totally destroyed the boat. Mr. Rubey got into a small boat and managed to reach shore but the launch, which was a four cabin 60-foot boat in which he had cruised on the St. Lawrence, the Great Lakes, and down the Atlantic coast, burned to the water's edge and then broke into two sections and sank.

Northwest Banking Notes

No successor has yet been elected to the place made vacant on the board of directors of the Security National Bank by the recent death of H. C. Akeley. The Akeley will matter which has been in the public prints for the past ten days is likely to be amicably settled between Mrs. Akeley and her step-daughter, Mrs. J. Park Quirk of Chicago.

St. Paul has been flooded with bad checks this past week. Four prominent downtown retail establishments cashed them. The names signed to them are E. R. Baker and Charles G. Snow. The police believe it is the same man.

Charles D. Brown, head of the protective department of the Minnesota Bankers Association, is making a thorough inspection of the Northwest with the idea of preventing the yeggmen that will probably come into the Northwest with the many harvest hands now moving this way, from getting into any of the country banks. Mr. Brown believes that the yeggmen will find it hard to operate this year.

Great Growth of State Bank Business Displayed

An indication of the rapid growth of banking wealth in Minnesota in fifteen years is furnished by the annual report of Kelsey S. Chase, superintendent of banks, wherein it appears that the combined capital and surplus of the state banks to-day almost equal their total deposits in 1897. To illustrate the expansion of the banking business in the state Mr. Chase has had prepared a comparative summary for the five-year periods beginning with 1897 and including 1912. Significant are the comparisons of the item of overdrafts, which have not grown nearly as rapidly as the loans, and the increase in surplus, which has grown much more rapidly than the increase of capital, both items, according to Mr. Chase, indicating better banking methods.

Bankers Will Help

On Thursday the special committee selected by the state bankers association at the Belle Fourche meeting will meet at Brookings for the purpose of taking the initial steps to better agricultural work in this state. The board of regents will meet with the committee and several members of the faculty of the agricultural college will be called into the conference for suggestions. Mayor Hitchcock of this city, president of the board of regents, and several members of the committee will attend a similar meeting of bankers in Minneapolis.

PYTHIANS IN DENVER

A family reunion of the special Pythian De Luxe train party from Chicago over the Rock Island Lines was held at Colonial Station, Albany terminal, Denver, on August 8th at 1 p. m. The menu folder issued for the occasion by the Albany Hotel consisted of the words of popular songs, and also some verse entitled "Part of Poet Porterfield's Poem," or "What This Train Did to an Iowa Man." It tells of the trip of the special train to the twenty-seventh biennial session of the order, arranged for by William G. Edens. There also were attached to the folder two very attractive souvenir post cards.

The comptroller has issued a charter to the First National Bank of Gregory, Tex., capital $25,000, to succeed the Taft Ranch Bank of Gregory.

Salt Lake Plans

American Institute of Banking will hold its tenth annual convention at Salt Lake City, August 21st to 23d. On Wednesday morning the 21st invocation will be delivered by the Rev. P. A. Simpkins. Addresses of welcome will be made on behalf of the state by Governor William Spry; on behalf of the city by Mayor Samuel C. Park. The Hon. W. S. McCormick, president McCormick & Co., will represent the bankers in welcoming the delegates. The response will be made by Carroll Pierce, chairman of the executive council of the Institute. Secretary Farnsworth will extend greetings on behalf of the American Bankers Association, and will be followed by the annual address of Raymond B. Cox, president of the Institute. Reports then will be heard from Carroll Pierce, chairman of the executive council; A. C. Dorris, secretary of the Institute, and C. S. Diether, treasurer.

At the afternoon session on Wednesday, Judge Edward F. Colburn of Salt Lake City will speak on the mining industry of the West; the Hon. Duncan McKinlay, surveyor of customs, San Francisco, will deliver an address on "The Old West and the New," and James K. Lynch, vice-president of the First National of San Francisco, will speak on the banking possibilities of that section of the country.

Thursday morning a discussion of the numerical transit system will be led by O. Howard Wolfe, secretary of the clearing house section of the A. B. A. The paper winning first prize offered by the clearing house section of the American Bankers Association on a system for analysis of incoming transit items described by number instead of name, then will be read, after which there will be a discussion of the extension and development of the clearing house system, led by Jerome Thralls, manager of the Kansas City Clearing House Association.

Friday morning the Hon. W. E. Borah, United States senator from Idaho, will deliver an address on the control of industrial combinations engaged in interstate commerce. Dr. David Starr Jordan, president Leland Stanford, Jr., University, will talk on "International Peace as a Factor in the Development of American Banking Power." Friday afternoon there will be reports of committees, election of officers and the choosing of the next convention city.

Quite an elaborate program of entertainment has been provided for the occasion. The first day there will be an organ recital at 12:15 p. m. and a trip to Emmigration Canyon for the ladies at 4 o'clock. A smoker will be held at the Commercial Club in the evening. Thursday there will be a trip to Saltair Beach, luncheon in Ship Café and dancing in the pavilion in the evening. On Friday the ladies will be driven around the city in sight-seeing automobiles. In the evening there will be a reception at the Hotel Utah for both ladies and gentlemen, and on Saturday, the 24th, a trip will be made to Bingham and Garfield, returning at 4:30 p. m.

H. J. Dreher, manager of the bond department Marshall and Ilsley Bank, Milwaukee, and chairman of the program committee, is to be congratulated for having provided such an attractive program. It is expected that the sessions will be largely attended and a most enjoyable time had by all participating.

OREGON CROP PROSPECTS

Portland.—Crop prospects in every section of Oregon and in every line of agriculture were never better than they are this year. It has been a bumper season all around. The wheat crop of Oregon will amount to about 18,000,000 bushels. The yield will be a record one in Umatilla, Wallowa, Baker, Wasco, Sherman, Union and Gilliam counties, the latter county estimating a crop of 4,000,000 bushels. The apple crop of Hood River is estimated at 800,000 boxes, and in the valley apples will yield heavier than for years. The total value of all fruits is placed at more than $6,500,000. The potato yield, which is enormous, will, even on a lower market, bring the farmers close to $1,500,000, and the onion and root crops will add materially to this sum. The hop crop is going to be a great one, on the acreage, and at the present market price will give the farmers $2,200,000, all of it money brought from outside the state. The value of the wool and mohair clips exceeds $8,000,000.

FORT WAYNE BANK TO HAVE NEW BUILDING

Hamilton National Bank of Fort Wayne, Ind., is contemplating the erection of a twelve-story bank building in the near future. Charles McCulloch is president of the bank.

Seattle

Seattle.—R. G. Dun & Co. have made an exhaustive trade review of local conditions. This report says: There were only sixty failures in Seattle during the first six months compared with ninety-six during the same period of 1911. The liabilities in 1912 amounted to only $512,822 compared with $1,932,919 during the first six months in 1911. Coastwise flour and foreign exports during the first six months were more than double those in 1911, and the foreign lumber trade showed an increase of 6,000,000 feet. The business report issued a year ago by Dun & Co. indicated in many instances a falling off in trade. The 1912 report, based on a large number of reports received from many firms in all the different lines of trade are different. Increases are reported from every important line, and nearly all report that prospects are exceptionally good. In addition to summarizing conditions in Seattle, Portland and Spokane, Dun & Co. have made a careful study of conditions throughout the three Northwestern states. Their report shows that not only a record-breaking cereal crop will be harvested, but that the fruit, wool, and hop crops will be larger than last year's, and that the lumber business is in excellent condition.

PREDICTS PERIOD OF PLENTY

George H. Prince, vice-president of the Merchants National Bank, St. Paul, has returned after an absence since last June. Mr. Prince spent much of his time motoring in Washington, Oregon and California. "It is a wonderful and a rich country, and next to our own Northwest it is the best I ever saw," said Mr. Prince. "The prosperity of the Northwest extends to the coast. The crop situation is good everywhere, and there are no dry spots like those in 1911. Never have I seen the financial situation of the country and the Northwest so good as now. We are certainly on the eve of one of the most prosperous periods in the history of the country, and I believe it will last for a long time."

AN UNDEVELOPED WHEAT AREA

The National Copper Bank of Salt Lake City, Utah, in its trade and finance letter says:

"As usual during the last year, whatever good indications exist seem to be intensified in the much-favored intermountain West. Winter wheat could scarcely be better, a statement that might with almost equal truth be made of every crop. Fruit in particular will make an unusual gain, the surplus for shipment being estimated at more than 100 per cent greater than in 1911. A healthy interest is being shown in mining development, and the activity of the regular producers is very gratifying. Perhaps none of the 'straws' indicate the general feeling of prosperity more plainly than the fact that the number of automobile licenses being granted by the secretary of state is much larger than in 1911."

"It is perhaps not generally realized that one of the largest undeveloped wheat areas in the United States centers about Salt Lake City. In Utah alone there are probably 15,000,000 acres of land now unused whose soil and climatic characteristics make wheat a natural crop. In southern Idaho there are 10,000,000, in Nevada another 10,000,000, and in southwestern Wyoming perhaps 3,000,000 more. These totals, while necessarily approximations, are as nearly correct as careful checking with fairly accurate data can make them, and are known to be under rather than over the mark. Out of this sum of 38,000,000 acres less than 700,000 are now in wheat. The total available area is nearly equal to the entire present wheat acreage of the United States.

"The unusual crop to be harvested by the intermountain states this year calls attention to and lays heavy emphasis upon the desirability of more adequate marketing arrangements."

Los Angeles

Los Angeles, Cal.—By vote of the national banks belonging to the Los Angeles clearing house a resolution was put into effect Monday morning under which interest will be paid by the banks on time deposits. The resolution states that the action is taken because of an abnormal increase in the deposits of the savings banks and trust companies of Los Angeles in comparison with the increase of the deposits of the economical banks, and that because of the growing custom of the commercial banks in the East to pay interest, the customers of banks expect interest on certain kinds of deposits. As a result the clearing house banks of Los Angeles will issue certificates of deposit payable 90 days after date, with interest at the rate of 3 per cent and payable six months after date, with interest at the rate of 4 per cent; or, if preferred by depositors, will issue time deposit books bearing interest at the rate of 3 per cent per annum on deposits left for a period of three months, and at the rate of 4 per cent per annum on deposits left for six months.

DEAN OF CONNECTICUT BANK PRESIDENTS

Charles B. Hallett, the oldest bank president in Connecticut, died at his home in Winsted, last week, aged ninety years. He was president of the Mechanics Savings Bank and a director of the First National Bank in Winsted, and was formerly a leather merchant. He had also served as a member of the board of assessors and board of relief for many years. He was born at Nantucket.

The State Bank of Three Lakes, Wisconsin, has been incorporated with a capital of $10,000.

San Francisco

Transfer of the ownership and control of the San Francisco waterfront from the State of California to the municipal government is urged in a resolution adopted by the directors of the Chamber of Commerce and made public to-day. The chamber maintains that San Francisco is seriously handicapped in the maintenance and development of its waterfront by reason of the fact that bonds for needed improvements can be issued only after the projected work has been passed upon by the legislature and subsequently submitted to a vote of the people of the entire state at a general election. This results in a delay of many months between the time when important new work is projected and the time when the bonds are issued and actual work commenced. It also necessitates a state-wide campaign every time San Francisco desires funds to develop its waterfront to keep up with the demands of its rapidly growing foreign trade. Despite the fact that both interest and principal on bond issues for this purpose are payable out of the revenues of the port, derived from dockage charges, the country voter has each time to be convinced that he is not voting to tax himself for the benefit of San Francisco. A strong letter will go out from the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce this week asking the support of the business organizations of the state in securing for San Francisco the same right to self-government and initiative which is enjoyed by the other municipalities, and it is confidently expected that the business men of California will admit the justice of the contention and come to the assistance of the chamber in its fight to take the waterfront out of state politics and provide for its control by and for the people of San Francisco.

CLEVER BANK SWINDLER CAUGHT

San Francisco.—An important arrest was made at Ukiah recently when Sheriff Byrne, acting on instructions from San Francisco, apprehended John A. Butler, alias Thompson, wanted in many cities throughout the state for forgery. Butler, who has many aliases, made it a practice to forge the signature of local bank cashiers to drafts calling for amounts ranging from $50 to $200, wire to some bank in Sacramento, San Jose or other city, in the name of the cashier of the local bank, to honor such draft and waive identification, go to the city he had wired to, step into the bank, present his draft and blandly remark that he presumed the cashier of the San Francisco bank had sent advance information that the draft was all right. He looked like a prosperous man, talked well, was self-possessed, and in most cases got the money. Butler also represented himself as publicity man for the St. Francis Hotel, and in at least one instance secured money by writing a letter directed to himself care of a Sacramento bank. In this letter he placed a forged draft and signed the letter "James Woods." He called at the bank, said he was publicity man for the St. Francis, asked for the letter, took out the draft, presented it, at the same time showing the letter, and walked out in a dignified manner $50 the richer. He was caught in the act of cashing a forged draft with the Bank of Ukiah and the case against him there is very strong.

EDMONTON NEWS

Edmonton, Alberta, August 12th.—Batteries of cutting machines are extended in far-flung lines in the southern part of the province of Alberta, and, according to Duncan Marshall, minister of agriculture, who has just returned to Edmonton from a tour of inspection, the harvest will be in full sway in a few days throughout the province. Wheat, barley, oats and other grains and alfalfa and timothy are from two to three weeks ahead of last year, and it is expected that the returns will be proportionately larger. Ten thousand men will be required to harvest the crops.

The statistical bureau of the provincial department of agriculture, has compiled the following figures regarding the crops and acreages from the reports of 800 correspondents throughout Alberta: Winter wheat, 127,200 acres; spring wheat, 855,000 acres; oats, 1,196,000 acres; barley, 262,000 acres; flax, 96,050 acres; rye, 17,725 acres; timothy, 51,435 acres and alfalfa 51,435 acres; total area under crop, 2,616,380 acres. In addition, more than 350,000 are devoted to mixed crops, including vegetables.

The figures for 1911, which were delayed on account of the difficulty encountered in getting the crop threshed, were given out by the department of agriculture on August 12th, as follows:

Winter wheat, 243,400 acres, 5,000,000 bushels; average, 20.5 bushels; spring wheat, 805,000 acres, 17,000,000 bushels; average, 21.1 bushels; oats, 1,000,000 acres, 30,000,000 bushels; average, 30 bushels; barley, 165,000 acres, 4,500,000 bushels, average, 37.3 bushels; flax, 55,000 acres, 330,000 bushels; average, 6 bushels; rye, 16,000 acres, 320,000 bushels; average, 20 bushels.

Ten Millions for Improvements

More than $10,000,000 will be expended in civic improvements and betterments in Edmonton during 1913 according to a program of development outlined by the board of commissioners. One million dollars, of which $250,000 is for sites, will be expended for school purposes. Twelve buildings, with 76 rooms, will be erected. Edmonton's total assessment, upon which it has borrowing power, is at this time $110,194,300. Against this it has borrowed $5,479,967, leaving in reserve $16,558,893. The total bonded indebtedness of the city is $12,040,000, of which $6,560,033 is represented by local improvement debentures, secured by special assessment. The city has the right to borrow 20 per cent of the assessment for general civic purposes. By-laws involving $743,140 will be submitted to the ratepayer for authorization the latter part of the month. One of the items is a gas plant, estimated to cost $699,827.

Prosperity of Western Canada

Thomas Hilliard, president and managing director of the Dominion Life Assurance Company of Waterloo, Ont., which has invested more than $2,000,000 in first mortgages in western Canada and $250,000 in Edmonton, said in an interview here that the company has not lost a dollar in the prairie provinces, adding: "I advised our directors in 1893 to put every dollar they could into western Canada, which was in need of the money and willing to pay a good price for it. I feel that the position I took then has been amply justified. That the people of western Canada are enjoying an almost universal prosperity is illustrated by the fact that with the exception of two small loans in the eastern part of Saskatchewan, none of the borrowers from the company is seriously in arrears. That is, there are no loans on which interest is due from an earlier date than January 1, 1912."

Loans to Farmers

Kingman N. Robins, of Rochester, N. Y., who has loaned more money on farm lands in the province of Alberta than any other individual, is in Edmonton planning to arrange channels for the investment of a large amount of capital in small loans to farmers and men who have homesteaded lands north, east and west of Edmonton. He considers a fair percentage of the present value of a patented homestead in Alberta to be a good enough first mortgage for any proportionate loan. He loans to build and to buy the machines for cultivating and harvesting the crops of the prairies. Heretofore the comparatively few homesteads in the northern part of the province for which patents have been granted have prevented Mr. Robins operating to any extent in the Edmonton district.

Colorado Convention

Colorado bankers will hold their eleventh annual convention in Pueblo, August 19th and 20th. Headquarters and assembly room will be in the Congress Hotel. The session the first day will be called to order by President Frank N. Briggs, president Interstate Savings Bank, Denver. Invocation will be offered by the Rev. J. Arthur Jeffers. The Hon. Alva Adams, president of the Pueblo Savings and Trust Company, will deliver the address of welcome and the response will be made by the Hon. John W. Springer, president of the Continental Trust Company, Denver. After the annual address by the president reports will be heard from the treasurer, secretary, legislative committee, protective committee and the committee on agricultural development and education, after which new committees will be appointed.

At three o'clock the state bank section will meet and will be called to order by Chairman John E. Hesse, president of the Hibernian Trust Company, Denver. After the annual address of the chairman, Secretary Paul Hardey will make his report, which will be followed by consideration of the state banking law. Immediately after the adjournment of the state bank section the different groups will hold their annual meetings, presided over respectively by the group chairmen, at which time group officers for the ensuing year will be elected, also a member of the nominating committee from each group. There will be an evening session, at which time the Hon. Charles G. Dawes, ex-comptroller of the currency and president of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, will talk on investments and their philosophy. Detective Burns then address the bankers on the subject of bank protection.

On Tuesday there will be an automobile ride throughout the city and delegates will be enabled to visit the steel works. Papers will be read on the public utilities law, rehabilitation of irrigation securities and "The Banker and Corporation Stock Issues," by Messrs. Henry Cohen, M. M. Schayer and J. B. Geijsbeek. There will be an open discussion, free to all members and limited to five minutes, after each of these papers. Col. James A. Lockhart will deliver an address on the possibilities of Southern Colorado. After reports from the state bank section and the A. I. B. section a recess will be taken until 2:30 o'clock.

At 12:30 P. M. a buffalo barbecue will be held at the Mineral Palace, after which prizes will be offered aggregating $800 in value. In the afternoon the Hon. Robert W. Bonyngue will deliver an address, after which miscellaneous business will be attended to and officers elected for the ensuing year. Immediately after adjournment a meeting of those who are members of the American Bankers Association will be held, which will be presided over by C. C. Parks, vice-president of the A. B. A. from Colorado. At this meeting a vice-president for the ensuing year and a member of the nominating committee of the A. B. A. for the convention to be held in Detroit will be elected. In the evening a grand ball will be held in the Congress Hotel.

BANK REORGANIZATION FAILS

Alleged irregularities which are said to have wrecked the First National Bank of Rowlesburg, W. Va., have been referred to Attorney-General Wickersham by Comptroller of the Currency Murray for investigation. Mr. Murray has been advised by Receiver Hiatt that the effort of the shareholders to reorganize the institution had failed, but probably a new bank would be formed.

The comptroller declared the discovery of the bank's condition showed the advantage of co-operation between the national and state banking authorities. About ten days ago, Mr. Murray said that a state bank examiner informed him of a relationship he had found existing between the First National Bank of Rowlesburg and a state institution. This excited the comptroller's suspicion and a special examination was ordered.

BANK SWINDLER HAS NEW SCHEME

Ukiah, Cal.—A man giving his name as A. G. Lane called at the First National Bank at Fort Bragg and presented a telegram from a San Francisco bank showing that $75 had been deposited in the city bank to his credit with orders to recognize the telegram for that amount. The $75 was handed out to Lane by the cashier shortly before the noon hour. After the cashier had gone to lunch, Lane appeared again and, showing another telegram to the president of the bank, who was on duty, received $75 more.

Inlay, Mayor William Riddle, S. Bartram Richards, former mayor of Ventnor, and Joseph Salus.

W. E. Knapp has been elected cashier of the Milford (Ohio) National Bank. Mr. Knapp was cashier of the First National Bank at Morrow.

Accounts of Iowa banks invited. Reserve agents for national banks

The city of Des Moines delayed the sale of $124,000 river improvement bonds for a week hoping for a better offer than was received upon the date advertised. The result was that two bidders dropped out and Chapman, Mills & Co. secured the bonds for $1,000 less than had been offered at the previous date.

Des Moines, August 14.—In connection with the assault which is going to be made this year on the flat rate tax on moneys and credits, it is anticipated that there may be some agitation along the line of repealing the law which fixes one-fourth valuation as the basis of taxation in Iowa. This state is one of the few in the union which makes an assessment of a certain amount on property, then takes one-fourth of it upon which to levy the taxes. Joseph A. Wall of the state auditor's office is one who has taken a stand against this system on the ground that it is "inexcusably foolish." It is held that the system is decidedly detrimental to Iowa in a publicity way, for the taxable value of the state is listed at only one-fourth of what it is actually worth. The stranger does not know this and he supposes that the actual value of Des Moines property is $22,000,000 for instance, instead of four times that amount.

The present bank law works exactly the same way. The new law provides for the assessment against the stockholders at 80 per cent and the assessor then takes one-fourth of that. As a matter of fact, in actual practice the assessor assesses the bank stockholder at 100 per cent and taxes him on one-fifth. Assessors complain that the new bank assessment law makes no provision for taking the assessment, but confines itself to the levying of the tax so that the assessor is at loss how to proceed in making his original assessment. Just how this law will be approached when the legislature meets is doubtful. It is reasonably certain, however, that some changes will be proposed.

The provision in the bank laws for the publicity of the names of all stockholders is also not well liked by bankers. The latter regard it as nobody's business who owns their stock, and the placing of all the names in the public prints does not make an especial hit with the state financiers. The law provides that the stock shall be filed with the assessor whence it is open to the public.

For Protection Against Bogus Checks

Hotel owners of the Northern Hotel Men's Association which held its annual convention in Des Moines last week, took concerted movement against the practice of cashing checks for strangers. It was suggested that hotel keepers are more often victimized on bogus checks than any other class of people. Practically every one of the 100 hotel men who attended the convention admitted that he had been swindled in this fashion at some time during his career. It is probable that personal checks and firm checks as well will be put under the ban by the hotel men of the northern states.

Reason for Pilot Mound Bank Failure

From meager reports which reach Des Moines, the failure of the Pilot Mound Bank, chronicled last week in this paper, was due to the financial condition of the Two Good Construction Company. This latter concern was thrown into the hands of a receiver, it appears, and the bank suddenly found itself with $20,000 worth of overdrafts. President W. B. Linn of the bank was prostrated when the true situation dawned upon him, and his two partners were deeply affected. There is no irregularity traceable to any of the officers of the bank, and the sole reason for the unfortunate ending of the institution seems to be lack of judgment as to the real status of the construction concern.

Prevents Passing of Stolen Check

A vigilant interurban conductor on the line from Des Moines to Colfax probably prevented an attempt on the part of two men to present at the Mitchellville Bank a check for $1,500. The conductor overheard two men talking about a check for that amount which it appears had been stolen from the vest pocket of John Wilson of that city. Thereupon the conductor dropped off the car, told the bank to be wary about paying the check, and proceeded on his way. Evidently the thieves took warning, for two detectives who were placed on their trail failed to discover them or the missing check.

Will Extend Railroad

Despite suspicions to the contrary, it is believed that Leslie M. Shaw, former secretary of the treasury, actually has backing in his plan to purchase the Atlantic Northern & Southern line and continue it from Atlantic to Des Moines on one side and to Omaha on the other. The road has been in the hands of a receiver and has been ordered sold. Upon the last day of grace, Mr. Shaw appeared at Council Bluffs and paid over $25,000 good, hard money. He then asked time to secure the remainder of the $400,000 required and was granted until September 1st. It is understood that foreign capital has been interested in the deal, and it is this syndicate, represented by Mr. Shaw, which was the highest bidder when the property was placed on sale.

Made Director Citizens National

Howard J. Clark, one of the best known attorneys in Iowa, was made director in the Citizens National, Des Moines, succeeding the late George M. King. Mr. Clark had been in Mexico on business affairs and was not apprised of his selection until some time after it had happened. Mr. Clark has been attorney for the bank and has been attorney for the King estate.

Auditor Bleakly Back From Tour Through West

State auditor John L. Bleakly has returned from Spokane and a trip to the Pacific coast. Mr. Bleakly attended the convention of insurance commissioners while at Spokane, and the remainder of the trip was for pleasure purposes only. The auditor seized the opportunity to visit the various state capitals and look into the methods that prevail in the taking care of the banks and financial institutions. Auditor Bleakly asserted upon his return that not a state in the West can make a better showing or one as good as Iowa in the fewness of bank failures on the part of institutions that are under the supervision of the state or nation.

At Minneapolis

Ralph Bolton, secretary of the Greater Des Moines Committee, was an interested attendant at the Minneapolis bankers conference. Mr. Bolton was delighted with the conference and feels that much good was done. He is also well pleased at the reception which was given the new Iowa idea of placing a crop expert in each county for the purpose of assisting in the scientific culture of corn and grain. The Iowa bankers who attended included Secretary Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association, who returned from Minneapolis to Sheldon to spend his vacation; C. H. McNider, of Mason City; E. J. Curtin, of Decorah, and Lynn Edwards of Burlington.

Iowa Banking Notes

One of the social events of the season in Des Moines was the marriage of Miss Katherine Ellyson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Ellyson, to Dr. John Henry Gould of the Eleventh Cavalry, stationed at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga. Mr. Ellyson, the father, was formerly president of the Marquardt Savings and the Commercial Savings and he was prominent in central Iowa financial circles until his health failed. He now is practically recovered.

Henry Sessions who was for several years cashier of the Capital City State Bank in Des Moines and was also a shoe dealer in this city, died last week at a sanitarium in Roxbury, Mass. The remains were brought to Des Moines for interment.

F. A. Haldridge has been elected cashier of the Milford National at Milford, succeeding H. S. Abbott.

The lobby of the bank will be enlarged and several improvements made which the officials believe will be of material assistance in providing for the pleasure and comfort of guests.

Des Moines clearings for the week ending August 10th totaled $4,426,585, a gain over the clearings for the corresponding week last year of nearly $1,000,000.

Sioux City

By JOHN J. BIDDISON.

The news columns are full nowadays of stories concerning phenomenal yields of grain in the territory of Iowa, Nebraska and the Dakotas. To call it a bumper crop is to put it mildly, for the yield in Sioux City territory promises to be the greatest in years. The tone of optimism that prevails among the banking fraternity as well as among the tradesmen and manufacturers is seemingly well founded, and those who had foresight to enlarge their business equipment with this fact in view are the happiest men to be found hereabouts. The faith in South Dakota manifested by thousands of land speculators who grabbed cheap lands that were abandoned by panic stricken and half starved homesteaders is amply fortified by this year's returns. The abundant rains and mild summer give promise that the corn crop, the mainstay of this section, will measure to the high standard set by small grains. They're going to build 'em "bigger and better" than ever this fall.

Declare 7 Per Cent Dividend

The usual 7 per cent dividend was declared and a healthy surplus was added to "undivided profits" by the Farmers Loan and Trust Company when that husky corporation held its annual meeting Monday and re-elected officers. It has been declaring a 7 per cent dividend yearly now for 30 years and with a capital and surplus of $550,000, is one of the largest banking institutions of the state. The following officers were re-elected: James F. Toy, president; D. C. Shull, vice-president; T. F. Harrington, second vice-president; F. V. Kammann, secretary; J. W. VanDyke, assistant secretary; C. A. Bond, treasurer; C. B. Toy, assistant treasurer.

Banking Brevities

Thos. Stinson, president of the Akron (Ia.) Savings Bank, met with a peculiar accident when, while mowing his lawn, he stepped backward and collided with a child. He turned swiftly in an effort to spare the child injury and fell in such a manner as to break his hip bone.

The site of the old First National Bank building at Sibley, Ia., is to be covered by a substantial business block, two stories high.

Among the Visiting Bankers

W. T. Graham, cashier of the First National of Laurel, Nebraska, was in Sioux City Wednesday. Mrs. Graham accompanied him on a shopping trip.

Patrick Henry, an old time banker at Chamberlain, S. D., formerly president of the Bank of Chamberlain, was in Sioux City Wednesday on his way back from the old home in Indiana. Mr. Henry is retired but owns some stock in the Brule National.

John H. Blair, vice-president of the Des Moines National, was in Sioux City Friday on his way out to his large ranch in Charles Mix county, S. D. Mr. Blair often takes his vacation in this manner.

Charters have been issued to the State National Bank of Heavener, Okla., capital $25,000 (conversion of the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Heavener), and to the National Bank of Commerce, of Hollis, Okla., capital $30,000, a conversion of the First State Bank of Hollis.

NUTS AND FRUITS FOR BANKERS

There has been incorporated under the United States laws in the District of Columbia the National Pecan and Orange Groves Company, of which nearly all the officers and directors are bankers. The corporation has the sanction and approval of the United States government through several of its departments. The capitalization of the company is $100,000. It owns 30,000 acres of land in southwestern Georgia, which is particularly well adapted to the propagation of oranges and pecans.

Officers and directors are: William T. Griffith, vice-president of Poolesville National Bank, and director of the Montgomery County National Bank, Rockville, Md.; Fred C. Geiger, president United States Legal Corporation, Washington, D. C.; G. C. Bantz, assistant treasurer of the United States; John Stigers, cashier, Hancock Bank, Hancock, Md.; A. J. Hendricks, of Washington, D. C.; Walter N. Bootay, capitalist, Brooklyn, N. Y.; George O'Donnell, Washington, D. C., and H. W. Smithwick, horticulturist, in charge of the groves, ex-president of the Georgia and Florida Nut Growers Association, Americus, Ga.

BANK DIRECTOR WINS CASE

Astoria, Ore.—The circuit court jury in the case of Frank S. Godfrey, receiver of the Bank of Seaside, against B. F. Bartch, one of the directors of the defunct institution, returned a verdict for the defendant. The action was brought to recover $59,275.85, the full amount of the bank's net indebtedness at the time it failed, with interest at 6 per cent from November 10, 1910. The suit was based on the allegation that the defendant, as one of the directors of the defunct bank, committed an illegal act in declaring dividends on the capital stock when the bank was losing money, and also in loaning more money to one institution than is permitted under the law. The basis of the verdict was the belief among the jurors that Bartch, who is an old man and unversed in banking rules, had been imposed upon and made a tool by the men who wrecked the bank.

JUNE IRON AND STEEL EXPORTS IN EXCESS OF $24,795,000

Iron and steel exports for June, 1912, were valued at $24,795,802, compared with May exports of $28,050,247. While this is a falling off of a little over $3,000,000, yet with one exception, namely, May, June exports were better than any month during the present calendar year and were $4,400,000 better than June of 1911, and $8,200,000 better than the same month of 1910. For the twelve months ending with June of this year, total value of exports of iron and steel were $268,154,262, compared with $230,725,352 for the year ended with June, 1911. For the first six months of 1912 the value of iron and steel exports, not including ore, was $144,364,185, or at the annual rate of $288,728,370, compared with $250,000,000 in 1911; $201,271,903 in 1910; and $147,680,331 for 1909.

The imports of iron and steel, not including ore, for June, 1912, were valued at $2,454,694, compared with $2,777,718 for June, 1911, and for the twelve months ending with June, 1912, were valued at $26,551,040, compared with $34,205,968 for the same period in 1911. On account of labor troubles in England this country has for several months received a tremendous advantage in foreign sales, part of which advantage will be held even after these labor troubles are amicably settled. The Steel Corporation is selling more materials abroad at present from its fifty-eight foreign offices than ever before in its history and the U. S. Steel Products Company will show a record in earnings for this year.

CINCINNATI TO HAVE BANK FOR WOMEN

Cincinnati, Ohio.—Active work is under way in the organization of a down-town bank for women, that is to be managed absolutely by members of the fair sex and conducted in all its departments in the interests of women.

The name of the new institution is to be The Womans Savings Bank and Trust Company, and it is to have a capital of $100,000, that is to be paid in at $110 a share, thus starting the new venture with a surplus of $10,000. Everything about the bank is to be of the gentler sex from the president down to the janitress.

The organizers of the new project, who are very enthusiastic, have already looked over the business center of the city and have picked the large vacant room on the ground floor of the Mercantile Library Building, and formerly occupied by the bond house of Seasingood & Mayer, as the best location for the proposed institution. It is said that they have already carried the matter to that point where they have secured an undersanding from the Emery estate as to the terms on which the storeroom can be secured for a period of years.

Within the past few days a committee of women has called upon a number of women prominent in business circles, and in each instance the project has met with enthusiasm. There are several banks of this character in this country, principally one in Denver that has proven a great financial success.

The bank is to have a directorate composed of from twenty to twenty-five woman. Quite a number of prominent business women have already signified their intention of accepting a directorship in the institution. The presidency will probably fall to a woman who is a large factor in business in this city, and she is now said to have the acceptance under consideration. The members of the executive committee, which will be drawn from the board of directors, will also be women, and man is to find no place in the institution except as a customer.

OATS, THE BUMPER CROP

The Wall Street Journal says: Among all the crops of the season oats is certainly the most remarkable in point of productivity. The unprecedented yield of 1,207,000,000 bushels is 285,000,000 bushels larger than that of last year, and 21,000,000 bigger than the best previous record of 1910. One of the good effects resulting from it will be the restoration of faith of farmers in their ability to produce a first class crop. The country has had three of the kind within five years. In the half decade closing with this year oats crops averaged 1,021,000,000 bushels. Part of this is due to expansion in acreage, but the season in which rain comes at the right time is more than anything else at the bottom of the bumper oats crop.

BROOKLYN BANK

Stockholders of the old Brooklyn Bank, New York, which is now in liquidation by the Metropolitan Trust Company, at a special meeting authorized the continuation of the $400,000 loan which the Metropolitan Trust made to the bank prior to its resumption after the suspension in 1907. It was the granting of this loan which enabled the bank to resume business without recourse to the deferred payment plan adopted by other institutions which closed their doors at that time. At a meeting last week the retiring directors were re-elected.

A charter has been issued to the First National Bank of Homingford, Neb., capital $25,000.

Philadelphia

Philadelphia bankers are outspoken in their objection to the proposition of Secretary MacVeagh to reduce the size of bank and government notes. Direct opposition has not been formulated. A prominent bank official, however, said he would communicate with the executive council of the American Bankers Association. It is contended that with the smaller notes difficulties in detecting counterfeits would become greater and that pending the retirement of outstanding issues there would be two sizes of notes in circulation.

Henry R. Borneman, one of the auditors for the Tradesmens Trust Company said last Friday that he expected to make the figures public before the close of this week. He added that the audit showed over $460,000 on hand. From this would have to be deducted the receivership and auditors' expense and any claims that might be allowed, before disbursement could be made. It will be necessary to get the approval of the Dauphin county court prior to allowing payments. This, it was figured, might require about thirty days. There was approximately $1,000,000 on deposit when the company closed its doors.

Bankers See a 6 Per Cent Market

Officers of some of the big call money lending banks cling to the view that the rate will stiffen in the near future and when crop needs are imminent the rate will advance to 5 easily and 8 probably. Just now the stock exchange houses can get all they want around 2½ simply because the supply is practically unlimited. The same is true with time money. Bankers see a 6 per cent market and they expect to get it in September. From all over the land come reports of better and bigger business and consequent monetary requirements.

The Phoenixville Trust Company, which recently opened a new bank building, five years after the organization of the company, reports that the deposits have increased from $36,674 in 1907 to $362,700 on a corresponding date in 1912. In its brief business career the company has accumulated a surplus and undivided profits amounting to $42,884, and has paid stockholders $12,500 in dividends.

Joseph Wayne, Jr., vice-president and cashier of the Girard National, has returned from an extended trip through Europe.

Louis Wagner, president of the Third National, celebrated his 74th birthday on the 4th inst.

FOR UNIFORM BANK CURRENCY

Representative Tilson has introduced in the house a bill providing for a uniform national bank currency. The bill reads as follows.

"That on and after July 1, 1913, all currency supplied by the United States to national banks for circulation shall be uniform in the several denominations authorized by law, and shall not bear any name, number, or other distinguishing mark indicating the bank to which the same is issued. The comptroller of the currency shall, under the direction of the secretary of the treasury, cause plates and dies to be engraved in the best manner to guard against counterfeiting and fraudulent alteration, and shall have printed therefrom and number such quantity of national bank certificates of the denominations of five dollars, ten dollars, twenty dollars, fifty dollars, one hundred dollars, five hundred dollars, one thousand dollars, and ten thousand dollars as may be required to supply the associations entitled to receive the same. Such certificates shall state upon their face that they are secured by United States bonds or other securities certified by the written or engraved signatures of the treasurer and register and by the imprint of the seal of the treasury."

POSTAL SAVINGS DEPOSITS

Statistics regarding the operation of the postal savings system in the Boston postoffice and stations during July have been compiled by Postmaster Mansfield. During the month 943 accounts were opened; the amount deposited to the credit of old and new accounts was $83,953, and the amount of payments was $47,320. Since the establishment of the first postal savings depository in Boston, August 1, 1911, 11,859 accounts have been opened. The amount of deposits has been $731,043, and the amount of payments $307,944. During the year savings cards and stamps have been sold to the amount of $10,337.

M. A. Jacobs has been elected cashier of the German National Bank, Beaver Dam, Wis., to succeed Peter Beule, deceased.

Carl C. Pederson has been elected cashier of the First National, Frederic, Wis., to succeed J. Le Roy Elwell, who resigned to become cashier of the First State Bank, of Egan, N. D.

SMALLER COTTON CROP SOUTH

The cotton crop of the South this year will not be as large as that of last year by 2,500,000 to 3,000,000 bales, but the demands upon it are not likely to be as great. In addition to the fact that the world's spinners have done much to provide for future supplies, the crops of the other principal cotton-producing countries promise better than a year ago.

Although the United States furnishes fully two-thirds of all the cotton grown, India and Egypt are the two next most important sources of supply. England depends to some extent upon the supplies from her dominions, and the Far East also looks to India. Egypt's crop this year will show a considerable increase over that of 1911 and the quality will be superior. The cotton worm is well in hand and has not done any great injury except in a few isolated districts. The crop is generally fully 12 days ahead of last season's, and reports from all points in upper and lower Egypt are decidedly favorable. While the crop still has a critical period to go through, present indications point to the largest crop ever harvested in that country.

Partial failure of the monsoon in India last year resulted in a short crop. Bombay itself had to import some 200,000 bales, and Japan, which depends to a large extent on Indian cotton, had to import over 200,000 bales more of the American staple than ever before. European spinners, too, had to decrease their use of Indian cotton to the extent of 486,000 bales.

All this constituted an extra demand upon the American supply. This year the monsoon in India is at last favorable, and this is expected to yield a harvest considerably in excess of last year's 5,500,000 bales.

Judging from the rapid consumption of our big crop of last year, the world's requirements appeared to have overtaken the world's production. But it should be borne in mind that the demands made represented more than a normal rate of increase, due largely to the previous depleted condition of stocks, consequent upon three rather small crops in succession in the United States, and the partial failure of the cotton crops in India and Egypt last year.—Wall Street Journal.

HOW BANKERS HELP THE FARMERS

Something of the importance to Oregon in the recent move of bankers to assist the farming communities is well illustrated by the action of a Bend, Ore., banker, who has greatly encouraged the raising of hogs. C. S. Hudson, cashier of the First National Bank of Bend, has put into operation a plan which is growing in favor in many parts of the country of that vicinity. The experiment was started about a year ago when hogs were shipped in from the Middle West by the banker and distributed to the farmers of the vicinity. It appears that the experiment has been successful and officials of the Portland Union Stockyards Company have been notified that they may expect great results from that industry in the future.

Recent investments in Oregon by eastern capitalists show that there is great activity in this line, a recent sale, the largest recorded for some time, being that involved in the transfer of a ranch of 1,500 acres, the consideration being $200,000. It is announced that the ranch will be divided into small tracts and planted to pear trees. J. E. Trasker, a wealthy banker, formerly from Regina, Canada, has recently secured a large tract of land near Portland, the consideration involved being $50,000.

LAUNDERS MORE THAN $500,000 IN CASH

Washington.—More than a half million dollars of old paper money, washed and ironed to the crispness of new in the federal government's currency laundry, was placed in circulation this week. This lot represented Uncle Sam's first job as a laundryman.

For weeks the treasury department has been cleaning and reviving dirty old notes by the washing machine perfected in the bureau of engraving and printing. Secretary MacVeagh has stamped the venture a success and the laundry will be run in full swing from now on. All Uncle Sam's bills which are not practically worn out will be washed, ironed and redistributed.

The first batch of notes will be sent to sub-treasuries and paid out to banks in the Middle West. The treasury department has ordered three more washing machines. Within a few months, it is expected that every sub-treasury will be equipped with a laundry and the government expects to save hundreds of thousands of dollars annually.

GOOD BUSINESS IN DAKOTA

Pierre, S. D.—The abundant harvest, now practically saved, has given a general impetus to business throughout South Dakota and the state is enjoying a greater prosperity than it has had since 1909. New industries are being started or are definitely planned and old ones are taking on new life, while merchants are doing a thriving business and expecting to break records next autumn. Even railroad construction, which has been quiescent for two years, is being discussed again with a practical certainty that several extensions will be undertaken soon.

Before the end of the building season in the fall North Dakota will have nearly 1,500 miles of new railroads. These new lines will increase the state's total mileage about 25 per cent. Considering the size of the state, its population and the railroad mileage it now has, the amount of construction work under way easily places North Dakota at the head of all the states from the point of rail construction for the year. The greatest interest centers on the new line of the Minneapolis & St. Louis, which will extend clear across the state from the southern to the northern boundary lines. Railroad construction in the west central section of the state has become animated as a result of the contest between the Sault Ste. Marie line, the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern for new territory. In the north another move by the Soo is being made, with the object of reaching territory now tapped exclusively by the Great Northern. The extension of the Great Northern from New Rockford into McKenzie county was a move that was not expected. Many new towns are being opened along these extensions and some old ones have gained in importance, population and business.

While crops are a tremendous item, live stock for years has been South Dakota's greatest money producer and this year the state has "the critters to sell" at a time when prices exceed anything South Dakota ranchmen ever dreamed of receiving. Last year the state sold 650,000,000 pounds of pork and beef at an average of about 5 cents. This year it will sell as much at an average of 7 cents.

Alturas, Cal.—In a statement regarding the affairs of the Bank of Modoc County, which was closed recently, George M. Mitchell, the deputy of the state banking department assigned to liquidate the bank, is quoted as saying that the depositors will probably get dollar for dollar. The statement places the total assets at $84,244.93, consisting of loans, secured and unsecured, $66,764.78; real estate, $4,049.55. The liabilities are placed at $31,763.00, consisting of bills payable, $4,100; individual deposits, $18,333.91; term certificates of deposit, $535.40; cashier's checks $843.17; due to banks, $54.11; outstanding drafts accounted for, $8,257.21. There is a total of 63 deposits varying from $4,500 to 20c. Of the total loans of $66,000, about $20,000 are amply secured the rest being secured by notes. The largest secured loan is for $14,000 to W. A. Sherlock. The largest unsecured loan is $3,800. Both are considered good. The $40,000 in notes hypothecated with a Sacramento bank have been returned on order of Bank Superintendent Williams. The bank stock is all owned by the five Lauer brothers. Charges of felony in the management of the bank will be investigated by the grand jury which met and organized on Monday.

Having secured a position as treasurer of a large manufacturing company of Pittsburg, C. Rowland Richards, of Louisville, Ky., state bank examiner, has sent in his resignation, which was accepted, and A. Burton Faris, of Richmond, was appointed to fill the vacancy.

WOODROW WILSON has a plan of systematizing governmental income and expenditure. He said: "It is a matter I have been interested in ever since I was a youngster. Things were different then, however. There were the committee on ways and means for supplies and the committee on appropriations to regulate expenditures."

"NOWADAYS we have the military committee taking care of the army appropriation bill, the naval committee looks after the naval appropriation bill, and the agricultural committee the agricultural bill, so that we have no place or authority where the various items might be systematized and we never know how much is spent by congress till it adjourns."

"RELATIVE of Banker's Wife Commits Suicide" is a big headline in a Chicago paper. Then follows the story of some demented unknown "who was related to the wife of ———, a prominent Iowa banker."

OF course the banker and his estimable wife are made to suffer by the notoriety, all to attract attention to what never had the elements of a news item.

BANKERS are the goats for the sensation monger at every opportunity. Strange they stand for it in papers which they chiefly support?

"SOIL Conservation," as a banker-farmer issue in Illinois was "waked from the dead" by Dr. Cyril G. Hopkins of the University of Illinois at a meeting of the Illinois Bankers Association held on William George's Brookline Farm, at Aurora three years ago. Preservation or restoration of soil fertility was the keynote.

NOW comes William George with a tip to the Banker-Farmer to come to his "Hog Sale" at the Brookline Farm on Monday the 19th. "If you cannot come," says William, "write or telegraph your bid" and help spread the "Better Hogs" doctrine.

NELSON over at the Merchants Loan has had an architect and a landscape artist collaborate on plans for a hog farm on his Louisiana estate. Nelson believes there's millions in it. At least in Illinois the profits on raising good porkers are immense.

"MOOSEPAPERS," almost as easy to say as newspapers, but meaning that you are to expect more "dope" than news for the time being.

SOPEHOPPY is not the name of a disease nor of a new petroleum extract, but of a town in Florida, where the examiner has closed a bank. No wonder!

N. H. GREENE of Moline reports that his constitutional amendment fixing, so far as is possible the period for holding the annual convention of the I. B. A. is gaining support from all quarters. He's right!

ANOTHER amendment which is talked of considerably is the one on cutting off the ex-presidents, who, as a political asset of a former régime, were put on the council for life. Most of the ex-presidents are said to be in favor of being cut off.

INQUIRIES have reached this office as to whether or not J. Fletcher Farrell of the Fort Dearborn National is a candidate this year for the chairmanship of the A. B. A. executive council. Inquiries came from three widely separated points, leading to the assumption that such talk is general.

MR. FARRELL is not a member of the executive council, nor is he a candidate for election to that distinguished body. He is treasurer of the American Bankers Association, serving his first year in that office. It has been customary to give all of the treasurers two terms, and Mr. Farrell's friends will be entirely satisfied to have the members of the executive council re-elect him to that position. There positively is no basis for any of the rumors which we have heard stating anything to the contrary.

YOU will see elsewhere in this issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER a list of prominent bankers from Minneapolis and St. Paul who have made table reservations on the Chicago-Detroit special train. Reservations are coming in from all points of the compass, and the "banquet on wheels" is an assured success.

SECRETARIES P. C. Kauffman of the Washington Bankers Association and Frederick H. Colburn of the California bankers, have sent out bulletins changing the time of the arrival in Chicago of the big Pacific Coast special so that it may be consolidated with the Chicago special at this point on Sunday morning, September 8th, at 10:00 A. M.

E. E. CRABTREE of Jacksonville spent several days in Chicago this week on business strictly connected with his bank. He has made a reservation for three seats on the Chicago special.

L. L. BACCHUS, connected with the auditor's office at Springfield and in charge of the banking and building loan department, was in Chicago this week advising with some of the newer created state banks as to the duties and powers of their directors. This is an important subject, especially in a new bank, and Mr. Bacchus is complete master of it.

WE have had a number of applications in this office for particulars as to the plan adopted for the new Woodruff farm loan bank at Joliet. It is our information that President George Woodruff, before leaving for Europe, compiled a short reprint covering that question and that copies of it may be had by addressing the First National at Joliet.

HOMER W. MCCOY, head of the big investment concern in Chicago bearing his name, and an ex-president of the Illinois Bankers Association, is one of the standard tourists when it comes to going to the national convention of the American Bankers Association. His "hat is in the ring" for Detroit.

FRANK ROTI announces the "grand opening" of the Western Savings Bank at 618-20 North Western Ave., Chicago, on Monday, the 19th. Mr. Roti is "proprietor" and intends to do a mixed business of "banking, real estate and insurance." "Open from 8 a. m. to 8 p. m."

COMMERCIAL-GERMAN NATIONAL, Peoria, has increased its capital by $200,000 and now has $750,000 capital and a like amount of surplus. "Biggest bank in Illinois outside of Chicago," is the proud descriptive title of the enlarged institution.

SECRETARY J. L. Hartman of the Oregon association does not expect to reach Detroit until Monday, September 9th, but will try to connect up with the Banquet on Wheels if possible.

"TO the Editor of the Best Paper in the Town or City to which this is addressed —Chicago, Ill., was what was on a big, important looking mail document delivered at this office on Friday last. Now will you be good?

S. W. STRAUSS & CO., Chicago, announce that the Cheverny apartments first mortgage 6 per cent bonds have been called for payment at 103 and accrued interest, in accordance with the terms of the trust deed. Of the total issue of $45,000, $4,500 were paid off, leaving $40,500 outstanding, now called for redemption.

OLD Phinneas T. Barnum was the wisest showman that ever lived, but his horse sense would have distinguished him in any field. The next paragraph by "P. T." will serve as a text for any up-to-date savings bank preachment, and up to date has not to our knowledge been assimilated by Fra Hubbard.

WHEN a man finds himself at the end of a year without a surplus, though he has a good income, let him take an account book and subdivide it, on each page, into "Necessities," "Comforts," and "Luxuries." Let him keep account of every penny he expends, and he will find that the last account will outweigh the former many times. Then, if he has common sense, character, and will-power, he will reduce the amount paid out for luxuries, and amass a surplus. In other words, he will save. Saving is simply the elimination of waste expenditures. It is waste, and nothing else, that keeps a man constantly behind. The man who cuts out waste will have no difficulty in saving.—P. T. Barnum.

TAKE your golf bag to Detroit and win a prize. W. Howie Muir (Scottish man) is chairman of the golf tournament for the A. B. A. convention delegates. Bring your certified weight, handicap checks, etc. Captain Muir means business.

THE tournament is on Wednesday, September 11th. All told there are eight silver cups, and all games will be 4 ball foursomes. Two cups will go to best net score. One event is for players under 150 pounds and one event for those above that weight. Handicaps must be from home club and accompany the entry. One event is for "average 150 pounds," and may include fat and lean mixed.

THERE will be golf for all, but the requirements are not a joke of any kind. Capt. Muir evidently means business, so bring your clubs, your golf bag and your certified handicap from the home club. Train down if you want to be in the light weight class.

YOU can choose your partners and enter now by addressing the Golf Committee, Bankers Association, Country Club, Grosse Point Farms, Mich.

NEW BANK FOR WEST SIDE

A new bank shortly will be opened on the West Side by interests connected with the Central Trust Company of Illinois. The new institution will be located in the quarters formerly occupied by the Prairie State Bank, which was absorbed by the Central Trust Company last March. The capital stock will be $200,000. The shares will be sold at $125 each, the premium thereby creating a paid-in surplus of $50,000. The bank will cover that territory reached by the Prairie State prior to its absorption. The president will be chosen from the force of the Central Trust Company. Charles G. Dawes and Joseph E. Otis, president and vice-president respectively of the Central Trust, will control the management of the new bank. The name and officers of the new institution will be announced shortly.

NEW CHICAGO BOND HOUSE

The bond firm of Elston, Clifford & Co. is being organized by Edward Clifford, manager of the Chicago office of Hornblower and Weeks. Mr. Elston, the senior member of the firm, has been prominent in the organization of a number of gas and electric companies, and Mr. Allyn, who also will be one of the firm, has been associated with Mr. Clifford in the office of Hornblower and Weeks. It is expected that the new concern will commence business sometime the fore part of September.

To Detroit

The big Chicago-Detroit special is filling up rapidly. The "calls" for the banquet on wheels will come at 11:30 a. m., and 12:30 and 1:30 p. m. if more than two "calls" are necessary. If only two calls, they will come at 12 noon and at 1:00 p. m. There are 159 on the diagram now, many of them specifying second call.

Neither The Chicago Banker nor the Chicago-Detroit transportation committee of bankers, of which Arthur Reynolds is chairman, has anything to do with the boat trip by way of Mackinac. That is a tourist promotion simply. The official and only train sanctioned by the committee on transportation will be one over the Michigan Central-New York Central lines, at 10 a. m. on Sunday, September 8th. All regular and tourist tickets are good on it, and stop-overs can be had at Detroit by those who wish to continue eastward after the convention. Reservations for the Banquet-on-Wheels can be made in full only where all names are furnished. Tickets for banquet and Pullman will be forwarded direct by the railway company.

Buy your railway ticket at your own railway ticket office.

Reservations can be made through C. C. Clark, General Agent, Michigan Central, 228 S. Clark St., Chicago, or through any bank in Chicago. The members of the transportation committee are: Arthur Reynolds, chairman, Des Moines; W. G. Edens, Central Trust, Chicago; Nelson H. Greene, Moline; J. Fletcher Farrell, Fort Dearborn National, Chicago; George F. Orde, First National, Minneapolis; Oliver C. Fuller, Wisconsin Trust, Milwaukee; E. J. Bowman, Anaconda, Mont.; W. D. Vincent, Old National, Spokane.

Make your reservation early so that the best of service may be furnished to all.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

ANOTHER reason for being in Detroit on Monday is that the Burroughs Adding Machine Company has extended an invitation to all visiting bankers to go over to their place for luncheon between 12:30 and 2 P. M. An appropriate souvenir will be distributed to those who attend.

AT 4:30 P. M. on Monday the steamer "Tash-moo" will take the bankers up the Detroit River to Lake St. Clair, returning about 10:00 P. M. Luncheon will be served on board the boat. The social program for almost every other day of the convention is equally full of events.

WORD comes from the hotel committee at Detroit that the room reservation demand is being cared for systematically, and that the situation is fully in hand. Those not already provided for can find accommodations by communicating with this committee through any bank in Detroit.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., is preparing for its Panama-California exposition international to be held throughout the entire year of 1915. Some very interesting and attractive advertising is being circulated by the First National of San Diego. This bank will be pleased to answer any inquiries or to make any banking arrangement necessary for those who expect to attend or to participate in the exposition.

HAVE a drink with Andrew Russel, the republican nominee for state treasurer. Mr. Russel is distributing through the mails and at meetings which he attends, paper drinking cups containing his picture and the advice "Quench your thirst now." He says that the cups are intended for cold water only.

ONE of the cleverest short addresses of the year is the reply to the address of welcome at the Pueblo convention by Allen F. Ayres of the Continental Trust at Denver. It is both clever and short, two important requisites for such a performance.

THE proceedings book for the twenty-sixth annual convention of the Iowa Bankers Association held at Cedar Rapids, June 5th and 6th, is out. It is very handsomely illustrated, giving the pictures of all officers and of all the group chairmen who composed the council of administration in that state.

SECRETARY P. W. HALL is to be congratulated upon the evidences of editorial care shown in the make-up of the volume, which contains a list of all members of the association by counties and the counties by groups. The names of all those attending the Cedar Rapids meeting are included also.

PERHAPS there is not a state in the Union where the bankers are trying to help the farmers any more sincerely or earnestly than they are in Iowa. Scott county, in which Davenport is situated, has a farm improvement league. President A. F. Dawson of the First National of that city is chairman of the executive committee, and has been giving very liberally of his time to the furthering of the league. Mr. Dawson served Iowa a number of years in congress, and is a very fluent speaker. He is in great demand at farmers' meetings everywhere.

S. B. CHAPIN, the well-known Chicago and New York broker, predicts bullish activity and higher prices for the stock market. He does not see any disturbing influence in the political situation.

KNAUTH, NACHOD AND KUHNE of New York look at the situation from a similar viewpoint. Their August 15th circular says that "the political situation has not been in the least disturbing." This leading house takes a great deal of comfort from the Woodrow Wilson letter of acceptance, believing that it has had a settling and quieting influence on business conditions.

IN addition to serving a luncheon to the bankers who will visit their plant in Detroit, the Burroughs Adding Machine Company intends to conduct a model bank in parlors F and C at the Ponchartrain, where they will demonstrate the usefulness of all of their latest bank adding machines, including the transit and ledger posting machines. Additional souvenirs will be distributed at this point.

AMONG the addresses of the year in a convention way attention has been called to that of Raymond B. Cox, president of the American Institute of Banking, delivered at the Salt Lake convention. In reality it is a very high class paper and will be found printed in full elsewhere in this edition.

MR. COX is an assistant cashier of the Fourth National in New York City, and has been giving a very good account of himself since he reached the metropolis. President James G. Cannon has been a friend of the institute from its very beginning, and has shown his appreciation of one of its chief products—well educated young men—by giving an important position in his bank to President Raymond B. Cox of the institute.

TREASURER C. S. DIETHER of the American Institute of Banking reported at the Salt Lake convention covering the operations of the institute for the year. The income is around $24,000 per annum, about one-third of which comes from bulletin subscriptions and one-third from membership dues. Other receipts are from the study courses. The balance on hand August 1st was $3,350.27.

MISSOURI has 1,147 incorporated state banks and thirty-one private banks. She has fifty-two trust companies and 134 national banks. The total deposits of the thirty-one private banks are less than three millions of dollars. The state banks have two hundred and sixty-two millions in resources and the national banks three hundred and ninety-seven millions, with the trust companies about half the latter amount.

SECRETARY J. W. ROBINSON of the Idaho bankers in his August 9th bulletin invited all of the bankers in his state to join the Chicago special in this city on the morning of Sunday, September 8th, at 10 A. M., for the trip to Detroit. Bankers may make reservations through any bank in the city of Chicago for this splendid train.

EUGENE SNOWDEN of St. Louis, who has been traveling in Kansas, reports the crop outlook for that state the best in years. For once Kansas got just the exact amount of rain she needed and got it when it was needed the most.

MR. SNOWDEN noticed that the mills of North Topeka were being operated both day and night in order to handle the 1912 crop. Flour mill owners told him that this year's wheat is the best ever raised in the state.

VOLUME XXXIII

CHICAGO, AUGUST 24, 1912

NUMBER 8

President Raymond B. Cox to American Institute of Banking

It is not the purpose that this shall be a detailed account of all that has transpired in the institute during the past year, but to inform this convention of the progress of the association to present those matters which demand the attention of this body as a national organization and to offer such comments and criticisms as are prompted by the observations and experiences of its retiring president.

Through a good fortune which came to me solely because of my work in the institute, I have in the occupancy of my position been able to keep in the closest touch with the affairs of the institute, having personally visited twenty-one (21) chapters and consulted almost daily with the educational director. As a result of this close observation I can declare with intimate knowledge that the institute is an institution of study, that its members as a body are organized for the sole purpose of their own edification and that they are conscientiously devoted to their purpose.

I must admit, however, that they occasionally permit the introduction of diverting influences. The most serious problem which has confronted the present administration has been the growing popularity of public theatrical performances under the joint auspices of chapters and professional promoters and I present for the consideration of this convention the declaration that such performances are in violation of the spirit and letter of our constitution and are detrimental to the purpose for which we are organized. I trust that every delegate in attendance at this convention will return to his chapter with the conviction that the complete success of his chapter's efforts depends upon strict adherence to its avowed purpose so that my successor will never hear as I have so often this year the expression "educational features," insinuating as it does that it is but a part of a general plan. Members of the institute may wonder why their officers dwell so continually on this point. It is because these officers in their varied experience have learned so well that on that policy and on that only will the institute or any of its chapters succeed.

In my personal visits, as in my correspondence and contributions to the press, I have endeavored to present the institute as an organization of national scope and influence, giving to the members an intimate knowledge of its affairs. In this effort there were two objects, the first being to encourage the individual chapter member with a broader interest in his activities that he may realize his identity with a national movement which is of the greatest importance to the development of the country. In the furtherance of this effort I would suggest that officers of each chapter should keep themselves and their associates well informed on the affairs of the institute at large. In the second object of this effort, which was to encourage a stricter adherence to the prescribed courses of study, I was surprised to find how many chapter officers were evidently not familiar with the courses and what the institute could do to help them in their local work. In order to determine how systematically the prescribed courses of the institute were being followed, a

Not a history but a specific estimate of progress made by this interesting and effective national organization in which is offered such comment and criticism as are suggested by close observation and experience. An able contribution to Institute literature letter was sent to the president of each chapter asking certain questions relating to their educational work. Only forty-three replies were received and, of these, thirty-five chapters stated that they were using the lectures prepared under the direction of the executive council. During the past year the study course has been revised, some lectures being entirely rewritten at considerable expense by authorities so that this course to-day is by far the best compilation of thought for this purpose in existence. The plan of the course cannot be criticised by the casual institute student because it is the result not of one mind but of many, observing what was best for the individual chapters not through the experiments of one year, but of ten years. Furthermore, since banking is a national problem, the principles of which are the same on the Atlantic and on the Pacific coast, it is necessary, if we are to be a power in developing the nation's banking, that all of our students should study the subject along similar lines. In behalf then of their own best interests and of this much desired harmony, I urge the chapter officers that in planning their courses they first seek the advice of the educational director of the institute.

The success of any effort depends upon definiteness. There must be a clear conception of the purpose, with a vision not clouded by the shadows of subsidiary opportunities. We must have but a single purpose in view with a nationally systematic definiteness and direction in its execution. It is a great satisfaction that we are so rapidly approaching this condition. While not all of the chapters are operating in perfect harmony with prescribed methods yet the large majority are and accordingly the hardest part of the fight has been won. The most pleasing proof of this is the rapidly increasing number of institute graduates. In August, 1911, the educational director reported 309 graduates; to-day, one year later, he can report 489, an increase of 180, which fact is not to be taken as an indication of the success of this administration but of the immediately previous ones. This increasing number of graduates, signifying as it does the growing appreciation of the distinction, demonstrates in another manner the wisdom of the policy which has been pursued. It has been held by some in the past that the prepared courses were too elementary, which detracted accordingly from the value of the institute certificate. The officers of the institute have always claimed, and the fact has been especially emphasized during the past year, that we must first inspire ambition and then train our members to be students, giving them only the fundamentals; that we must progress by definite stages. As the first goal the institute certificate was proposed. It was never claimed that the possession of this certificate would signify that the holder was a master of finance or a finished banker. It was intended that the certificate holders should be recognized as young men of ambition and energy with the ability to study and think for themselves and with such a knowledge of the fundamental principles that the more advanced problems of finance could be easily understood. It is for young men of this type that bankers seek to act as their immediate successors, and in the past few years they have learned to look among the ranks of institute graduates. During the past year I have discussed the institute at either conventions or personal visits with the most prominent bankers in practically every city in the country. It has been a matter of great pride to hear their commendation of the institute and that they recognized in an institute graduate a young man for special consideration because he had thus demonstrated his ambition, energy, persistency and ability to think.

Now that the prescribed courses of the institute, which were prepared to provide elementary education for the majority rather than academic education for the few, are thoroughly established, with the value of the institute certificate extensively recognized, it is time that an advanced course of study be provided for that rapidly increasing number of institute graduates. It is not enough that the institute should merely provide the bank man with the facilities for learning the fundamental principles and methods of his profession; it should be prepared to lead him into the most advanced thought and intricate problems. The day should not be far distant when the best bankers and highest financial authorities in the country will be products of the institute. It has taken many years to prepare the course of study which is now prescribed as the foundation; it may take as many more years to satisfactorily arrange this advanced course, but the initial effort has been made by a committee of institute graduates appointed to consider the matter and make a report thereon to this convention. After a whole year of constant thought and arduous labor on the part of each member of this committee, particularly faithful and active among whom was its very able chairman, a report outlining in detail a complete system of advanced study and its operation, has been prepared and will be presented to this convention at a subsequent session. This is the most important matter which has come before the institute since it became a self-governing body and I beg that it receive your most serious consideration to be followed by your active co-operation in introducing it among the chapters.

With the introduction of this post-graduate plan and with the perfection of the prepared lectures in the elementary course the institute is equipped to completely serve its function in the various cities of the country. But is this the end? Is this organization entitled to be called the American Institute of Banking when it serves only the bankers of the cities and larger towns? It must be remembered that the nation's real banker—he who finances the production of the nation's resources—does not sit in the shadow of a stock exchange.

It must also be remembered that the proportion in numbers is probably one hundred to one in favor of the interior banker. It is evident that not until the institute is actively engaged in the higher development of these that the organization is in the fullest sense the American Institute of Banking. This matter has been before the educational director for several years and as a result of his genius and untiring efforts in this direction the institute is at last prepared to extend its usefulness into all spheres of banking and it is now incumbent that this should be done. Few members of the institute know that we have this highly developed system of correspondence instruction and that it is proving highly successful. There are already several hundred correspondence students but there should be many thousand. In this, however, the facilities of the institute do not permit of much extension. It is only through the rare executive ability of the educational director and the faithfulness of his staff that the necessary detail and routine is transacted. I would recommend that the prepared lectures and outlines for advanced study be incorporated and that a committee of institute graduates be appointed to arrange a method of finances for their more extensive usefulness. In the extension of this phase of the institute work the members of the executive council could well be more active. At present they seem to render no particular service except attending council meetings at the conventions for which their expenses are paid.

Any consideration of national problems would not be complete without some comment on the Bulletin. That it is a success is due entirely to the efforts of the educational director for he does not receive, as he should, support from the individual members of the institute. In our enormous body of students there are thousands who have original ideas and the ability to express them and it should be a part of the work of each chapter to see that this talent is cultivated and displayed. Criticism may also be well made on the general character of the chaptergrams. One of the chief advantages which was to be derived from combining the Bulletin of the institute with the Journal of the American Bankers Association was the opportunity which we would then have of keeping before the bank officers of each city the work which was being done by their local chapter. These chaptergrams come before the eyes of at least 40,000 bank officers and 15,000 bank clerks, but the authors seem to have lost sight of this fact and they also appear to have forgotten that their chapters should be judged from the published reports of their proceedings and activities. Chaptergrams that contain nothing but accounts of social affairs reflect no great credit on the body which contributes them, nor do they tend to solicit a hearty endorsement of the senior bankers upon whose support the success of every chapter depends. Every public appearance of a chapter, be it in print or otherwise, must be in harmony with the principles which it represents, the purposes for which it was organized and the character of men who compose it. Facetiousness is only permissible when it is used to make interesting an account of more serious proceedings. If we as individuals ever hope to occupy the positions of respect and confidence which our seniors now hold, and if we propose that our organization shall train our members for this life we must remember that hand in hand with this confidence and respect which we desire is the deportment of dignity before the public which we serve. To facilitate the administration of various phases of the year's work committees have been appointed to give special attention to the development of tasks assigned to them. These appointments were made with a view to utility and not of patronage. Each committee was advised of the ideas which were held by the executive officers and they were requested to proceed along these or such lines as they deemed expedient. All of these matters are problems of national importance and could well be considered at this time but they will be reported in detail by each chairman and I solicit your close attention to their remarks. The deliberations of your executive council will be reported by its chairman and the statistics of the year's work will be announced by the secretary and the treasurer.

I cannot close without an expression of appreciation of the hearty support which I have received from the various committees and of the co-operation which has been offered from so many sources during the year. If the work of the past year results in any progress of the institute or extension of its usefulness it is the result not of the efforts of one man but of the spirit of co-operation and harmony which has prevailed throughout our ranks.

It has been the custom each year for the president in his annual report to pay his personal tribute to the educational director. I have often thought that this was probably perfunctory and considered but one of his official duties. I make this confession publicly that I may be more sincere in the expressions which I feel. As a result of the innumerable visits which I have paid to his office, the frequent discussions which I have held with him over the affairs of the institute and the close personal contact which I have enjoyed, I close my official connection with the institute with a genuine love for the man himself, with the highest admiration for his genius and ability and with the consciousness of the debt which the institute owes to him for his conscientious devotion to its success and the years which he has sacrificed in its behalf. I realize though that he is but a part, though a big part, of that movement that has brought success to so many ambitious young men in the past and which I trust will be the development of greater men in greater numbers in the future.

Seattle bank clearings in every month of 1912 have shown an increase over the corresponding month of 1911, July having gone forward $4,800,000 and the year so far showing a total of $334,766,838 as compared with $308,837,786 in the first seven months of 1911. Building permits for the year are $5,498,315, or $800,000 more than in 1911, and real estate transfers show a total of $16,789,907, as compared with $14,309,375 for the first seven months of 1911.

Short Term Securities

Investment bonds and notes issued to mature in from one to five years are favored by many investors as yielding a somewhat better income than long time obligations.

Such securities, particularly of the larger issues, also usually command a ready market and are not subject to extreme fluctuations in price.

Our recent booklet, "Short Term Securities," met with so favorable a reception that we have been prompted to issue a second edition. This contains brief descriptions of current issues, brought down to June, 1912. We will furnish copies on request.

NOT NEGLECTING MATTERS PERTAINING TO GOOD ROADS

William G. Edens, assistant secretary of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, and president of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association, has not been neglecting the subject of good roads while attending the twenty-seventh biennial session of the Supreme Lodge Knights of Pythias in Denver as a representative from Illinois. He has secured from Warden Thomas Tynan, of the Colorado state penitentiary, a promise to attend the state-wide convention of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association to be held in Peoria September 27th, if possible for him to be there. Mr. Tynan addressed the association when it was organized at the Sherman House in Chicago last March. At that time he delivered a most instructive and interesting address, and it is desired to secure his services in that behalf again. In stating the object of the organization, Mr. Edens said:

"The object of our organization is to secure the co-operation of all the various organizations in Illinois that have road committees for the purpose of justifying legislation next January in the legislature at Springfield. Among the bodies affiliated with us are the Chicago Association of Commerce with its 4,000 members, the Illinois Manufacturers Association, the Farmers Institute, the Illinois Federation of Commercial Clubs, the Hamilton Club, the Iroquois Club and the automobile associations and clubs. Our organization is non-political. We are going to demand that the legislature expend the entire state automobile fund, derived from the issuance of automobile licenses, for the construction of permanent roads."

Mr. Edens recently held a conference with President E. E. Sommers of the Greater Colorado Highways Association at the Brown Palace Hotel, at which were discussed numerous plans for the better organization of counties and states for good roads. It is likely that out of this conference will appear plans for the organization of a national good roads association to embrace every state in the Union. Governor Deneen has appointed Mr. Edens to represent the state at the American good roads congress to be held in Atlantic City September 30th to October 5th. He also will deliver an address on good roads at the Trans-Mississippi Commercial Congress to be held in Salt Lake City August 27th to 31st.

At Salt Lake

Mayor Samuel C. Park in welcoming the junior bankers of the A. I. B. to Salt Lake spoke in glowing terms of the growth and importance of his city. He said in part:

It is not only with a great deal of pleasure that I welcome you to Salt Lake City, but also with a large degree of satisfaction, since I am convinced that, from its surroundings, its natural attributes, its pure air and the ozone of the hills, you will exclaim, as once did a famous pioneer, "This is the place!" I believe and I am satisfied that this is the place where your labors will bear great fruit.

I do not feel like an intruder here for the reason that I followed the profession of banking for a number of years and some of these gentlemen who were successful in pressing their invitation upon you to come here are among my most valued and intimate friends and I look back to the time I labored along with them as being a period employed with great profit and pleasure to me.

I am thoroughly in accord with the modern idea of conventions; in the aims and purposes of bodies of this kind. All of the great movements of this age have been inaugurated and pushed to successful conclusion, or well toward it, through agencies of this character. This work of yours is particularly timely, for no question is of greater importance to the civilized world than the means and mechanism of exchange. Volumes have been written upon this subject and these questions have been solved satisfactorily in some countries, but the wants, needs and necessities of each country differ from those of others, even though it be only in a small degree; therefore, the system employed in one country very likely does not satisfy the exigencies existing in any other country. This problem has long vexed the most astute minds in the field of finance and, knowing that this is an age for the young man, I am constrained to believe that your work will have large influence in the final adjustment and settlement of our financial system.

Through your hands and those whom you represent passes the life blood of the nation. You hold its arteries within your grasp and upon you and upon the systems for which you are sponsors depend the growth and prosperity of the country.

In the West we are brought to realize the necessity for these things more keenly than are our brethren of the East, for here, in a comparatively sparsely settled portion of the United States, exist opportunities for the creation and accumulation of wealth dependent only upon the means at hand for development. The capital of our local institutions and financiers is drawn upon to such a degree that it is easily apparent that our great need for development is more capital and easier and quicker means for realizing upon our securities. Of necessity, your ventures and enterprises are not regarded as the most suitable of securities and, consequently, our financial institutions have to act within more conservative lines and carry heavier cash reserves than is ordinarily required where business has settled down to practically unvarying custom.

It is not my intention to discourse particularly upon this subject but to say to you that we are glad to have you come among us and we hope during your sojourn here some of you, at least, may be brought to realize just what the West needs and, knowing at the same time that this state is a producer of wealth to the extent of over 175,000,000 dollars per year, you may devise some means to assist us and our sister states in producing and marketing the great treasures within our borders.

The State Bank of Jerseyville, Ill., will increase its capital and surplus to $75,000.

SHALL BANK CREDIT OFFICERS ORGANIZE?

Editor CHICAGO BANKER: On the point of writing some of the officers of banks in charge of the credit departments of the city banks on the subject this morning, I read with great interest your editorial on "Criticism of Bank Credit Departments," and I am therefore writing to you instead.

It would seem that an organization of the credit officers of the larger banks in the country, either in connection with the A. B. A. or independent of that organization, could accomplish much good in prescribing uniform forms of reports, requiring audits by auditors approved by them, and in requiring some degree of financial responsibility of the note brokers with whom they do business, if they did nothing more.

It is probably true that even large banks, acting independently, cannot require these things, but an organization of the credit officers would wield an influence that could force many reforms in the handling of commercial paper, and it is strange that this, the most important end of banking, has really the least organization.

With the increase of the wealth of the country the "country banks," which means all banks outside of the central reserve city, are compelled more and more to resort to the outside market for loans and they must depend on their city correspondents for information to a great extent. As a purchaser of nearly $2,000,000 worth of commercial paper annually I have been very much impressed with the duplication of information received, and it does seem that a clearing house for the information, without an opinion, would relieve the city banks of an increasing burden and at the same time be of assistance to them in their own work.

It is quite as important that the "country banker" who buys commercial paper should keep a file of credit information, as it is that the city banker keep such information about the paper he buys, and I am sorry to know that our credit man feels that he is imposed upon by the requests for such information. What do the credit officers of the banks say to a meeting to consider such an organization during the American Bankers Association at Detroit?

Yours truly,

E. M. WING,

Vice-President Batavia National Bank.
La Crosse, Wis., August 12, 1912.

W. S. McCornick

The address of welcome by W. S. McCornick, the big Salt Lake banker, was one of the gems of the A. I. B. national convention, held this week in Salt Lake City, Utah. It is a model of its kind and was cordially received by the enthusiastic junior bankers. He said:

After the cordial and eloquent greetings to you by Governor Spry in behalf of our state and of Mayor Park for Salt Lake City, there seems mighty little left for the banker to offer unless it is the freedom of his vaults, and the only thing in these that you might really take interest in is the records of overdrafts and past due notes. Speaking earnestly, however, it is an honor, as well as a sincere pleasure, to be chosen by the local chapter of the American Institute of Banking to extend its welcome to members of other chapters assembling here for the purpose of exchanging views on topics of mutual interest. This includes the extending of personal acquaintances among members, to our joint benefit and pleasure I feel sure.

While in no wise belittling the value of addresses carefully prepared and profoundly touching our general interest, I sometimes question if more is not really gained to us, after all, by personal contact with each other—the touch of man with man—the unexpected utterance of one mind dropping unconsciously its seed of thought upon another, where it takes root and fructifies later.

When I first entered the banking field such a gathering as this was undreamed of. Now we are here by the hundreds, and hold our sessions annually. While perhaps, business still is transacted along the same broad lines as of old (involving fundamentally the exchange of honest values and mutually reciprocal services) so many methods of saving time by new ways have been introduced that the doing of the same old thing wears an aspect so new as to be hardly recognizable. The obliteration of space by rapid transit and the elimination of time by means of telegraph and telephone, have made changes really appalling in their extent and usefulness to all lines of business activity.

Not only this, but the value of organization and periodical gatherings, has not appealed to us alone. It has become the tendency of the times, and the progress that marks our combined efforts in convention assemblages as bankers, is no less observable in all other important vocations of life. As we all know more of banking generally and of each other's methods than we did formerly, so, by organizations and the dissemination of the specialized wisdom of those engaged in other pursuits, their knowledge too is widened. The effect of this is not alone the possession of a broader knowledge by every being in all the civilized world of the world's needs and ambitions, but the result is vastly more important, since it demonstrates the dependency of each of life's manifold activities upon each other. It gives to every person a fairer and truer perspective of the dependent relations each pursuit, or industry, bears to all other pursuits or industries, whose only reason for existence is the service and blessing of mankind they are capable of performing.

Nor is this all. These gatherings, whose purpose is to promote the special welfare of the particular interests it is our object to advance, are invaluable as a means of extending and strengthening our social relations, and the social relation is the foundation of all advancement. If we treat you as well as we want to, if our citizens extend to you those considerations and courtesies they owe it to their own credit to accord so distinguished a body of visitors as compose this convention of the American Institute of Banking, I am sanguine your impressions of our city and

Chicago's Growth in Banking

Newly published reports for banking institutions of Chicago, showing their yearly progress since 1896, indicate rapid, steady gains—large in the case of national banks but much larger with state banks.

In the sixteen years under review the deposits in national banks of the city have increased from $120,187,765 to $487,757,762, a gain of $367,569,997, or 305 per cent. The state banks have added consistently to their deposits, bringing the total from $80,843,075 to $519,956,261, a gain of $439,113,186, or 543 per cent. The combined figures show a gain from $201,030,840 to $1,007,714,023, or slightly over 400 per cent.

The report is compiled by the Central Trust Company of Illinois, and is a continuation of the first report of the sort, arranged a year ago by the Western Trust and Savings Bank, absorbed since then by the Central Trust.

In 1896 there were twenty-five national banks in existence. Of these four were liquidated and fourteen merged with other banks and three changed their names. The newer institutions have brought the present number to fifteen. Those operating under unchanged names are the Calumet, First, First of Englewood, Fort Dearborn, and National Bank of the Republic. The Corn Exchange was at that time a private bank operating under the same name.

There were then nineteen state and private banks doing business. Those continuing under unchanged names are the Chicago City, Hibernian Banking, Illinois Trust, Merchants Loan and Trust, Northern Trust, State Bank of Chicago, and Union Trust. There have since been organized sixty-three new state banks. A total of twenty-six have dropped out through merger, liquidation, or change of name. In the last year twelve new state banks have been added to the list and one—the Jefferson Park National—added to the list of national banks.

Absorptions in 1911-1912 have been restricted. The Central Trust took over the Western Trust, the Metropolitan Trust, the Prairie State, and the Monroe National. The Peoples Trust and Savings Bank absorbed the Railway Exchange.

G. D. Russell has succeeded L. E. Bain as cashier of the Kenedy (Texas) National Bank.

REPORT OF A. I. B. EXECUTIVE COUNCIL AT SALT LAKE

In his annual report at Salt Lake City this week Chairman Carroll Pierce of the executive council of the American Institute of Banking pointed out that the organization is twelve years old and contains about twelve thousand chapter members. An impression seems to prevail that the institute is solely a city proposition. A suitable correspondence chapter is advocated, which would, to a great extent, put country students upon an equal footing with those in the city. It is believed that institute success depends upon educating bankers in the theory and practice of banking and such principles of law and economics as apply to the banking business, the establishment and maintenance of a recognized standard of banking education by means of official examination and the issuance of certificates. The fundamental object of this organization is to provide an elementary education for thousands rather than to furnish advanced training to a small number. It is believed that the securing of a certificate from the institute ought to be only the beginning of the student's activity, and a system of post-graduate work is thought to be advisable. Experience has demonstrated that the best results are obtained in chapter work by holding weekly meetings, one meeting a month being of a general character and the others devoted to study classes. In correspondence instruction each pamphlet constitutes a single lesson, which average students should complete in about a month. It is believed that a happy blending of education and fraternity will turn out the right kind of men, and that a realization of this ideal is what makes the institute the invincible organization that it is. Of the five hundred men who have been graduated by the institute, over one-half have finished the course this year. Each year the American Bankers Association is becoming more closely allied with the institute, and the members of the latter are becoming more of a factor in the banking world. It is believed that the time will come when the institute certificate will be essential in all well-governed banks. In conclusion it is recommended that mature consideration be given the subject of a post-graduate course, and of the financial statement; also a form of constitution sufficiently broad in its provisions to further the institute work, yet conservative.

GEORGIA SENATE PASSES NEW BANKING BILL

The endeavors so assiduously maintained for some time past on the part of bankers throughout the state and the officials at the capitol were partially rewarded in the passage by the senate of a bill taking the supervision of state banking institutions out of the treasury department and placing it in the control of a state banking department to be created. The bill, as passed by the senior branch of the legislature, creates the office of a superintendent of banking and increases the number of state bank examiners. The superintendent is given the privilege of appointing an assistant and an examiner for each 75 banks in the state. The expenses for the semi-annual examinations are to be paid by the banks in accordance with a schedule ranging from $25 for a bank of less than $25,000, to $280 for banks having a capital of more than $750,000. The bank commissioner must certify and approve all incorporation papers of banking institutions before the new concern can legally transact business and the bank superintendent shall have the authority to enforce the payment of all pledges for stock. Rigid provisions are made for the liability of stockholders and directors and banking institutions are prohibited from loaning more than 30 per cent on one loan or to a corporation. Severe penalties are provided for a bank's failure to comply with the requirements of the banking laws, such as refusing to report, falsely representing capital stock, accepting deposits after insolvency, concealing loans and borrowing from the bank by the directors, officers or attachés of the bank. It is made a criminal offence to publish an untrue statement regarding the bank's affairs.

CAPITAL ONE MILLION DOLLARS

By C. C. Burford

The August number of "The Banker," published by George Woodruff, president of the First National of Joliet, is bristling with live matters, all of which are of importance to the customers of the bank and many of them of concern to the bank patrons of the country at large. "The Banker" outlines at length "Soil Surveys and Experiment Stations," as written by F. M. Muhlig, vocational education, good roads, farm finance and many other topics which are now uppermost in the minds of progressive banker-farmers. Farm finance is treated at some length as the Woodruff Trust Company has been recently incorporated "for the primary purpose of helping to finance in Illinois the 'back to the soil' movement." The mortgages written by this company will be modeled after those of the French Mortgage Bank which "has succeeded in making French mortgages as liquid, convenient and safe as government bonds."

For local purposes there are a number of articles dealing directly with city improvement in Joliet and with city finance. A wide range of editorial comment is given and the new railway and interurban stations in Joliet, the police, the newspapers, the Corn Show and incidentally the First National Bank are all discussed in a most interesting editorial manner. Mr. Woodruff is now in Europe as the advance representative of the Southern Commercial Congress which will next year send a commission abroad to study the question of farm finance. Mr. Woodruff is making a preliminary investigation of this topic in Europe and will send a report to the congress at its headquarters in Washington as soon as he returns.

Run on Streator Bank

Through a misunderstanding of business technique a run was started on the savings department of the Peoples Trust and Savings Bank of Streator. The bank was acting as the trustee in the matter of appointing a receiver for the Streator Motor Car Company and whatever the fate of the automobile concern there is absolutely nothing in the matter which affects the Peoples Trust and Savings Bank which has had a growing business since its establishment in 1907. The business men of Streator who bank with the institution did not participate in the run and the excitement was limited only to a number of the savings depositors. The officials met all demands without hesitation and in one forenoon the flurry was over. It was difficult for some of the smaller depositors to realize that the bank as custodian of a trust deed of the automobile company which was about to be placed in the hands of a receiver was not responsible for the affairs of the embarrassed concern.

Death of Freeport Banker

D. B. Schulte, a director of the German Bank of Freeport, died recently in that city. Mr. Schulte had been prominent for many years in the business life of Freeport having served as city treasurer, school treasurer, supervisor of the township and as a director in the German Insurance Company.

Banker Interested in Goose Culture

William H. Firke, president of the State Bank of Mansfield, Piatt county, is interested in a line of live stock industry in which few bankers engage. This is the raising of geese on a large commercial scale. During the fall of 1910, Mr. Firke and a stockman of his vicinity, Samuel Clouser, conceived the idea of raising geese in large numbers and they at once put the project into execution. They went to Tennessee and bought two thousand of the fowls and shipped them to Mansfield. The flock was fed and during the holiday season was marketed in New York and Chicago with large profits. During 1911 these men fed and marketed 4,200 geese and this year they expect to prepare another large flock for the city markets. The fowls are purchased in Kentucky and Tennessee and are hardy birds, fattening for market without great trouble. The venture is a unique one and has interested many people in central Illinois. The geese feeders say that the only trouble in raising these fowls is in giving them enough to eat and that persons inexperienced in this business "have no true conception of the appetite of a healthy goose."

Bankers Market High-Priced Cattle

H. H. Harris, president of the First National of Champaign, recently placed four carloads of fat cattle on the Chicago market which sold for $10.10 per hundredweight. This price is the highest which Mr. Harris has ever received for cattle and he has been in the cattle business for forty-five years. The fat cattle raised on the Harris farms have been money-makers for many years and this project, like all of the Harris projects, is carried to a high state of commercial perfection.

Another down-state banker who has recently come into the Chicago market with high-priced cattle is A. W. Bragg, president of the old private bank of Bragg, Helm and Company of Tuscola. Mr. Bragg has marketed some good cattle at figures over $10 per hundredweight and naturally is proud of his achievement. He owns about 2,200 acres of choice Douglas county land around Tuscola. Private banks like that of Bragg, Helm and

Threshing Delayed

Farmers throughout the state have undergone a trying time in attempts to thresh their oats. Long continued rains with most of the oats shocked in the fields have caused much anxiety to bankers and farmers. Harvest returns consequently are late and a feeling of conservatism has been noticed in country banks. Anxiety is likewise felt about the safety of the corn crop as the steady rains have a tendency to keep the corn green. It generally is conceded that considerably delayed frosts will be absolutely necessary to the safety of corn as the crop is late and has been held late by so much rain. However, with no killing frosts until about October 1st, or thereabouts, there will be a large and satisfactory crop yield. Pastures have been good all summer, straw is abundant and feeding conditions are much easier than they were a year ago. In general farmers are well satisfied with the results of the year so far, considering there has been so much freakish weather conditions. With an especially late spring, an unusually cool summer for the most part, and floods of rain, the season has been a peculiar one to say the least. An optimistic tone prevails, however, throughout the corn belt of Illinois. Politics worry people far less than weather conditions and farmers and bankers are watching the fields with interest and considerable anxiety. The hot weather of the past week has been of great benefit to the corn and with ten days' dry weather the oats will be safely threshed.

Kansas Banker in Illinois

Walter D. MacAllister, cashier of the Union State Bank of Arkansas City, Kansas, motored to Lincoln, Illinois, where he formerly resided, for a visit with old friends. Mr. MacAllister came around through Iowa and found plenty of rain with bad roads. He was accompanied on the trip by his wife.

Some High Prices for Land

A farm of 240 acres near the town of Hudson, McLean county, sold recently for $280 per acre. This land is far enough away from Bloomington so that it has no suburban qualities and is strictly an agricultural proposition. There were three heirs who held the farm and the land was sold to settle up the estate.

Another farm near Lincoln was sold at $250 an acre, there being 240 acres in the tract. Prices for choice central Illinois land rule firm and good judges believe that they will continue to do so, and probably to advance.

Alton Railroad to be Improved

B. A. Worthington, the new executive of the Chicago and Alton, is very optimistic about the prosperity of the territory served by his road and of the West in general. He states, however, that it will take two years to place the Alton on a satisfactory revenue earning basis as there will be large expenditures in order to place the tracks and equipment in first class condition. Track elevation in the cities of Chicago and Joliet is receiving considerable attention this year. The management will probably devote about $1,000,000 this year to deferred maintenance while about $2,500,000 will probably be expended for improving shops, terminals, yards, and in grade revisions. There is strong competition for the business between Chicago and St. Louis and with the Alton, Wabash, Illinois Central and Chicago and Eastern Illinois all bidding for shares of it, the four roads find it necessary to maintain the best of equipment and trackage.

Alfalfa Congress at Petersburg

The Illinois Alfalfa Growers Association met in Petersburg Thursday with widespread interest manifested in this important topic. About 500 delegates had been asked to attend the sessions. This is a live topic with progressive banker-farmers in Illinois.

A. I. B. Convention

The American Institute of Banking held its tenth annual convention in Salt Lake City on August 21st, 22d and 23d. A large number of delegates and visitors were on hand, and the sessions were greatly enjoyed by those in attendance. The boys were fortunate in securing for their program such a large number of excellent speakers, all of whom delivered extremely interesting addresses, which were loudly applauded. The delegates were welcomed by Governor William Spry, Mayor Samuel C. Park and W. S. McCornick, president of McCornick & Co., bankers. They were addressed by the Hon. D. A. McKinlay, surveyor of customs, San Francisco, whose remarks in part will be found elsewhere in this issue. The addresses of Mayor Park, W. S. McCornick and President Raymond B. Cox also will be found in this issue, as will the report of the chairman of the executive council.

Talks also were made by Judge Edward F. Colburn of Salt Lake, Senator Borah of Idaho and Dr. David Starr Jordan, president Leland Stanford, Jr., University. Secretary Farnsworth of the A. B. A. was unable to be present on account of being too busy preparing for the Detroit convention, but he sent a letter of greeting which was loudly applauded. Col. Farnsworth has attended all of the conventions of the institute since 1907, including that year. He complimented the boys on the manner in which they conduct their conventions. He believes that their sessions are business-like; that the delegates are prompt in attending the meetings, and that they do not let anything interfere with the business sessions of their body. He believes that the matter of systematic educational work should be paramount and is gratified to learn of the growth of the institute.

A fine list of entertainments was provided for the occasion, and everybody present enjoyed himself to the fullest extent.

MILWAUKEE

WISCONSIN

Despite the prospect of an extraordinary yield of grain this year, Milwaukee grain men predict that the early crop movement will not be as lively as at first expected. Secretary H. A. Plumb of the chamber of commerce sums up the reasons for this stand as follows: "The prices of all grains are lower now than they were last year, and in consequence farmers will not be disposed to market their products, but instead will doubtless hold off for a time. The farmers' bins are pretty well cleaned out, and it is expected they will fill them and hold the grain while the present low prices prevail. Of course there will be plenty of new grain handled by shippers despite these conditions, but it is not expected that the big movement will begin until thirty or sixty days hence. From all points in the Northwest come reports of bumper crops, with the possible exception of corn. Wheat seems to be in for a wonderful crop, the government estimate placing the average considerable above that of 1911. Oats also come in for a big gain. It will be a few weeks before the spring wheat begins to move and until then prices here may rule high, owing to light receipts. Oats are expected to begin moving inside of two weeks and big shipments are anticipated."

Bank Examiner for City Government

A bank examiner for the city government is the practical intention of Alderman F. C. Bogk and Mayor Gerhard A. Bading in their efforts to create the office of commissioner of efficiency and accounts. The ordinance creating the office will come before the common council Monday night. The duties of the prospective appointee will consist of making frequent audits of the city's books in all departments and installing a uniform system of accounts for the city government.

Should Adapt Themselves to Needs of Public

Supporting District Attorney W. C. Zabel in his assertion that banks should remain open on Saturday afternoon and night for the benefit of the thousands of laborers paid each week by check in Milwaukee, the Evening Wisconsin in an editorial this week urges the banks as popular institutions to adapt themselves more to the needs of the public.

"The day has gone by when acquaintance with bank checks was confined to the very rich and those engaged in commercial operations," reads the editorial. "Dealings with banks have increased enormously, which is a good thing for people engaged in the banking business as well as in many ways a convenience for the general public. The practice of liquidating pay-rolls of large concerns by giving checks instead of money, which has become almost universal in recent years, possesses many advantages. But there is a phase of the check system to which the employees object and that is the delay to which it puts them in turning their checks into money. To make payments by check as convenient as payment by money there should be provision by the banks for the cashing of checks at hours when the workmen can go to the banks. What happens now is that a very large proportion of Milwaukee workingmen depend upon saloon keepers for the favor of converting their checks to money. In the case of men convivially inclined the necessity for cashing pay checks in saloons looms up in the form of a weekly temptation which is dreaded by their wives and which they themselves in many instances would gladly escape. Bankers as a class are no more lacking in public spirit than other citizens. Let them take into consideration the opportunity for enlarging their contribution to public convenience which exists in the direction noted."

To the A. I. B. Convention

Milwaukee delegates to the tenth annual convention of the American Institute of Banking in Salt Lake City this week include: H. J. Dreher, Marshall & Ilsley; A. Casper, First National; George Grieb and A. Netter, Wisconsin National; H. Schulte, Wisconsin Trust Company; P. A. Froelich, Germania National; A. Scheer, Second Ward Savings; and Charles Brew, National Exchange. The delegates joined others from the South and Middle West at Chicago, proceeding to Salt Lake City in a special train.

Colorado Convention

Pueblo, August 20th.—The Colorado Bankers Association has just concluded its eleventh annual convention at this place, the sessions being held in the Congress Hotel. Acting Secretary George T. Wells, chief clerk of the Denver National Bank, made a hit with his duplicate registration system. He successfully used this system in the conventions of the National Real Estate Exchange and American Society of Certified Public Accountants recently held in Denver. By this method delegates or guests can be located according to name or address. Being able to obtain complete information at a minute's notice is especially appreciated by the traveling representatives of large city banks. A very large number of bankers were present at the sessions, the attendance being double that anticipated. The principal speakers were the Hon. Charles G. Dawes, ex-comptroller of the currency, and president of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, and William J. Burns, head of the Burns National Detective Agency, New York. Both of these gentlemen were enthusiastically received. Mr. Dawes talked on "Investments and Their Philosophy," and Detective Burns, whose organization has the contract for the protection of the members of the Colorado association, told of his work in that behalf. One of the most important subjects discussed at the convention was the law passed by the last legislature providing for the investment of state school funds in the securities of irrigation enterprises, which always has been a mooted question among bankers.

The Hon. Alva Adams, president of the Pueblo Savings and Trust Company, who for a number of years has been very prominently before the Colorado public, delivered his opening address, in which he welcomed the delegates and visitors to the city. He stated that the bankers came to their convention with peace and prosperity written on their banners, and are the apostles of conservatism, while other conventions all result in an atmosphere of excitement. He pointed out the necessity of calm judgment and discretion on the part of the bankers. As a custodian of other people's money, a banker is not permitted to invest in hazardous enterprises. He declared himself in favor of a strict banking law, and pointed out that if the law always were complied with there would be no failures. The banker who travels the straight and narrow path is just like any other individual. He sees but one menace to the strength and stability of banks as they exist to-day, and that is the tremendous floatation of commercial paper. The merchants and manufacturers are encouraged to over-borrow by the brokers who have developed a market for their notes. He believes that if a drop comes in business prosperity the shrinkage in this sort of paper will be great. The facility with money can be borrowed and the low rates induce over-stocking and over-building, and improvements and stocks are through cheap money maintained at a par maximum. The business of banking is one in which nerve and bluff are at a discount. Banks must be based on something besides optimistic dreams. A bank examiner is not liable to look very favorably upon that class of securities. Mr. Adams concluded his talk by stating that the country was about to experience a great period of prosperity, and that in his opinion the political situation would have but little effect.

Talks also were made by Colonel James A. Lockhart and the Hon. Robert W. Bonyng. Papers were read by Messrs. Henry Cohen, M. M. Schayer and J. B. Geijsbeek. This morning the delegates were the guests of the Pueblo bankers on an automobile tour through the city, including a visit to the steel works. One of the features of the entertainment provided by the Pueblo hosts was a buffalo barbecue served at the Mineral Palace. After the barbecue drawings were held for a mounted buffalo head valued at $500; a buffalo robe valued at $200 and mounted buffalo feet valued at $100. Tickets were given free to delegates upon registering. The convention was closed with a ball at the Congress Hotel this evening.

PRIVATE BANKERS PLAN A CAMPAIGN

Private bankers of Ohio are planning to wage a campaign throughout the state against the constitutional amendment, which provides that banking institutions which are not regularly examined by the state or national examiners be prohibited from using the terms "banks, bankers or banking," in their firm names. The first steps in the organization of their campaign plans were taken a few days ago at a meeting held at Columbus.

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, Aug. 22d.—St. Louis bankers report a good, steady demand for funds, both from city and country, and heads of several of the leading nationals look for the country demand to continue steadily from now until the return flow begins after the marketing and movement of crops. Generally speaking, the week has been one of the most satisfactory from the banker's viewpoint in two years or more. Offerings of commercial paper are abundant, and there is little difficulty experienced in getting $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent on the very choicest names, which, with brokers' commissions out, means practically 6 per cent. The East is offering bills freely at this center, and local concerns are also in the market for goodly sums. This, coupled with some inquiry from the railroads, and the agricultural needs, gives ample field for the employment of all available funds at very flattering rates. It would seem that the banks have at last come into their own, and the institutions which have been husbanding their resources for months past, in order to place them now and later on, displayed much wisdom. Business activity here and in the surrounding country has augmented in a marked degree since the first of the month. Politics are no longer able to stem the tide of revival, which has been let loose by the huge crops. Wholesale houses report that the number of country buyers in the city now is the largest in the history of their industries, and orders are large, and placed on more liberal lines than heretofore. The conviction seems well established that the farmers are going to have plenty of money to spend and will proceed to spend it. This money will go into raiment, foodstuffs, some luxuries, and particularly into farm improvements. Agriculturists, like the railroads, have been inclined to allow their equipment to run in arrears during the last three years, and both now must expand in this direction in order to handle their affairs in the future. Weather has been all that could be desired in this section for the advancement of corn, which is now the chief point at issue. Moisture has been plentiful, and there has been sufficient high temperatures to promote growth. Clearings here have held up in excellent shape, the total last week being \$79,500,320 against \$67,771,887 for the preceding week and \$67,115,157 for the same week a year ago.

Sees Big Missouri Crops

Recent rains, which have been general throughout this state, have been most beneficial, and as a result of them and the present ideal growing weather, Missouri farmers this year will garner a bumper crop of corn and hugh small crops, according to William Hirth, president of the Missouri Federation of Commercial Clubs, with headquarters at Columbia and St. Louis. "These rains," said Mr. Hirth, "mean millions of dollars to the Missouri agriculturist. In certain sections the dry weather did some damage to early corn, but the recent moisture insures one of the greatest corn yields in the history of the state. I would not be surprised to see a total output of 250,000,000 bushels, which at 50 cents a bushel, the lowest price likely, will mean $12,500,000 added to the wealth of the commonwealth. Last spring it looked as if our wheat crop would be a failure, but favorable weather has worked wonders, and the yield of the state will not fall short of 25,000,000 bushels, in my opinion. The oats crop is a record-breaker, while the hay crop is the largest in years. In addition there are other important crops, such as cotton, potatoes, tobacco and fruits, the value of which will run into millions. There is an apple crop on the way which will eclipse that of former years, and while it is hard to estimate this, I would place the total at 50,000,000 bushels. When you add $50,000,000 to the foregoing for surplus live stock, it will be seen easily that the Missouri farmer is likely to have some money to spend next winter. I feel confident St. Louis business men will have the greatest fall and winter trade which they have experienced in a decade or more. Politics can not block the coming prosperity, for all these millions emptied into trade channels must make things hum."

Bank Looters Live in Style

Advices from Russellville, Ark., tell of the discovery in the foothills of the Ozark Mountains of the rendezvous of alleged yeggmen who have been operating in Arkansas, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska and Illinois. In this strong retreat the gentlemen of the jimmy have been living for months in lordly style.

They kept blooded stock, drove elegant carriages and automobiles, which were the admiration of the simple cracker natives about the neighborhood. As many as eighteen were known to have congregated there at one time. An aged farmer, who was paid a salary as caretaker, knew as little about them as his neighbors, although he "reckoned" they acted suspiciously at times. In the house were discovered kits of the latest model burglar tools and a veritable arsenal of weapons and ammunition. Little Rock police believe the capture of part of this gang, and the breaking up of their retreat, will go a long way to reduce the number of bank robberies in the Middle West.

The St. Louis Chapter

Work done during the past few months by members of the St. Louis Chapter of the American Institute of Banking was calculated to bear fruit at the Salt Lake Convention. Work for the candidacy of B. W. Moser has been quietly pushed, and assurances of support from numerous other cities were in the hands of the local committee several weeks ago. The St. Louis delegation to the convention was composed of F. C. Ball, Mississippi Valley Trust; Ralph Bugbee, S. B. Blair and O. A. Rowland, also of the same institution; F. L. Johnson and Henry Aehle, Mercantile National; W. L. Wilkinson, Mercantile Trust; L. C. Bryan, Boatmens Bank; W. C. Unger, Commonwealth Trust; J. W. Meier, Franklin Bank; J. E. Urig and B. W. Moser, St. Louis-Union Trust.

Big Gain in Freight Movement

As an indication of returning prosperity here and in the surrounding region, local financiers point to the showing made in the movement of freight in and out of St. Louis for the first six months of this year. According to the figures compiled by Eugene Smith, secretary of the Merchants Exchange, the movement shows a gain of 1,419,888 tons over the same period a year ago. This is an increase of 6.4 per cent. Total receipts were 14,189,602 tons, a gain of 531,967 tons, while shipments aggregated 9,400,476 tons, an increase of 887,921 tons. Both receipts of inbound freight and outgoing shipments of railway tonnage for 1912 surpass all previous records for St. Louis, with the exception of 1910. With the enormous crops and increased business expected this fall and winter, Mr. Smith believes the total for the year will exceed that of any previous twelve months. July shows a substantial gain over the same month in 1911, and it is more than likely that the

Carries Secret to Grave

Isaac N. Rogers, for nearly fifty years connected with the Chrisman-Sawyer Bank of Independence, Missouri, died this week. In 1867 this bank was robbed of $20,000 in gold by bandits, believed to have been either the James boys or Quantrell, the famous bushwacker. The robbery was a daring one, the bandits entering and appropriating the gold, then locking Mr. Rogers and William McCoy, president of the bank, in the vault. A few days after the killing of Jesse James a man went to the bank and told Mr. Rogers who the robbers were and how the $20,000 was divided. This information Mr. Rogers never divulged, although frequently pressed to do so. He would never even say whether his silence was due to a promise or fear of retaliation by the thieves should he inform on them. Friends, however, who knew Mr. Rogers' fearless nature, attribute his silence to his having passed his word to maintain it.

F. W. Hill Injured

F. W. Hill, vice-president of the Hodiamont Bank, was badly burned on Sunday night when a gasoline tank attached to his automobile exploded. The accident happened in the garage at the rear of his residence. Mr. Hill discovered the tank was leaking, struck a match and held it near the tank. An explosion followed and the burning oil was scattered about the building. Mr. Hill's injuries were dressed by a physician, who pronounced them not fatal.

AMBASSADOR HERRICK REPORTS ON WORK

Washington, August 20.—Ambassador Herrick at Paris has reported to the state department that in his work of investigating the co-operative credit systems of Europe he has the voluntary assistance of Edwin Chamberlain, of San Francisco, as representative of the American Bankers Association, and John D. Dillon, president of the Agricultural Association of New York. These men are giving their services gratis simply to assist Ambassador Herrick in the compilation of his exhaustive report on European co-operative credit systems which it is proposed to make the basis of some system of land mortgage banks to be organized in this country.

Mr. Herrick also reports that E. N. Breitung, of Marquette, Mich., and Breckinridge Jones, of St. Louis, Mo., are now en route to Paris and will add their services in the work of investigating this question. Mr. Breitung is interested in the ore business in the Northwest, and considers that the co-operative credit system will work wonders in the development of the waste lands of the Northwest, which for years have remained undeveloped, in his opinion, largely on account of the lack of cheap money. Mr. Jones is also a man of independent fortune, and has volunteered to help Mr. Herrick simply because of the great benefit which he, as a banker, believes will accrue to the American farmer and, through him, to the entire nation through the adoption of the co-operative credit system in the United States.

Two other men have placed themselves on Ambassador Herrick's auxiliary staff—Todd Ford, of California, and Mr. Ingalls, son of ex-Senator Ingalls, of Kansas. Neither of these men is receiving compensation for his services. Mr. Ford is preparing himself for the diplomatic service.

The services of these men, Ambassador Herrick believes, will enable the embassy to so push the work of the compilation of the various reports which will be sent in by the American diplomatic officers that the final report will be ready for President Taft by October next, which will probably give him an opportunity to submit his legislative views at the next session of congress, which convenes in December.

CENTRAL TRUST APPOINTED RECEIVER

Central Trust Company of Illinois has been appointed receiver for Richheimer & Co., South Water Street coffee merchants, against whom a bankruptcy proceeding recently was filed by their creditors. The failure of the firm is attributed to manipulations of the coffee market by the so-called Brazilian trust. Richheimer & Co. were one of the largest coffee importing houses in the Middle West.

State Comptroller Solmer of New York has appointed Henry W. Rosenbloom of Rochester as an examiner of transfers of stock at a salary of $1,700 and expenses.

Gus Seltz, Jr., of Waconia, Minn., is now assistant cashier of the Peoples State Bank at Thief River Falls.

Editorial Comment

NEED FOR REVISED PATENT LAW

There may be some who, from lack of observation, have no decided convictions upon the necessity for a revised patent law. If in doubt read the inscription on the next package of safety razor blades you purchase. Even the private owner is forbidden under the patent law from re-honing or re-stropping the blades. He is subject to suit at law and strict penalties for so doing, because the patent law says so. Recently a user of a multigraphic printer spent thousands of dollars to defend himself because he used on the printer a brand of ink which was not furnished by the patentee. He won his case, the first on record, and started the present reform movement in congress, toward a better law. The new law should abolish all such restrictions so that the owner of a harvester machine could use any brand of oil or any binder twine he saw fit. So that the owner of a razor blade could strop it on his boot-leg if he wanted to, and the man who bought a printing press or a shoe-making machine could buy his supplies in the open market. He also should be able to use any sort of telephone extension or office device his business required in connection with the public service wires of his city. An American citizen should have all of his personal rights restored and all patent law monopoly should be destroyed.

The house committee on patents has made a report defining three broad classes of abuses of patent rights under the existing laws, as follows:

1. The evils arising from the vender of a patented article fixing the price at which the article must be resold to the public.
2. The evils arising from the venders of patented articles prohibiting their use except in connection with other unpatented articles purchased from them.
3. The evils arising from owners of patents suppressing the same or prohibiting their use in order to prevent competition with other patented or unpatented articles sold by such owners of patents.

The decision in March was only a 4 to 3 victory for common sense in business and for civic rights. Chief Justice White in commenting on the case advised a revision of the patent laws. The automobile industry had but a narrow escape from becoming a patent monopoly. But for the intrepid Henry Ford who spent a half million rather than to be put out of business, you would to-day be buying just such cars as dealers were permitted to sell, and at a monopoly price. It would be like your Eastman kodak. No matter how flimsy or how behind the foreign car, the patent law and the tariff would enable the trust to dictate terms to both dealer and user. They would tell you the kind of grease, the make of tires, whether or not you could use left-hand drive or have high gear or low.

FROM AN INDEPENDENT VIEWPOINT

A splendid editorial review of the presidential timber now standing in the American political front yard has included a summary of the "good points" of Woodrow Wilson, one of the old party nominees, for the readers of World's Work. This is a nonpolitical, high-class, independent publication. Of Governor Wilson it says:

Governor Woodrow Wilson—a scholar in government, with historical and political perspective; a man of profound convictions, holding that there should be no class that shall receive privileges from the government; regarding boss rule and the private conduct of public business as the worst crimes against political society; trustful of the people, a democrat in fact; with brief but eminently successful executive experience (the New Jersey of to-day being a wholly different political community from the New Jersey of two years ago); courageous because he has fundamental convictions and a sturdy seriousness of character; a man of high ideals to whom politics has a profound moral significance; a man with a definite, well-reasoned program, to whom our institutions and our national life are living organisms; his political creed, therefore, a working creed to fit present problems and not a set of fixed formulas; courageous for conscience's sake and not from sheer love of fight; modest as regards his personal relations and fortunes and, therefore, handicapped in a rough race by a hesitancy, having the modesty of a well-bred mind and the humor of a philosopher; the most convincing public speaker in political life, master of exact language without pedantry; not favored by those who for any reason wish the government to be a dispenser of favors or wish it to be conducted by professional cliques or bosses; a man of stern stuff, resolute, gently bred and, because of his combination of force, dignity, and grace, in a class by himself among the candidates for the presidency; so clearly right-minded and right-tempered that, if there were a clear-cut presidential primary in all the states, he would probably win the nomination with no second in the race.

It will do any American real service to thus acquaint him with the strong points of the one candidate about whom he knows less, perhaps, than about either of the other two. Wilson is considerably more than a possibility in the presidential line.

PRESIDENT CHARLES H. MARKHAM

There hasn't been a dull moment in Illinois Central Railway circles since Charles H. Markham was made president. The period hasn't been long, yet a keen observer has said: "Yet scarcely has a day passed, that there have not been made new and much needed improvements, in connection with the service in general. Mr. Markham is a progressive railroad man, and most valuable to a line holding properties rich as those of the road of which he now is president."

To better cope with the work and put in force many projected plans for a still higher efficiency Charles M. Kittle has been appointed "assistant to the president of the Illinois Central Railroad." President Markham is responsible for the appointment which will add greatly to the strength of his organization, as Mr. Kittle is considered a very able man.

F. R. Elliott, treasurer of the Harris Trust and Savings Bank, Chicago, is out of the city on his vacation. Mr. Elliott is up in Wisconsin and will be back in about a month.

NEWMAN ESSICK VISITS CHICAGO

Newman Essick, cashier of the Commercial National of Los Angeles, Cal., was in Chicago's financial district this week. He says that conditions in California never were better. A great period of prosperity is anticipated, and a strong feeling of optimism prevails. There is a good, strong and healthy demand for money at good rates. It also is expected that the Panama Exposition in 1915 will result in greatly increased business and industrial activity. Mr. Essick says that Los Angeles is a thriving, busy city, its population having trebled during the past ten years. He is very prominent in banking affairs on the Coast and has a wide acquaintance among bankers throughout the United States.

James M. Hurst, assistant cashier of the National Bank of the Republic, recently has returned from his vacation. He reports having had a delightful time, and is looking fine.

It is especially desirable, owing to the unprecedented volume of grain business in prospect, that those having no facilities for direct service in Minneapolis should arrange a connection at once. This bank has an unexcelled system for the prompt presentation and collection of grain drafts and other bill of lading paper and invites correspondence with those desiring the best of service.

FARM IMPROVEMENT IN SOUTH-EASTERN IOWA

The bankers, the business men and the farmers of Scott county, Iowa, are co-operating in a movement to increase the volume and value of the farm products of the county, which, while being of greatest primary benefit to the actual tiller of the soil, will, it is believed, have an extremely beneficial effect upon all branches of business.

Hon. A. F. Dawson, president of the First National Bank of Davenport, the first institution in the United States to begin operations under the national banking act, is the leader in the movement. After discussing with prominent and progressive farmers in the county the advantages of organized farm improvement work under the direction of an expert, Mr. Dawson, by correspondence with the federal agricultural department in Washington and by personal investigation, convinced himself of the remarkable results that had followed such organized work in other sections of the country.

While Scott county stands extremely high in the volume and value of its farm products, Mr. Dawson realized that the extreme fertility of the soil and the climatic and other advantages warranted the belief that a properly conducted scientific farming campaign among the rural population was bound to develop even better results. Securing the co-operation of the big farmers in the fifteen townships he toured the county by automobile with Secretary I. C. Norwood of the Greater Davenport Committee, organized meetings in the various towns and aroused the interest of the farmers to a high pitch. These township meetings were followed with a great gathering at the Davenport Commercial Club, where the Scott County Farm Improvement League was organized.

Mr. Dawson was unanimously elected chairman of the executive committee of the league. Another member is Col. G. W. French, owner of the famous Iowana Farms, in which more than $500,000 is invested, and where progressive experiments in agriculture and stock breeding have been carried on for the last three or four years. The other members of the committee are Dr. J. T. Haller, a leading physician of Davenport, and C. W. Lau and Chris. Marti, two of the most successful and progressive farmers of Scott county.

The first duty of the executive committee was to select an expert to take charge of the farm improvement work, and after looking into the qualifications of the men available for the position, they made a contract with Dr. G. R. Bliss, horticulturist at the Iowa State College at Ames. Dr. Bliss will take charge of the work September 1st. He is a young man but has made a careful study of agricultural extension work and is endorsed by the bureau of plant industry of the department of agriculture in Washington as "the best man who could have been selected for the position."

In making its plans for financing the county work the executive committee of the league decided to raise one-third of the $3,000 necessary for the first year's work among the farmers of Scott county outside of Davenport. Another one-third has been raised in Davenport itself, among the business men of the city who have rallied enthusiastically to the support of the league's work. Another $1,000 has been contributed by the agricultural department at Washington from the $300,000 for county aid carried in the agricultural appropriation bill recently passed. Indeed, Scott county was the first of all the counties of the United States to receive a promise from the agricultural department at Washington of this financial assistance from the amount carried in the new bill.

According to present plans the work will continue for three years, necessitating an expenditure of $3,500 the second year and from $4,000 to $5,000 the third year. Every one connected with the league is confident that at the conclusion of the three-year period any amount of money necessary can be raised to carry on the work indefinitely in the future. That at least has been the experience of other counties that have taken up this organized farm improvement work, as the results achieved have been so remarkable that even those who at the inception of the plan have not been enthusiastic, have later clamored to join in the movement and have offered their subscriptions.

It is of interest that the work of the crop doctor as outlined by Mr. Dawson and his committee shall be along the following lines:

Directing demonstrational and experimental work on the county farm or other land selected by the board of supervisors.

By careful tests finding the varieties of grain most suited to Scott county conditions, and raising these grains for distribution as seed at actual cost to the farmers of the county.

Assisting the county superintendent of schools, in his work of introducing agricultural instruction into the schools of Scott county.

Organizing and helping to manage short courses in agriculture and domestic science in several localities of Scott county annually.

Assisting in the formation and maintenance of clubs, societies, or other organizations among the rural people of Scott county.

Directing co-operative demonstration work among the progressive farmers who are willing to do such work upon their farms.

Visiting the farms of those who request his services and giving desired suggestions and information.

Organizing and directing the work of dairy tests associations if desirable.

Conducting spraying experiments with potatoes and fruit.

Toward eliminating waste and effecting economies in agricultural production in Scott county.

Co-operating in every way possible with all existing agencies, such as farmers' institutes, clubs, granges, fair associations, schools, churches, commercial clubs, etc., which strive to promote the material, social and educational interests of the people of Scott county.

The researches of Dr. Bliss and the results achieved in other counties indicate that before the three-year period in Scott county is at an end the value of the corn crop alone will have been increased by not less than $100,000 a year as the result of the seed corn campaign, which the expert will inaugurate September 1st.

This seed corn campaign consists in part of a school to school canvass with the idea of enlisting the children of the farmers in the proper selection and testing of corn. Dr. Bliss will also endeavor to interest the farmers in the county in the growing of alfalfa, which he claims is one of the most profitable crops that can be raised in this section.

"Scott county," he says, "is well adapted for the growth of this crop and men who raised alfalfa last year report returns running from $75 to $120 per acre. Such yields will give dividends on $500 lands. In fact, if the farmers of Scott county commence growing alfalfa extensively and make a success of it, there is every reason to believe that the land will soon reach the high price of $400 to $500 per acre."

MILWAUKEE

President Frank N. Briggs to the Colorado Bankers

There are at the present time 196 state banks, trust companies and savings banks and 130 national banks in Colorado. According to the figures compiled by our state bank commissioner, at the time of the last report, June 14, 1912, there was on deposit in all of the banks of Colorado $141,510,737.13. Of this amount $104,598,225.31 was on deposit in national banks while $36,912,511.82 was on deposit in banks operating under state laws.

Representing as we do the largest aggregation of capital invested in any line of business in this state, a large portion of which belongs to our depositors, our deliberations must naturally be of wide public interest, therefore, the public is welcome to all our sessions. This has never been a secret organization in any sense. Our proceedings and expenditures have been published without reservation, open and above board, before the people of this state.

The bankers of Colorado are to be congratulated upon having passed through another year without any serious failures or financial disturbances within our ranks, and while there have been better years for business in Colorado, we really have no just cause for complaint as bankers.

Fourteen months have elapsed since our last convention. Momentous months, full of history all over the world. In China, Cuba and Mexico and in our own and other lands the spirit of advancement is at work. The world seems to be moving in great strides toward its final destiny—whatever that may be. Changes are being rung in all countries, and in all conditions and walks of life. It takes alertness and constant effort to keep abreast of the leaders in the great race of human changes and world-wide progress. The successful man is he who not only keeps up but has the good judgment to discriminate between the things that work for real prosperity and progress, and those that pretend to do so, but do not. A prominent candidate for president recently said: "Society is going, in spite of us, through rapid process of change. You have to run twice as fast, or stay where you are. I am not out of breath. I am sure you are not out of breath." I quite agree with him, and we bankers must not get out of breath, but keep in the running all the way to the finish.

Bankers in the Limelight

Every banker stands in the limelight of publicity in his community. He is in the very front ranks; on the firing line, I may say, of business warfare, whether he be in city or hamlet, large bank or small. It is his especial business, and whether he realizes or admits it makes no difference, to keep abreast of the times and stand for the soundest, best and safest progressiveness in his community, state and country. It is to the credit of our great profession, and the giant minds leading us, that generally this ideal is being lived up to by the bankers of our country.

Favor Sound Banking Legislation

The bankers of the United States are almost a unit in favor of legislation that will give to this country the very best financial and currency system in the whole civilized world. They are patriotically for such laws, and not selfishly so as some misguided people all over the land have been taught to believe. We want no special privileges, and ask for none. A square deal, in its fullest and broadest sense is all the bankers of Colorado and the nation ask for at the hands of the state and nation

Delegates to eleventh annual convention at Pueblo are told of conditions in the state which needs additional banking legislation. Wants number of new banks limited to actual requirements of communities and jumps on demagogues. Rates Colorado irrigation securities high. Wants "Blue Sky Law."

and with justice and right on our side, that is what we propose to have. Radical banking legislation helps none—and harms all. The welfare of our institutions demands laws that are fair and just in full measure to the people who are the patrons of the banks and upon whose welfare and prosperity the welfare and prosperity of the banks depend, but such laws must at the same time be fair and just to the banks as institutions.

H. M. RUBY
Golden
Vice-President Colorado Bankers Association

By the report of the legislative committee you will learn what has been done in the way of local banking legislation. Colorado needs some additional banking legislation, but it should be along sane and sound lines and not radical and experimental. In order to make Colorado's banking department as effective as it ought to be the bank commissioner should be given more examiners and office help, and enough power to enforce reasonable requirements on banks that are not properly managed. To this end I wish to recommend that this association continue its efforts until a complete and satisfactory law shall be enacted and an end be put to the demagogic agitation from which we have suffered during the past four years.

Limit Number of Banks

In framing a new state banking bill, I think the banking department should be given authority to limit the number of banks that shall be started and have dictatorial power as to the licensing of new banks in communities where banks already exist.

I read recently that the church people are coming to realize that one prosperous church, of whatever denomination, is better than several failures or semi-failures in a community and the leaders are now planning to systematize the establishment of churches so that the number will be limited to the needs of the community, to the end that all may be on a sound and proper footing, for the best work and service. Certainly, if churches realize the necessity of such a step as this, banks and bankers should also undertake to protect their business and see that competition does not operate to deprive them and their communities of the greatest efficiency and prosperity. The capitalization of state banks in large cities should be greater than at present. There is danger in too many small banks in a community. Weak banks are worse than no banks—and a failure of one generally affects all other banks in that community or state.

Denounces Demagogues

The permanent interests of banks and customers are not antagonistic and cannot be so. Legislation that makes it hard for the banks must and will prove harmful to the people. It is false teaching, and they are false teachers who teach the people that banks and bankers are their natural enemies, and here and now I vigorously denounce that doctrine as being false, malicious, and against the public good. No man comes into more confidential relations with his customers than does the banker. The very nature of their business dealings makes this condition. Bankers are not mere money makers. They are guardians, custodians, trustees and confidential agents of the people. Incidentally they make money as a profit or compensation for services rendered. There are some bankers, but very few, thank God, who do not appreciate the sacredness of their calling and the responsibility of their great trust. But where there is one of this kind, there are thousands who live their lives to the end deserving, receiving and scrupulously guarding, the sacred confidences of those who entrust their business to them.

Bountiful Harvests

Colorado is going to be blest with one of the most bountiful harvests in its history, this year. On every hand the earth is yielding generously to those who cultivate the soil. From orchard and vineyard, from farm and range come the most assuring and cheering reports. All this means prosperity for our people and therefore for the banks. Let us then consider briefly how we may best take advantage of these conditions with profit to ourselves, helpfulness to our customers, and the general welfare of our state.

Irrigation Securities

Maximum production of life's necessities brings maximum prosperity to the producing community. Agriculture, horticulture and stock raising provide the bulk of life's necessities.

The cultivation of the soil in Colorado depends largely upon irrigation. Then, what can we do to assist in the development of irrigation in this state? The business of irrigation is not new and experimental. It reaches back to the earliest days of civilization and marks the places where lived the most prosperous and influential people and countries in the history of the world.

What can be safer as securities for investments of money than first mortgages, on low valuations, covering rich land, well watered and cultivated, under such climatic conditions

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

Although the consolidation of the Southwest National Bank and the National Bank of Commerce makes the Kansas City clearings about 4 per cent less than they would be if the two banks were separate, Kansas City bank clearings last week were the largest in many months past, and represented close to a high record of total business passing through the banks. Kansas City regained sixth place in American cities with $58,899,000, an increase of 24.4 per cent. It represents a general increase in business stimulated by the movement of the big wheat crop and by the assurance of large yields of other crops. Omaha with $16,594,000 had an increase of 18.8 per cent over a year ago; St. Joseph, Mo., $8,256,000, an increase of 44.5 per cent. Other cities of the Central West enjoyed a proportionate increase in bank business.

M. H. Malott

M. H. Malott, president of the Kansas Bankers Association, returned from the Minneapolis conference more enthusiastic than ever on the subject of co-operation between bankers and farmers in advancing the interests of communities in which both are interested. The bankers of Kansas will be among the most active in assisting in the education of farmers toward better methods in agriculture. Mr. Malott, whose home is Abilene, Kas., said of the Minneapolis conference: "It is not the purpose of the association to attempt to teach the farmer a better method of farming, but to aid him in procuring needed legislation along lines that will place from one to three instructors from the agricultural schools and colleges in every county of the state, with demonstration farms within the reach of all. Co-operation with the agricultural schools, with the farmers' institutes, with the railroads with their demonstration trains and giving financial assistance, is the purpose of the bankers' movement in this case. The meeting was in the direction of helpfulness and a larger measure of prosperity. Kansas bankers are wide awake in this matter and are enthusiastic supporters.

Prosperity in Pacific Coast States

J. J. Heim, vice-president of the Southwest National Bank of Commerce, returned last week from a tour of the Pacific Coast states where he was greatly impressed with the material prosperity everywhere in evidence. "I have never seen such a wonderful prospect for prosperity as there is in the West this year," said Mr. Heim. "In Washington the mills and the lumbermen have had to quit taking orders for lumber. The demand far exceeds the capacity of the mills. The fruit crop is phenomenal, so much so that a great deal of it will perish because the railroads have not enough cars to haul it away to market and a trip across the plains of Kansas is like coming through a forest; the crops are enormous. Kansas City should be busy and prosperous this fall as result."

Arrange for Group Meetings

Various committees representing groups of the Missouri State Bankers Association are now at work completing arrangements for the thirteen group associations and the annual meetings of these groups are held at short intervals beginning late in October. Group 10 with headquarters at Neosho will hold the first meeting of the series beginning October 25th. This will be followed by Group 11 at Springfield. The state convention of the Missouri Bankers Association will be held in St. Joseph in February. All group meetings will be held before that time.

At the Panhandle Bankers' Meeting

More than one hundred bankers attended the two days' convention of the Panhandle Bankers Association at Plainview, Tex., last week. Among the prominent visitors were: Messrs Jarboe and Godell of the Drovers National, Kansas City; Cashier Walton of the New England National, Kansas City; T. P. Martin of the Stock Yards National Bank, Oklahoma City and Col. Henry Exall of Dallas, president of the Texas Industrial Congress. Col. Exall was the chief guest of honor at the convention and his address on "Better Cultural Methods" was one of the best speeches ever delivered in West Texas. Bank Commissioner B. L. Gill of Texas urged upon the convention a strong support of the efforts being made to adopt a "blue sky" law for the Lone Star state. Amarillo was chosen as the next meeting place and the following officers were elected: president, O. L. Slaton of Lubbock; first vice-president, Joe E. Lancaster of Plainview; second vice-president, R. H. Collier of McLean; secretary, Ira Smith of Estelline and treasurer, G. A. F. Parker of Hereford.

Tootle-Lemon National Letter

According to the current financial letter issued by the officers of the Tootle-Lemon National of St. Joseph, Mo., business men throughout the Central West are taking a very hopeful view of conditions. "Merchants of this section," says the letter, "are restocking their shelves, and it is noteworthy that some large buying orders of this character have come from sources which not many months ago refused absolutely to provide thus for the future. In this way there has been a decided quickening of general trade, and although it has not yet reached the volume of very active years, it has been sufficient to indicate that the country merchant is much more confident than he was a year ago and is evidently doing a better business than he expected to do at this time. Many of the great jobbing and wholesale houses located in this and other cities have booked a very good fall business. It is too early to estimate yet what its volume will be in comparison with that of other years, but the indications are that it will be considerably in excess of what it was at this time in 1911. The fact that the country's July bank clearances broke all records, and that cities outside of the metropolis made an excellent showing, reflects the revival in general trade that is now a most hopeful sign of the times. The presidential campaign is in full swing, but it may be said that politics is really a very small factor in the business situation. Merchants appear to have 'little time for politics,' and while the campaign is likely to be a spirited one general business has been very little disturbed by it. Leaving all partisan questions aside, it may be said that the letters of acceptance written by both President Taft and Governor Wilson were dignified, prudent and cautious in tone, and for the most part calculated to strengthen the business interests of the whole United States."

Texas Bankers Give Support

Peter Radford, president of the Texas Farmers union, says that Texas bankers have given hearty support to the union plan of handling "distressed" cotton in Texas. Arrangements have been made with the San Antonio bankers to lend farmers within a radius of 105 miles of that city enough money at 6 per cent to hold their crop for a good market. Bankers in all parts of Texas have offered their help and the whole state is covered. President Radford figures that five to twenty millions of dollars will be saved through proper and business-like handling of the cotton supply and the ability of the farmers to wait for the high prices for their staple. The plan leaves the farmers in control of sufficient part of the crop to prevent overloading the market. Through the backing of the bankers the farmers will be able to feed the market in such a way as to secure the proper reward for their labors. More warehouses are necessary, however, to make the plan, which makes cotton manipulation impossible, an assured success."

Will Co-operate with Bankers

The Texas State Real Estate Dealers Association in convention last week at San Antonio decided to co-operate with the two bankers associations of the state with a view to having a "blue sky" law passed by the Texas legislature. T. H. Barrow of Austin, a member of the legislative committee, submitted a report to the real estate men embodying a rec-

Under it a company which seeks to sell stock to the general public is required, first, to submit to an examination by experts from the state bank commissioner's office. If it is shown to be a legitimate concern backed by capital and experience, in fact, a safe business venture, the license is issued to those selling the stock. Without this license no man dare undertake to sell stock, as it is deemed prima facie evidence his company cannot stand investigation, and, moreover, it subjects the agent to heavy penalties. John Richey of San Antonio was authorized to present copies of this bill to members of the legislature and to obtain as much publicity as possible for the movement.

After serving as president of the First National of Newton, Kan., for thirty-two years, S. Lehman has tendered his resignation to the board of directors. R. D. Seifkin will be elected to succeed Mr. Lehman.

Depositors of the Woods National of San Antonio, Texas, which failed November 7, 1907, were paid a final dividend last week of 2½ per cent by H. N. Morris who was appointed receiver for the bank at the time of its failure. The recent dividend amounts to $18,310.54, making the aggregate payment $714,242.19, or 97½ per cent on hand at the time the bank's doors were closed.

The Bank of Ingersoll, Ingersoll, Okla., was burned out last week and while the vault and safe were left intact the furniture and fixtures were completely destroyed.

William J. Bryan has presented W. C. Robinson, a Winfield, Kan., banker, a Wesley teapot on which is inscribed a prayer the Commoner said at a breakfast where he and Mr. Robinson were guests a year ago. Robinson admired the prayer and asked where it came from. Bryan said it was on the teapot which had belonged to John Wesley and promised to send it to the Winfield man.

Francis J. Fleming, former part owner and cashier of the Union State Bank of Shawnee, Okla., was arrested last week charged with taking from the bank a sack containing $3,300 of the reserve fund in gold. Fleming had recently sold his stock in the bank. Confronted with the evidence Fleming weakened and dug up the money where he had buried it in a potato patch near town.

D. J. Scanlon, president of the First National and a pioneer druggist of Sidney, Neb., died last week.

Walter Williams, a negro, was arrested last week charged with attempting to steal a bag of gold containing $500 from the First National of Omaha. The police say Williams stole $1,800 from a Kansas City bank some time ago but succeeded in making his escape.

George Liddell, formerly a newspaper reporter and now paying teller of the City National of McAlester, Okla., will give up banking and enter the ministry.

Thornton Cooke, vice-president of the Fidelity Trust Company of Kansas City, is spending his vacation with his family at Beach Haven, N. J. Before returning to Kansas City Mr. Cooke will attend the annual meeting of the American Bankers Association at Detroit early in September. He is a member of one of the important committees.

The Paducah State Bank, Paducah, Texas, has been nationalized as the First National Bank of Paducah.

The Texas banking department has approved the following reserve agents: for the First Guaranty State Bank of Quanah, the City National of Dallas and the Southwestern National Bank of Commerce of Kansas City; for the First State Bank of Ovalo, the Ballinger State Bank and Trust Company of Ballinger; for the First State Bank of Dawson, the Central National of St. Louis; for the First Guaranty State Bank of Pittsburg, the Coal and Iron National of New York City; for the Commercial Guaranty State Bank of San Augustine, the Union National of Houston; for the First State Bank and Trust Company of Laredo, the National Bank of Commerce, Houston; for the First Guaranty State Bank of Industry, the National Bank of Commerce, Hous-

Harris, president of the Harris Banking Company, Harris, Mo.; C. K. Boardman, cashier of the State Guaranty Bank of Okeene, Okla.; C. O. Johnson, cashier of the Farmers National, Ponca City, Okla.; H. E. Warren, Bank of Grain Valley, Grain Valley, Mo.; A. S. Booth, assistant cashier of the First National, Pueblo, Colo.; J. J. Lindston, assistant cashier of the First National, Pleasant Hill, Mo., and Karl H. Woodward, assistant cashier of the Colorado National, Denver, Colo.

Managers of the Oakland "Fall Festival" have invited John F. Flack, president of the City National, Omaha, to deliver an address here on August 29th. Mr. Flack has accepted the invitation and will, it is understood, talk upon important phases of banking reform.

It is in this feature of the county crop work that Mr. Dawson and his business associates are interested. A bank is, of course, extremely sensitive to even slight changes in the material prosperity of contiguous territory and if the work of the Farm Improvement League is successful in greatly increasing the volume and value of the crops of Scott county and materially increasing the price per acre of Scott county lands, it will more than repay Mr. Dawson and the other bankers and business men who have become interested in the movement for all the time and labor they have given to it.

H. H. Jones, sales manager, Harris Trust and Savings, is spending his vacation touring in his automobile.

BANKERS ENTERTAINED AT PITTSBURGH

About fifty bank attachés from eastern cities were entertained last Friday night by the Pittsburgh Chapter of the American Institute of Banking, first at the Hippodrome and later, from midnight until their train left at 3 o'clock in the morning, in the Union Club. The ten members of the Pittsburgh delegation left with their guests for their national convention in Salt Lake City. The party comprised: B. O. Hill, of the Second National; James A. Meade, Fidelity Title and Trust Company; W. G. Gundelfinger and William H. Johnson, Commonwealth Trust Company; F. G. Lancaster, Keystone National; J. E. Rovensky, First National; A. H. Copeland, Bank of Pittsburgh, N. A.; William F. Woestehoff, Terminal Trust Company; John Hughes, German National, and A. B. Sharpe, First National of Sewickley.

The Citizens Bank of Erlanger, Ky., has been incorporated. The incorporators are G. M. Buffington, T. M. Witt, Claude Slater, C. C. McCracken, A. B. Rouse, H. W. Smith, F. F. Gale and Ed F. Smith.

Northwest Letter

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Judge Martin B. Koon, 71 years old, first vice-president of the Northwestern National Bank, died at 12:35 P. M., August 20th, at his home in Minneapolis. Arterio-sclerosis was the cause of Judge Koon's passing. In the city's history he took a prominent part. Associated from the beginning with the Twin City Rapid Transit Company he was a leading factor in its freedom from legal entanglement and as an advisor to the president, the late Thomas Lowry. In the directory of the Northwestern National he has been a wise counselor. In movements of a public character or semi-civic nature he was regarded as a necessary presence. Of the union station committee he was the head and his chairmanship of the meeting at which a year ago half a million dollars was raised for an art museum was the pivot. Said Joseph Chapman, Jr., vice-president of the Northwestern National: "Judge Koon was a man of high ideals with great love for the city, desire to see it grow, and become great, not only in numbers, but in civic virtues and civic beauty, and he was ever ready to give his time and labor for the advancement of any cause for the general good." He was a guest of honor at a dinner given January 5, 1912, for himself and President W. H. Dunwoody of the bank.

To the A. B. A. Convention

Northwestern bankers are preparing to reach Chicago in time to catch the bankers' special, September 8th, to Detroit for the A. B. A. meeting, September 9th. Among those who will go down are President D. C. Armstrong of the Minnesota Bankers Association, of Albert Lea; Kelsey S. Chase, state superintendent of banks, St. Paul, and Charles R. Frost, Minneapolis, secretary of the Minnesota association; George A. Du Toit, Chaska; M. T. Dunn, Brainerd; J. W. Wheeler, St. Paul; A. M. Ekman, Hendrum; V. H. Van Slyke, Metropolitan National, and Theodore Wold, Scandinavian-American National; W. F. McLane, Hennepin County Savings Bank; N. F. Hawley, Farmers and Mechanics Savings Bank; J. S. Pomeroy, Security National; C. V. Smith and W. A. Durst, Minnesota Loan and Trust Company; Joseph Chapman, Jr., Northwestern National, and George F. Orde of the First National, who is a member of the transportation committee of the national association.

Commercial National Officers

Officers of the new Commercial National Bank of Minneapolis are: President, S. E. Forrest; vice-presidents, S. H. Bowman, Minneapolis, and S. J. Mealey, Monticello, Minn.; cashier, Guy C. Landis, formerly cashier of the Flour City National. The first board is as follows: Isaac Lincoln, Aberdeen, S. D.; R. W. Akin, Anoka, Minn.; H. F. Schultz, O. W. Schultz, H. A. Hogan and J. S. Porteous. The capital is $200,000 and surplus $50,000. The bank will open about September 5th in the Lumber Exchange building banking room. Mr. Forrest was president of the First National of Britton, S. D., before moving to Minneapolis.

Stops Off on Way to A. I. B. Convention

George E. Allen of New York, educational secretary of the institute visited Minneapolis on his way to the Salt Lake convention. He was guest at dinner in the Commercial Club of the officers and executive committee of the chapter. Mr. Allen also visited a meeting of the chapter at Grand Forks, N. D. The Grand Forks representative at the meeting is Christ Gilbertson of the First National, East Grand Forks. From Minneapolis went Gray Warren and L. W. Ainsworth of the First National Bank; George Stegner, German American; E. J. Kennedy and F. J. Mulcahy, Minnesota Loan and Trust Company; L. G. MacLean, Security National, and J. Cameron, J. A. McH. Guigan and Edward Phinney of the Northwestern National.

C. H. F. Smith

C. H. F. Smith, vice-president of the American National, returned from Montreal, has something to say about St. Paul's following the lead of that city in its water front improvement. Canadian banking laws favor the invasion of the West Indies commercial and banking field by the Canadians to the detriment of bankers from this country, thinks Mr. Smith. He said: "Our laws prevent a bank from establishing branches, while the policy of Canadian firms in branching out is fostered by the dominion laws. The Canadians, I learned, are rapidly spreading their influence in the West Indies, territory which, by its proximity to the United States, ought to be occupied by American business men."

Canada's failure to adopt the reciprocity agreement was a great disappointment to the conservative and best-thinking men of Montreal and Quebec, Mr. Smith said.

The Canadians, he found, are bitterly opposed to the intention of congress to favor American vessels in passing through the Panama Canal, the men in the provinces alleging that this is unfair discrimination.

Mr. Smith said that the Canadian business men are keeping in remarkably close touch with American affairs, both commercial and political. From their point of view, Woodrow Wilson has the best chance of being the next president of the United States.

Credit of Minneapolis High in East

"The East is just beginning to find that we have a big crop out here," says H. T. Thrall of the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company. "They are beginning to hear about our farming prosperity and are expecting to do much business out here this year." He found the credit of Minneapolis high.

Boston Bankers in Minneapolis

That there will be money enough to meet demands when the grain movement begins and that present interest rates are likely to continue, is the opinion of Frank A. Newell of the National Shawmut Bank of Boston, who, with Charles H. Marston, another official of the bank, was in Minneapolis yesterday. They are making a trip through the country with the idea of getting a first hand view of the crop situation.

Best Crop in Twenty Years

According to P. J. Leeman, assistant cashier of the First National Bank of Minneapolis, who has returned from a trip through the Dakotas, oats in parts of South Dakota will yield as much as 100 bushels to the acre. "Farmers out there told me," said Mr. Leeman, "that they had never seen the like of it; they say they are harvesting what is in many ways the best crop they have had in twenty years."

Chicago Banker on Conditions

"General conditions are the best I have ever know them to be," said F. O. Wetmore, Chicago, in Minneapolis last week. "Business of all natures is booming and the business men are most optimistic. The demand for money is good and growing better. To me there seems to be but one possibility of an unsatisfactory feature in connection with the prosperity which this country now is due to enjoy. That one possibility, I believe, is a danger in which the railroads stand of being unable to handle the enormous traffic they soon will be called upon to transport."

"The crops this year may be the biggest in the history of the country—will be, in fact, if the predictions that have been generally made all over the grain producing territory prove accurate. This means that the railroads will be taxed to their utmost to handle the crop movement, not to speak of all the other freight that always has to be transported at this season of the year."

"I do not believe that the customary effects of presidential years have been felt in commercial circles to the slightest degree this year."

Northwest Banking Notes

F. A. Rising, connected with the Winona Savings Bank (Minn.) since its formation in 1875, and the cashier, died August 19th in Chicago after an operation in the Presbyterian hospital. The funeral took place Thursday.

Favorable crop outlook has had a strengthening effect on bank stocks. The Security National went up 5 points to $450 a share; the First National is at $285; the Northwestern National advanced 1 point to $284 and the Scandinavian American National 4 points to $136.

J. S. Pomeroy and S. H. Bezoler of the Security National Bank, George A. Lyon of the First National and W. F. McLane of the Hennepin County Savings Bank attended the convention of the Montana State Bankers Association at Kalispel, Mont., August 19th and 20th.

The comptroller has approved the application to organize the Rideout Smith National Bank of Oroville, Oroville, Cal., capital $300,000, to succeed the commercial department of the State Bank of Rideout, Smith & Co.

Allen F. Ayers

Vice-president Allen F. Ayers of the Continental Trust, Denver, responded to the address of welcome at the Pueblo convention. He said:

It is our extreme good fortune to be able to meet in 1912 in the prosperous city of Pueblo, which city typifies the marvelous growth and rapidly developing industries of the Centennial State. My text shall be "Behold all things work together for good," my song shall be of hope, and my prophecy, that this good year will record the most wonderful crops, the most valuable fruits, the greatest advance in irrigation, and the most phenomenal yields, of gold, silver, minerals, coal, marble and scores of other wealth yielding properties—to say nothing of sugar, vegetables and live stock returns—ever placed on the credit side of the bank books of the Colorado financial institutions, the state over. Another thing, we are getting thousands of new farmers, fruit raisers, live stock growers, and even climate citizens who pitch their earthly habitation under the snow-capped peaks of the Continental Divide—under the dreamland shadows of the old Rockies,

"Our fathers crossed the prairies, as of old

Their fathers crossed the seas—

To make the West—as they the East

The homestead of the free."

Gentlemen of the Colorado Bankers Association, at the risk of being labeled "an enthusiast," at the hazard of being put down in that "hoi polloi" class known as a "boomer," it shall be my fixed purpose nevertheless to paint you a few of the hundreds of prosperity pictures, for you to take home with you and cherish and consider in the sanctum sanctorums of your banking homes. First, as to politics—you may rest assured that all Colorado has discounted the results of the 1912 elections, and there will not be even a lull in the up turn of general business throughout the state—yes, throughout our nation—no matter who is elected. To the noisy, selfish, office-hunting, office-grabbing, self-heralded patriots—may all of their efforts bring them contentment, for the people have long since relegated the great majority of them, in their mental determination, to the scrap heap of the political graveyard. To their buried hopes we add our heartfelt benediction of "requiescat in pace." In mining, the attention of the world has been again turned to Colorado, and the increased output of all mines for 1912 will be the subject of the closest attention of the world's financiers; for all the peoples of all the earth are looking for the yellow metal and Colorado will lead the Union, and my prediction is that there are scores of wonderful camps yet to be brought in within this matchless commonwealth. It shall be our pleasure to "give the world what they want."

In live stock we are holding our own and everybody is prosperous. As an example, last week I sent twenty-five two-year-old steers to the Denver market and they brought $60.00 per head on the hoof. I used to think ten years ago that $25.00 was a big price. Hogs now sell for $8.50 and Colorado has the greatest number now on feed ever known in the state, and we have no hog cholera which has recently decimated the droves in Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, and Nebraska. They will probably bring $10 before many weeks. I see no "look in" even for the pessimist here. With our fruit crop—I fear to put down on paper what vast wealth it will bring for the 1912 season. Every district reports record returns, and the great East will be given another sample of the wonders of the sunshine, soil and climate of Colorado, in productiveness. I could tell you of vast harvests of wheat, corn, oats, barley, hay, potatoes, sugar beets, canteloupes, onions and worlds of other things, but I am presumed to reply to an address of welcome, and the time forbids that I trespass even with prosperity songs.

One thing I want to impress upon every Colorado banker, and that is, that one of our chief assets is water, and to get maximum results it must be locked up in mountain passes, and in vast reservoirs, and this takes cash, and a lot of it. None of you can afford to lose sight of the fact that it is your own people who are behind these vast irrigation enterprises and that necessarily the work is always slow, expensive, and at times discouraging, but all are striving to build a new empire which in the years to come will support in luxury millions of American citizens, and it is your business and mine to help build up all meritorious enterprises—not to wreck them; not to discourage them; not to cast doubts on them by letters sent to eastern investors, saying you know nothing about them. It should be your pleasure to take the trouble to find out about every enterprise which is building in Colorado, to increase population, add to the general wealth and comfort of our people. I wish you one and all success in your own banking institutions, and I bespeak from you careful consideration for the toilers on the other side of the banking counter. A word from you may bring millions into your state, and to do the most good to-day, we must help one another. There is another subject—in my opinion one of the paramours, viz: the building of great highways across this state. Every banker should actively exert himself to hasten the work in every county in the state, and we should all contribute to every effort to improve the roads, which means so much to the value of every acre of land in the state.

May all our hopes be realized for a greater Colorado! May all of our moneyed institutions follow the Golden Rule of "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." Over the outposts of our Centennial State may we emblazon the motto "We aid all who aid themselves." One and all we thank you for this big Pueblo welcome, and we trust your metropolitan city may soon number one hundred thousand happy, prosperous and contented citizens!

Spokane, Aug. 20th.—Through action of the state board of finance in offering to purchase this city's $250,000 issue of bonds for building a new city hall, the last bar to the commencing of actual construction has been swept aside. This issue was originally bid in by E. H. Rollins & Sons, which firm afterward withdrew unless the city commissioners would agree to call a special election to authorize the bonds by the people. Lack of time precluded such action, and the state board of finance agreed to take up the issue. The attorney-general is expected in Spokane in a few days to pass on the validity of the issue, preparatory to issuing September 1st.

Crop Prospects Highly Satisfactory

Reports of highly satisfactory crop prospects and of improved business conditions were made by a number of out-of-town bankers who were visitors at local banks recently. Among those who were in the city were George Duncan, cashier of the Creston (Wash.) State Bank; E. C. Baird, of the Colfax (Wash.) State Bank; W. H. Miller of the State Bank of Connell, Wash.; F. L. Leonard, cashier of the Grangeville Savings and Trust Company of Grangeville, Idaho; Charles L. MacKenzie of the Colfax (Wash.) National and R. P. Loomis of the First National of Malden, Wash.

Will Build $15,000,000 Electric Railroad

French capital will assure construction of the $15,000,000 electric railroad to connect Cle Elum and Roslyn, two Washington towns west of Spokane, announces S. R. Justham, superintendent of the Salmon Le Sac project of the Kittitas Electric Railway and Power Company. The French syndicate sent an engineer over to inspect the plans, and Mr. Justham announces the rendering of a favorable report. With power sites at Cooper and Waptus lakes, the company proposes to develop 20,000 electrical horsepower. The line will have connection with the Northern Pacific and Chicago, Milwaukee and Puget Sound.

Spokane Notes

In order to secure the building by day labor of a large subtrunk sewer in Spokane, the Spokane Chronicle offered to float at par an issue of $23,000 in bonds by the city government. Bids received by contractors previously did not prove satisfactory to the city council. The newspaper's offer was accepted.

For the second time in the history of the city, special improvement bonds constituting a debt against abutting property, have been sold at par. The Fidelity National of Spokane took the issue, amounting to $23,000.

Spokane bank clearings for the week ended Thursday, August 15th, amounted to $4,050,085. This is an increase of 3 per cent over the clearings for the corresponding week of 1911.

Postmaster W. P. Edris has received official notice from Washington, D. C., that the State Bank at Hillyard, four miles north of Spokane, and the First National Bank of Hillyard have qualified as depositories and would receive the funds deposited in the postal savings bank now open under the supervision of Superintendent Hicks.

Seattle

At a recent meeting of the national and state bank examiners in Seattle the following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, That the practice of shipping and storing lumber and shingles at the Minnesota Transfer operates to the disadvantage of banks making advances against such shipments and tends to the encouragement of speculation and the assumption of greater risks than are warranted by the usage of sound banking."

Many of the lumbermen of the state of Washington took exception to the resolution, claiming that the examiners do not understand the situation thoroughly and claiming that the shingles and lumber shipped in transit to the Minnesota Transfer are absolutely good collateral. While it is probably absolutely necessary for the trade that there should be a certain amount in transit shipment done, still it is liable to abuse, and it is questionable whether in the long run the lumber and shingle trade will not be more profitable to the manufacturer and more satisfactory to the banker if the transit business is cut down to a minimum figure. The accumulation of a large quantity of unsold lumber or transit cars of shingles at the Minnesota Transfer has many times in the past caused a drop in prices, at times even causing a loss to the shipping firms. The resolution adopted by the examiners is along the lines of prudence and conservatism and has, it is understood, the approval of most of the leading lumber and shingle men in the state.

GROWTH OF SAVINGS DEPOSITS IN NATIONAL BANKS

One of the most striking things about the banking business on the Pacific Coast the last few years has been the growth of savings deposits in the national banks. When the comptroller of the currency began to publish the segregated savings deposits of the states November 27, 1908, the seven Pacific Coast states national banks held $13,948,466. At the last call the national banks of Washington held $13,480,174. In other words, the state of Washington to-day has caught up with the Coast record of four years ago. The Coast has increased from $13,000,000 to $35,184,336. Washington doubled and the Coast almost trebled, California savings jumping from $4,000,000 to $14,000,000. In the United States in the four years savings deposits in the national banks have increased from $331,562,680 to $718,358,431. Of course, the fact is well known that national banks hold relatively a small part of the savings deposits, the total in all kinds of banks running well above $5,000,000,000 but the figures given show a drift.—Pacific Banker.

O'NEIL BANK PAYS 18 PER CENT DIVIDEND

Another dividend of 18 per cent has been declared by the receiver of the State Bank of Commerce at Wallace, Idaho. This brings the total dividends up to 48 per cent, or approximately $220,000 since the failure a year ago last May. The payment of this dividend was made possible by the collection of $7,000 and the payment made by August Paulsen, Stanley Easton and heirs of T. L. Greenough. The main portion of small debts have now been settled, and there are but a few more assets upon which anything can be realized.

BANK OF MODOC COUNTY

Alturas, Cal.—In the investigation by the grand jury sitting at Alturas on the affairs of the Bank of Modoc County, which was recently closed by W. R. Williams, state superintendent of banks, the jury failed to find a true bill against the officers of the bank, who were charged by Mr. Williams with having committed a felony in swearing falsely as to the condition of the bank. The district attorney declared that the jury failed of its sworn duty in returning their verdict in the face of indisputable evidence pointing to the guilt of the accused officials. The matter may be brought up before the November grand jury for rehearing.

ELECTED NIXON BANK PRESIDENT

Reno.—George Wingfield, former partner of the late U. S. Senator Nixon, has been elected president of the Nixon National Bank and the Bank of Nevada Savings and Trust Company. Mr. Wingfield is the owner and president of the John S. Cook Banking Company at Goldfield and president of the Goldfield Consolidated Mining Company. When Governor Oddie offered Wingfield the U. S. senatorship, he declined for business reasons. It was rumored he would become the president of the Nixon National Bank. This be-

Wyoming Convention

The fourth annual convention of the Wyoming Bankers Association was held on August 7th and 8th in Cheyenne. The sessions were held in the Carnegie Library. Representatives from Wyoming, Colorado and Nebraska were present. Conditions in Wyoming are extremely favorable, and it is said that never before in the history of the state have indications pointed to a more prosperous year. According to bankers who attended the convention, there is not a section which is not foreseeing prosperous times. M. R. Johnson of Wheatland says that the crops in that vicinity never have looked better, and that the banks are anticipating a very prosperous year. State Treasurer J. L. Baird said: "I have never seen conditions as favorable as they are this year." Bankers all over the state seem to hold these sentiments.

The convention was called to order by President Harry B. Henderson, cashier Wyoming Trust and Savings Bank, Cheyenne. After the invocation by the Rev. Leon C. Hills, the president delivered his annual address, and was followed by the reports of the secretary and the treasurer. Committees were appointed as follows: auditing: S. B. Cochran of Buffalo, George F. Westbrook of Lander; on resolutions: C. R. Massey of Sheridan and W. E. Hickie of Laramie; on nominations: Ira E. Jones of Thermopolis, C. J. Williams of Greybull, A. H. Marble of Cheyenne. Reports then were heard from standing and special committees—executive, protective and legislative. The following addresses were delivered: "Getting Business," by O. T. Eastman, assistant cashier of the First National of Omaha; M. R. Collins, president of the Douglas National, talked on the subject of collections and F. F. Johnson, cashier of the Boise (Idaho) City National Bank, talked on costs and credit accounting. Chas. A. Lory, president of the Colorado Agricultural College, Fort Collins, was represented by Principal Netherton of the college. Mr. Lory was ill and unable to appear. Mr. Netherton talked on "One-Sided Education." Clement Chase, editor of the "Western Banker," Omaha, delivered an address on early banking methods. E. R. Gurney, chairman federal legislative committee, American Bankers Association, Fremont, Neb., and T. Seddon Taliaferro, Jr., president Green River (Wyo.) State Bank, talked on "Losses" and "Our Natural Resources."

Mr. Netherton's address was loudly applauded. He was followed by E. R. Gurney of Nebraska, who delivered a talk full of humor, underlying which was a good sound talk on the banking methods of the West as practised by the small banker and the many pitfalls with which he is beset in trying to uphold his community and incidentally himself. All of the addresses delivered at the convention were extremely interesting and practical. All of the speakers were roundly applauded. Secretary Van Deusen of Rock Springs is to be congratulated on the excellent program provided for the occasion.

Entertainment features were not lacking. A "get-acquainted" smoker was given at the Industrial Club on the 7th. The next day, following the adjournment, visiting bankers were given a pleasure trip to Fort Russell and other places of interest about Cheyenne. In the evening a dinner was served at the Plains Hotel, at which the visitors were the guests of the Cheyenne bankers.

The convention next year probably will be held at Sheridan. Officers were elected as follows: Ira E. Jones, cashier of the First National of Thermopolis, president; C. R. Massey, vice-president Bank of Commerce, Sheridan, vice-president. H. Van Deusen of Rock Springs was re-elected secretary and T. C. Rowley of Douglas was elected to the office of treasurer. The convention was pronounced to be a great success by all who attended. A vote of thanks was tendered the Cheyenne bankers for the royal manner in which they entertained their guests.

NEW BANK FOR VIRGINIA

Richmond.—A charter has been granted by the Virginia Corporation Commission for a new trust company to be known as the Richmond Trust and Savings Bank Company, with a capital of $1,000,000, the principal office to be in this city. The subscription books to the stock were opened at 9 o'clock in the morning at the banking house of John D. Williams & Sons, exactly a week after the granting of the charter. The bankers announce that before the close of the day the applications for the stock exceeded $1,550,000, or 50 per cent in excess of the amount to be allotted.

John Skelton Williams, who is to be president of the Richmond Trust and Savings Company, says the board of directors will probably be selected and announced within the next two weeks.

The Farmers and Merchants State Bank is the name of a new banking institution at Kennedy, Texas, which has been organized with a capital of $30,000, and opened for business Monday. The officers of the new bank are: L. E. Bain, president; Clem Reasoner, vice-president, and Miss Annie Rawls, cashier.

ARTHUR REYNOLDS, President
 J. H. BLAIR, Vice-President C. A. BARR, Cashier

Des Moines, August 22.—There is general rejoicing among Iowans in general that Arthur Reynolds, president of the Des Moines National, has declined an offer to be an officer of the Continental and Commercial National at Chicago and will remain in Des Moines as head of the institution with which he has been identified for seventeen years. That Mr. Reynolds is making a sacrifice so far as honors are concerned, is of course admitted by all. It requires some little spunk for a man to turn his back on a proposition that means an important connection with the second biggest bank in the country. But Mr. Reynolds did not look at it exactly that way. Mr. Reynolds has a magnificent home in Des Moines. He likes to devote his time to his family and his residence. The position at Chicago would mean much work for Mr. Reynolds at a time when he is ready to enjoy life. But the main reason that Mr. Reynolds decided to remain in Des Moines is because of his pride in the institution of which he is the head, and the progress it is making as one of the leading financial institutions of Iowa. When Mr. Reynolds entered the Des Moines National as cashier it had deposits of $550,000. He served as cashier two years, then became president. To-day the bank has deposits of $6,250,000.

"I have great confidence in the future of the city of Des Moines," said Mr. Reynolds in conversation relative to his Chicago proposition and its rejection by him. "I have seen it develop from an overgrown country village to a city of high type, recognized to-day as one of the important cities of its size in the country. The state of Iowa is one of the greatest commonwealths of this country. Its resources are unbounded and the future of the state is certain."

No man in Iowa has been so much sought by state banking associations as Mr. Reynolds when programs for conventions have been made up. His opinion on currency matters has always received highest deference and consideration. He is now chairman of the executive council of the A. B. A. which is a stepping-stone to the presidency. Des Moines is proud of Arthur Reynolds and the entire state joins in the feeling.

Council of Administration to Hold Meeting

The most important meeting the council of administration of the Iowa Bankers Association has had in many months will be held in this city August 28th. This will be the quarterly meeting. It will be held during the state fair and a large attendance is assured. Not only will the officers of the association, the group chairmen and the retiring president be on hand, but in addition the members of the agricultural committee will attend. It is proposed at this time to outline more definite plans for the agricultural extension work which the Iowa Bankers Association has entered upon with zest and enthusiasm. The Iowa Crop Bureau which has been launched by the Des Moines booster organization in connection with the I. B. A. is beginning to take more definite shape. Headquarters have been opened in Des Moines with Prof. Holden and his secretary, G. E. Stayner, in active charge. By the time the executive council meets here, the work will be fairly well started and it will be possible to definitely determine what to do. The first move, in all probability, will be the starting of agricultural teaching in the various rural and town schools of the state when the fall term is resumed early in September.

Proceedings Book Out

The proceedings for the twenty-sixth annual convention of the I. B. A. as held at Cedar Rapids, June 5th and 6th, have been issued in a handsome book by Secretary P. W. Hall. The proceedings are artistically illustrated with the pictures of the officers of the association and the chairmen of the various groups. In addition there is a fund of information relative to the association and the groups that will prove a handy bit of reference material. A map of the state showing the group boundaries is a feature of the volume and the names of the members who attended the convention is another. Secretary Hall is receiving many words of commendation upon the manner in which he has handled the proceedings this year.

Bank Robbed at Portsmouth

Bank robbers have been at it again in Iowa. They selected a dark, stormy night for their nefarious work and robbed the bank at Portsmouth of $1,300. They overlooked $2,500 but got away with $1,300. Three men who were seen at Dedham where they robbed a saloon and were again seen at Needleson where they cracked a hotel safe are thought to have done the work at Portsmouth. Detective Gust Patek, representing the Burns agency, has been on the job, but at this writing Secretary Hall has received no report indicating that the detective will be successful in apprehending the yeggs.

Saving on Taxes

One of the numerous newspaper correspondents, of whom there are many in Des Moines, has been doing some figuring on the taxes the banks have paid under the new law. He declares that the institutions saved quite a good deal on their taxes as a result of the law but paid out considerable because of the law demanding interest on public funds. This latter amount, he says, totals $122,388.24. Polk county receives the highest amount, as might be expected. It totals $14,643. Then comes Webster county with $3,555; Woodbury with $3,252; Linn, $2,903; Clinton, $2,577; Warren, $2,231; Kossuth, $2,518; Wright, $2,212; Pottawattamie, $1,952; Cerro Gordo, $1,576; Marshall, $1,456; Dubuque, $834. The counties from which no revenue at all was derived from this course, indicating that the public money is not kept in banks, are: Johnson, Lee, Madison, Palo Alto, Sioux and Appanoose.

Lightning Strikes Bank Building

Lightning struck the Citizens State Building at Perry but did not set the building afire and did not crack the safe. However, when one of the tenants opened the door to his office the morning following the storm, he discovered the desks and floors covered with plaster. Apparently the bolt had followed the chimney and then divided, for one end of the room was littered while there were evidences that another section followed a stovepipe into the stove used to burn waste paper. The front of the draft was blown off and a hole in the zinc below showed where the bolt had escaped. The damage to the building was slight.

Collateral Inheritance Tax

Not long ago the state of Iowa had an interesting controversy relative to the collateral inheritance tax on an estate owned in Denmark by a man who died in this country. A case similar has now arisen involving Germany. A woman in Clinton county bequeathed $2,000 to go to a German town for the benefit of the poor of that city. The German treaty forbids collection of an inheritance tax descending to any citizen of Germany higher than that which would be collected if it were a citizen of the United States. However, the German consul holds that in this case the bequest is left to the poor people who are citizens and that under the treaty the state cannot collect, for it could not collect if the bequest were left to American individuals under similar circumstances. However, the courts will probably be called upon to decide the points raised. As to the Denmark case, the courts of Mitchell county hold that the non-resident alien inheritance tax applies to heirs living in Denmark. The decision has been appealed to the Iowa supreme court.

Forgers Pass Bogus Checks

Davenport dealers have been caught in the game which was worked by smooth forgers who secured cash on over 90 bogus checks in the vicinity of the tri-cities. The checks were those of the Illinois Steel Company and were stolen from the offices of the Milwaukee lithographing firm which printed them. The checks were drawn on the Joliet National and the South Chicago Savings and the gang which passed them collected in amounts of $50 and $100, signing the names of Charles G. Snow of the Northwestern Railroad and E. R. Baker of the Illinois Steel Company. So far as known by Secretary P. W. Hall, Davenport is the only Iowa city where the men worked with any degree of success.

Death of I. N. Meyers

I. N. Meyers, president of the Reinbeck State Bank, and one of its organizers, died last week at his home in that city. He had been ill for several months. He had lived in the vicinity of Reinbeck since 1880 and in the town since 1893. He was a prominent resident and was mayor for several terms.

The Central State of Des Moines has filed claims aggregating $22,000 against the estate of the Hanley Brothers, wealthy Granger men who were killed some time ago when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by a Northwestern train out of Chicago.

Walter Williams was arrested at Omaha last week while attempting to steal $500 in gold from the First National. Williams was previously arrested in a bank at Council Bluffs after the police had been notified from several sources that Williams was acting suspiciously. The man, a negro, would hang around the banks, apparently aimlessly, then when he saw he was detected, he would have a two-dollar bill changed and pass on.

A. F. Dawson, president of the First National of Davenport, was at Toronto, Iowa, last week assisting in the organization of the new Toronto Savings. The capital stock of $25,000 has been subscribed and the new institution will soon be opened.

George M. Bechtel of Davenport has offered to pay 5 per cent for the $80,000 refunding bonds which the city of Ottumwa is offering for sale. Bankers of Ottumwa have been carrying the city's warrants at 6 per cent and have been urging the city council to get busy. The members of the latter have been trying to get interest on the bonds down to 4½ per cent, but thus far without success.

John E. Jellenek, cashier of the Farmers State Bank of Amherst, S. D., is under arrest on complaint of J. L. Wingfield, state bank examiner, who has filed information charging Jellenek with having made false entries in the bank books and false reports to the examiner to cover up an embezzlement. The stockholders, by a special assessment of $10,000, have made up the shortage, and depositors will lose nothing. The examiner has employed an Aberdeen law firm to assist in prosecuting the case, and an indictment will be sought under the old corporation law with reference to fraudulent insolvencies, since Judge Rice, of Deadwood, has declared unconstitutional the law passed by the legislative session of 1910-11. The complaint sets forth eight counts, the largest amount involved being $850.

While preparing to start home in his automobile, late the evening of August 16th, B. E. Sebern, cashier of the Farmers Savings Bank of Manson, Ia., was stricken with paralysis at Rockwell City, Ia. He is lying at the home of Dr. J. C. Parker in a critical condition.

It is expected eventually to add several stories to the height of the structure.

G. R. PRESIDENT FRANK N. BRIGGS TO THE COLORADO BANKERS

and at such favorable altitudes as we have in Colorado? It is definite, productive and immovable. There is absolutely no escape of security. Such loans are perfectly safe.

I favor municipal irrigation district securities above other irrigation securities for bankers to invest in for several reasons, though I do not condemn corporation irrigation securities under good conditions and management.

First—The land under such a system, if properly and honestly organized, is owned by many people who live upon and cultivate it, and their own livelihood and prosperity depends upon the proper cultivation and development of the land constituting the security.

Second—Bonds issued by such districts are carefully safeguarded by Colorado laws, and are a first mortgage and tax lien on all real property in the district. The payments of both principal and interest are provided for by direct taxation and are collected along with other taxes by the county treasurer of the county in which the district lies, and the county treasurer pays the interest coupons and principal bonds, the same as he pays other public obligations. Where such districts are legally, honestly and properly organized on fertile lands, with abundant water supply, actual settlement and diversified ownership, it would be safe to say that even United States government bonds are no safer or better and they pay only a fraction of interest to the lender that good irrigation bonds pay. Why then, should not bankers of all men, encourage in every safe and legitimate way the promotion of sound irrigation undertakings, and why should the public officials of the state withhold the encouragement and assistance our laws have made it possible for them to extend to choice irrigation enterprises?

True patriotism demands our generous and hearty support, morally, politically and financially, to the development of meritorious irrigation enterprises, and I trust that every member of this organization will come to realize his personal responsibility in this matter. In no other way can we render greater material assistance in the development of our state.

Safeguard Investment Offerings

In all parts of the country complaints are heard that unscrupulous, or mistaken promoters are procuring millions of dollars annually from the people on so-called investment securities, such as stocks, bonds, certificates, notes, etc. Recently in New York City a national organization was formed by bankers and dealers in bonds, stocks, etc., with Geo. B. Caldwell of the Continental & Commercial Trust Company of Chicago, as president, for the purpose of protecting the investing public against fraudulent and unsafe investments. This is a step in the right direction, but it does not go far enough, and cannot be entirely effective.

In this connection it may be proper to suggest the appointment of some supervising authority over the issuance of stocks and bonds in this state. They have in Kansas what is known as the "Blue Sky Law." I have a copy of it and approve of many things contained therein, but certain portions of their law are too radical and drastic in my opinion. One dangerous feature of the Kansas law to my mind is the placing of unrestricted authority to license the sale of stocks, bonds and other securities in that state in the hands of one man, viz: the state bank commissioner. No one man should have so much power. Even if he were absolutely honest, as such men usually are, mistakes in judgment might do serious harm. I favor the creation of a board by state legislation for the purpose of passing on all offerings of stocks, bonds and securities for sale in the state of Colorado and to that end I would recommend that the legislative committee of our association initiate, if necessary, and co-operate with others in an endeavor to secure the enactment, by the next legislature, of a law for safeguarding the investments of the people of this state along these lines.

Encourage Manufacturing

We need to develop manufacturing in Colorado. Nowhere in the United States can power be developed more cheaply than along our mountain streams, and in our numerous coal fields. Cheap power, and raw material right at hand, and a large western market for all kinds of manufactured products will draw many factories to this state, if properly advertised by responsible organizations.

Let us give our moral support to all legitimate efforts of those who are striving to build up manufacturing in this state.

Colorado Products for Colorado Bankers

While on this subject, let me go a little further and say: I believe in patronizing home industries exclusively when possible. In erecting buildings, let us all say: "Colorado brick and building materials are good enough; Colorado made bank fixtures are the best of any; Colorado printing and lithographing are the most satisfactory. In fact, nothing made outside of Colorado is quite as good as home made goods." Why not adopt as our motto: "Colorado products for Colorado bankers, first, last and always." It is because I realize the prosperity this policy, if followed by all the people, would bring to our banks by keeping millions of dollars at home which now flee away every year, that I join in the old, time-worn chorus.

The Mining Industry

Mining is one of Colorado's greatest industries, and will continue to be for years to come. Metals and minerals taken from the rocks and streams add permanently to the wealth of the world. With our enormous mineralized area this state is one of the greatest mining districts on earth, and the future prosperity of our state depends largely upon keeping up the development of this industry within our borders, in old camps as well as new.

New mining camps can and will be discovered in Colorado just as rich and important as any that have heretofore been brought to light. Shall they be found and developed during our time, or shall they be allowed to lie dormant and undeveloped, hidden and useless until future generations uncover them and reap the riches that lie waiting only to be brought forth to enrich the world, build cities and increase the general prosperity? As leaders in the world of business, bankers should encourage, in every consistent and safe manner, prospecting and further development of mines in this state.

Agriculture and Horticulture

Complying with a request coming from Joseph Chapman, Jr., chairman of the committee of the American Bankers Association on Agricultural Development and Education, your president last April appointed a committee, consisting of G. W. Gordon, Chas. N. Wheeler, D. T. Stone, D. S. Jones and W. B. Mandeville, from this state to attend a conference of representatives from various states to consider matters of agriculture, horticulture, etc. This conference was held at Minneapolis and St. Paul. I am pleased to say that Messrs. G. W. Gordon and Charles W. Wheeler did attend, and I will ask them to report briefly to you what was done at that meeting before this convention adjourns.

In this connection I recommend the creation of a permanent committee to the end that this organization may be in line to assist the farmers and fruit raisers in the highest development of these lines of business in Colorado.

D. E. McKINLAY AT SALT LAKE

D. E. McKinlay, surveyor of the port, San Francisco, delivered an extremely interesting and practical address this week at the convention of the American Institute of Banking held in Salt Lake City. He chose for his subject "The Old West and the New." Mr. McKinlay spoke of the desire of every young man to succeed in life, and emphasized the importance of getting started in the right line of endeavor. He also pointed out that the locality in which one pursues his career largely is instrumental in determining whether or not one shall make a success. He believes, like Horace Greeley, that the West is an excellent place for the realization of this laudable ambition. He told of the various events in connection with the settlement of that section of our country, and of the inducements held out by the government inviting immigration. Lands which in those days were sold as low as one dollar per acre now are worth several hundred dollars. In 1850 congress passed a law, by means of which swamp lands were ceded to the various states in which they were situated, and in turn were sold at a low figure to purchasers, which had the effect of placing a low value upon the natural resources of the country, a condition which prevailed for a number of years. This was, however, effective in stimulating immigration. Settlers endeavored to enlarge their holdings by fraudulent practices, and large corporations secured tremendous holdings contrary to law. As the population extended competition for the acquisition of land became keener, and the government began to take increased interest in the public domain. In 1902 congress passed a reclamation law, and with it the days of the old pioneers were terminated, because the former methods were changed and new conditions created. Since the opening of the twentieth century the policy of the government in regard to its public lands has become almost the complete antithesis of that followed through all the previous years of its history. The tendency now seems to be to retain government ownership of all the remaining public domain, a policy which is expressed by the term "conservation," a doctrine which has its opponents as well as its advocates. Conflicting ideas in regard to this subject now are receiving the deepest study and consideration by the statesmen of the nation, and it is hoped that harmony will result from their deliberations. Mr. McKinlay also told of the work of reclamation which now is going on, and of the wonderful effect of irrigation in building up the resources of the West. He believes that the right kind of labor is necessary to assist in its progress and development, and that if the young men of to-day will come West with the same spirit which was possessed by their forefathers, there is abundant opportunity for success. He also said in part:

What is the "Old West" and what the "New?" With the rapidly shifting center of population in the United States caused by the drifting of great masses of the people westward, the line of demarkation between the old West and the new is changing every hour, and every movement is toward the setting sun. The annexation of the Hawaiian Islands in 1898 permanently fixed the status of that group as American territory forever, and the occupancy of the Philippine archipelago swept the sovereignty of the American Republic seven thousand miles westward beyond the Golden Gate into the very time-crusted bosom of old Asia. The organization of the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands in accordance with American principles of government, and the establishment there of the institutions, liberties, and opportunities secured by the founders of the American Republic to American citizens has merged the "West" of America into the Far East. The conquering, aggressive, dominant spirit of the West having circumnavigated three-quarters of the globe, already is beginning to reincarnate and revivify the frozen civilizations of by-gone ages.

When one stands upon the pinnacle of the present hour and looks backward over the last thirty years of western development, one is filled with amazement that so much progress could be made in such a short period of time. In such a retrospection one sees the valleys and tablelands of western America, which only yesterday were the grazing grounds of great herds of buffaloes and antelopes, rapidly changed into vast stretches of cultivated fields of wheat, alfalfa and corn. He sees the warlike tribes of Indians, pushed from their hunting grounds and reservations, gradually fading into the shadows of the things that were. He beholds rocky and mountainous districts, once the home of the grizzly bear and the mountain goat, turned into the pastures of multitudes of sheep and countless cattle; the old placer mines of the argonaut abandoned, and instead he hears over the valleys and streams and hillsides the reverberations of the steam whistle and the roar of the pounding stamp mills. He sees the primitive sawmill in the heart of the primeval forest transformed into the great factory in which almost every product that can be manufactured of wood is produced for the markets of the world. He beholds on every side intense activity developing, and the rush of aggressive industry. Everywhere he sees great cities springing into existence and becoming commercial centers of importance within a decade, and even the mighty convulsions of nature set at naught by the enterprise of the dominant, forceful men of the West, as a new city rises out of the smoke and vapors of an earthquake shock and a disastrous fire with such energy and splendor as to become the wonder and admiration of the world. Within the last few years railroad lines have penetrated to remote and hitherto inaccessible districts of the various states, building up towns and cities and connecting them with general tides of trade and industry. The waterfalls of the mountains are being harnessed so effectively that the cheapest kind of power known to industry can be furnished for the promotion of manufactures, for the lighting of cities, and for the transportation of products. And yet, with all this marvelous development within the last thirty years which is apparent throughout the West, from Alaska to Mexico, it may be said with truth that the foundation stones of future and permanent power and strength of civilization have just been laid. To-day the center of population of the United States is considered to be somewhere near the center of the state of Illinois; but the center of the territorial area of the United States on the American continent, when we take into consideration Alaska, is one hundred miles westward beyond the coast-line of the Pacific. Only a few years ago the greatest difficulty experienced by the producer and the farmer of the Pacific Coast was the difficulty in marketing his product. The country being sparsely settled and lines of traffic few, if his production was great, a large portion of his product must be sent to the eastern markets. The rates of freight over the transcontinental railroads being necessarily very high, it was sometimes impossible to market the bulky products at a profit. But even this obstacle to the development of the western country is being removed, in a large measure, in the opening of the Pacific Ocean by the construction of the Panama Canal. Lines of railway, both steam and electric, in almost every state across the Great Divide and bordering upon the Pacific are being constructed, so that the products of the farms, the orchards, and the fields, which are being cultivated everywhere, may be taken to the seaboard and from there trans-shipped to the markets of the eastern states and Europe. The opening of the Panama Canal, taken in conjunction with the development of the Mississippi River and its tributaries to the navigable capacity for ocean-going vessels will, without question, stimulate every form of western industry by reason of the cheapening of freights, and with this cheapening of freights must come greater profit to the producers, and less cost to the consumers of the necessities of life.

The next step forward must be the serious consideration by the people and the congress of the United States of measures that shall result in the restoration of the American merchant marine. The imports of the United States to-day amount to over one billion two hundred million of dollars annually, while the exports amount to nearly two billions of dollars, nearly one-half of which is food and raw material for other nations. This vast volume of foreign trade, amounting to over three billions of dollars, is to-day carried across the seas in foreign vessels, only six vessels to-day on all the seas of the world ply between the ports of the United States and foreign nations carrying the American flag; while for the carrying of freight on the vast volume of American imports and exports, the people of the United States pay annually over three hundred millions of dollars. It is the policy of the best thinkers of the country of to-day, both of the East and the West, to give government assistance in some manner to American steamship companies, so that at least a reasonable share of the vast profits of the ocean carrying business shall be saved to the people of our own land, to the end that our industries may remain active, and American labor continue to be employed at the best rate of wages paid to any class of laborers upon the earth.

These ideas and ideals are not dreams or vague prophecies. We see in the opening of the Panama Canal the realization of over four hundred years of effort, for Columbus sailed from Spain not for the purpose of finding a new continent or strange islands, but rather to find a short water route to the coasts of Asia, so that the trade and commerce of Europe with the Asiatic coasts might be improved by the shortening of water routes and cheapening of freights. And we see in the growing importance of the cities and harbors of the Pacific Coast the beginning of the fulfillment of the prophecy of Baron von Humboldt, who, over a century ago, while exploring Central America, in writing to his friend, Goethe, the German poet, said that the time would come when the Pacific Ocean would sustain the same relation to the United States in commerce and trade that the Mediterranean sustained to the empires of Greece and Rome in the days of their power and glory.

We see in the reclamation and irrigation systems of the interior and the consequent development incident to their construction, the shifting of vast masses of population into those fertile regions; and we recognize in the rapid development and progress of Alaska the wisdom of the statesman Seward, who in 1867 purchased that important territory for a sum of money less than is taken from one of her mines in a year's time. But Seward was an optimist, and saw that in time Alaska would become one of the most valuable possessions of the United States, and his wisdom and statesmanship have been fully justified by the fact that within the last ten years Alaska has turned out from her mines and forests and fisheries more than three hundred millions of dollars of wealth, and that volume is increasing every year as the country is developed.

In effect, the people of the West are beginning to understand that the Pacific Ocean, and the countries surrounding that great sea, must become the most active area of commercial and industrial operations upon the globe. The Asiatic nations, numbering over eight hundred millions of people (more than half the people in the world), are at last throwing off the sluggishness and lethargy of thousands of years of inactivity and conservatism and beginning to realize the significance of twentieth century civilization. And in the midst of all this stands the United States, particularly the western part of it, situated in a position of strategy and command in the very center of the world operations of the future, and in the direct channel of trade between Europe and Asia.

These influences, coupled with those that already have been detailed, must make the West and the Pacific seaboard in time the dominant portion of our country, and open wide the door of opportunity to tens of millions of American citizens yet unborn.

UNCLAIMED BANK BALANCES

The government of Canada in its official return states that in the Canadian banks there are unclaimed balances amounting to $676,147, unclaimed dividends of $3,659 and bills of exchange of $49,851. The largest amount unclaimed is in the Montreal city and district bank, $122,071; the Bank of Montreal, $119,000; the Bank of British North America, $93,000; the Bank of Commerce, $58,000; the Bank of Hamilton, $52,000, and the Union Bank, $41,000. Many of the other banks have smaller amounts. It is now thought that the government will absorb these balances, as the probability of claimants coming forward is very slight.

FRIDAY Morning, September 13th, will be "Farmers day" at the Detroit convention. A committee of the association, headed by Mr. Chapman, will have charge of the meeting.

SECRETARY COLBURN will start his special from California to Detroit with twenty-five bankers and their wives. They will join the Minneapolis and St. Paul delegates and all will reach Chicago in time to get aboard of the big Chicago special.

IT pays to advertise. The William George (Brookline Farm) sale of Berkshire hogs drew many banker-farmer buyers. Among them H. P. Hilliard, St. Louis, and J. F. Edgerton of Milwaukee.

SIXTY-ODD head were sold at an average price of $96.00 per head, a record it is said. Buyers came from all adjoining states and a large purchaser was the Delaware State Experiment Station at Newark.

FROM all reports the friends of O. L. Heiser of Lexington, Ill., seem to be making good headway toward landing Mr. Heiser in the treasurership of the Illinois Bankers Association.

MR. HEISER'S Bank has a surplus in excess of its capital which is a satisfactory reference in Illinois or any other banking circles.

ONE TREE (Iowa) Savings Bank on August 3d doubled its capital, going from twenty to forty thousand capital. The assets are nearing half a million, which justifies the increase.

CASHIER.

The Citizens Bank was organized at Prairie Grove, Ark., this week with stock of $30,000, one-half to be paid up. Dr. W. H. Mack is president, W. W. Carl vice-president and W. M. Collier secretary and treasurer. Plans are being made for a new building.

matter by addressing Secretary Plant of that organization. This bank is being founded to cater directly to farmers at lower than present rates of interest for their accommodation. It is more nearly like similar institutions in European countries than anything which yet has been established in America.

CLIFFORD DEPUY, editor and publisher of the Northwestern Banker at Des Moines, has made a reservation on the Chicago special for the Detroit convention. Iowa has taken about twenty reservations, and will not be lost in the shuffle.

SECRETARY WILLIAM B. HUGHES of the Nebraska Bankers Association has made a reservation on the Detroit special, and at his convention this week intended to care for the welfare of the Nebraska bankers who might wish to join the Chicago bankers on the trip across Michigan.

AN attempt will be made to have H. P. Beckwith of Fargo organize a glee club on the way over to Detroit. The Chicago members of the committee having this matter in charge say they will not allow him to sit down at the banquet table until he has shown some interest in the matter.

EVERYONE will be pleased to learn that the state of Washington has completed its quota of three hundred members in the American Bankers Association, which will qualify W. D. Vincent of Spokane for membership on the executive council. Mr. Vincent was elected tentatively when the state was short about forty members. Everyone who knew him predicted that the three hundred would come across. He will be an enthusiastic and welcome member on the Big Council.

PRESIDENT B. F. HARRIS of the Illinois Bankers Association has had a summary of his season's addresses on agricultural subjects printed in pamphlet form. Copies may be had by addressing him at Champaign, Ill. Mr. Harris delivered these talks at six of the most important state conventions held this year, and had invitations to deliver them at a number of others which it was impossible for him to attend.

THERE are among the number eligible to sit at the Council Club banquet at Detroit a few dissenters from the present tendency of including "ladies and other guests." Some of these gentlemen are serious-minded about such matters, and believe that the club should adhere strictly to its original policy of restricting attendance to ex-officials and ex-members of the council, and the discussions to matters connected with the general welfare of the American Bankers Association.

IT is not altogether unlikely that this famous organization without either constitution or by-laws will take steps at Detroit, or soon after, to define for the future its field of operation. Many believe that the dinners should be of a more or less informal character, and follow somewhat those of the Gridiron Club at Washington. Think it over and be prepared to take part in the discussion if it shall come up at Detroit.

SO "Fred" Hoopes (J. W.) has gone to Galveston, to be cashier and vice-president of the City National. It was coming to him. We looked these many moons to see some big central reserve bank pick up the prize.

SECRETARY HOOPES has a popularity all his own. Known and is known by every banker in Texas. For the past year he has been at the head of the Secretaries' Section, A. B. A., and, of course, served on the Big Council.

KEEP your eye on the City National and you will note that the tawny-haired Austinite will make good in no uncertain way.

PROBABILITIES are that there will be not less than four names considered at Detroit for the chairmanship of the council. In order of priority of mention in the financial papers they are Ledyard Cogswell of New York, Joseph Wayne, Jr., of Pennsylvania, T. A. Davis of Ohio and Sol. Wexler of Louisiana. There may be others, and but few organizations could supply so many eligibles.

SUPPOSE the new order of things as proposed in the McNider amendment should be adopted at Detroit. True, it only prevents the chairman of the council from going to the vice-presidency within one association year, but in time, perhaps at once, it would apply to other officers. The nominating committee naturally would pass away.

THEN we would have candidates in multiple for all the offices. It will boom the financial papers paying attention to such things, but will it help or hurt the association?

ARE we better off with experienced men always in charge, or will it be better to declare an open field for all the officers? Is the association to be bull-moosed or to go on in its present conservative but progressive way?

THE rumor that the present secretary of the Illinois Bankers Association (don't laugh) is to ask for a one thousand dollar increase in his wages has brought out several gum shoe candidates for the position.

TRUE, the revenues of the office have not kept pace with the expenses and the efficiency of the office hasn't broken any records, but—what's the use?

IF for any reason the retroactive forces could control things so as to spend all the money for salaries, "etc.," there would be this much less to help on the supervision, and other movements.

THINK it over before you go down to the post-season convention at Peoria so that you will not be taken unawares.

MICHIGAN is to rearrange her group districts to conform to new transportation facilities, many of them electric. Constant revision in such matters is going on in many of the states.

SECRETARY (Mrs.) H. M. BROWN will be in Parlor "B" in charge of Michigan headquarters at the Ponchartrain during the Detroit convention. Parlor "B;" Parlor "B" rown. You can't forget the place.

ILLINOIS members of the A. B. A. have been called in special session at the Detroit convention to elect two members of the executive council, a state vice-president and a member of the nominating committee, the call being issued by William A. Heath, acting vice-president for the state.

THE meeting will be held in the hall on the 12th floor of the Ponchartrain at 9 A. M., Tuesday, September 10th. Get up early and be there. Those who have been endorsed and spoken of generally for the places on the council are E. E. Crabtree of Jacksonville and W. T. Fenton of Chicago. Lathan J. Souther has a "hold-over" claim on the vice-presidency, having been elected once, but did not serve, owing to the famous Illinois mixup.

MR. HEATH closes his notice letter with the following: "Illinois has 847 members of the A. B. A. at the date of this call. Fifty-three additional members before August 31st will entitle our state to one more member of the executive council. One year's dues on such new memberships will now be accepted in full payment to September 1, 1913. Cannot you secure one new member?"

OTHER states have turned longer tricks than this; did it this year in Iowa, Washington and most likely in Missouri.

WHAT do our members of the transportation committee think about the efficiency of the official line-up of the Illinois Bankers Association, anyway? It is the only office in tributary territory where the big Chicago-Detroit special has not been mentioned in the official bulletins. Pretty poor for what it costs!

W M. A. HAZZARD of Peoria has been on a vacation up in Michigan. Did he take his rod and line? Oh, no. He took along a huge volume on the buying of commercial paper, meaning, of course, that times are good in the corn belt and that money will be ready for good paper when it comes along.

JOE. INGWERSEN, Clinton, Ia., is going to "motor" to the Detroit convention. He is an Ann Arbor man and will spend a few days browsing around that famous college town on his way over.

C. B. MILLS, Clinton (also "of" several other towns), has felt a touch of the convention fever and is likely to match up with McNider for a "four" table at the Banquet-on-Wheels.

F. D. BRUNDAGE, assistant manager of F. of Knauth, Nachod and Kühne, New York, will have "headquarters" at the Ponchartrain during the talkfest at Detroit.

E. L. MATSON of the Scandinavian-American is back from a summer on Isle Royal. He tells his fellow Minneapolitans that his muscles are sore from landing the big fish he caught. His biggest trout (he says) weighed 18 pounds.

WE hear that Arthur Reynolds of Des Moines has turned down a recent big offer for his services by a big Chicago bank. The people in Des Moines wouldn't stand for it.

THE Des Moines Capital is quoted as saying for Mr. Reynolds that "he has been accorded such cordial support by the stockholders and directors of his bank and by the business public and the growth of the business had been so rapid and satisfactory, that he is loath to leave these surroundings."

CAN you blame him?

BANKING COMMISSIONER B. L. GILL of Texas is "bound" to put a "Blue Sky" law on the books in his state. He was a central figure in the national insurance conference held recently in Spokane.

PRESIDENT JOSEPH CHAPMAN, JR., of the conference of the state bankers associations on agriculture and education, has appointed the thirty state vice-presidents, one from each state represented at the Minneapolis conference.

THEY are: J. W. Wheeler, St. Paul, for Minnesota; C. H. McNider, Mason City, for Iowa; Isaac Lincoln, Aberdeen, S. D.; P. A. Pickett, Leal, N. D.; L. A. Baker, New Richmond, Wis.; R. O. Kaufman, Helena, Mont.; Emery Olmstead, Portland, Ore., and J. W. Clise, Seattle, Wash.

OTHERS on the committee number some of the most prominent active banking officials of their various states. They are: John H. Drakeford, Tuskegee, Ala.; J. Nichols, Pine Bluff, Ark.; G. W. Gordon, Haxtun, Col.; W. E. Bell, Trenton, Fla.; M. T. Albert, Payette, Idaho; B. F. Harris, Champaign, Ill.; C. L. Goodbard, Crawfordsville, Ind.; M. H. Malott,

Banquet-on-Wheels

Under the special arrangement made by the Chicago-Detroit transportation committee, of which Arthur Reynolds is chairman, with the officials of the Michigan Central Railway Company, the train which will leave Chicago for the Detroit convention on Sunday, September 8th, at 10 A. M. will have three large dining cars coupled up in the center of the train. The central diner of the three will seat forty persons, being arranged in tables of four on each side of the aisle. It practically will be impossible for persons to pass through this central car during the time the "banquets" are being served, the space in the center aisle being constricted by the use of the double tables on both sides of the car. Each of the other diners will seat thirty persons so that the "first call" will accommodate one hundred persons. So far as it was possible, the transportation committee has arranged the seating to throw congenial persons together, if not at the same table, in the same car. Preference was given in the arrangement to those accompanied by ladies. Table numbers run consecutively down one side of the aisle so that tables one and six are opposite; so are two and seven; three and eight; four and nine and five and ten. Those whose names are included in the "first call" as arranged at present are:

First Call, Car One

Table 1—Victor A. Roeder and wife, Bellingham, Wash.; H. P. Beckwith and wife, Fargo, N. D.

Table 2—W. A. Heath, Chicago; Miller Weir, Jacksonville, Ill.; John McHugh, Sioux City, Ia.

Table 3—George M. Reynolds and wife, Chicago; Arthur Reynolds and wife, Des Moines.

RALPH VAN VECHTEN ON MONEY SITUATION

Ralph Van Vechten, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial National Bank, in commenting on the general money situation this week said:

"Money continues in very active demand, and rates are now at a 5 per cent minimum on call loans, and from 5 to 5½ per cent on prime commercial paper. The advance is caused by demands incident to the crop movement, and further by the decided increase in the volume of general business. We anticipate that crop movements will be retarded somewhat by reason of the shortage of cars. Considerable grain will be tied up in country elevators and in the hands of the farmers themselves. This would have a tendency to make collections somewhat backward and to prolong the period of close money. Generally speaking, the banks of the West are in a very strong position and will be able to take care of their local demands without calling heavily upon reserve centers, except, of course, that balances will be reduced temporarily, which is only natural at this season, but we do not expect that there will be heavy borrowing on the part of these banks for the reason that they have anticipated the present situation of large crops and are fully prepared to meet it."

HARRIS TRUST SUCCESSFUL BIDDER

The Harris Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago was the successful bidder for the $164,000 water works extension bonds let by the city of Moline, Ill., this week. Its offer was a premium of $1,775 and accrued interest, accepting the bonds at par and paying 4½ per cent interest. The first payment of $14,000 is due in 1917, yearly payments of $10,000 being made thereafter until 1932.

CHICAGO BANKERS ATTEND NEBRASKA CONVENTION

Among the Chicago bankers who attended the Nebraska convention held in Omaha this week are the following: J. Fletcher Farrell, vice-president of the Fort Dearborn National; John R. Washburn and George B. Smith, assistant cashiers of the Continental and Commercial National; B. F. Newhall, assistant cashier of the First National, and Arba Perry, representing the Colonial Trust and Savings.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

THINGS have started over at Detroit. The directors of the Security Trust Company presented to President Wm. Livingstone of the Dime Savings Bank, a big, solid ivory, silver-mounted gavel, with which to preside at the big A. B. A. convention.

MR. LIVINGSTONE promised to use it to call the thirty-eighth annual convention to order. Mr. Livingstone is a director of the Security Trust along with those who made him the handsome gift.

ON Monday morning of this week there were one hundred and sixty reservations for the Chicago-Detroit Special. Before you see this, the two hundred mark will have been passed.

SECRETARY P. W. HALL and W. B. Hughes sent out "urging" bulletins. Hall hoped Iowa would send 200, all by herself, and so she should. A pro-rata turnout would make a big convention.

NO bulletins mentioning the big "Special" and the banquet-on-wheels have been sent to the members of the Illinois Bankers Association. Dry rot or Tommy-rot?

THE New York Central Lines are right in it, both directions, when it comes to the Detroit convention. They have the direct lines in all directions and Vosburg and Barnet value the bankers' annual trips far beyond the immediate money returns. Future business follows satisfactory service under "Special" conditions.

ON Sunday last the "Red Section" went through Chicago, bound for the Detroit convention by way of Yellowstone Park. About one hundred bankers and friends were on board. They all looked happy.

THERE was everything from the pianola to the sanitary wash cloths, from barber to maid.

LEDYARD COGSWELL, the eastern candidate for chairman of the council, was the happiest looking in the lot. It is said that New York never before "agreed on a man" for the place. He must be a crackerjack.

JOHAN F. DISMUKES of St. Augustine, Fla., the boss story-teller of the Everglades, was on board with his whole family.

OTHERS recognized in the throng were W. B. Cardoza, Farmers Loan; Beverly Chew of the Metropolitan Trust, and Frederick Geller, all of New York.

FROM Hartford was Joseph H. King of the Phoenix and close by was W. C. Poillon of the Bankers Trust, New York.

BALTIMORE sent E. L. Robinson of the famous Eutaw Savings and Pell City, Ala., contributed its brilliant raconteur, Mc-Lane Tilton, Jr. There were "many others" too swift for the note book.

THE "White Section" of the bankers' specials will leave New York Saturday morning, September 7th, at 10 A. M. This train will carry many delegates to the Detroit convention and will arrive in Detroit Sunday morning from Buffalo via the new steamer, "City of Detroit III," the arrangements for which have been made by the New York Central lines in order to insure the bankers a delightful trip from Buffalo to Detroit by water.

THIS trip has proved the most popular with the banking fraternity. Over 150 reservations have already been made and as usual is an assured success. A special musical program has been arranged on the steamer which is scheduled to arrive in Detroit at 10 A. M. Sunday morning in order to give the bankers a Sunday morning sail up the Detroit river.

THE "Blue Section" will leave New York at 5 P. M. Sunday afternoon from Grand Central Terminal, going direct to Detroit, arriving there Monday morning at 7:15. This train will be a counterpart of the famous "Wolverine" and is operated for the convenience of George and E. W. Woodruff who will be back from Europe only in time to catch it by taxi, and for the busy man who cannot arrange to make the trip on the "Red" or "White" specials.

IF there is anyone around 11 Pine Street working overtime it is Marian R. Glenn, the librarian. She likes it and has no kick coming. It's one of the weaknesses of genius and she would be black-balled by a labor union.

SHE is building up a reference library and a clippings-file of the greatest usefulness.

When you have to write an address ask her to help find the data. That's her job also.

IF you have a lot of financial clippings or an unused book or two on economics, finance or similar subjects, send them on at once. A friend of ours sent a whole bunch of stuff and following are some extracts from Miss Glenn's reply:

"WE shall be able to make good use of most of the books on financial subjects which you have been kind enough to send for the A. B. A. library, and I cannot better express our appreciation than by saying that they will constitute a valuable addition to our reference resources."

"THIS being the open season for annual reports, I have as yet had no opportunity of deciding whether the fiction falls in the category of the 'erotic, the neurotic or the tommy-rotic,' but a hasty glance at one of the titles suggests it might have filled the request which a modern Eve, aged twelve, made in the library where I once presided as purveyor of popular print, for 'a story where a man and a girl get so mixed up they don't know where they're at.' Perhaps the detective story would have done, upon another occasion, for the small boy who asked me for 'a good story about killing for a married lady.'"

NOW you know what to do with your surplus books and where to get willing, expert help when you may need it.

FOUR women recently have been found "not guilty" by Chicago juries after shooting to death their respective husbands. On the other hand the poor woman who only "threatened" with a revolver a saloon keeper who wouldn't quit selling liquor to her drunken husband was fined $200 and went to the Bridewell for 90 days.

EVEN if you vote for Funk or Dunne for governor, don't forget to put a cross opposite the name of Andrew Russel for state treasurer of Illinois this year. He's the real thing!

ON the Southern Banker Special from Atlanta to Detroit there are 35 reservations, which will be increased at Cincinnati to about 100 persons, including at least 25 Cincinnatians. Haynes McFadden is the Major Domo of the occasion.

HARRY E. WEIL cuts in at Cincinnati as chairman of an entertainment committee to show up the town to the southerners during a short stop-over on Sunday morning, September 8th. There will be the inevitable auto-ride with a real breakfast at the Country Club. Th Big Four will do the rest.

THE southerners are to arrive in Detroit Sunday evening at 7:30 or 8 o'clock. The train will carry bankers from Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Kentucky, Louisiana, Mississippi and other states.

Wm. G. Edens Addresses Trans-Mississippi Commercial Congress

The American people have awakened to the necessity of undertaking a great national enterprise, and one that will be far reaching in its material benefits, and of great historic importance to us as a nation. Your generous invitation to address this important gathering reminds me that to-day the subject of road improvement appeals to every intelligent, patriotic American. Speaking as average citizens, we read with but passing interest of the war-like achievements of the early Romans, and rarely evince a passing interest in the accounts of statesmanship of the men who erected the greatest governmental structure of the world, and one which has served as the foundation for all following governments. The glory of these men, and of their achievements along these lines in the mind of the ordinary man, is but a hazy recollection of lessons unwillingly learned, but every man knows, every schoolboy knows, that there was left by these men of that far distant time, monuments that still stand, and from all appearances will remain everlasting in the form of scientifically built and thoroughly constructed good roads.

The Roman Empire flourished and decayed; the Forum is little more than a memory; of the famous temples many have disappeared; the location of a few are yet marked by crumbling columns, but the Appian Way, and other roads of lesser importance, will remain solid, substantial monuments to the intelligence, the foresight and constructive genius of the Roman road builders, and even crossing to the British Isles we find that about all which remains to remind us that the Romans once invaded Britain, under the leadership of Julius Caesar, is an occasional strip of good road, constructed by the Roman invaders.

We of Illinois, appreciating the benefits that should come from co-operation, already are endeavoring to bring about improved conditions for our people through organized effort. The members of the Illinois Bankers Association present a splendid example of good citizenship in their energetic campaign for national aid in behalf of practical field, farm demonstration work, and their interest as actual owners of the soil, in the scientific study and practical care of its fertility.

The growing of alfalfa, the wonder plant, is an accomplished fact. There seems to be little or no question as to its adaptability to our soil conditions. Our farmers are being urged to cautiously but earnestly grow this crop and thus secure larger net returns from their land. The silo is making its appearance on every prairie farm in our state.

The bankers and educators have joined in an effort to secure at the forthcoming session of our legislature better educational advantages, and our proposed bill will include the teaching of agriculture in all rural schools, as well as domestic science, and in the cities and industrial towns, the introduction of trade or continuation schools and industrial training for the youth of our state, that they may enter upon vocational careers with useful knowledge for practical use in commerce and industry.

How natural when once engaged in the study of agricultural development and education that the subject of good roads should "bob up," and so we find our bankers associa-

President of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association on the national importance of a universal good roads movement, tells of his trip over the prison-labor built roads of Colorado and pays high tribute to Warden Thomas B. Tynan. An eloquent presentation of an important subject by the popular Illinois banker tion has its committee on good roads, and recently has canvassed its 1,500 members as to road conditions; their views as to the best plan to be followed for future improvements.

On September 27th, at Peoria, Illinois, will occur our first state-wide good roads convention, which will embrace in its membership representatives of every group of citizens in our state interested in this subject. I cannot refrain from telling you of the wonderful experience I have enjoyed the past two weeks inspecting the state prison labor built roads of Colorado, in company with their most interesting and enthusiastic state prison warden, Hon. Thomas B. Tynan of Canon City.

I have driven over several hundred miles of splendidly built roads, both mountain and plain. This example of successful use of prison labor is one worthy of consideration and investigation by the other states of our Union.

More than 400 of 800 inmates of the Colorado state prison are engaged in road making, and during the three years of this policy more than 1,000 miles of good roads have been constructed. I observed the convicts engaged in their daily work, and inspected the camps in which they were domiciled. One cannot help but see the humanizing influence of this outdoor employment of the state's unfortunate wards, and to feel that it is a positive good in the restoration of many to the ranks of citizenship. It has been suggested that in some of our states where we have not been blessed with natural road material, that the time of the convicts, in winter, could be used either at the prisons or at some point where road material could be assembled, in preparing the materials, and in the summer months they could be used on the roads in actual construction work.

The greatest leader of the colored race, since the days of Frederick Douglass, has, I think, wisely led and advised his people to fit themselves for agricultural and industrial pursuits; in the south much of the road building has been successfully done by this class of our citizens.

Another phase of the road making development touches the matter of our natural scenery, and the advertising of its attractiveness to the people of this country. In Illinois our people have been quick to take advantage of the suggestion that we should see America first, and our state government recently has purchased several hundred acres that surround Starved Rock, a beautiful historic spot in the Illinois river valley country.

One of our rural editors in Illinois recently has hit the nail on the head when he said that "Rates should be radically lowered on the farmer's nearest freight line." No leading farmer was ever elected to the legislature who did not feel himself thoroughly competent to "wrangle with such trifling questions as those involved in the immediate reduction of the rates on every railroad in the state." And this he feels perfectly free to do, regardless of the fact that he has no proprietary interest in the railroad. It is true that the farmer does own a road, doing both a freight and passenger business. Generally speaking it is the poorest road that lies out of doors. It is the poorest built road, generally speaking, that ever happened. The road that the farmer owns runs right by his own farm. The freight rates on it are so high as to be an outrage. If the railroads were as poorly built, kept in as poor repair, and charged such preposterous rates, there would be a revolution in this country. And we could have no more farmers' institutes until the farmers got back from the war. This road that the farmer owns is the common, or garden variety, of dirt road, found everywhere in Illinois and in other states. To haul wheat over it for the average distance of less than ten miles costs $1.80 per ton. The rate on European roads, of the same class, is only ten to twenty cents per ton. It costs more per bushel to haul wheat the average distance from an American farm to the railroad station than it does to transport it from New York to Liverpool, a distance of 3,100 miles. Not being a high-browed professor from a state agricultural college, I have forgotten the number of the agricultural department bulletin where I got the figures. But they're right. The unnecessary and extravagant cost of haulage on the poor country roads of this state is one of the heaviest taxes that the farmer pays. In the name of common sense why don't he reduce the freight rates on the dirt roads before he asks for any further reduction on the iron road. He owns the dirt road. He does not own the other. But he only can reduce the rates on his own road by learning from the men who have reduced them—often under compulsion—on the iron road. He can do it by cutting down grades, by building scientific and permanent roadbeds, by building heavier and permanent bridges, by improving his motive power and rolling stock. The King road drag should be as common on the dirt road as the hand car and section gang are on the iron one.

In Iowa, where soil conditions are similar to those of Illinois, they have a compulsory drag road law; this has worked wonders for road improvement in that great agricultural state, and as the dirt road must figure largely in this road story in many of the middle western states it is worth while to encourage the systematic and consecutive dragging of the dirt road.

Some eighteen years ago when General Jacob S. Coxey marched his ragged army into our national capital, he proposed an expenditure by the national government of $500,000,000 through an issue of road bonds to aid in the construction of national highways, and to give work to the unemployed. At that time he was considered an irresponsible crank, and yet to-day members of congress are seriously considering the appropriation of funds to build great national highways, and particularly with reference to the maintenance of roads used by the rural free delivery system.

We all know that the price of lands lying near elevators and transportation facilities always are higher than lands which lie remote from these advantages. Cheap freight rates, and ability to quickly reach the consuming population necessarily regulate these values.

Without regard to our opinions with respect to the capitalization, or their manner of conduct, of the steam railroads of this country, we must take off our hats to the hard headed business common sense that has influenced our leaders in the railroad world in the development of their properties with respect to their ability to earn dividends for their stockholders. We all know that during recent years the geniuses of railroad operation have, by the elimination of grades, straightening of curves, etc., been able to increase their mile tonnage at low cost while the farmer continues hauling his freight over the same hills and bad roads at maximum cost, and over roads that he himself owns and operates.

In opening my remarks I spoke of the Roman road builders—in closing I might suggest that like all great civic improvements, the incentive came from the people, and the needs of the people. The Roman roads were built, not alone because of the desire for good roads on the part of the Roman statesmen, but because of the desire and necessity to furnish the restless populace with an outlet for their energy, and the great working classes with the means to occupy themselves and maintain their families.

For some few years the people of this country have been restless—the aggregation of wealth in the hands of the few—the development of inventive genius along the lines of labor saving devices has deprived hundreds of thousands of the means of earning a livelihood, formerly employed, until to-day the great cities and smaller ones as well are overrun with almost countless thousands of men vainly seeking employment. The people have a right to and are demanding that the state governments and the national government find some means of supplying these people with honest labor.

There has been an attempt to create a "Back to the Farm" sentiment, thus far with indifferent success. I believe that one great factor in the solution of the problems now confronting us is the transferring of a considerable percentage of our urban population to rural. If the good roads question is taken up seriously by state and national governments it would mean the construction of great highways from ocean to ocean, and from gulf to lakes, with a network of interlacing highways calling in their construction for the labor of all unemployed.

It would take to the country the great army of the cities' idle where the great majority undoubtedly would remain to be numbered among the nation's producers, and finally the culmination of the work which is being urged forward by this convention, and would bring about those most sought for conditions—civic improvement, business tranquility and commercial prosperity, and would make us, indeed, not only the greatest nation in a business way, but would make us the greatest nation of happy, contented men and women in all the world.

COLORADO STATE BANKERS CONVENTION

The Colorado State Bankers Association met in Pueblo, August 19th and 20th, there being present some two hundred and fifty Colorado bankers, together with fifty visitors from other states. The meeting was called to order by the president, Frank N. Briggs of the Interstate Savings Bank of Denver. Secretary P. T. Slayback, having recently resigned on account of moving from the state, G. T. Wells of the Denver National Bank, was appointed acting secretary, assisted by H. E. Alderdice, cashier First National Bank of Rocky Ford, and J. F. Maurer, cashier of the Miners and Merchants Bank of Lake City.

The very interesting program was interspersed with many entertaining stunts, which can only be produced by a virile western city like Pueblo. Every delegate and visitor was presented with a handsome card case, enclosing a frank for use on the Mountain States Telephone and Telegraph Company; tickets good on all street cars, complimentary tickets to the various clubs in the city, passes through the steel works, smelters and other large industries in the city, a free auto ride about the city and into the intensive farming region surrounding Pueblo, known as the "Garden Spot of America," and last and greatest of all, a ticket to the buffalo barbecue, containing a coupon drawing card for the drawing which followed the barbecue. This was no doubt the first and possibly the last opportunity many of the hundreds of visitors will have to taste barbecued buffalo.

The buffalo had been procured from the only buffalo herd within the state of Colorado. The head and hide had been beautifully mounted, and the feet made into a tabouret. These were presented by the people of Pueblo to the bankers. When the drawing was conducted, the head, valued at $500.00, was won by Fernando P. Neal, chairman of the board of directors of the Southwest National of Kansas

Short Term Securities

Investment bonds and notes issued to mature in from one to five years are favored by many investors as yielding a somewhat better income than long time obligations.

Such securities, particularly of the larger issues, also usually command a ready market and are not subject to extreme fluctuations in price.

Our recent booklet, "Short Term Securities," met with so favorable a reception that we have been prompted to issue a second edition. This contains brief descriptions of current issues, brought down to June, 1912. We will furnish copies on request.

City; the hide, valued at $300.00, was won by J. S. Gough, president of the First National of Eads, Colorado; and the tabouret, valued at $100.00, was won by W. H. Haley, cashier of the First National of Rifle, Colorado.

Six hundred bankers, their wives and friends, partook of the barbecue and the elegant dinner, composed of Colorado products, such as Rocky Ford cantaloupes, Greeley potatoes, Arkansas Valley vegetables and fruits. The ladies were presented with bouquets of mountain flowers, while the men enjoyed the Pueblo-made cigars in the many cool and shady spots found in the Mineral Palace Park, which was pronounced by President Taft to be one of the most beautiful parks in the United States.

While the program was an exceedingly long one, it was handled with a smoothness and despatch that added to the interest of each paper, enabling the convention to adjourn at exactly the appointed hour. An innovation in the way of an evening session was most successful, able addresses being delivered at this session by Charles G. Dawes, president of the Central Trust Company, Chicago; Detective William J. Burns and Private John Allen, the well-known citizen of Mississippi. Among the out-of-state visitors were well known financiers of New York, Chicago, St. Louis, Kansas City and San Francisco. Many of the brethren from Texas and the other adjoining states graced the meeting with their presence.

The report of the resolutions committee was adopted, providing for a legislative committee instructed to secure the passage of a bill appointing a state commission to pass upon all issues of stocks and bonds offered to the investors of the state; especially is this done with a view of encouraging and assisting agricultural development. It was demanded that the bankruptcy laws of the United States be amended so as to put a stop to abuses. The passage of a law to protect people against the practice of issuing short checks, was endorsed, as were the plans of the monetary commission for a revision of the banking and currency laws. A committee to work out a plan for uniform rates and exchange charges also was appointed.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, H. M. Rubey, cashier Woods-Rubey National, Golden; vice-president, Fred O. Roof, president Minnequa Bank, Pueblo; treasurer, George F. Trotter, assistant cashier First National, Pueblo; secretary, Paul Hardy, cashier Interstate Savings, Denver. Charles S. Haughwout, cashier of the First National of Denver, was elected vice-president of the American Bankers Association from Colorado. Allen Ayers of the Continental Trust Company, Denver, was chosen a member of the A. B. A. nominating committee.

Everyone who attended the convention was enthusiastic in his praise of the royal manner in which the visitors and delegates were entertained by the Pueblo bankers. The splendid program of entertainment provided was the result of much work and thought. The convention closed with a grand ball at the Minnequa Club.

TRADESMEN'S TRUST REPORT

The auditor's report of the Tradesmen's Trust Company issued Tuesday shows a balance of $461,407 on December 18, 1911, for distribution. The costs of the receivership amount to $52,684 and allowances on wage claims and set-offs $8,100, leaving a net balance of $400,622. Payment is provided for $396,321, a 37½ per cent dividend. The auditor's account does not take into consideration the company's realty transactions in Philadelphia and Brooklyn. The receiver has on hand about $200,000 for further distribution. The report in its findings awards to counsel, Samuel M. Clements, Jr., $7,500; to the creditors, $17,000, and to the receiver, $15,000.

America Leads Whole World in Banking Power

President P. L. Hall of the Central National, Lincoln, in his address on "The Record" briefly recounted the origin of our banking system and then said:

"The banking power of a country is the combined capital, surplus, circulation and deposits of its banks. Using these items as a unit of measure, this country stands easily the greatest banking power on earth—yes, the greatest the world has ever seen. Its banking power is greater than the combined banking power of Great Britain, France and Germany, the three greatest commercial powers of Europe. It has forty per cent of the banking power of the entire world; and all this might be said to have been built up in the short space of fifty years.

"Coincident with this growth of banking power has been the growth of the commercial power of the United States with a national credit the highest of the nations of the earth. It has in its treasury vaults a store of gold whose magnitude staggers belief—one billion, three hundred million dollars of gold; the greatest store of gold recorded in all history, and still increasing. If gold is the king of metals and rules the world, then the United States is its castle. This is the record. And now in the fullness of financial and banking achievements we hear our banking system characterized as the worst in existence, and our currency system as obsolete and the acme of superannuation. With every dollar of paper money issued the equivalent of a gold dollar, with a system of banking safeguarded in every way by the watchful eye of law, with a record of loss to depositors unequalled (the crowning glory of its record), we are told it is all a colossal financial failure. We all admit we have need for improvement, but when we stop to think that in all the fifty years the national these banks, every dollar of loss would have been paid and the treasury still would hold a neat sum. It is said the failure of the Bank of Glasgow alone lost to British depositors a sum equal to all the ultimate losses in all the national banks of the United States since the beginning. The record of France, of Germany and other continental powers, all show losses to depositors far in excess of what we have sustained. Canada has a record not to be compared with ours in this respect.

"It is fifteen years since a national bank failed in Nebraska. Only two thousand dollars has been lost to depositors in state banks in Nebraska in eight years, with an average total deposit of sixty million dollars.

"We have had panics in the past and will have them again; we have had periods of depression and will have them again. Against these days of evil all would provide, but every student of finance knows that credit is only a visible expression of confidence and that credit expansion always has a point of danger, beyond which lies loss of confidence, and breakdown of credit. This holds true of individual credit, of collective credit, of national credit. It is a law. In 1907 we were riding on an apparently unparalleled wave of prosperity, and suddenly in October, that year, came a breakdown of overstrained credit, and panic followed. That is the history of every preceding panic—prosperity, overstrained credit, panic. All at once, everybody that had a dollar of money gripped it tight; banks and all did it; after a while confidence came back, and people and banks let go their money and the storm was over. Fortunate were we that the breakdown of credit was largely confined to a limited section. The country as a whole was sound. I am asking you to contemplate what might have been the result with an unsound currency system. Everybody knew there was plenty of money—gold or good as gold—somewhere, and they had faith it would come back. Suppose our currency in times of prosperity and speculation should expand with the expansion of credit; or suppose it based partly or wholly on commercial credit—in time of panic, what would the result be? Better a premium in a crisis on good money, than an abundant depreciated currency. We have heard much since 1907 of the defects of our currency and banking system, and some very radical remedies are proposed. It is said a large fund of money has been raised to influence public opinion to desire a change in our currency and banking system. Tons of literature and able advocates have striven hard to create public sentiment for a change and to convince the public mind that we have the worst banking and currency system on earth. The so-called National Citizens League is the leader in this agitation.

"They have offered a plan that does not propose by a process of evolution to further perfect the present system, but to revolutionize it. While I have great respect for the ability of Senator Aldrich and wish to give due credit to the members of the National Citizens League and especially the estimable gentlemen of Nebraska whose names grace the roster of the league in this state, a careful analysis of the league's literature reveals desires for innovations in our banking and currency systems unsound and undesirable. The proposed Aldrich bill is supposed to embody their desires, although of late they seem inclined to accept something just as good.

"The whole plan, ostensibly proposed to strengthen our banking system and to prevent bank panics, will only weaken the system and precipitate panics. It teems with expansion and inflation, which has always engendered suspicion, fear and panics.

"We all want our banking system improved and strengthened; we all want a provision for an emergency currency that is practical and based on sound economic and financial principles; but we do not propose to revolutionize what we now have to try experiments of this kind.

"However, out of this agitation will come good. Out of the study and discussion aroused will come a further perfecting of our currency supply—but not by creating a money trust or a bank oligarchy—neither will the government prerogative to issue and control the money of the country be delegated to private interests. Nor will the interests of the borrower be made paramount to the interests of the depositor. The borrower is always the breeder of panics. The depositor is the basis of banking power.

"Whatever may be the course of currency legislation or credit legislation in the future, one patent fact stands out boldly in the discussion recently had and that fact is that an attempt is being made to supplant the currency we now have based on government credit, by a currency based on private credit with what is termed an elastic attribute, a term all true economists are unable to apply to any measure of value.

"This in face of the fact that all history in all lands proves conclusively that instead of being a preventive of panics, a currency based on private credit is a breeder of panics. Everywhere it has been tried it can be shown that in answer to the swelling tide of expanding credit and speculation, the quantity of credit money in response to demand increases until credit breaks and the ruin is the greater because of the error of an inflated currency being added to an inflated credit. Money, like every other material thing, can only have stability of value when restricted in quantity and that form of money not questioned in time of storm and stress is the sheet anchor of returning prosperity.

"Nor will the proposition to abolish the present reserve requirements by which banks are compelled by law to keep a certain per cent of their deposits in cash or with approved reserve agents be accepted. The English plan is suggested—one great bank of issue and all the rest of the banks loan even the penholders and depend on the one bank of issue in time of trouble. This, notwithstanding the fact that England under a system much like this has had more disastrous panics and more of them than any other nation.

"Another innovation proposed relates to what might be termed certified overdrafts and easy methods of rediscount. This is intended to lure the small banker and small trader, but is such an absurd proposition for a country so large and with such diversified interests as the United States, that I would apologize to you for mentioning it were it not for the fact that it is apparently offered in good faith by the organized opponents of the present banking system.

"Let our banking system continue to develop with experience as a guide and teacher.

"Let the present currency alone or touch it with careful hands. Provide an emergency currency to be supplied by the government in a direct, simple, but financially sound method, to be used only in time of hoarding and panic, along the lines of the provisions of the present Vreeland law and let this independent banking system go on to a greater fulfillment of its mission. In addition, provide for an international banking system if you will to care care for our foreign trade and commerce and Columbia will rule the financial world."

ROSY CROP OUTLOOK FOR THE NORTHWEST

Ralph Van Vechten, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial National, who, with M. B. Cottree and F. G. Wickett, president and director respectively of Drexel State Bank, recently has returned from an automobile tour of the northwestern states, says that bumper crops for that section of the country, and particularly in wheat, practically are assured. It is estimated that the money value of the crop in Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota and Montana will approximate $522,623,000. Mr. Van Vechten believes that the only problem with which the farmer will be forced to contend is the securing of cars in which to transport his crop. All the crops are in excellent condition. Many bankers who were visited anticipate a rise in land values as a result of the bumper crops.

CAPITAL ONE MILLION DOLLARS

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

The state auditor of public accounts has issued a statement of the earnings and dividends of the 536 state banks in Illinois. The statement shows that while the expenses increased the dividends on capital invested likewise increased over 1911.

The gross earnings per total investment were 5.78 per cent against 5.72; the gross earnings per capita were 63.57 per cent, against 60.20; the net earnings per capita were 19.63 per cent, against 19.37.

Time savings deposits amounted to $282,743.680, an increase in the year of $24,189,513; the number of savings deposits was 915,750, an increase of 83,970, and the average amount on deposit was $308.74, an increase of $2.09.

New Bank at Newman

The First State Bank of Newman opened its doors for business, August 28th. W. R. Hidy, for a number of years cashier of the Champaign National of Champaign and an experienced banker, will be vice-president and cashier. Thomas Shaw is the president and the directors and stockholders include some of the best business men and farmers around the town. Newman is in Douglas county and lies in one of the richest agricultural districts in the state. The town, of about 1,600 people, has paved streets and recently experimented with a stretch of paved country road extending out into the farming district. Land which was considered already "too high" around Newman, as it was selling for about $225 to $250 an acre, took another upward jump when the country pavement was laid and real estate immediately abutting the pavement cannot be purchased for $350 per acre now. It may be that hard roads will pay after all. For years Newman, one of the best small towns in the state, has had only one bank, this being the Newman National. There is plenty of room for the new institution and it will do a good business. The capital will be $25,000. Newman is one of those prosperous little country towns where almost everyone rides in autos.

Hopkins Increases Wheat Yields

Application of phosphorus to certain experimental wheat fields in Illinois under the observation of Dr. C. G. Hopkins, of the University of Illinois, has increased the yields from 14.4 to 28.9 bushels to the acre this year. These experiments have been in progress for several years and each year the increase becomes more marked.

In the spring of 1912 farmers in Illinois abandoned 53½ per cent of their wheat acreage for other crops, and the bureau of statistics reported a promise of only 41 per cent of a normal crop on the remaining acres. Dr. Hopkins has spoken before many conventions of bankers and is well known to many financiers.

Len Small Directs Large Fair

Len Small, president of the First National of Kankakee, federal subtreasurer in Chicago, and lately candidate for the republican nomination for governor of Illinois, is the secretary of the Kankakee county fair, said to be the largest and most important county fair in the state. Thousands of Chicago people go down to Kankakee in autos or by interurban railroad to visit this county fair and the attendance is always large.

County fairs in Illinois, which a few years ago seemed to be dying out, have recently taken on a new lease of life and are as popular as they have ever been. Horse-racing seems to have lost not a whit of its charms and in a way is more desirable than ever. One county fair in Central Illinois listed over 100 race horses besides show horses. Aeroplane flights, automobile exhibits, automobile and motorcycle races and vaudeville stunts have been added to the old attractions of the county fairs in many cases and crowds come in autos, buggies and on trains.

Mr. Small is making a specialty of cattle raising on his fine stock farm near Kankakee and is a banker-farmer of a progressive type.

Like Crop Report of Big Bank

The annual "Crop Report and Review of Business Conditions," published by the Continental and Commercial National of Chicago, is in the hands of country bankers and a summary of this interesting pamphlet has been made by many bankers. The entire country is covered and practically every line of commercial enterprise is reviewed. Bankers find in this annual report of business conditions published by the mammoth Chicago bank a most careful and candid review of fundamental conditions and tendencies and an analysis which can be relied upon. The absence of a political bugaboo is one of the most optimistic parts of the interesting little volume. In the corn belt of Illinois, corn, oats, live stock, high-priced land and automobiles are the things of interest and not political discussions.

Illinois Notes

The Marquette Cement Manufacturing Company of La Salle has set apart from its surplus $180,000 for the purchase of additional machinery. It is said that demands from the farms of the Central West for cement has made it necessary for the plant to increase its quarters. The age of cement for the farm seems to have arrived, as the floors of stables, feeding yards and of garages are made in many cases of this material while posts, foundations and walks are likewise made of cement. The day is rapidly coming when the farmer is building for permanency.

ANSWERS BANK POLICY CRITICS

Announcement is made from Washington that the comptroller of the currency has approved the application for permission to organize the Rogers Park National Bank in Chicago with a capital of $50,000. Only a short time ago the comptroller issued a charter to the Ravenswood National Bank, and it has begun business with $50,000 capital and $10,000 paid-in surplus.

It has been stated at the office of the secretary of the treasury that the Chicago bankers who are criticizing the comptroller of the currency's approval of the application of the Rogers Park National Bank are laboring under a misunderstanding of the situation. Comptroller Murray, it is stated, has not ignored any ruling of the secretary in approving the application for a charter in this case. In fact, there has been no actual ruling by the secretary, the law itself being explicit with regard to the amount of capital stock a bank must have. The law provides that in cities of a certain size the capital stock must be at least $200,000; but there is a provision that "in places" of 50,000 population the capital stock may be as low as $50,000. The treasury department, on the advice of the solicitor of the department, who made a direct decision on a case of similar character, holds that "places" may mean parts of an incorporated city which formerly had a municipal identity of their own, Rogers Park being so considered.

NEW OFFICERS AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF BANKING

With the selection of Richmond, Va., as the meeting place for 1913 and the election of officers for the ensuing year, the convention of the American Institute of Banking held at Salt Lake City, Utah, closed last Friday. Byron W. Moser of St. Louis was given the presidency by acclamation, no other candidate having been advanced for the honor. Harry V. Haynes, of Washington, D. C., though not present at the convention, was elected vice-president, Harry S. Smale, of Chicago, was elected secretary, and Irwin L. Bourgeois, of New Orleans, was elected treasurer, all by acclamation. No other names were presented.

Q. B. Kelly, former president of the Salt Lake Chapter, was given a place on the executive council of the national institute in the only contest that developed in the convention over the national officers. Robert H. Bean, of Boston, and T. R. Durham, of Chattanooga, also were elected to the council, there being three vacancies to be filled by the institute at large. At a meeting of the council after the convention had adjourned, L. H. Woolfalk of Seattle, and C. W. Allendoerfer of Kansas City, were elected to the council as representatives of the Fellows of the institute. The Fellows are those members holding certificates of graduation in the courses of the institute. First and second prizes given annually by the American Institute of Banking for essays were awarded at the national convention here to-day. Victor S. Palmer, of San Francisco, gained first honors and the second prize went to Leo Shaperer, of Portland, Ore. The essays were upon a system for analysis of incoming transit items described by number instead of name.

ARBA PERRY RETURNS FROM WESTERN TRIP

Arba Perry, representing the Colonial Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, has just returned from an extended trip through the West, where he was present at the conventions of the Colorado and Nebraska bankers. Mr. Perry says that conditions in that section of the country never were better. He estimates that the money value of the crop in Colorado alone will approximate two hundred millions. Sugar beet growing is quite an industry in that state. It is likely that that crop alone will amount to between three and four millions this year. The irrigation districts in Colorado in particular are very successful for the reason that the land is owned and occupied by people who farm it themselves, and is not bought up by speculators. Mr. Perry says that everywhere he went the general impression seemed to be that politics will have absolutely no effect whatever upon the general situation. He believes that the country is about to enter one of the greatest eras of prosperity ever known in its history, and that if people do not make money within the next few years the fault will lie with them. A strong feeling of optimism prevails throughout the entire West, as the bumper crops naturally will be reflected in increased profits to all business and industrial enterprises, and it is believed that the banks will receive their full share.

Mr. Perry says that there were large attendances at both the Colorado and Nebraska conventions, and that the addresses and entertainments furnished were of the very highest order. Much useful information was taken away by those in attendance.

BUILDING OWNED BY THE BANK

MILWAUKEE

WISCONSIN

Custom and law provide a three days' rest for Milwaukee bankers next week, comprising Sunday, Labor Day, and primary election day. The banks closed Saturday noon, therefore, not to reopen until Wednesday morning. Confusion in the laws providing for primary election day closing necessitated the calling of a special meeting of the Milwaukee Bankers Club on Wednesday noon when legal talent was brought to bear in solving the difficulty. The 1909 primary election law demands the closing of places of business on primary election day, while the law passed at the last session of the legislature stipulates only that they shall close at noon. It was found that there was nothing in the last enactment repealing or affecting the earlier ones, so the Milwaukee bankers decided to take no chance and close for the entire day Tuesday.

To the A. B. A. Convention

Fifty-four Wisconsin bankers have signed for reservations on the Wisconsin Bankers Association special to the A. B. A. convention at Detroit. The train will leave Milwaukee Monday morning, September 9th, at 7:15 o'clock. Secretary George D. Bartlett of the association expects that tardy Wisconsin bankers and Minnesota delegates will augment the number to more than 100.

To Save Collection Charges

Heavy deposits will be made in Milwaukee banks by Philadelphia trust companies if the reports that the latter are to open accounts here and in other western cities to save collection charges aggregating large sums annually, are true.

"There are no set rates for collection here as in New York," said President Oliver Clyde Fuller of the Wisconsin Trust Company. "Collection courtesies are still a matter of reciprocal relations between banks. The action of the New York clearing house in fixing a standard rate several years ago led to the opening of many accounts in Philadelphia where no such regulations exist. Although I have no authoritative report of this recent action on the part of eastern banks, it is not unnatural that they should do something of the sort."

Milwaukee Notes

Milwaukee delegates to the meeting of the American Institute of Banking at Salt Lake City, Utah, last week are making a tour of the Pacific coast before returning home.

The Kneeland-McLurg Lumber Company of this city has increased its capital from $50,000 to $1,400,000, following the purchase of the John R. Davis Lumber Company, Phillips, Wis. The newly acquired holdings of the Milwaukee concern include two mills and 56,000 acres of timber land. President D. M. Kneeland says that the company expects to produce 50,000,000 feet of lumber a year.

Wanted to Buy a Motorcycle

A forged check, signed in the name of the Milwaukee Oil & Supply Company and made out to the Germania National Bank, was the tender with which a stranger attempted to purchase a motorcycle from a prominent Milwaukee dealer this week. The dealer became suspicious and called the bank but the stranger disappeared minus check and motorcycle during the telephone conversation.

Concerning Wisconsin Banks

The Rock County Savings & Trust Company, Janesville, incorporated this week for $50,000. Incorporators are A. P. Burnham, C. S. Jackman and F. H. Jackman.

The articles of incorporation of the Begium State Bank were also approved this week. Capital is $15,000 and the incorporators include N. Hubing, Frank Pauly and F. J. Witmeyer.

The State Bank of Emery has increased its capital from $15,000 to $25,000.

TRANS-MISSISSIPPI CONGRESS MEETS IN SALT LAKE CITY

At the first day's session of the Trans-Mississippi Commercial Congress in Salt Lake City this week, A. C. Trumbo, president of the congress, said that good roads are effective in securing for city people the advantages of fresh air, and for rural people the benefit of church, school and social advantages equivalent to those enjoyed in the cities. William G. Edens of Chicago also talked on the subject of good roads. He traced to bad roads much of the cost of transportation and the expense of living. He believes that the employment of convict labor not only would make better roads, but better ex-convicts.

¶ This Bank, being at the logical center of Wisconsin banking activity, and having an exceptional list of State and Foreign correspondents, offers its services to conservative Banks with the assurance that such a connection will be of mutual advantage.

LIPPINCOTT'S FOR SEPTEMBER

The new Lippincott is out for September and continues to be the best buy for the money.

The September Lippincott's table of contents proves a strong plea for the diverting quality of American fiction. The complete novel is "The Ranch of the Blue Sea," by J. W. Muller. This is the first long story by a writer whose short-stories have brought him rapidly to the front during the past few months.

"Beautiful Sebastiana," a short novelette by Marie Van Vorst, is a story of love and adventure during the great Sicilian earthquake. "Wooing Dorothea," by Jessie A. McGriff, is an Atlantic City love story of an original type. Other noteworthy short stories are "The Movable Feast," by Hulbert Footner; "Sanctuary," by John Fleming Wilson; "Seventy Times Seven," by Lizette Woodworth Reese; and "In the Kingdom of Not-in-the-Least-Bit-Like-it," by Kate Masterson. The "Short-Story Masterpiece" is "In Exile," by a Russian writer, Anton Chékhov. As usual, there is an introduction by the editor.

"A Plebe's Life at West Point," by W. S. Sample, is funny and interesting. Mrs. La Salle Corbell Pickett writes of Edgar Allan Poe under the title of "The Poet of the Night." Edward Sherwood Meade, Ph.D., contributes a financial article on "The Securities of Public Service Corporations." In the "Ways of the Hour" department the following subjects are treated entertainingly and succinctly: "Compensation for False Imprisonment," by Ellis O. Jones; "Muck-raking," by W. B. Blake; "Those Who Travel," by W. J. Lampton; "The Fly," by Edmund Moberly; "What Fame Brings to a Popular Diva," by Robert Grau; and "Physical Examination of Motorists," by F. M. Bogan. Churchill Williams conducts the automobile department. "Twentieth Century Travel," while E. S. Meade answers questions on financial subjects in the department "Investments."

OUT-OF-TOWN VISITORS

Among the out-of-town bankers who were in Chicago this week are W. G. Raymond, cashier of the Security National, Oklahoma City, James P. Roach, representing the American Exchange National Bank of New York, and W. L. Buechle, vice-president of the Southwestern National Bank of Commerce, Kansas City.

St. Louis

Southwestern reserve city news and gossip
—Special correspondence concerning also
the tributary territory, by J. Vion Papin

St. Louis, Aug. 28th.—Bankers here report a continued excellent demand for credits, with both city and country figuring in the list of borrowers. Rates hold firm on all classes of loans, and there is little difficulty for bankers to place their available funds, being at the same time able to pick and choose to some extent, which happy state of affairs has not been present for a long while. Shipments of currency during the week were heavy, and are steadily increasing. The volume of shipments to the extreme Southwest were heaviest, the Houston territory taking a goodly quantity. The outlook for fall trade continues to brighten, and sales since the first of this month are way over those of the corresponding period a year ago, or, in fact, for a decade or more. Leading wholesale concerns report great droves of buyers, the majority of whom have large orders to place. So far as crops are concerned, the issue is past doubt, and basing their purchases on prospects, the country merchants are likely to fill the holes which have been opening during the past few seasons of business depression. A large percentage of these buyers are generally in the market before this, but this year they have been disposed to wait until such a time as would enable them to foretell with reasonable certainty the outcome of crops in their several territories. That prospects are fine is evident from the character of their buying. Deposits are holding up reasonably well, in fact better than anticipated. Discount rates range in the extremes between 5 and 6 per cent, with most of the accommodations being granted toward the major figure of the range.

Distinguished Representation

The Third National of St. Louis will have the distinction of being represented at the Detroit convention of the American Bankers Association by an ex-president and a reigning head of that organization. Charles H. Huttig, who is slated to head the association, is president of the Third National. He will be at Detroit representing his institution, and incidentally attending to a few affairs connected with the association at large. F. O. Watts, vice-president of the Third National, who was formerly president of the American Bankers Association, will also be on hand early, representing his bank. In addition to these two gentlemen, high in the councils of the national body, the Third National will send Richard Hawes, who is in direct line of succession for presidency of the Missouri Bankers Association, as he is now secretary of the latter organization. Representation by this triumvirate would be a fair distinction for a metropolis, much less a single national.

Huge Crops Are in the Land

On all sides one hears talk of huge crops. The extensive plans for their movement and financing is the chief topic of conversation among financiers, railroad men and the business community generally, and incidentally this talk is like so much sweet music to bankers and others interested in prosperity. Advices from the entire territory tributary to St. Louis indicate that greater facilities will be required for the agricultural needs than ever before. Already fears are being entertained of car shortages and lack of storage room. For example, an Oklahoma banker, who was in St. Louis on business this week, delivered himself as follows: "In Oklahoma the question now is not one of production, but of storage. A month ago we were wondering if Oklahoma was going to produce a good harvest of autumn crops. To-day we know that production is in immense quantity; this fact is assured. What is worrying farmers is whether or not they are going to find storage for such bumper yields. The crop of feedstuff will fill every silo, corn crib and hay shed in the state, and then some. Many farmers will feel the pinch of lack of preparedness to care for their feedstuff, which will be several times the volume produced last year. Many farmers are utilizing the short period between the end of cultivation season and the beginning of harvest to erect additional storage. Oklahoma will not have to pay Illinois and Iowa $20,000,000 for feed another year."

Fruit Yields Tax Facilities

According to representatives of refrigerating lines operating in Texas the production of peaches in that state will be ten times as large this year as in 1911. Conservatively estimated the crop is placed at 8,000 cars, or 3,200,000 bushels. The movement of the Texas melon and fruit crop thus far this season has taxed the railroads to their utmost, and all the big systems in that state have materially increased their equipment for coping with the situation. Similar conditions exist elsewhere in the Southwest. Indications right now point to a record apple crop in Missouri and Arkansas, that is in the Ozark regions of those two commonwealths, and the peach yield and output of plums and other fruits will far surpass that of 1911. The same is true of roots and vegetables generally. An expert in that special branch states that the cucumber crop in southwest Missouri and Arkansas this year would be large enough to feed pickles to the United States and Europe for the entire season. The Colorado-Utah fruit crop of 1912 will be at least twice as large as a year ago. It is estimated that on the lines of the Denver and Rio Grande and Western Colorado railroads alone there will be between 9,000 and 10,000 cars of fruit.

Tax on St. Louis Exchange

A press dispatch from Philadelphia states that every check, note and draft dated "St. Louis," which may hereafter be deposited in any trust company of the Quaker City will be taxed 3 per cent of its face, plus three days' interest at 6 per cent for collection. The step, according to the dispatch, has been made necessary by the rigid enforcement of a new clearing house rule. To offset this arbitrary tax the trust companies, not members of the clearing house, resorted to two expedients. The first was to charge all deposits a minimum of $1 a month for carrying each account; the second, to pay no interest to depositors on average balances under $500. Now it is proposed to open reciprocal accounts at all strategic points in the United States, St. Louis included, and to forward all available checks direct to such trust companies for collection, with resulting saving to both companies, if not immediate benefit to individual depositors concerned.

Tower for Commonwealth Building

As part of the nearly completed plans for the new Commonwealth Trust building, at Broadway and Olive Street, is a fourteen-story tower. The building proper will be eighteen stories, and with the tower addition, the structure will be the highest west of New York. Wrecking of the old building is about complete, and work on the new foundation will begin in September.

Banking Resources Enormous

The statement of John E. Swanger, bank commissioner of Missouri, which has been just issued, shows marked prosperity in the state, in so far as banking figures can be taken as a barometer. It is based on the call issued on June 14th. At the time of the call there were 1,364 financial institutions in the state, of which thirty-one were private banks, 1,147 incorporated banks, fifty-two trust companies and 134 national banks, with resources aggregating $831,137,492. When the individual deposits, time certificates, demand certificates, cashiers' checks and savings deposits were added it was found that there was held in the banks and trust companies $449,593,973 subject to call by depositors, which is equal to $136.51 per capita for the population of the state. These figures do not include the money on deposit in postal savings banks, and incidentally the report demonstrates that the federal savings banks have in no wise injured the banking business in the state, as the per capita of savings deposits is larger than a year ago. The gain in savings deposits is about 17 per cent over the figures shown last September, when the wheat money was in. During the same period reserves held by banks increased on an average of 1 per cent.

Railways Earnings Decrease

A statement of the earnings of the United Railways Company, which controls all the surface lines of St. Louis, for the first seven months of 1912 shows a decrease of $65,551 in net as compared with the corresponding period a year ago. The report gives gross earnings of $6,988,825, representing an increase of $146,827 over last year, but the operating expenses and taxes were $4,877,062, which represents an increase of $212,378. The net earnings for the seven months totaled $2,111,763, which with $34,916 additional from other sources makes the total income $2,146,679, from which is taken interest charges aggregating $1,578,000, leaving a surplus for seven months of $568,671, a decrease of $29,877.

IMPROVED STYLE CHECK JOURNAL

The Germania National of Milwaukee is using a style of check journal which they consider an improvement over the check journals heretofore used. It shows a total of each individual account, the aim of which is to save time and space in posting—it is necessary to post only the totals of accounts.

The check journal is designed for use with a special adding machine. The Germania National uses a machine with two sets of adding wheels which act independently of each other, like two distinct machines under one keyboard. One set of adding wheels accumulates the totals added on the other set, or if desired, the machine can be used for two separate kinds of figures at the same time, getting separate totals.

Here is how they use the new check journal: The checks first are sorted into individual accounts, and a journal sheet of five or six columns is inserted in the paper carriage of the machine just like a sheet in a typewriter carriage. The items of the first account then are listed consecutively on the first set of adding wheels, and a total of the account is taken. The machine prints the total and at the same time automatically transfers it to the other set of adding wheels to be accumulated into the grand total of all checks for the day. The checks of the next account then are listed on the first set of adding wheels, a total printed and transferred as before. Where an account has but a single check, it is not necessary to list it in the usual way. Instead of this, it is listed directly on the second set of adding wheels, the machine printing a sign after it to designate it as an item to be posted.

As stated above, the special advantage of this style of check journal is that it saves time and space in posting. For instance, if there were fifty checks under one account it would be necessary to post only one item—the total. The check journal furnishes the detail.

The Germania Bank does not enter the names of customers on the check journal, but any bank that wants to do so, can, of course, use a little different form and fill in the names. Account numbers can also be filled in opposite the first item in each account on journal sheets like the one used by the Germania National, if desired. This makes it easy to find any item in the check journal. After all the items have been posted from the journal sheets, the sheets are filed in loose leaf binders and are always accessible for ready reference.

NEW STATE BANK FOR CHICAGO

A new Chicago bank, which will be known as the West Town State Bank of Chicago, now is in process of organization. The new institution will be located at Western Avenue and West Madison Street. It is not expected that it will be open for business until the first of next year. The capital stock will be $200,000, and the incorporators are Scott Ransom, William S. Kline and S. E. Thomason.

James H. Cage, banker and ranchman of Stephenville, Texas, died suddenly last week at his home. He left an estate worth $400,000.

Editorial Comment

PRESIDENT TAFT AND THE TRUSTS

When Col. Roosevelt so loudly proclaims President Taft to be the champion of the trusts, it might be advisable for him to give a little attention to a few statistics relating to monopolistic prosecutions. As a matter of fact, President Taft has instituted four more prosecutions under the Sherman anti-trust law than were brought in the combined administrations of the four presidents preceding him. And in addition to this, he instituted proceedings against the steel trust and the harvester trust, two of the combines which Roosevelt refused to prosecute. The bull moose started only forty-four trust prosecutions, while President Taft already has brought sixty-six and he has been in office only half as long, so that as a matter of fact Mr. Taft has been three times as zealous in the matter of fighting unlawful combinations than was Mr. Roosevelt. The above is but further evidence of the absolute lack of consistency manifested by the ex-president in his attacks upon Mr. Taft. He asserts that the president is the friend of special privilege simply because he has endeavored to prevent Col. Roosevelt from acting like a little boy and taking his third piece of pie. If President Taft were willing to let the Colonel foist himself upon the people again, there is no doubt but that Roosevelt could reverse himself and point out the beauties of the Taft administration and its sedulous and fostering care of "my policies" (formerly Bryan's) and promises.

VINDICATION FOR SECRETARY WILSON

All the army of banker-farmers engaged in the agricultural and education uplift will be "glad to know," as the form-letter expert puts it, that Secretary Wilson has been completely vindicated (not whitewashed) by full investigation of the Florida Everglades charges. Those who have followed his distinguished career are not surprised at the outcome. No wrongdoing attaches to the acts of the secretary nor to those of any subordinate. The charges failed completely. In the more than 15 years that Secretary Wilson has presided over the department of agriculture and its affairs he and his assistants have rendered most praiseworthy service to the people of the United States, and if there is one single department of the government which has shown itself to be in the very van of progress, which has year after year of that period shown actual results of profit to the nation through its work, it is the department of agriculture.

We are informed by Messrs. Harris and Chapman, who have given much time to the subjects covered by the department, that there is no section or state of the Union but bears witness to the efficiency of the department in promoting the interests committed to its care, and much of the progress made through the various state and local associations engaged in diffusing agricultural information and encouraging to advanced methods of cultivation has been owing to the active cooperation of the national officials. Wilson has decided to retire on March 5th, next year, and he will carry with him the good will of the people of the United States and the confidence of all those who know him. It was fitting that the most bountiful of all the years of agricultural production in the United States should be the one to close his official term, bearing testimony, as it were, to the excellence of the work he has done for the interests of the planters, farmers and all other cultivators in the republic. What a "card" he will be for the next agricultural conference at Kansas City—and at any state convention which has a foresighted secretary who can get him. He is genuinely interested but heretofore has lacked the time.

COLONEL ROOSEVELT AND THE STANDARD OIL COMPANY

Mr. Roosevelt appears to be quite indignant at the insinuation that the Standard Oil Company contributed $125,000 to his campaign fund in 1904, which, it is alleged, was quite acceptable to him, and that a further donation of $150,000 was solicited. He answers this grave accusation by producing copies of letters and telegrams which he says he sent to Mr. Cortelyou requesting that if such a contribution had been received, it be returned and no further money taken. This is a flat contradiction of the testimony of Mr. Archbold before the senate committee and of the statement of Senator Penrose. The Colonel even has gone so far as to say that he does not deny that the money was paid, but that if it was, it was received contrary to his explicit instructions. When Mr. Cortelyou testified recently before the committee on elections, he stated that he had not heard of any contribution by the Standard Oil to Roosevelt's 1904 campaign. The ex-president evidently deemed the matter of vital importance, for he states that he wrote two letters and then sent a telegram requesting the return of the money, and that he was informed that it had been returned. One cannot help wondering why Mr. Cortelyou never heard of any such contribution; in fact, he stated positively that nothing had been received. If Mr. Roosevelt really sent the letters and telegram, why was that fact not brought out in the testimony of Mr. Cortelyou? It certainly could not have hurt the Colonel any, and would have redounded to his credit. But the public hears nothing about them until it actually is proved by the sworn testimony of the man who paid over the money and took a receipt for it, that such a donation was made. And, further, Mr. Archbold states that the money never was returned, but that an additional amount of $150,000 was requested. He says the money was paid over in the middle of September; the alleged letters and telegram were said to be dated the latter part of October. The intervening six weeks constitute the period of greatest expenditure in a national campaign, and it is quite likely that the $100,000 would not last more than a week. Very little wonder, then, that the money was not returned. If the alleged letters and telegram really had been written and sent, the Colonel by making them public would have been possessed of a campaign weapon far more effective than the $100,000, which lasted only a week. It would have enabled him to prove his oft-repeated assertion that the monopolistic corporations endeavor by their predatory wealth to buy men running for office, in order to secure legislation which will enable them further to rob the people. Nevertheless, this astute politician allowed such a golden opportunity to slip by without taking advantage of it. Mr. Archbold has stated that the Standard Oil felt disposed to make the gift because they believed that their interests would be protected much better by the election of Mr. Roosevelt than the other candidates. We wonder what there was in the Colonel's previous record that impelled them to arrive at this decision. Probably it was the half-hearted methods exhibited by him in the matter of trust prosecutions during his first term. When asked if he would be willing to appear before the senate and give his version of the affair, the Colonel petulantly said that the question was absurd; that he already had answered the charge by reading copies of his own communications, of which Mr. Cortelyou does not seem to have had any recollection. He now professes to be greatly disappointed that he will not be permitted to explain to the senate immediately. Time and reflection evidently have been instrumental in causing him to believe that perhaps the question was not so absurd as he thought. His answer to the propounder of such an obviously pertinent query is but further evidence of the vague manner in which he answers all questions having a tendency to injure him to the slightest extent. Mr. Archbold now is a full-fledged member of the Annanias Club; why? Simply because under oath he apparently has told "the whole truth and nothing but the truth," and his veracity has caused Mr. Roosevelt to be discredited in the eyes of the people, whose humble servant he professes to be. It does seem a little ungrateful that the Standard Oil Company should be persecuted so mercilessly during the period which followed; but then, when one takes into consideration the fact that Mr. Roosevelt secured $260,000 from Harri-man and later on called him an "undesirable citizen," and remembers the manifoldly inconsistent attitude displayed by the "Bull Moose" in all matters pertaining to public affairs, the astonishment soon ceases to exist. The public will be interested in learning just what kind of a defense the Colonel will bring forth when he makes his explanation.

The Northwestern National Bank OF MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA

It is especially desirable, owing to the unprecedented volume of grain business in prospect, that those having no facilities for direct service in Minneapolis should arrange a connection at once. This bank has an unexcelled system for the prompt presentation and collection of grain drafts and other bill of lading paper and invites correspondence with those desiring the best of service.

Golf Finals

On Saturday, September 7th, the day the most of the out-of-town bankers will assemble in Chicago to take the "Big Detroit Special" on Sunday morning, will occur the finals in the U. S. golf amateur championship at Wheaton. Probably the finals will have an international aspect for the present champion, Harold H. Hilton and Norman L. Hunter are here from England. Many expect Hilton for England and Evans for America to be the finalists.

Out-of-town bankers can get in on the ground floor through Ralph Van Vechten, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial National, Chicago, who is treasurer and director of the Wheaton Golf Club where the match is to be played. Call in or write and he will fix you up.

A. B. A. Program

When the general program for the Detroit convention was printed in these columns two weeks ago the speakers for the two A. B. A. sessions proper had not been decided upon. The first day's session will occur on Tuesday, September 10th at 10:00 A. M., when addresses of welcome will be delivered by Governor Chas. S. Osborn, Mayor W. B. Thompson of Detroit, President George H. Russell of the Detroit clearing house and President Homer Warren of the Detroit board of commerce. To these formidable addresses of welcome response will be made for the delegates by Robert J. Lowry of Atlanta. That Col. Lowry can handle the situation adequately will not be doubted by the members of the American Bankers Association. Following Col. Lowry will come the annual address of the president, delivered by William Livingstone of Detroit. General Secretary Farnsworth then will report, as will Treasurer J. Fletcher Farrell of Chicago. Chairman Arthur Reynolds will report for the executive council, and at twelve o'clock sharp, an address on banking and currency reform is scheduled by the Hon. Robert W. Bonyne of Denver. He is a member of the national monetary commission, and has been making a speaking campaign for the National Citizens League urging the adoption of the bill prepared by the national monetary commission. At the afternoon session Tuesday the various sections will report, including those of the trust company, savings bank, clearing house, American Institute of Banking and state secretaries, to be followed by action upon the various amendments to the constitution, reported out from the executive council by Chairman Arthur Reynolds.

At three o'clock sharp, there will be an address by United States Senator Townsend of Michigan, who has been substituted quite recently for Senator William Alden Smith, who will not be able to be present. Following Senator Townsend will come reports of the law committee by Pierre Jay; of the bills of lading committee by Clay H. Hollister; express companies and money orders by Thornton Cook; insurance by Robert E. James of Pennsylvania, and other routine matters.

The second regular session of the A. B. A. proper will occur on Friday morning at ten o'clock. This will be the agricultural or farmers' day of the convention. Charles A. Conant of New York will speak on "Land and Agricultural Credits," and President Andrew M. Soule of the Georgia state agricultural college also will be one of the orators. The third and principal number on this program will be a report from the agricultural and financial development committee made by Chairman Joseph Chapman of Minneapolis. There will be a discussion and action on these reports.

The afternoon session on Friday will be taken up by a report of the currency commission of which A. B. Hepburn of New York is the chairman, and of the federal legislative committee of which E. R. Gurney of Nebraska is chairman. These reports will be followed by unofficial and routine business, by the adoption of resolutions, by the report of the committee on nominations, and the election installation of officers.

Indiana

That there is an "epidemic" of forgery in Indiana was the conclusion reached by Frank D. Stalnaker, president of the Indiana National Bank, after a couple of rural banks called the Indiana National and told of false checks having been presented them for payment. There is seldom a day, Mr. Stalnaker states, that some bank does not call by long distance telephone to report a case of forgery, or to inquire if some person has sufficient funds on deposit here to pay checks he has circulated. "It seems to be in the air," said Mr. Stalnaker, "and I have never heard of as many cases in Indiana since I became a banker. Forgery appears to have a vogue for several weeks every few years. It usually begins by some small bank, or large one for that matter, receiving a check over which some question develops, and in most instances it is discovered that the check bears a forged signature, or is presented by some man against a distant bank where he has no deposits."

Henry W. Yates on Separate Reserve Associations

The opportunity has not heretofore been given me of expressing to you in an address my objections to the banking and currency plan now pending in congress, known as the "Aldrich Bill."

Inasmuch, however, as I have published these views in pamphlet form, to which some considerable circulation has been given, I will not undertake to repeat them on this occasion, except to the extent of emphasizing those particular points which in my opinion utterly condemn the measure as it is now presented and render its adoption improbable.

In the position I have taken upon this subject, which is so much at variance with that of numerous prominent bankers, I think you cannot but see that I have been impelled by no personal motives whatever; I have not even had a pet plan of my own which would be set aside by the adoption of this plan. In fact, the only criticism to which I have been exposed is that of pulling down without offering some substitute to meet the admitted defects in our banking system. I have been actuated solely by a sense of public duty connected with questions with which I have had a lifetime familiarity and from sympathy for our independent banking system with which I have been engaged for a period lacking now only one year of being a half century.

Two Diverging Lines

As a student of these subjects I could not fail to have noticed that from the foundation of our republic there have existed, both in finance and in general politics, two widely diverging theories. One has leaned strongly toward a powerful central authority, the other has advocated the largest individual liberty along all business lines consistent with the public welfare. For a brief period in our history the centralized theory of banking was given its opportunity, but its errors and weaknesses were soon developed. The acts and operations of the United States Bank did not commend it to the public opinion of that day. It was drawn into politics, as all such creations must inevitably be, and after one of the most exciting political campaigns this country has ever known, in which it was a vital issue, it was utterly repudiated and has had no advocates since until in recent years our so-called money reformers have endeavored to resuscitate it under various "noms de plume."

Independent System

On the other hand the independent system of banking has never been so strikingly demonstrated and advanced as during the past fifty years—a period during which, notwithstanding the Civil War and two destructive panics, our country has grown in power and importance among the nations of the world, financially and otherwise, to a degree never dreamed of by our early statesmen who founded our government.

Believing that this independent system of banking has borne no small part in this magnificent national upbuilding—that it has accomplished all and more than any other system could have done—that the two systems cannot exist together—it is natural that I should oppose with all my power a proposition which would eventually destroy this independent system and erect in its place the autocratic continental system of Europe.

If this part of the question could be fairly discussed and not be cloaked as it is by misstatements and indirection which conceal and

The Dean of the Nebraska financiers urges a plan of monetary legislation which in reality is a substitute for that proposed by the National Monetary Commission confuse it, the claims in favor of the new system could easily be refuted. But it is not met in this manner. On the contrary it is claimed that the new system will in no manner interfere with the old, but at the same time it will be noticed that the orators favoring the new system do not cease to declare on every occasion that we have the "worst banking system in the world."

We will concede that this system has some defects; that its career and growth have been irregular and unsystematic. But what it is has been gained from actual experience and almost perfect adaptation to the conditions under which it has existed. The living organism is now in evidence, and whatever is done in the way of reform should be in the direction of improving and strengthening this system, not in destroying it.

Far stronger arguments than any which have been advanced should be demanded before the first step is taken to effect the revolution which would be involved by the disappearance of our independent banks.

The Currency

The change proposed in our currency system should also be resisted.

Ever since the decline and fall of the old state bank currency this country has had for its currency only gold and silver with such paper money as the government itself has put out or has authorized for its own benefit and advantage.

So far as our national bank currency is concerned, it may all be retired without any loss to the banks if their bonds are provided for. The profit derived from the issue of the notes is so insignificant as scarcely to deserve consideration.

But if any currency is to be issued for the benefit of the government, it is far better that it should be done through banks in this manner with the responsibility upon them of current redemption, rather than that it should be issued in the form of notes direct from the treasury. It will be conceded, however, that the volume of national bank notes ought to be limited to some definite sum.

The Aldrich Plan would do away absolutely with the national bank notes, through whose means the government has always obtained a low market for its bonds and at the same time has derived no inconsiderable revenue from the tax imposed upon them. It would substitute for them the untaxed and unsecured "promises to pay" of the corporation it proposes to create with no resulting advantage whatever to the government.

Public Credit Lowered

To effect the disposition of the United States bonds held by the national banks, it is proposed to re-fund the 2 per cent bonds into bonds carrying 3 per cent. This places the government for all future loans it may need in the market of the world like any other borrower, and thus at the outset depreciates and discredits its financial standing.

Approved by Banks

Many bankers' conventions, this association among the number, have voted their formal approval of the Aldrich Plan, and so far as public utterances have gone, it would seem that the banking fraternity is a unit in its favor.

In the speeches of its promoters the plan is made very alluring to bankers. You are told when your demands for money exhaust your loanable supply, all that you will have to do will be to exchange your bank paper for the notes of the Reserve Bank, and perpetual motion is at once secured.

But you may examine the measure closely for yourselves or call in the assistance of some of these promoters, and nowhere can it be shown that the ordinary paper you take in the course of business can be used either at the bank itself or at any of its branches. The only suggestion I have heard ventured is that if you do not have the prescribed paper yourselves, your city correspondent will have it, and the privilege is given you of "doing business at the old stand."

The reserves of the entire country concentrated in one single institution will amount to a vast sum, and when this fund is doubled, as it may be under this proposed law by the issue of bank notes, and this added to the money on hand, the figures produced are so immense that they will stagger the ordinary mind to comprehend them.

It is quite natural that the ordinary banker should conclude that in some way a part of this vast hoard will reach him, and perhaps it would.

The Public Opposed

But granting that bankers may see something in the scheme, which will work to their advantage, and therefore favor its adoption, it does not follow that the public will look at it in the same way. The concentration of this vast fund with the power it would carry with it in a single corporation, operated it may be by a very few individuals, would bode no

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

When James T. Bradley, cashier of the Southwest National Bank of Commerce, Kansas City, was asked to give THE CHICAGO BANKER an expression on banking and general business conditions in the Central West, he beamed with delight. "Things simply couldn't be better," said Mr. Bradley. "This is the best year this part of the country has ever known. The value of the crops this year is at least 15 per cent greater than at any former time. This estimate applies to the territory within a radius of 150 miles of Kansas City. These crops are made, and we are beginning to realize on them. Naturally the banks will enjoy unprecedented prosperity and the reviving effect of the farmers' prosperity will be felt in all lines of business. It will be a great year for the Central West." The Southwest National Bank of Commerce is in splendid condition to handle the vast volume of business which will come to it this fall and the recent consolidation was effected so smoothly that it is almost a forgotten incident in Kansas City.

May Establish Branches in Omaha

There has been considerable comment among Omaha bankers recently because of rumors that several Philadelphia trust companies contemplated opening accounts in Omaha or establishing branches there, in order to avoid the payment of exchange on Nebraska checks handled in Philadelphia. Philadelphia has long been accepting western checks without charging exchange, while New York and other eastern cities have made a charge. When the checks cashed in Philadelphia were sent to Omaha for collection the Omaha banks have charged Philadelphia one tenth of one per cent on the face of the checks for collecting them. This meant a neat little bit of exchange money for the Omaha banks each month.

B. L. Gill May Resign

Persistent rumors have come from Austin within the past two weeks indicating that B. L. Gill, commissioner of insurance and banking for Texas, is to retire at the end of his present term. While Mr. Gill has not definitely made up his mind to leave the state's service his inclinations now would take him back to his private business. It is known that Governor Colquitt considers him one of the stars of his administration and will exert every effort to hold him. Commissioner Gill is perhaps the most competent commissioner of insurance and banking Texas has ever had. He has gradually brought on wonderful improvements in the state banking system. He has weeded out from it those whom he has considered unsafe bankers and he has observed a rigorous policy both with regard to banking and insurance matters. Mr. Gill came to Austin from Terrell where he was in the banking business and it is known that he has remained with the Colquitt administration at heavy personal sacrifice. Before leaving the banking department Mr. Gill will make several recommendations, among them the establishment of civil service for that department; the employment of a special lawyer to attend to the business of the department and increasing the commissioner's salary to $5,000 a year. Texas has 725 state banks and ranks fourth in the number of institutions under its banking system, Iowa, Illinois and Kansas alone having more state banks than Texas.

Missouri Banker Dead

John R. Cogswell, vice-president and assistant cashier of the Christman-Sawyer Banking Company of Independence, Mo., died last week in a Kansas City hospital where he went to undergo an operation. For some time Mr. Cogswell had been in poor health which kept him from his duties at the bank. Mr. Cogswell's uncle, I. N. Rogers, who died recently, was cashier of the bank and Mr. Cogswell returned from an extended vacation to attend the funeral. It was several days after the funeral that Mr. Cogswell was taken to the hospital and the operation was performed. He was born in Independence 47 years ago and for twenty-seven years was connected with the Christman-Sawyer Bank, having entered that institution as a bookkeeper when he was twenty years of age.

John A. Flack Arrested in New York

After two years spent as a fugitive from justice, dodging continually from one position to another to escape detection, John A. Flack, former cashier of the Abilene State Bank of Abilene, Kan., was arrested in New York last week by detectives employed by the Kansas banking department. The charge against Flack is that of forgery and theft of the bank's money. Flack admitted his identity and will be brought back to Kansas for trial. The shortage, he admits, is more than $75,000. Flack had lived in Abilene for many years. He was elected probate judge for two terms and upon his retirement he was appointed cashier of the Abilene State Bank. During the five years he held that position he enjoyed the complete confidence of all the community which his bank served. He was treasurer of nearly every public organization and handled the funds of nearly every public, benevolent and charitable enterprise. It was a great shock to the citizens of Abilene on September 6, 1910, when the bank failed to open after the Labor Day holiday. A notice on the door of the bank, signed by a deputy state bank commissioner, told the citizens of Abilene the almost incredible story that "shortages have been found, caused by the delinquencies of John A. Flack, late cashier." Flack had left town and eluded officers sent after him until last week. His handsome home and real and personal property were sold and reduced the deficit to about $30,000. Less than one week after the bank's shortage was discovered, I. S. Hallam, president of the bank, collapsed and a day later died, his nerves being unable to withstand the shock following the bank's shortage.

Central West Notes

J. W. Perry, president of the Southwest National Bank of Commerce of Kansas City, has returned from his vacation spent in the East. F. P. Neal, chairman, is now on his vacation and is not expected at the bank for several weeks.

Announcement is made of the consolidation of the Sturgis National and the Citizens National of Hillsboro, Texas. The consolidated institution takes the name of the Citizens National and starts with a capital of $250,000. The officers are: president, George Carmichael; vice-president, George L. Porter; cashier, R. C. West.

New banks have been authorized by the Texas banking department as follows: Guaranty State Bank of Kirven, capitalized at $10,000; First State Bank of Newsome, with a capital stock of $12,500; Planters State Bank of Harlingen, with a capital stock of $10,000; The Farmers and Merchants State Bank of Kenedy with a capital stock of $30,000; Sandia State Bank of Sandia with a capital stock of $10,000.

William T. Potts, teller in the First National of Omaha, was married last week to Miss Edith L. Usher of that city.

MISSOURI GROUP MEETING DATES

Correct dates for the Missouri Bankers Association group meetings have just been sent out by Secretary W. F. Keyser. Group 4, with headquarters at Kansas City, will hold the first meeting of the series on October 15th; Group 3 will meet at St. Joseph on October 16th; Groups 1 and 6 will hold a joint meeting at Hannibal, October 17th; Group 2 will meet at Brookfield, October 18th; Group 8 at Jefferson City, October 22d; Group 5 at Lexington, October 23d; Group 9 at El Dorado Springs, October 24th; Group 11 at Springfield, October 29th; Group 10 at Neosho, October 30th. T. L. Matthews on Relation of Banker to Society

The banking business is not a trade, it is a profession, and no profession stands closer to the people and enjoys their confidence and respect in a higher degree than that of the country banker. I am aware of the fact that the banking business has at times been brought into disrepute and had contumely placed upon it, because men of low ideals and no conception of the true functions of banking have stolen the livery of respectability to cover disreputable business methods—men who have painted over their doors the word "Bank," when they should have hung on their lintels the historic three balls; and it is because I believe in the honest purpose, the high ideals and the patriotism of the banking fraternity and their capacity to do things that I look to them for potential help in solving the financial and industrial problems that now confront us.

The thought in my mind is that the banker should be something more than a "money-grub." The record of his services to society is a long and honorable one and can hardly be overestimated. As long as society is founded on mutual service and benefits, measured in general in terms of wealth and current tokens, so long will the intervention of the financier and banker be necessary. Far from seeing any diminution in his importance, there are to-day more banks than ever, private, national and state, doing their work for good all over the world. And the bankers are powerful factors in one of the great departments of human activity, who must be endowed with energy and capacity, who must be widely trusted; who need not attain great wealth, except as a tool to carve the way to greater achievements; who must work prodigiously, and must live in the interests of the community that they may serve their age as did William Rocoë, who was noted not only as a banker but as an author and poet as well. And Irving says of him that "he interwove the history of his life with the history of his town and made the foundations of its fame monuments of his virtues. Wherever you go in Liverpool you perceive traces of his footsteps in all that is elegant and liberal."

In the first place the banker should be a good man; not negatively good, but possess a character made up of the positive virtues and with a mind broad enough to comprehend the relation of things and a realization of the fact that the man who lives for self, "the man who uses his fellows as a cluster to be squeezed into his own cup, who spoils the world for his own aggrandizement, will find at last that he has burglarized his own soul."

There are nobler successes than the accumulation of money. A man may be rich in material wealth and yet if he has not been a factor in human welfare and helped to bear his share of the burden of society his life spells—failure.

The banking business has so interwoven itself into the life of the world and its ramifications are so diffused and it has so correlated itself to all human activity, that anything that affects the world of commerce, labor or the general weal, affects the banker. Hence the banker should be quick to read the signs of the times and quick to help put in motion those forces and influences that will make for the maintenance of healthy conditions and the welfare of all the people.

Fremont financier tells Omaha convention banking is a profession and not a trade. Urges higher ideals and sees evil in powerful combines, huge individual fortunes and the alleged "money-power"

We would not frame an indictment finding all rich men criminals! We do not say that the accumulation of wealth is a crime, for it would in no wise be true. We are voicing an objection to the maladministration of massed wealth and calling attention to a few danger signals. It is not a question of the moral impeccability of the individual; it is a question of the relation of wealth to the mass.

There are thousands of men in the world to-day who have great wealth, but who in spite of that fact are accorded a place in the front rank of Nature's noblemen. They have come up from the ranks; they have not forgotten how steep was the way, how lowering the clouds; and they always remember that others with like ambitions, hopes and aspirations are struggling up the same heights; and their handclasps and pocketbooks are the ready messengers of their hearts to help their fellows. They take no stock in Andrew Carnegie's cold-blooded doctrine of "The Survival of the Fittest," as applied to human conditions, but get their inspiration from that peerless One, whose mission on earth it was to reveal the "Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man," teaching by precept and example that:

"The human race is one great fraternity, Heaven forming each on other to depend, A master or a servant or a friend, May each on other for assistant call, And one man's weakness be the strength of all."

Whatever there is in the world that is beautiful, whatever there is in the world of joy and gladness, whatever there is in the world of music and song, of love and loyalty; all is for man—not for a few men, but for all; not in equal measure, to be sure, but in possibility of attainment, equality of opportunity and certainty of a fair distribution according to merit and capacity.

Banking as a business is founded on credit. You cannot have credit without confidence and you cannot have confidence without honor. You cannot inculcate honesty by conferring, or permitting to be conferred, honor's reward upon those who hold to the maxim the old man gave to his son, "Make money honestly if you can, but make it," or to David Harum's interpretation of the Golden Rule, "Do unto others as you would have others do unto you, but do the other fellow first."

The preservation of business confidence, the credit system, and public morals, depends in no small measure upon the active participation of the banking fraternity in the propagation of high moral standards.

Bankers should be men of affairs in the sense of being "live wires" and up-to-date thinkers, giving the strength of their best effort, mental, moral and financial, to the up-building of the towns and the communities in which they do business and in the wider sphere of the general weal.

Did you ever stand at the head-gate of a great irrigation system as the waters were turned on, and follow the silver stream through the canals, the ditches and the many-fingered laterals, carrying life and sustenance wherever its throbbing currents touched?

Gentlemen, your hands are on the head-gates of the financial reservoirs. It's your province to turn on the golden streams that carry life and sustenance to the thirsty fields of business enterprise and all industrial effort. The obligation is upon you to ride the ditches and see that the stream goes only to those fields where honest effort has planted and good faith should reap, and not be worse than wasted on the bog lands of speculative delusion, where the ignis fatuus of "get rich quick" schemes lures fools to ruin. And on you, bankers of Nebraska, rests the obligation, in a large measure, to keep business standards high, to the end that this splendid state of ours, that seems to have had placed upon it the seal of God's special favor, shall be

MAUSOLEUM

The above is one of our classic four column front mausoleums. We have erected many hundreds of mausoleums, ranging in price from $2,000 to $100,000. The private mausoleum is the least heartrending method of caring for the deceased.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Otto E. Naegele, vice-president of the Metropolitan National, has been reminded the last few days of the time, when he was four years old, the Indians got after him, and he escaped by fleeing with his mother and two sisters. The family lived at New Ulm when the Indians "uprose" and, being fifty years ago, the New Ulmites have been celebrating. Mr. Naegele was one of the celebrants. Mr. Naegele has lived safely ever since that time, never an Indian getting his scalp. It was the first time and last that Mr. Naegele has fled. Once, several years later, bank robbers tried to "get" him.

New Bank at Warroad

Security State Bank of Warroad, Minn., has filed articles of incorporation. The capital stock is $15,000, and may be increased to $50,000; highest indebtedness, $200,000.

Predicts Increased Bank Deposits

Kelsey S. Chase, Minnesota bank examiner, predicts that deposits in the state banks will increase because of the fine crop to $135,000,000 by December. "The fine crop returns are certain to be reflected in increased bank deposits," said Mr. Chase. "Last year in June the total deposits were $110,000,000, and in December they had increased to $117,000,000, a 6 per cent increase. The deposits last June were $123,000,000, and with the good crop they should grow to $135,000,000 by December."

Estate of Judge M. B. Koon

An estate estimated at $1,000,000 was left by Judge M. B. Koon, first vice-president of the Northwestern National, half personal and half real property. Stock in the bank and trust company was part of the estate. The Minnesota Loan and Trust Company is sole executor.

Death of Joseph Chapman's Father

Joseph Chapman, vice-president of the Northwestern National, is no longer "Jr." Eighty-two years of age the father died at 2 A. M., August 27th, at Painesville, Ohio, where the funeral took place. Mr. Chapman was connected with the old Dubuque road as general freight agent, before the line was absorbed by the "Milwaukee" road. He was in charge of the twin city freight jobbers' bureau in Minneapolis from 1887 to 1890. He was grand master of the Masons in Iowa in 1872. Mr. Chapman was born in Pittsburgh. In Dubuque, prior to 1857, he was ticket agent for the Illinois Central, and was back of railroad building and passenger traffic development. For fifty years Mr. Chapman was connected with official boards of Methodist churches in Iowa, Minnesota and Ohio. Leaving Minneapolis for Painesville at an age when men ordinarily retire, Mr. Chapman took charge of the construction of the Baltimore and Ohio warehouses and grain elevators at Fairport, Ohio. A year ago he resigned after serving as manager following completion of the work. Besides Joseph Chapman and Edward T. Chapman, commercial paper, of Minneapolis, Charles W. and Oliver Chapman, sons, live at Waterloo, Iowa, and Edith Chapman, daughter, at Painesville.

Best Crop in its History

"South Dakota, has, I believe, the best crop in its history," said Louis Betz, treasurer of the St. Paul Savings Bank, after an inspection.

"The crop is enormous," continued Mr. Betz, "and I believe the government is conservative in its estimates. The harvesting is much further along than I anticipated. Nearly everything but corn is cut and stacked. A little dry weather to bring the corn out better is what is needed. Corn is going to be a bigger item in South Dakota than ever before."

Attend Mid-Summer Group Meeting

Attending the mid-summer meeting of the Northeastern district group of the North Dakota Bankers Association at Grand Forks, George F. Orde of the Minneapolis First National was shown wheat which had grown twenty-five bushels to the acre. H. P. Newcomb, assistant cashier Northwestern National, attended the meeting and J. W. Wheeler of the Capital National made an address. Mr. Orde said: "The whole Grand Forks country looks splendid and all business men are looking for the biggest trade this fall for many years."

Conference Reports Soon Out

Twenty-five thousand copies of the report of the conference of the bankers' association committees on agricultural development and education in the Twin Cities, August 7-8, are to be sent broadcast soon. Copies will go to Europe, South America, Asia, Africa, Mexico and Canada. Secretaries of associations will attend to local distribution of the reports. The books will be furnished at cost of publication.

Open Information Bureau

The Northwestern National has opened an information bureau in its lobby in charge of Frank Merrill, formerly paying teller. Agricultural statistics and publications of the state immigration office and of county improvement organizations will be furnished at the desk. This is said to be second only to a similar facility bureau in a Los Angeles bank. Information of industries, trade opportunities, farming and climatic conditions, etc., in the Minneapolis trade territory will be on hand at all hours when the bank is open.

Another Optimist

N. F. Hawley, treasurer of the Farmers and Mechanics Savings Bank, after reading reports from the crop districts, is optimistic. "I expect business conditions to be unusually good this fall," said Mr. Hawley. "There is sure to be demand for Minnesota and Dakota lands, as eastern farmers are always on the lookout for lands in this part of the country, especially after a good harvest. Since the adoption of diversified farming and the growing tendency of the farmers of the Northwest to cut down the size of their farms, thereby
